with each other. If you go back now, you will just die!”

Lu Juren stood up, his eyes filled with longing. “Dad, what if they have stopped fighting? After all, we didn’t see any skirmishes after traveling for so long.”

“Hmph! You sure are idealistic. They don’t stop fighting once they start! That’s how soldiers are,” said Lu Zhuangyuan, leaving Lu Juren feeling conflicted.

Looking at how conflicted Lu Juren was, he sighed. “Son, please believe me. I’m not just some clueless old man. I’ve lived long enough and experienced a lot of things. Do you think everything would be over once the soldiers stop fighting? No! It’s one thing after another! After the soldiers stop fighting, there won’t be enough people to bury all the dead. What’s most likely going to happen in that situation is a plague. Once the plague is over, there won’t be enough living people to tend to the fields. By then, the food prices would soar sky high and people would be forced to sell their own children just to survive. By then, who would pay to see a performance? What would we eat if we don’t even earn any money? We can’t just eat dirt.”

Lu Zhuangyuan lowered his voice as he continued to console his son, “Son, don’t be ashamed of being a performer. If I didn’t do this, then I would have starved to death. I wouldn’t even have had children like you. We cannot forget what fed us.”

Lu Juren knew his father was right, but he still felt the decision his father made was a bit extreme. “But dad, no matter what, you can’t just sell us off to the Young Daoist. Now, we are just his slaves.”

Lu Zhuangyuan glared at his eldest son and looked at Li Huowang having his meal. Then, he pulled Lu Juren slightly further away. After he thought that they were far enough, Lu Zhuangyuan whispered to his son in a harsh voice, “Slave? What kind of slave has meat to eat everyday!?”

Chapter 256 - Birth

Lu Zhuangyuan explained to his eldest son, “The Young Daoist is someone who does big things. He won’t be driving us too hard. In fact, he might even be so busy that he won’t focus on us. That’s why we must discern someone’s behavior and temperament before we do anything. Plus, this could be a good chance for us. Didn’t you hear when Xiucan told us that the Daoist taught one of the boys with vitiligo a supernatural power? We should all be physically stronger than the boy and yet, he was the one who was given the power. That’s why we need to think things through thoroughly. Go ahead and think about this when you are alone later and see if you still think I’m being irrational.”

Hearing this, Lu Juren looked at his father in surprise. So in the end it was about the supernatural powers!

“Talk less and work more. No need to think about the useless things,” said Lu Zhuangyuan as he pulled his son back to the ox-cart.

The Lu family soon started practicing their singing and performance once again. Since they would be restarting their performances soon, they were rehearsing the basics so that they could perform well.

After everyone finished their lunch, they resumed their journey toward the Liang Kingdom.

Though they didn’t know the exact location of the Liang Kingdom, they knew that they were close when the grassy plains around them became sparser and were replaced by shrubs.

The sun gradually set on the western horizon, and a sudden scream broke the peaceful atmosphere. Everyone turned around and saw that it was Luo Juanhua screaming while sitting on top of the ox-cart.

At this moment, she was hugging her abdomen in a panic while looking at her wet skirt. Her water had broken!

“Quickly bring her into the horse carriage! Juanhua is giving birth!” Lu Zhuangyuan’s shout caused everyone to spring into action. Their ox-cart stopped too.

Then, the women went and helped with the birth while the men stayed farther away.

“Why are you going there? It’s not like you can help with anything,” Li Huowang asked Bai Lingmiao when he saw the latter was rushing toward the horse carriage.

Bai Lingmiao blushed. “I wanted to see what it’s like to give birth. It might be useful for me next time...”

Seeing her go away, Li Huowang leaped up and landed on top of another horse carriage. He lay down at the top and stared at the beautiful red clouds depicting the sunset.

Li Huowang closed his eyes and took a deep breath while hearing the people scurrying around at the back. Without the hallucinations, he finally felt peace. He no longer needed to get caught up between reality and the hallucination again.

“Daoist, it seems that your hallucinations are no more.”

Li Huowang turned around and saw Monk’s illusion standing in the air. Beside him were Peng Longteng and Jin Shanzhao’s illusions.

Even though his hallucination was gone, he still had to deal with the illusions.

“Yeah, the Black Taisui is working. I will no longer get stuck in the hallucination. Hehe, did you know that I tried pissing Wang Wei off one last time because I had a sliver of hope that the other side was real. It’s a shame that it was nothing but a hallucination,” said Li Huowang.

As he spoke, he looked up and saw a cloud that resembled

Yang Na. His voice was filled with longing and disappointment as he continued, "I really wanted the other side to be real..."

"Daoist, what are you saying? I don't understand you," asked Monk.

"Hehe, if you don't understand me, then don't talk to me again or the others might think that I'm having one of my episodes again." Li Huowang turned around and stared at the few remaining grassy hills.

After some time, Li Huowang looked toward the back of the other horse carriage. It had been a while, but the baby had yet to be born. He didn't know if it was normal for it to take that long because he had never been in a situation where he had to see someone give birth.

"I hope the process is smooth, since I can't help with anything at all. No wait... I learned how to refine some pills while I was in Zephyr Temple. Too bad there's no furnaces here and I can't refine some Blood Nourishing Pills," muttered Li Huowang.

Sssssiii~

At that moment, a faint sound caught his attention and caused him to sit up. He tried to listen where the sound came from, but it had already disappeared.

Li Huowang slowly laid back down in confusion. "Did I misheard it? Where did that sound come from?"

He thought about it and slid his fingers into his ear to pick out the earwax. He found that there was indeed something in there.

He slowly picked it out and saw that it was an extremely large scab.

The moment he pulled out the scab, his hearing sensitivity skyrocketed. He could even hear the sound of the grass growing underneath him.

"This is too loud. I can't stay sane like this." Li Huowang took out a pair of scissors with jagged edges and leaped down. He sheared off some of the fur off a lamb's body and stuffed it into his ear.

"Whew~ Much better." Li Huowang kept the scissors back into his satchel of torture tools.

"Hmm? What is that?" Li Huowang saw a black dot standing atop one of the distant mountains, but it was too far away even for him to see what it was.

"Wa~ Wa~ Wa~"

The sound of a baby's cry suddenly rang out. Hearing the sound, Li Huowang turned around with everyone else and went toward the horse carriage.

When they approached it, everyone saw that Lu Juren was already standing at the entrance of the horse carriage. He was smiling happily. "Hehe~ I have a son now~ I have a son~"

On the other hand, Li Huowang was confused as he saw the baby crying in Bai Lingmiao's arms.

Is the baby sick? Why is it so ugly? It's like a monkey without fur.

Chun Xiaoman saw Li Huowang's complicated look and instinctively knew what he was thinking and explained it to him, "Senior Li, that's how babies are like when they are just born."

"Oh? Is that so?"

After a careful explanation from Xiaoman, Li Huowang learned for the first time that he had been having a misconception about babies. He had always thought that all babies looked similar to a three-month-old baby. However, today he learned that it was normal for a baby to look ugly when it was just born.

Li Huowang went and congratulated Lu Zhuangyuan when he came out from the horse carriage.

"Hehehe~ Thank you, thank you." Lu Zhuangyuan's wrinkled face was as happy as a blooming flower.

Then, Lu Zhuangyuan addressed everyone and accepted their congratulations. "Everyone, I'm sorry that we don't have any eggs[1] right now. Once we reach a town, we will give everyone some red eggs!”

Everyone was happy and celebrating the birth of the baby.

While everyone was reveling in celebration, Li Huowang suddenly felt his heart tighten. He instinctively raised his head and looked into the distance.

A small black dot had appeared on the red grass caused by the sunset. The black dot was slowly approaching them from the distant mountain!

Something's wrong!

Li Huowang growled at what he saw, “Herd the lambs! We are leaving now!”

Li Huowang’s shout immediately broke the happy atmosphere. Even though they were confused, they knew that something was wrong when they saw how serious he looked.

Amidst Bun’s barking, the white lambs, ox-carts, and the horse carriages soon started moving again.

Time slowly passed and the sky became dark. Li Huowang used the last remaining sunlight and saw that the black dot was closing in on them!

1. He wants to make red eggs as a sign of celebration 🙌

Chapter 257 - Lama

Once the sky became dark, they took out the glowing green stones to illuminate their surroundings. Everyone continued to walk nervously, especially since Li Huowang never told them to stop.

The moon gradually rose up, showering the ground with its silver light.

Li Huowang was atop the roof of the ox-cart as he looked back. He saw that the blob of darkness had disappeared.

“It’s gone? What was that? Was that thing attracted to me or the baby?” Li Huowang muttered, trying to guess what it was.

Just then, the ox-cart stopped moving, prompting Li Huowang to shout, “Don’t stop! Keep moving!”

But the ox-cart did not move. It was the only time they did not heed his warning.

When Li Huowang turned around, he understood why they stopped. The black dot was now directly in front of them!

At that moment, Li Huowang finally saw what the black dot was. It was a group of black lambs. The lambs just stood still on the spot and didn’t move, almost as if they were puppets.

There was a Lama standing amidst the black lambs. He was wearing a coat made from black lamb fur and had a drum hung on his waist. He was wearing a necklace and bracelets made from little bones. Sitting atop his head was a Lama hat. His eyes were completely black as he looked at Li Huowang.

The Lama’s face was quite weird, with patches of yellow and black. When Li Huowang examined them, he saw that those were age spots.

Li Huowang knew the Lama was hostile to them.

At that moment, the Lama suddenly raised his skinny right arm. An old vulture flew down from the sky and landed on his arm. The vulture was almost featherless and had saggy skin.

For some reason, Li Huowang recalled the man-eating vultures he had seen back at the Women's Mountain during the process of sky burial.

"Senior Li, the Lama..." Chun Xiaoman took out her bronze bell but didn't know what to do.

"Don't worry. You guys can go first. Ignore him," instructed Li Huowang.

Under Li Huowang's orders, everyone lowered their heads and circled around the black lambs.

On the other hand, Li Huowang continued to stand atop the ox-cart and never let the Lama out of his sight.

When they got closer, Li Huowang saw that the black lambs were all lacking teeth—all of them were old lambs.

There was also a very hostile aura coming off the Lama and the black lambs. Li Huowang didn't know how to describe it.

Suddenly, Li Huowang saw something else. The black lambs in front of him were not lambs, but a group of old men wearing the fur of black lambs!

He only saw a glimpse of it before everything returned back to normal. The black lambs were still standing there motionlessly. Li Huowang didn't know if he had seen through the illusion spell or if he was just seeing things.

"Meeh~" The black lambs beside the Lama all started bleating at the same time. In response, Li Huowang's white lambs answered back.

Soon, the lambs on both sides started bleating one after another, annoying Li Huowang in the process.

"Enough!" Li Huowang roared, making the lambs all shut up. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. I can't ignore this any longer.

Li Huowang looked at the black Lama and broke the silence first. “Good day senior. I am a disciple of the Ao Jing Sect, Er Jiu. I’m coincidentally passing by your territory. I seek your forgiveness if I have accidentally offended you.”

Li Huowang decided to use a fake identity to see if it was useful or not. He was hoping that the Lama didn’t know that he was a Strayed One.

At the same time, this was also a threat. By announcing himself to be a part of the Ao Jing Sect, he was threatening the Lama to not attack them. The Ao Jing Sect was an established sect after all.

But the Lama did nothing in the face of Li Huowang’s statement.

Seeing this, Li Huowang told the others to continue marching, “Let’s go!”

He didn’t know what the Lama was trying to do, but Li Huowang did not want to engage the Lama, especially since he didn’t know how strong the latter was.

At his command, the wheels started moving and they moved away from the black Lama. Everyone was focused on their path ahead and remained silent.

As they passed him by, Li Huowang felt his back prickling, his brain thinking about numerous possibilities.

At that moment, he suddenly felt the presence once again; it had appeared directly behind him.

Li Huowang decided to stand his ground and turned around. He saw that the Lama was just two meters away from him!

Li Huowang finally got the chance to see the Lama’s face up close. This was the first time he had seen someone’s face being completely covered in age spots. The Lama didn’t have any teeth and his lips were curled inwards, looking like he was more than a hundred years old. The Lama was very old.

Looking at him up close, Li Huowang almost cut down the Lama, shocked by how scary the latter looked. It took a lot of his strength to suppress his instincts to attack the Lama.

Li Huowang lowered his head and saw the Lama's legs. They were gone, replaced with bone prosthetics. He only realized that just now because the Lama had been hiding his legs among the black lambs.

As he observed the Lama, a bizarre feeling washed over Li Huowang, attempting to make him relax and close his eyes forever.

But Li Huowang would never surrender to it. He gripped his sword and snarled, "Senior, I don't remember offending you. If you continue to do this, then do not blame me for what's going to happen next."

Li Huowang pulled his sword out a little and an intense killing intent instantly engulfed the surroundings.

Seeing this, the black Lama squinted his eyes and stared at Li Huowang's sword.

Meanwhile, the atmosphere was so tense that none of the others could breathe. Lu Xiucan had even pissed himself.

Just as Li Huowang was about to completely unsheathe his sword and fight against the Lama, something happened.

Dong~

The Lama hit the drum on his waist.

Dong~

At the same time, a similar sound came from behind Li Huowang. It was Bai Lingmiao! She was hitting the drum that she used to summon the Immortals.

Dong dong dong~ Dong dong dong~

Both drums sounded together; it was as if they were conversing with each other.

After a few minutes, the sound of the drums stopped, and the heavy atmosphere disappeared.

Then, the vulture on the Lama's arm flew up and the black lambs advanced like a black cloud, covering the Lama's horrible lower body before lifting him up as they slowly retreated away.

Even as he saw the Lama leave, Li Huowang dared not let his guard down. He immediately told everyone to start walking again.

They walked the entire night. When the sun was out and Li Huowang finally told them to stop, everyone fell onto the ground and started panting, partly due to tiredness and partly due to shock.

What happened last night had been far too scary. They weren't even sure if the Lama had been alive or dead.

Li Huowang looked around him and saw that the Lama was nowhere in sight. He asked Bai Lingmiao, "Did the Lama say something to you with the drum?"

Bai Lingmiao nodded. "Yes. He said that he was from the Surveillance Bureau. He will let you go this time around, but there won't be a second chance."

Chapter 258 - Large Village

Li Huowang walked alongside the horse carriage while thinking about what the Lama had said.

What did he mean by “there won’t be a second chance”?

Li Huowang thought about the Lion Dance Palace and the dead Han Fu. Those were the only things he recalled doing in Qing Qiu.

Bai Lingmiao shook her head. “I don’t know either. He just said that there will be no second chance next time and didn’t say anything else.”

Li Huowang didn’t know why the Lama had just left like that. Still, he was very interested in the Lama’s identity.

He’s from the Surveillance Bureau of Qing Qiu? So that’s what someone from the Surveillance Bureau looks like.

Li Huowang had just learned what the Surveillance Bureau would look like on the inside. He was sure that the organization would be crawling with weird people like the Lama.

But... he didn’t know if that was good news or bad news.

Li Huowang looked at the sun above their heads and told all of them, “Everyone, we can stop and rest for now. I will guard first.”

Hearing his words, everyone brought out their sleeping mats and blankets from the ox-cart and immediately fell asleep on the ground. Some of them were even snoring loudly. After walking for so long and being scared by the Lama, their body had long since been at the breaking point.

Li Huowang was also tired, but he had no choice but to stay awake. Even though the Lama said that he would let them go this time, Li Huowang still didn’t trust him.

Every time Li Huowang was about to fall asleep, he would bring out the torture tools and keep himself awake through the pain. He was already very good at this after traveling for so long.

Everyone slept until late into the evening. When they woke up to prepare dinner, Li Huowang finally laid down on the ox-cart and closed his eyes.

Even though he fell asleep due to how tired he was, he didn't really sleep all that well. Different scenes appeared in his dream.

Li Huowang suddenly woke up when one of the dreams made him realize something. "The Lama's presence! I have felt that presence before at the Baiyu Capital. It was coming from the white Bodhisattva! That's the presence of Death!"

Having said that, Li Huowang fell back limply and once again fell asleep under everyone's gaze.

The wheels of the ox-cart continued to move. They passed by some trees and fields, an indication that they had left Qing Qiu and entered the Liang Kingdom's border.

With this, everyone became much more cheerful. At the very least they would be safer within the Liang Kingdom.

Bai Lingmiao was naturally the happiest; she was finally back in her home country. She circled around Li Huowang and continued talking about her home, her parents, her siblings, and even the goose who loved to lie down on the village head's lap.

But Li Huowang was distracted throughout. He was still thinking about the black-robed Lama.

I'm definitely right! He was exuding the presence of Death. That means that he was someone from the sect that worshiped Death using that massive cauldron within the caves!

Even though he didn't know the name of the sect, he knew that they had to be powerful; after all, they used the power of Death.

He was glad that he hadn't fought against the Lama or he might have had to pay a heavy price.

“Senior Li, I’m talking to you. What are you thinking about?” Bai Lingmiao grumbled at Li Huowang who was ignoring her.

“Hm? Did you say something?” Li Huowang stared at her sheepishly.

“I said that with this much silver, we can build our own house!” replied Bai Lingmiao, pouting.

“Oh. That’s great.” Li Huowang was about to just gloss over her when he saw that she wasn’t wearing her blindfolds and immediately took the strip of silk from her wrist. He used it to cover her eyes and held her hands. “I told you to wear it when the sunlight is strong. If you keep hurting your eyes like that, then you will go blind.”

After saying that, Li Huowang turned around and looked at the people around them.

As they approached the Liang Kingdom, he saw more and more people walking on the path. They were skinny and tanned, and held bags of grains above their heads.

It was clear that the passersby were afraid of Li Huowang and everyone else. No one would dare stand beside a group of people covered in black veils. If it wasn’t for the Lu family Troupe walking with them, the passersby would have all run off.

Li Huowang thought about something and walked up to where Lu Zhuangyuan was playing with his grandson before whispering something to him.

“Alright, I will do just that. Don’t worry, Young Daoist,” replied Lu Zhuangyuan, finally feeling that he was being useful. Then, he took his smoke pipe and happily walked up to one of the passersby.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang pulled out the lamb fur from his ears so that he could hear their conversations.

“Hello~ May I know where everyone is going?” asked Lu Zhuangyuan.

“We are heading to harvest the wheat,” replied the passerby.

“Oh?”

“Yeah, it’s almost harvest season. We are harvesters that help people harvest their wheat,” explained the passerby.

From their conversation, Li Huowang learned that the harvesters didn’t have a lot of fields of their own. To earn money, they would go and ask people with a lot of fields to allow them to help with harvesting the wheat.

Here, Lu Zhuangyuan's years of experience shined greatly, easily allowing him to obtain information from the honest men with just a few questions.

“Young Daoist, they told me that there’s a large village just further up. After passing the village, there should be a town. They told me that the town is quite large and many people from Qing Qiu would go there to sell their lambs,” reported Lu Zhuangyuan.

Li Huowang nodded in approval when he looked at Lu Zhuangyuan’s smiling face. “Do they know where Cowheart Mountain is?”

Li Huowang had not forgotten the reason they had traveled so far. They needed to send Bai Lingmiao home.

“Hmm. They didn’t know where it was. They said that the area bordering Qing Qiu mainly consists of flatlands. The deeper we enter the Liang Kingdom, the more mountains there will be,” explained Lu Zhuangyuan.

Li Huowang was not disappointed when he heard that; it was as if he had already anticipated it.

“Since they are locals, we can just follow them so as to not get lost. Once we reach the town, we can purchase a map of the Liang Kingdom and determine where to go after that,” declared Li Huowang.

“Alright~” Lu Zhuangyuan felt useful and happily walked away with his smoke pipe.

They walked along the dirt path and passed through a bamboo forest. When they finally got out of the forest, they saw the scenery unfold in front of their very eyes.

Fields of rice and millet swayed with the wind, rippling like a sea of gold.

At the same time, numerous black dots the size of ants were swinging their sickles to harvest the grains.

“The soil of the Liang Kingdom is so rich! Back in our old home, we didn’t get a harvest like this every year.” Lu Zhuangyuan was quite envious of the scene in front of him.

But no matter what they said, the passersby only saw the field as money. They walked down to discuss their prices with the owner.

“It’s good if they have a good harvest. That way, we at least know that the food and ration prices will be cheap here in the Liang Kingdom,” said Li Huowang as the ox-cart slowly moved into the village.

Chapter 259 - Show

“We don’t have wheat flour but we do have millet flour and corn flour. Do you want them?”

An old man was sitting on a flat piece of stone with a clay bowl. He was selling flours of different kinds and explaining to Lu Zhuangyuan who had been looking to buy some food ingredients.

“Why don’t you have wheat flour? There’s wheat everywhere within the field. We are willing to pay for it,” Lu Zhuangyuan huffed.

While the other kinds of flour were edible, they were coarser and not as refined as wheat flour. Also, since he was not spending his own money, there was no reason to be stingy about it. He wanted to eat something better.

The old man shook his head. “I’m afraid I can’t sell it. I have to give the wheat flour to the officials as taxes. If I don’t, my son would be taken by them to be a slave.”

“Young Daoist, what should we do?” Lu Zhuangyuan turned around and looked at Li Huowang, feeling puzzled. The latter was petting Bun at the back.

After getting his approval, Lu Zhuangyuan turned back to the old man. “Alright, we will take it. We will take the coarser flour. Since we are buying in bulk, give us a good price.”

As the bags of food were placed onto the horse carriage, the entire carriage sank slightly deeper into the ground.

There were benefits to buying in bulk. The old man agreed to their request of letting them stay at his place. He had two empty granaries that they could stay the night in.

Even though the flour they bought was coarse, Yang Xiaohai was able to make some delicious meals out of them. He first made some dough before placing it onto the edge of the black pot. The heat cooked the dough into delicious flat cornbreads. He was also using some lamb bones to cook soup in a pot. Their dinner tonight consisted of flat cornbread with hearty lamb soup. It was a simple yet delicious meal.

“Young Daoist, there’s a lot of people in this area. We need to have some people watch over the lambs during the night, or I’m afraid that someone might come and steal them,” reminded Lu Zhuangyuan while drinking the soup.

“Don’t worry. Let Bun sleep amongst the lambs. If someone tries to steal them, Bun will bark loudly,” said Li Huowang as he threw a piece of the lamb bone downward.

Seeing the piece of lamb bone, Bun immediately snatched it up and started happily munching on it.

“It might not be adequate if we only have a dog keeping watch. How about this? I can guard the lambs along with my youngest son. I’ve heard that these lambs become extremely valuable once they’re out of Qing Qiu,” suggested Lu Zhuangyuan.

When Li Huowang did not deny his request, Lu Zhuangyuan smiled.

Hehe, the Lu family is having another chance to show its worth!

“Is your daughter-in-law fine? She gave birth out in the wilderness after all. Should we find someone to see if she’s ok?” asked Li Huowang.

“No need. She had already given birth once, and so it should come naturally to her, just like pooping. Oh, I suppose this is not appropriate to say during a meal. Sorry, young Daoist,” said Lu Zhuangyuan.

While they were happily eating within the granary, they heard some commotion outside.

Puppy turned around and gave Li Huowang a knowing look. Then, he grabbed a piece of flat cornbread and curiously walked outside with his bowl of soup.

The granary fell silent, except for the slurping and chewing noises. The flat cornbread was quite chewy after adding in the millet flour so they had to eat it slowly.

Soon, Puppy came back with a happy face, his bowl already empty. “You guys, do you know what I just saw?”

Everyone took one glance at him before continuing with their meal.

“What did you see?” Lu Xiucui asked to dispel the awkwardness surrounding his best friend.

Puppy put down his bowl and clapped his hands. “I just saw someone performing there. There were both men and women. They set up their stage just outside the village.”

Li Huowang and the others did not react to this, but the Lu family was immediately interested. The competition between those in the same field of work was intense.

“Aiyo~” Lu Zhuangyuan placed his bowl onto the ground and wiped his mouth with his sleeves. He stood straight and walked out like a proud rooster. “Come, let’s go and see what kind of performance is being shown in the Liang Kingdom!”

Li Huowang stared at them leaving the place as he continued munching on his flat cornbread. He noticed that Lu Zhuangyuan was indifferent toward many things, but he became oddly competitive when he encountered another performance troupe.

While Li Huowang was not interested in it, the others were somewhat attracted to it. After all, they had been traveling for so long and hadn’t had the chance to relax. Thus, when they heard that there was a performance, the others wanted to watch it as well. They ate quickly and kept away their empty bowls without even washing them.

“No,” refused Li Huowang.

“Senior Li, please don’t be like that. The performances here are incredible! I used to watch them while getting hugged by my grandmother.” Bai Lingmiao gently pulled on his wrist while trying to persuade him.

“Yeah, let’s go! Daoist, I beg you.” Monk’s illusion was also doing his best to persuade Li Huowang.

Li Huowang almost cursed at the illusion, but had to swallow his words so as to not scare Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang placed down his bowl and walked outside. As he did, he heard both Bai Lingmiao and Monk cheering from behind him at the same time.

When he walked out of the granary, he saw that the spacious entrance of the village was very crowded. There were even people sitting on the walls and the trees. It seemed that everyone within the village was gathered here, including the Lu family.

Li Huowang carried Bai Lingmiao and jumped up onto a roof. There, they sat down on the solid roof tiles and watched the brightly lit stage.

The troupe had lit numerous lanterns along the stage in order to let the audience have a good view of them.

Jiang jiang jiang jiang~

One of the performers made their entrance along with the rhythm. The performer had a red face, six flags on their back, and wore a crown with two long pheasant tails.

The performer danced briefly while holding a mace in each of his hands. Then, the performer smacked both maces together and the music stopped. Before anyone knew what was going on, the performer started singing in a strong and powerful voice.

“Hear the sound of the golden drum~ Summon your~ Courageous spirit~ Recall your warhorse and your heroic figure!
We must uphold our responsibility! We must not lose even an inch of our land to them!”

“Yeah!”

Bai Lingmiao and Monk’s illusion clapped at the same time. Li Huowang looked at Bai Lingmiao having fun before looking back toward the stage.

Li Huowang didn’t know what kind of story it was, who the character in front of him was, nor who they were fighting against. All he could deduce from the lyrics was that the performer was a general from the Liang Kingdom and that he was boosting the morale of his men before the war.

But he didn’t really read too deep into it. Since he was persuaded by Bai Lingmiao to be here, he just sat there with her to make her happy.

At first Li Huowang thought that the performance was the same as the Lu Family Troupe’s, where they just sang on the stage. But, he soon saw what made the performance in the Liang Kingdom incredible.

Chapter 260 - Woman

As if to emulate how intense a war could be, the red-faced general who was surrounded by several soldiers leaped onto a table with only three legs and spun it on its edges.

Jiang jiang jiang jiang~

The performer spun the table for minutes even though the table only had three legs. It was quite impressive. Even Li Huowang was shocked to see the performance.

Are the requirements to become performers in the Liang Kingdom this high?

Jiang~ Jiang~ Tai!

The general did a backflip and finally landed on the stage safely. At the same time, the soldiers around the performer all fell to the ground. Then, the general posed and the crowd cheered.

Even Li Huowang was clapping his hands. He was wrong. He had thought that performances were all more or less the same. But this one was amazing!

Even someone like Li Huowang, who was not into performances could enjoy it.

When Li Huowang was engrossed in the performance, the general's body suddenly froze. The two pheasant tail feathers in his crown stood upright and shook violently. "Hm? Who's~ There?"

Just as the general said those words, the lights on the stage were blown out completely. Everything became pitch black.

When Li Huowang was confused by what was happening, the lanterns suddenly lit up once more, but this time the lanterns were an eerie green color.

The general was still on the stage, but there was someone else besides him.

It was a woman. She had her back against the crowd while her long sleeves were shaking continuously, making them look like a waterfall.

The music had stopped. The only sound on the stage was a panting sound that grew heavier and heavier.

“Hehe~”

An eerie chuckle suddenly rang out from near Li Huowang, causing the hair all over his body to stand on end.

“Motherfucker! Can’t we catch a break?!” Li Huowang snarled and grabbed his sword. He almost launched himself toward the stage.

Bai Lingmiao suddenly held him back with all her strength and quickly explained, “Senior Li, it’s fake! It’s a show!”

“Fake?” Li Huowang started at the stage warily. He saw that the general was cautiously circling the woman.

At that moment, the woman suddenly turned around. At the same time, two bronze mirrors were raised from the sides of the stage. They reflected the light from the lanterns and shone onto the woman’s face... or rather the lack thereof.

Everyone was frightened by it. Even the children were crying from fear.

But Li Huowang sighed. It was indeed all a show. He could see that the faceless head was just a prop while the woman’s real head was hidden inside the dress.

After confirming this, Li Huowang released his grip on the sword and sat down once more. “Are the performances in the Liang Kingdom always so unique? Do you guys even add horror elements into the performances?”

“Senior Li, what’s a horror element? This is how the show has always been performed since a hundred years ago. Legends say that when General Yue was on the battlefield he met such a being,” said Bai Lingmiao.

Staring at the eerie stage, Li Huowang thought to himself that if this legend was true, then it would probably be even scarier than this.

As the performance continued, the general on the stage swung his mace and easily knocked off the woman's head, causing her to fall flat onto the ground.

But the woman had just fallen when a man appeared on the side of the stage. He had a black face and two copper coins made of paper were stuck to his cheeks as he swaggered onto the stage.

“Wuhahahaha~”

Sharp fangs appeared and disappeared from his mouth! He was doing teeth play! While the drums continued to play, the fangs rubbed against each other and made fiery sparks that were easily visible in the dark.

“Hehe.”

Bai Lingmiao heard Li Huowang's chuckle and turned to him, feeling confused. “Senior Li, why are you laughing? Is the show not interesting?”

“It is interesting, but I'm not laughing at the performers. I'm laughing at Troupe Leader Lu. Looks like he's out of his depth this time. I don't think he will be able to earn even a single coin here in the Liang Kingdom with his techniques,” explained Li Huowang as he looked at Lu Zhuangyuan's increasingly frustrated face. “That said, the Liang Kingdom is indeed different from the other places. Everyone here has access to better materials and entertainment. This is indeed a very strong nation.”

That night, everyone was satisfied with the performance, including Li Huowang.

The performers also earned a lot of money. They chose to perform during the harvest season because the landlords had a lot of money on their hands and were very generous.

On the other hand, Lu Zhuangyuan came back defeated. He was no longer as arrogant as before—his pride as a performer has been crushed.

Compared to the others who were discussing the show, Lu Zhuangyuan brought his two sons into the granary before quietly heading to a corner.

“Father, they could even make sparks from their mouths! How can we compete with them?” Lu Xiucai was the first to break the silence.

“Why can’t we compete with them? The performer at the end didn’t sing as well as I could!” said Lu Zhuangyuan, trying his best to defend himself.

But it was futile. He soon deflated like a balloon. It was not enough to close the gap between them and the performers here.

After a while, Lu Zhuangyuan took a puff of the smoke pipe and walked over to Bai Lingmiao. “Young lady Bai, can I ask you a question? Is the performance of every troupe in the Liang Kingdom as entertaining as the one tonight?”

“Yeah, and it’s not just this particular story. They can perform numerous kinds of stories. This is not even the best one,” replied Bai Lingmiao.

When he slowly walked back to his sons, Lu Zhuangyuan's back was even more hunched than before.

That night, Lu Zhuangyuan couldn’t fall asleep. He kept thinking about how to improve his performances.

If we can’t perform and earn money here, then I will just become someone who’s nothing more than a parasite.

However, he was not the only one awake that night.

When the rooster’s call was heard in the morning, Lu Xiucai saw Puppy embracing Hong’er while walking out from a small forest.

Both of them were happily chatting and flirting with each other.

When Puppy saw Lu Xiucan carrying some water from the well, he left Hong'er and happily walked over to him.

“Hehehe~ Did you know what I was doing last night? Hehehe~” asked Puppy, chuckling lewdly.

Lu Xiucan remained silent and carried the pail of water into the granary, but Puppy was too excited to stop talking.

“Ai~ That feeling~ It feels good~ Hehehe~”

Puppy's face was beyond obscene.

Chapter 261 - Object

Lu Xiucan listened to Puppy as the latter continued showing off and finally could not bear it any longer. He smashed the bucket onto the ground and glared at him fiercely. “What’s the big deal? Aren’t you just relying on your Senior? Or do you think that woman would even look at you?”

“Ah! You really said it right! I really am relying on my Senior~ But you don’t have one~” Puppy was very proud.

“What’s the big deal about that... I don’t care! When my dad buys a theater...” Lu Xiucan discontentedly picked up the bucket again and pouted as he walked back to the house.

Meanwhile, after finally leaving Qing Qiu, Li Huowang could also sense everyone’s exhaustion after such a long journey. He decided to let them rest here for a few more days first.

Coincidentally, there was a theater troupe right beside, which could provide entertainment for them.

During these few days, Troupe Leader Lu attended everyday. He was always right at the front of the stage. From how he looked at them, one would be forgiven for thinking that he wanted to swallow them whole.

At night, in the spacious granary, Li Huowang sat on his blanket and focused on studying Han Fu’s copper coin sword. From the Nascent Soul, he had learnt that this sword had a remarkable origin, and had the ability to slay evil spirits as well.

Through the process of confronting Han Fu, Li Huowang had seen that the copper coins of this sword could disperse. If he could master the use of this sword, then at least he would not need to chop off his fingertips each time for long-range attacks.

Speaking of which, even now, whenever he was faced with danger, Profound Records was the thing he used most frequently. Li Huowang still wanted to replace this self-mutilating style of fighting as it was not very healthy for himself.

It was only that he had not yet found someone that could be experimented on, and so he still couldn't use the coin sword just yet.

At that moment, he turned to look at his belongings beside him.

The set of torture tools made by a blacksmith, the sword he had carried ever since his time from the Zephyr Temple, the black-tassel sword he had obtained from the Abbess, and the gourd that was filled with nineteen lifespan pills.

Lastly, there was also the sacred text, something that had been useless from start to end.

Li Huowang slowly scanned all these things and finally settled on the sacred text that once belonged to Dan Yangzi. He examined it inch by inch, occasionally pressing it with his hand.

In the end, he once again confirmed that it was just a stone tablet with inscriptions encouraging virtue, and nothing else.

Li Huowang sighed and threw the heavy sacred text onto the ground. He felt like he had some illness that made him carry this useless piece of stone over a thousand miles for no reason.

Should I just toss it?

Li Huowang pondered, then picked up the piece of stone once again.

No, this object might be useless, but it still has good hardness. It might somehow come in handy.

Li Huowang looked around and focused his gaze on Gao Zhijian, who was playing with Bun.

"Zhijian, come here. I'll give you a protective mirror," called out Li Huowang.

Soon, the stone slab, tied with a chain, was hung around Gao Zhijian's chest. The chain was the one that was used to tie Li Huowang down before.

Gao Zhijian felt very nervous with Senior Li hanging something so valuable on him; he couldn't help but want to take it off.

"Don't take it off. From now on, this object will be with you. Anyway, it's useless for me, but it still has some value with you," said Li Huowang.

As he spoke, Li Huowang pulled out the black-tassel sword and stabbed it at Gao Zhijian's chest. It only left behind a small white spot. But looking at Gao Zhijian, he felt that it was rather awkward. This stone slab hung on the latter's chest, and looked like a child's bellyband; the area it blocked was too small.

"Peng Longteng's armor should be on the ox-cart, right? Put it on," Li Huowang told him after a moment. The armor pieces that crazy woman had been wearing were good things. They could even withstand the murderous aura from his black-tassel sword.

However, Gao Zhijian shook his head and stuttered, "Too... too heavy!"

"Who told you to wear all of it? Pick a few lighter pieces to protect the crucial areas like your shoulders and neck," said Li Huowang impatiently.

Hearing this, Gao Zhijian scratched the back of his head and walked toward the ox-cart outside.

Soon, the heavy, silver armor appeared on Gao Zhijian's body. With the face mask pressed onto his face, and the heavy wolf-tooth club on his shoulder, he instantly turned into a terrifying beast in front of Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at his masterpiece and nodded with satisfaction. "Go! Test it out!"

Soon, the crisp sounds of metal colliding came from the courtyard. To his surprise, Li Huowang found that the current Gao Zhijian wouldn't lose to him if he didn't use his Profound Records.

Panting heavily, Li Huowang stabilized himself and looked at Gao Zhijian before him and said, "Alright. When we encounter trouble, remember to put this on. It'll come in handy."

The visor opened to reveal Gao Zhijian's honest face. He nodded and tried to scratch the back of his head, but his hand only managed to touch the smooth surface of the helmet.

"By the way, everyone is going to watch the play. Why aren't you going?" asked Li Houwang as he sheathed his sword.

"No... no... not interesting!" Gao Zhijian, soaked in his own sweat, took off the heavy armor on his body. Then, he walked to Bun and squatted beside it, easily flipped it over as he used his strong fingers to scratch Bun's white belly.

Bun was very happy to have someone playing with it. It stuck out its tongue while wriggling its body and kicking its four limbs.

Looking at the scene of the person and dog playing, Li Huowang shook his head, then carried his sword and walked back into the house.

He arranged the things on the ground, but hesitated when faced with three swords. One was the black-tassel sword he had gotten from the Abbess, one was the copper coin sword he obtained from Han Fu, and the third was Senior Chang Ming's sharp sword from back at the Zephyr Temple.

He was no blacksmith, and carrying three swords was too heavy.

Just as he was feeling conflicted, Lu Xiucui, who had one green leaf stuck on his hair, rushed in.

When the latter saw Li Huowang alone, he passionately knelt before him and kowtowed three times. "Daoist! I bow to you to become your apprentice! Teach me your supernatural powers!"

"Hmm?" Li Huowang was puzzled, not knowing what this guy was up to.

Has he been enchanted by the play?

“Stop kneeling; I can’t teach you.”

Li Huowang was stating the truth. He could not teach the ability to displace his body, nor could he teach the use of Profound Records.

The only thing he could impart were his half-baked pill-refining abilities, or his skilled torture techniques. But it didn’t seem like this guy would be interested in either of those.

“Daoist, please teach me! If not... I won’t get up!” Xiucan kowtowed once again.

“Then keep kowtowing,” said Li Huowang as he turned around and continued to examine his three swords.

At this point, the one-armed Chun Xiaoman stepped in from outside. Li Huowang paused as he looked at the girl covered in black hair. Then, he picked up the sharp sword that had accompanied him for the longest time, and tossed it over to her.

Chapter 262 - Xiucan

“You can use this one. It was wielded by Senior Chang Ming back then. This sword is decent and cuts through iron like mud, but I never had the chance to use it,” Li Huowang said to Chun Xiaoman, who was holding his sword.

Chun Xiaoman looked at the longsword in her hand, surprised. Although it was a bit heavy for her, it was still much better than her previous weapons. “Thank you, Senior Li!”

“Practice your sword skills regularly. Although I gave you that bell, don't rely on the Wandering Gods for everything. After all, inviting them once costs three months of life. How many three months does a person have in one lifetime?” said Li Huowang.

Chun Xiaoman nodded. Then, she turned around and faced Yang Xiaohai, who had just come in. Excited, she took off her own sword from her waist and stuffed it into his arms.

“This sword is yours from now on. Let's go! Let's have some practice outside!” said Xiaoman.

The next few days passed peacefully, without the need to rush on the road while braving against the wind and the rain. Apart from eating and drinking, they spent all their time watching plays. Aside from the members of the Lu family, the exhaustion on everyone's faces had reduced significantly.

However, after four days, they had to continue on their way. Li Huowang had originally wanted to stay a few more days, but he noticed that the sheep from the Qing Qiu were starting to lose weight because they hadn't eaten enough. If they lost any more weight, they would likely die.

The sleeping blankets and iron pots were put back on the ox-cart, and they began to walk toward the town mentioned by the harvester.

“What happened to your face?” Li Huowang asked Lu Zhuangyuan upon noticing the bruise around his right eye.

“Nothing... nothing at all. I accidentally fell when I went to the toilet at night,” Lu Zhuangyuan said with an awkward smile on his face.

“Hey, this is not from a fall. He secretly went to the backstage of someone else's house to steal some skills, and he was caught by the leader of that troupe and got beaten up.”

Puppy's words instantly made Troupe Leader Lu hang his head in shame, but he still tried to justify himself, “I... I... wasn't stealing. I just went to take a look.”

Obviously, even he himself didn't believe his own words.

To change the subject, Lu Zhuangyuan immediately sold out his own son. “Daoist, I already know about Xiucan's matter. I have scolded him severely. Be the bigger person, and don't lower yourself to his level.”

“What happened?” After a brief moment of confusion, Li Huowang immediately understood what the other party was talking about. “Oh, you mean the matter of apprenticeship? Don't worry, it's nothing. I really can't teach my abilities to others. If I could, I would have taught my juniors long ago. Then, I would have more helpers around me.”

“That's good, that's good.” Lu Zhuangyuan was hunched over, as he smiled and nodded continuously by Li Huowang's side.

“Troupe Leader Lu, how long did those harvesters say it would take to get to the town?”

“They said that it would take about four days of journey to reach there,” replied Lu Zhuangyuan.

Li Huowang nodded, slightly accelerating his pace.

I hope that the town is big enough, and that I can buy a map with Cowheart Mountain marked on it.

Li Huowang wanted to get to his destination immediately, but the journey had to be taken step by step. Though the ox-cart had strong carrying capacity, it couldn't even compare to a donkey-cart in terms of speed, let alone a horse-drawn carriage.

As the sun set, the ox-cart and the sheep formed a wall with the inside having dinner.

Today, they had knife-cut noodles for dinner. Yang Xiaohai skillfully kneaded the dough into a ball, and then held a knife in his left hand and the dough in his right. A cold light danced, and strips of noodles were shaved into the pot. During this time, while he hadn't made much progress in his swordsmanship, his knife skills had certainly improved.

When some freshly-picked bamboo shoots were thrown in, a bowl of bamboo shoot and lamb oil knife-cut noodles was quickly ready.

“Junior Yang, your skills are getting better. In the future, you can become a chef,” Puppy commented. Then, him and Hong'er each scooped a bowl and walked toward the ox-cart.

The two of them exchanged bites as they ate heartily.

With a large bruise on his head obtained from his dad's tobacco pipe, Lu Xiucan came to the pot with his bowl, and picked up some of the noodles while seething, “What's so special about this?! Wait till my dad buys a theater...”

“Brother Xiucan, what did you say?”

Lu Xiucan looked up at Yang Xiaohai. There was a round-faced woman behind Xiaohai, holding a bowl, and walking back with a cold expression.

There was no other activity after dinner, and everyone went to sleep early. Tonight, Lu Xiucan and his brother took turns to stand guard.

Li Huowang slept well in the first half of the night, but just before the third section of the night, he was awakened by a strong killing intent.

He opened the blanket and pushed Bai Lingmiao out from his arms, then flipped around to locate his weapons on the ox-cart.

He could only find the copper coin sword. The black-tassel sword from the Abbess was missing!

“You brat!! What are you doing?! Put the sword down quickly!” Lu Zhuangyuan’s cries woke everyone up.

Li Huowang immediately turned and rushed toward the direction of the campfire. Finally, he spotted his weapon within the Lu Family’s encirclement.

At this moment, the black-tassel sword was being held by Lu Xiucan. Clearly unable to bear the killing intent released by the sword, his body was involuntarily bent backward, his expression grim as he gasped for breath.

Panicked, Lu Zhuangyuan rushed to Li Huowang’s side and fearfully asked, “Daoist, what’s going on? Why did that brat become like this?”

“Hahaha! I have divine powers now! I can kill anyone I want!” Lu Xiucan laughed maniacally.

When he saw Li Huowang coming toward him, Lu Xiucan instinctively pointed the sword at him.

However, Li Huowang just grabbed the blade with one hand, and then raised his right foot before kicking the young man’s soft stomach.

“Ooh~!” Lu Xiucan knelt on the ground and held his tummy. He vomited out all the bamboo shoot knife-cut noodles he had eaten tonight.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang resheathed the sword and looked at his bleeding palm. He casually shook off the blood, and then turned to Lu Xiucan, “I’ll say it again. I don’t have any supernatural abilities, and I cannot teach them to you. This is the first, and the last time. If there’s a next time, then you guys can leave.”

“Why won't you teach me? Why can Puppy learn, but not me? I want to be a lord too! I don't want to be an ordinary person!” shouted Lu Xiucan.

“When you really have it, you won't think like this. If I could choose, I would rather be a normal person like you,” said Li Huowang. Then, he turned toward the others and continued, “Don't stand around; go back to sleep. We still have to continue our journey tomorrow.”

After handling this trivial episode, Li Huowang grabbed the black-tassel sword and turned to leave.

Seeing that everything had been settled, the depressed Lu Zhuangyuan and his eldest son hurriedly approached Lu Xiucan.

“What kind of foolish thing have you done?! Why are you still lying on the ground?! Get up quickly!” shouted Lu Zhuangyuan. However, just as he reached out to pull Lu Xiucan up from the ground, the latter slapped him in the face, stunning him.

“Old man, get away from me! My affairs have nothing to do with you!” shouted Lu Xiucan.

This series of events didn't end that night.

The next morning, Li Huowang woke up to see Lu Xiucan being hung upside down on a tree while Lu Zhuangyuan whipped him using a rattan cane.

Even though his face was covered in blood from being whipped, Lu Xiucan still refused to admit defeat, cursing loudly at his father, “Ah ah ah! Just you wait! You dare to hit me?! Kill me if you dare, or I'm going to kill all of you!! Ah ah ah!”

Chapter 263 - Changes

Lu Zhuangyuan was enraged to hear his son say such defiant remarks even after he had been punished for so long.

“You, this——!” Lu Zhuangyuan was about to raise the rattan stick to once again swing across Lu Xiucan’s face when Li Huowang, who happened to be passing by, grabbed onto it.

Having known Lu Xiucan for a while now, Li Huowang had gotten to understand him to some extent. To the best of his knowledge, this young man had always been rather timid and he would never utter such words. There had to be something wrong here.

Li Huowang approached to study Lu Xiucan’s upturned figure in front of him. His round, blazing eyes were full of hatred and malicious intent, like a wounded wild beast.

After having gone through so much, Li Huowang had seen it all. He could tell that the fierce stare in front of him was not something an average young guy could just make up.

For some reason, Li Huowang felt an odd feeling of familiarity when he looked into those eyes.

Upon closer inspection, Li Huowang suddenly turned his head and gazed at the tall, headless female corpse behind him.

At that moment, it suddenly struck him. The current Lu Xiucan resembled Peng Longteng quite a bit.

Surprised, Li Huowang re-evaluated the black-tassel sword in front of him.

It was after Lu Xiucan had played with the sword that he reached his current state. Although this was a good sword, Li Huowang underestimated its side effects. Him being a Strayed One was the reason why he hadn’t felt anything.

Abbess once mentioned that military objects often carried a malevolent aura, but this aura couldn't dispel the bewilderment and sense of doubt of a Strayed One. However, she never told me the consequences an ordinary person would face upon coming into contact with this weapon.

Now, Lu Xiucui had cleared up the doubts that had been bothering Li Huowang—namely, what would happen when an ordinary person came into contact with this weapon, and what type of consequences would they face?

Li Huowang shifted his gaze back to Lu Xiucui, re-evaluating those resentful eyes.

Could it be that Peng Longteng wasn't always like that? That she was similar to Lu Xiucui, and that she too was affected by something that brought about this change?

Li Huowang strained his mind, trying to recall Peng Longteng's physical features from before. If he removed the flamboyant green tattoo on her face, she would appear to be nothing more than a demure maiden ready for marriage.

But it was also this very woman who had slaughtered thousands of people without batting an eye.

Li Huowang gained a better grasp of military families thanks to Lu Xiucui's change.

Individuals like Peng Longteng were just ordinary people in the past. To gain greater power, whether through cultivation or other means, their bodies were pushed to acquire certain things. It was these things that produced such severe alterations in their dispositions.

Li Huowang recalled the deeds of the monks back at the Righteous Monastery and their Bodhisattva, as well as the foul-smelling establishment of the Benevolent Nunnery.

It seems that no matter how they cultivate, they will eventually absorb something, and it will affect their character and behavior.

The Abbess and nuns' decay, the monks' lust, so what about the military? Ruthlessness? Bloodlust? Or slaughter?

Seeing Li Huowang standing there with a furrowed brow pondering the issue, Troupe Leader Lu sensed that something was amiss. He set aside his anger as a trace of concern appeared on his weathered face. It seemed that his son was not just being rebellious. The trouble appeared to be something a lot more significant.

Regardless of how Lu Xiucui hit or scolded him, he was still his son.

“Daoist, what happened to my son? Is he possessed? Can you think of a way to cure him?” asked Lu Zhuangyuan.

Pulled back to reality by the questions, Li Huowang reassessed Lu Xiucui before turning back to Lu Zhuangyuan to let him know the truth.

“I don't know much about Lu Xiucui's current state. But based on the overall situation, if his temperament gradually becomes milder, then there should still be hope for recovery. If not, Troupe Leader Lu, I advise you to be prepared,” said Li Huowang.

The meaning behind Li Huowang's words was unspoken yet clear.

Upon hearing this news that was like a bolt out of the blue, Troupe Leader Lu's body staggered, almost causing him to lose his balance.

Before anyone could react, Lu Zhuangyuan knelt before Li Huowang.

Li Huowang quickly turned around to avoid the bow from Lu Zhuangyuan, as he frowned. “Troupe Leader Lu, are you trying to shorten my life?”

“No, no, no!” Lu Zhuangyuan quickly got up, repeatedly waving his hands. He said nervously, “Daoist, it was my fault. If I hadn't started it, he wouldn't have been led astray, and tried to steal your sword!”

The atmosphere became heavy as the onlookers approached silently, listening to what Lu Zhuangyuan was saying.

Casting another glance at the inverted Lu Xiucan, Li Huowang sighed and turned toward Bai Lingmiao. "Why don't you give it a try?"

Boom, boom, boom~

The rhythmic drumbeat rang out, followed by a chant.

"The sun set on the Western mountain, and the skies went dark~ Every house closed its doors while the magpies and crows flew back to their trees~ The sparrows flew to the rafters, and the entrances to the houses were closed~ Ten houses with nine locked~ Only one remains unlocked..."

The chanting to invite the Bei Family began. The fragrant incense with dark red embers wafted gently into Lu Xiucan's throat, yet there was no response.

"Senior Li, the Immortal families said that Lu Xiucan is fine," relayed Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang sneered. These Immortal families were just like that, full of tricks when it came to their people. But when faced with real challenges, they were nothing more than a facade.

On the other hand, the aggrieved Lu Zhuangyuan turned around and gave Lu Xiucan a slap across his face. "He deserves it! This has nothing to do with you. It's his fault! He is already at this age, and still engaging in such improper behavior! This is just his karma!"

In response, Lu Xiucan's scolding became even louder.

Despite the small incident in the evening, they still had to continue with their journey. During the day, Lu Xiucan was still tied up. However, instead of hanging him from a tree, he was now tied to the ox-cart.

A shadow of gloom covered the faces of everyone in the Lu Family Troupe. But to Li Huowang who had experienced numerous battles, it was not all that significant whether Lu Xiucan lived or died.

Li Huowang himself had enough troubles, and he didn't have the leisure to worry about others.

The journey continued, and people gradually adapted to Lu Xiucan's new changes.

Eventually, Lu Xiucan was released; after all, he was not Li Huowang. If a person was not strong enough, then his hatred would simply seem laughable. The change in temperament hadn't really increased his strength. Ultimately, he was still a frail young man. Under Lu Zhuangyuan's tobacco pipe and his elder brother's fists, he obediently followed as they continued their journey.

At the same time, Troupe Leader Lu noticed that although his younger son had become more irritable, there wasn't much change in other aspects of his behavior.

For example, he still exchanged vulgar jokes with Puppy and occasionally teased his niece, Cui'er. It was just his voice that had become much louder.

Even so, the boy still harbored deep resentment toward his father for hanging him up and beating him. He continued to glare at his father's back with a cold expression.

Yet, he dared not look at Li Huowang, who had also beaten him up.

Chapter 264 - Master

“Old bones! Just you wait! There’ll come a time when you can’t move either...” Lu Xiucan muttered under his breath with a fierce look on his face.

Puppy leaned over and used his elbow to bump him. “Ah, you’ve got guts stealing Senior Li’s sword.”

Lu Xiucan glanced at him with disdain. “Such a joke! What’s the big deal just holding a sword? Don’t you dare?”

“Of course not. That sword has such a strong bloody smell. I feel uncomfortable even getting close to it,” replied Puppy.

Hearing this, Lu Xiucan appeared even more pleased with himself. “Why would I be afraid of that? Let me tell you, I pulled it out precisely because I sensed the strong smell. As long as I want to, I still dare to do it even now!”

“Wow, very impressive.”

While the two chatted, they dropped the firewood by the iron pot, then turned back to fetch water.

“Xiucan, come over here for a moment.” Li Huowang, who was sitting on a tree stump with Lu Zhangyuan, gestured toward the slender youth in the distance.

As Puppy looked on gleefully at his misfortune, Lu Xiucan lowered his head and walked over.

As Lu Xiucan looked up at the one-eyed young man, he felt a sudden jolt of panic. He once again lowered his head and focused on the straw sandals on his feet.

“Don’t look down. Look up at me,” said Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Lu Xiucan eventually raised his head.

“How have you been feeling recently? Is your temperament still the same?” Li Huowang asked calmly.

Lu Xiucan shook his head. "Much better. It's almost like it was before I picked up the sword."

At that moment, Puppy had a mischievous grin on his face as he approached Li Huowang. He repeated the conversation he just had with Lu Xiucan to them.

Upon hearing that his son had said such words, Lu Zhangyuan sighed deeply, then lowered the tobacco pipe in his hand. "You damned brat! You..."

Lu Xiucan was about to scold Puppy fiercely, but a slap had already landed on his face.

It was Li Huowang who struck him. When he saw Lu Xiucan stare back at him fiercely, he turned toward Lu Zhuangyuan and said, "Troupe Leader Lu, all these days have passed, and yet there has been no change in him. It seems like this influence will stick with him for the rest of his life."

"Young Daoist, is there no other way?" Lu Zhuangyuan asked unwillingly. Although he had always despised his younger son for being foolish and timid, the previous version was much better than the one before him.

"If you are afraid that Lu Xiucan's tyrannical character will cause big trouble in the future, then you can just cut off the root of the problem now," said Li Huowang.

Those words not only scared Lu Xiucan, they also surprised Lu Zhuangyuan. Both of them showed fear in their eyes.

"That... that's not necessary, really not necessary," said Lu Zhangyuan as he forced a smile and pulled his younger son away from Li Huowang.

On the other hand, though Lu Xiucan had a look of disgust as his dad approached him, he dared not push him away when he saw the tobacco pipe his dad held in his other hand.

Just as they were about to leave, a shout rang out from behind to stop them.

“Hold on, I just thought of a way. Perhaps it might turn Lu Xiucan back. It depends on whether you guys are willing to take the risk,” said Li Huowang.

Lu Xiucan and Lu Zhuangyuan both turned around simultaneously, only to see Li Huowang holding a parchment filled with words.

What Li Huowang held now was none other than the technique he had forced out of Han Fu’s Nascent Soul—the Xiandu Cishen Seal that allowed one to control the copper coin sword.

If his guess was correct, the ability of any sect was the application of some object.

Since Lu Xiucan now had the influence of malicious energy on him, it was a good opportunity to use the cultivation technique of the disciples of Luoism to try and purify it. Regardless of what the disciples of Luoism practiced or absorbed, it would suffice as long as it could replace the current malicious energy on him.

Moreover, Lu Xiucan could also help him test out whether or not there were any tricks in the technique, thus killing two birds with one stone.

While Lu Zhuangyuan was still hesitating, the excited Lu Xiucan knelt directly in front of Li Huowang, and pounded his forehead on the soil, giving three loud knocks. As he raised his forehead with red mud caked on it, his eyes were filled with a strong thirst for power.

“Master! Accept me as your disciple! I am willing to learn your supernatural abilities!” said Lu Xiucan.

On the other hand, Li Huowang looked at Lu Zhuangyuan, choosing to wait for his response.

After a difficult moment of hesitation, Lu Zhuangyuan finally nodded. He decided to take the risk in hopes of seeing his son return to normal. The Young Daoist had also mentioned that the risk was not that high. And if they succeeded, then his useless son would really end up having a meteoric rise.

“Alright, let's give it a try. Perhaps it will work,” said Li Huowang as he handed the parchment to Lu Xiucan, who was staring at him passionately.

As soon as Lu Xiucan took it, he eagerly began to read it.

However, immediately after giving the parchment to Lu Xiucan, Li Huowang sighed deeply, and used his fingers to massage his throbbing forehead in a helpless manner. “Xiucan, didn't you notice that you took it upside down?”

“Master, I can't read.” Lu Xiucan dumbfoundedly looked at Li Huowang.

“Ah... You really don't live up to your name[1].”

Li Huowang took the parchment back, and relayed its contents word by word. It was a tiring task, especially when dealing with an illiterate person who couldn't even write his own name.

Fortunately, Li Huowang had some time on his hands, and Lu Xiucan's determination to learn the supernatural arts kept him going, despite the exhaustion.

By the time they reached the town, Lu Xiucan had just learnt the beginning part of the technique.

Li Huowang's group was big, but there were also many other farmers from other villages that were traveling toward the town to sell their wares. Thus, the road had grown much busier.

Watching Lu Xiucan, who was tirelessly reciting his cultivation mantra beside him, Li Huowang asked, "Don't you want to kill me?"

“Master, what are you talking about? Why would I want to kill you?” Lu Xiucan responded calmly.

Li Huowang could tell that he was not lying. With his nature, he would have easily exposed himself if he tried to lie.

“I've beaten you up before, and I even planned to persuade your father to kill you. I'm really surprised that you aren't holding a grudge with your current personality,” said Li Huowang.

“I’ve just become a bit more temperamental. I haven’t turned into a lunatic. Besides, you taught me the supernatural abilities which have already offset that,” Lu Xiucai said matter-of-factly.

Li Huowang nodded in understanding and patted the ox pulling the cart.

“Moo~” The ox mooed and continued pulling the cart toward the town gate.

Upon entering the town, the guards insisted on inspecting the ox-cart with the Black Taisui in it. After some effort and with a few pieces of silver, the seasoned Lu Zhuangyuan finally managed to get them across safely.

They stepped back onto the cobblestone streets, and observed the lively market, where everyone seemed to have come back to life. Following their usual routine, they found an inn and enjoyed a good meal. After settling in, each person started to carry out their own agendas.

As a local, Bai Lingmiao brought Chun Xiaoman to find a map and pinpoint the position of Cowheart Mountain.

Meanwhile, Puppy, Zhao Wu and Gao Zhijian went to sell off the sheep and buy more food.

As for Li Huowang, he ventured into the town to investigate any traces of the Surveillance Bureau.

1. Xiucai in Chinese also refers to scholars 📖

Chapter 265 - Town

Usually, it was the others' responsibility to obtain information. But, this time was different; his direction of inquiry was related to the Surveillance Bureau. It was simply far too dangerous for others to inquire about these mysterious and unpredictable entities.

However, Li Huowang didn't have to be concerned about that. His newly acquired powers gave him a distinct advantage in his investigation.

As long as he kept his illusion underground, his physical body could stay outside while staying hidden.

And in any case, if he was targeted, then he had nothing to worry about. His sharp senses would allow him to anticipate those threats earlier.

All the people were scattered throughout the town like white sesame seeds on a pancake. Everybody was busy with their things until nightfall when they finally all gathered again at the inn.

"Senior Li, I've sold all of the sheep. People were in a frenzy to get these sheep as soon as they knew that they came from Qing Qiu! I also bought some refined grains. I couldn't even poop normally after eating whole grains every day the past few days," said Puppy as he walked side-by-side with Zhao Wu and playfully handed the heavy silver coins to Li Huowang.

"Give it to Zhao Wu to manage. He normally handles the accounts," instructed Li Huowang.

Feeling a bit low-spirited, Li Huowang turned and walked into his room. As he lay on the bed, he felt the piercing pain in his feet due to walking all day.

If there was anything worse than catching the attention of the Surveillance Bureau, that would be not being able to find any information about them at all. He knew that finding the Surveillance Bureau in just one day was improbable, but he couldn't help feeling discouraged.

This way of searching won't work. It's like trying to find a needle in a haystack. I must come up with a different strategy to connect with the Surveillance Bureau as soon as possible.

Li Huowang rubbed his forehead, contemplating his next steps in the dark room.

At that moment, a pair of hands with long, sharp black nails reached out from under the bed as they removed Li Huowang's shoes and socks before gently soaking his weary feet in warm water. At the same time, the pitch-black room fell into silence, devoid of any sound.

The tranquility lasted for an entire hour before Li Huowang broke the silence himself.

Li Huowang suddenly sat up, and excitedly said to Monk's illusion standing in front of him, "Wait a minute, think about the time when that old Lama appeared! Yes, that's it! Since the Surveillance Bureau deals with things that regular authorities can't handle, I just need to get involved in as many troublesome matters as possible. That way, I'll have a better chance at getting in touch with the Surveillance Bureau quickly!"

"You're right!" Monk nodded approvingly while standing beside the headless Peng Longteng.

Li Huowang realized that he had been looking in the wrong direction before. Instead of inquiring about the Surveillance Bureau itself, he should be investigating any bizarre and supernatural incidents in the area. As long as there were such occurrences, the Surveillance Bureau was sure to make an appearance.

With this realization, Li Huowang could no longer contain his excitement. He lifted his feet from the basin, hastily put on his shoes and socks even as his feet were still too wet, and rushed out.

But as soon as he pushed the door open, the excited Li Huowang came face-to-face with Lu Zhuangyuan.

“Hehe, Daoist, have you eaten?” Lu Zhuangyuan asked with a smile.

“Do you need something?” Li Huowang asked coldly while bracing himself against the doorframe.

“Oh, um, how is Xiucan doing? If he is not behaving, then just give him a good beating! From my experience, a bit of toughness is necessary when learning a craft. Also, please, you don’t need to be too polite with me,” said Lu Zhuangyuan.

“He is very diligent. However, he is learning at a slower pace because he cannot read,” said Li Huowang truthfully.

“Oh, Daoist, why is my life so tough? I finally got a grandson, and now this happens,” said Lu Zhuangyuan.

“If there’s something, then just say it. Otherwise, I have urgent matters to attend to,” said Li Huowang, sensing that there was more to the conversation. This old man wouldn’t come here just to complain. That was not like him.

“Yes! Daoist, did you forget? It is regarding borrowing money to re-open the theater. I’ve been searching all day, and there are plenty of things in this place—costumes, mirrors, musical instruments! So, um...”

“Are you still not giving up?” asked Li Huowang. To be honest, he felt that when compared with the troupe from Liang Kingdom, the Lu Family Troupe’s modest performances gave them no competitive edge.

“Well... I want to give it a try. I’ve thought of a way. Maybe I can make a living by picking up some leftover business from these troupes,” Lu Zhuangyuan chuckled.

“Alright, go get the money from Zhao Wu. He should have enough cash available now,” said Li Huowang, pushing him aside and quickly heading toward the inn’s staircase.

Compared to the matter of the Surveillance Bureau, Lu Zhuangyuan's aspirations to revive his troupe were immediately pushed to the back of Li Huowang's mind.

In the following period, Li Huowang went to great lengths in order to locate the Surveillance Bureau in Liang Kingdom. He went out early and returned late, gathering information from the town residents.

Li Huowang decided to overlook those who died or were cursed because he knew that such insignificant instances would only draw the attention of Shamans or local mediums, and not the Surveillance Bureau.

Having been in this world for quite some time, Li Huowang also understood what kind of existence the Surveillance Bureau was and what they cared about.

The Surveillance Bureau only ever focused on significant events, such as large-scale disasters that could lead to the death of tens of thousands. For example, the town that was massacred by the Sitting Oblivion Dao, or events that defied the laws set by the Imperial Court.

However, such matters that could attract the attention of the Surveillance Bureau were not all that common. After searching for a while, Li Huowang didn't find any paranormal or evil occurrences. However, he did hear a lot of gossip and rumors about various trivial matters.

Of course, Li Huowang knew that if he took off the copper coin mask on his face and revealed that he was the Strayed One, it would undoubtedly attract the attention of the Surveillance Bureau immediately. However, that was not what he wanted.

Late into the night, Bai Lingmiao gently opened her eyes as she lay on the bed while looking at Li Huowang, who was fast asleep next to her with his head covered. A trace of concern crept into her heart.

Every day, Senior Li wakes up before dawn, and only returns after I've gone to sleep. I'm also not sure what he's in search of.

Bang, bang, bang!

Someone violently banged on the door as an eager voice sounded from outside the room, "Master! I've done it! I now have supernatural powers!"

The moment this voice sounded, Li Huowang abruptly opened his eyes, fixing his bloodshot gaze on the door. It was Lu Xiucan's voice. He sat up right away, lifted the covers, and walked toward the door.

Li Huowang had just put on his shoes when he suddenly remembered something. He turned to look at Bai Lingmiao on the bed and asked, "How is it going? Have you found your home?"

In response, Bai Lingmiao nodded with a hint of a smile in her eyes. She reached under the pillow and took out a map, handing it over. "Senior Li, I have found it, but you've been going out a lot lately, and I haven't had a chance to tell you."

Li Huowang quickly unfolded the map and saw various winding lines, among which a red line stood out, leading to the Cowheart Mountain.

"The merchant who sold the map said that if we are using an ox-cart, it would probably take us about a month. It would be faster on horseback, but unfortunately, none of us know how to ride horses."

Chapter 266 - Pink Show

Li Huowang nodded when he heard Bai Lingmiao. “It’s ok, we can go slow. How many more urns do we still have?”

“Don’t worry about them. Chun Xiaoman went to the escort office and entrusted them with the last of the urns that were to be sent back to their respective homes,” said Bai Lingmiao.

Hearing this, Li Huowang felt his heart become lighter.

Bam bam bam!

At that moment, an urgent knocking sound came from outside the room and interrupted both of them. “Master! Open the door! I did it!”

Li Huowang placed the map down and walked to the door.

Creak~

The door opened to reveal Lu Xiucan standing outside as he shouted excitedly with heavy eye-bags under his eyes. He held a single coin in his palm. It was the coin that Li Huowang had taken off from the bronze coin sword for Lu Xiucan to practice with.

“Master, I did it! The bronze coin just moved!” Lu Xiucan ran into the room without waiting for Li Huowang to say anything and placed the coin on the table.

Then, he started chanting to it while stomping his foot. “Am da mu bao tuo nan er!”

He kept repeating the chant and his voice slowly got louder and louder. His veins slowly started bulging and he looked like he was about to eat the coin. He repeated the chant numerous times before the coin finally vibrated.

Covered in sweat, Lu Xiucan excitedly looked toward Li Huowang. “Master, look! I did it!”

Li Huowang walked over, inspected Lu Xiucan, and then looked at the bronze coin on the table. “You did it? Did you feel anything wrong with your body?”

“No, I feel great! This is the happiest day of my life! I’m finally half an Immortal! Hahaha!”

Lost in his own thoughts, Li Huowang looked at Lu Xiucan.

From the looks of it, Hanfu’s Nascent Soul did not lie to me; however, this is only the start. The side effects might manifest at the end. I only have one life, and so it’s better to be cautious.

“Continue training and don’t stop. Go back now. I will teach the other half to you tomorrow,” said Li Huowang.

Once the boy left, Li Huowang turned around and smiled at Bai Lingmiao. He closed the door and lay down on the bed once again.

“Xiucan looks a lot better now,” Bai Lingmiao whispered to him.

“Hoho, is that so? I don’t think so. He’s completely different compared to before. I hope he can return to normal after learning it.” Li Huowang closed his eyes and steadied his breathing.

“Senior Li, what have you been up to all these days?”

Li Huowang closed his eyes. “Nothing much. Don’t worry, in just a few days, we will resume our journey once more. I won’t keep you from going home.”

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly felt a pair of soft hands holding him. “Senior Li, I’m not worried about my home... I am worried about you.”

“Me? What’s there to worry about? With the Black Taisui, I won’t start hallucinating again. My left eye is slowly growing back and I can already see some light with it. It should regain vision in a few more days. Plus, no one is chasing after us this time. This is one of the best times of our lives,” said Li Huowang.

Li Huowang felt Bai Lingmiao’s soft body cuddling against him. He hugged her waist and pulled her closer.

Bai Lingmiao didn't believe him one bit—she knew him like the back of her hands.

Sensing her distrust, Li Huowang sighed. He opened his one eye and saw the three illusions standing beside him.

After a moment, Li Huowang patted Bai Lingmiao's back gently and comforted her, "Don't worry. Everything will be fine. We will solve it."

Days passed and slowly, Li Huowang had explored most of the town. Even though he had some leads, he still hadn't managed to obtain any results from them.

At this moment, Li Huowang carefully placed his illusion beneath the ground and sat on a wall while observing the people walking past him.

Horse carriages and ox-carts passed by non-stop. The oxes shat wherever they wanted, but some children with baskets took the feces away not long after.

After the children collected the feces, they would stand beside a stall that sold pancakes. They were entranced by the delicious frying smell.

Staring at the people in front of him, Li Huowang silently pondered.

Maybe this place is too small. Even though a lot of people pass by here and there is a lot of gossip, I still don't have a proper lead. Maybe I need to go somewhere larger? I can't stay here for too long. If I can't find them today, then I will have to go somewhere else. I'm sure I will meet them one day.

After pondering for a while, Li Huowang leaped down from the wall and walked over to a tea shop. It was a place where one could find the most up to date information. All of the information about the town would go through here first.

Just as Li Huowang walked into the tea shop, a group of men ran out excitedly.

“Let’s go! I heard that there’s a troupe performing a pink show over there! The show they are performing is much more exciting than the storyteller of the tea shop!”

Troupe?

Li Huowang was confused. The only troupe left in the town should be the Lu Family Troupe.

After thinking about it for a moment, he entered the tea shop. However, except for the storyteller and the waiter who were talking to each other, there was no one else.

Well, I don’t think I will be able to glean any information here.

Li Huowang walked out and followed the group of men, running after them.

Li Huowang wanted to see what kind of show Lu Zhuangyuan was able to put up to have everyone within the tea shop be attracted by it.

The stage was not too far away, located at the western side of the town. Beneath the stage was a thronging crowd. Some of them were chewing on beans while others were talking.

When Li Huowang got close, he saw Lu Juren pointing toward his wife while performing.

“Ai~ I~ Don’t want the best, nor the worst~ I want~ I want~ I want you~ and your heart~”

The crowd cheered underneath the stage.

This is not the script I remember.

Li Huowang was puzzled when he saw Lu Juren’s performance. Just as his thoughts reached this point, Lu Xiucan started singing to the beat of the music.

“I touch her nose~ Fragrance flows out from the room~ I touch her mouth~ Her eyes smile bewitchingly~ I touch her chin and she places it on her chest~ I touch her ears and they flutter to my touch.”

The lyrics were normal in the beginning, but they slowly became more and more obscene until everyone started whistling beneath the stage.

Li Huowang now knew why it was called the “pink show”. He had been wondering why there were only men in the audience and no women.

Even faced with the incredible performance of the Liang Kingdom’s troupe, Lu Zhuangyuan had actually found a way to perform here.

He is indeed an experienced performer.

After satisfying his curiosity, Li Huowang decided to leave the performance early.

But just as he turned around, something piqued his interest.

“This is much more interesting than the pink show from Pi County.”

“I thought that a plague was sweeping through there? You still dare to go there?”

Chapter 267 - Resume The Journey

Plague?

Li Huowang was immediately attracted to what they said. His instincts told him that this was what he had been looking for.

Li Huowang stood near the two men while ignoring the stage completely. He was waiting for them to continue speaking. But what made him anxious was that they had been talking excitedly when he accidentally overheard them, but now they had gone completely silent.

After a moment, Li Huowang walked up to the fat one among the two and gently patted his shoulder. "My dear friend, may I ask what is happening within Pi County? Why is there a plague? I hadn't heard anything about it before."

The fatty, who had been concentrating on the pink show, was displeased when he got interrupted by Li Huowang. "What is it to you? Who are you?"

But when Li Huowang passed him two fragmented pieces of silver, the fatty immediately perked up and became much more polite.

"I hope this is enough. My relatives are staying in Pi County and I'm worried that something might've happened to them if there is a plague. I'm sorry for my brashness; I'm just worried about them," said Li Huowang, making up a story.

The fatty couldn't care less if Li Huowang was saying some bullshit; after all, the money was real. With this, he was more than happy to help Li Huowang.

"You could've just said so. It's nothing much, don't worry about me,” said the fat man as he took the two fragmented pieces of silver. “Don’t worry, your relatives should still be alive. While the Pi County doesn’t actually have a plague, it would still be better to bring them out of there. The feng shui over there is quite bad.”

After speaking to this point, the fatty then whispered, as if afraid of someone overhearing them, “But let me tell you this. When I was there on business with them last time, I saw that the people over there were very nervous and their faces didn't look healthy. I don’t know what happened to them, but I could see why the people would say that there was a plague in Pi County. Those people looked worse than sick people.”

“The entire county’s people looked very nervous and unhealthy?” muttered Li Huowang.

After a moment of thought, he asked another question, “Is there anything else weird about Pi County?”

Even though this world was quite bizarre, it was still too early to know what was happening to the people of Pi County based on just these two clues.

“I don’t know. I just went there and quickly came back. If you are worried, you can go there and see them yourself. It’s just a ten day journey so it should be fine. See, I came back safely didn’t I?” said the fat man.

“Ten days?” muttered Li Huowang as he turned around and went back to the inn.

Back at the inn, Li Huowang unfurled the map with Bai Lingmiao and soon found where the Pi County was. It was in the same direction as Cowheart Mountain!

In the end, Li Huowang decided to check it out.

It was not a minor case if an entire county went crazy. Li Huowang felt that he had a high chance of encountering the people from the Surveillance Bureau over there.

This was his only choice.

Just then, Lu Xiucan ran into the room excitedly. Just as he was about to say something, Li Huowang looked at him and said, “Go tell your father to stop performing once you end with the current one. We will resume our journey tomorrow.”

Hearing this, Lu Xiucan nodded and ran off.

By now, everyone was already used to Li Huowang suddenly telling them to move out. Soon, they loaded all their stuff into the ox-cart and the newly bought horse carriage. As for where they were heading and what they were doing, they were either too lazy or too scared to ask. All they had to do was follow Li Huowang’s orders.

The only thing different this time around was that the Lu family was now much happier after their performance. All of their faces were ruddy and refreshed.

“Hehehe, Young Daoist~ This is what we agreed upon last time. Half of it is yours while the other half is mine,” Lu Zhuangyuan showed several fragmented silver and bronze coins to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang stared at the grinning Lu Zhuangyuan. “What? You managed to earn this much?”

Li Huowang knew that the Lu Family’s past performances had never been this lucrative.

“Hohoho, the Liang Kingdom is indeed wealthy. Everyone here is so rich~” said Lu Zhuangyuan as he smiled happily and placed the money onto the ox-cart.

When Zhao Wu saw that Li Huowang did not turn down the money, he took a piece of string and tied up the bronze coins.

Li Huowang naturally did not turn it down. Even though the amount wasn’t huge, they would still be able to deal with their daily expenses using it. At the very least, their meals would be more luxurious every day.

“Bring out the cured meat. Let’s make baked rice with cured meat,” instructed Li Huowang.

When Li Huowang said that, he suddenly heard someone gulp. He felt that they should’ve eaten enough meat back in Qing Qiu, and so there was no reason for them to be so hungry for meat.

“Who did that? Did you not eat anything today?” questioned Li Huowang.

When he turned around, Li Huowang saw that it was not someone from his group, but a skinny man with white hair. Behind him was a youth. Both of them were harvesters and were on the same path as Li Huowang.

When they noticed that Li Huowang was staring at them, the old harvester started staring toward a harvested field on the other side.

Growl~

The old harvester’s stomach was still grumbling. After a moment, he placed his shoulder pole down before tying the hemp rope on his waist tighter.

Li Huowang stared at the harvester’s tattered clothes and then continued on with his journey.

Throughout their journey, no one spoke besides Puppy.

When the sun was about to set, the ox-cart finally came to a stop and everyone immediately started with their respective chores.

“Senior Li, look! There’s a wild vegetable here that we can eat to offset the oil from the cured meat!”

Due to being focused on the map, Li Huowang didn’t know who said that.

He was focused on the map because they couldn’t afford to make a single mistake. One wrong turn and they would have to waste days just to travel back.

Soon, dinner was served. Their menu tonight was baked rice with cured meat as well as some wild vegetable soup.

Looking at the oily rice with bits of cured meat within, Li

Huowang looked at the two harvesters sitting farther away from their group.

At this moment, the two harvesters were scooping up some cold water from a stream to drink while eating multigrain rice balls from their pouch. The younger harvester was staring at Li Huowang's bowl of hot rice, only to be stopped by the older harvester pressing his head down.

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang said, "Take two bowls of rice and give it to them."

"Alright." Bai Lingmiao nodded before turning to the pot.

Chapter 268 - Pi County

When Bai Lingmiao gave the two bowls of rice to the harvesters, they accepted them with trembling hands before thanking her.

Compared to Li Huowang and the others who needed wild vegetable soup to offset the oiliness of the rice, the harvesters had no such qualms and gulped down the rice with gratitude.

But they only ate the rice and picked out the cured meat before placing it within their pouch. They wanted to save it for later.

After eating, the harvesters washed the bowls by the creek and happily returned them to Li Huowang. Even though they were missing a few teeth, they were grinning happily.

The old harvester wanted to say something, but he wasn't sure how. In the end, Li Huowang broke the silence first.

"Old man, the harvest season was so good this year. Why are you still working even though you are so old?"

"The... the fields all belonged to the landlord. The bountiful harvest had nothing to do with us. We can't even eat any of it," The old harvester smiled and explained. Before continuing, "Thank you for the delicious meal, Daoist. That meal was enough to keep us full for an entire day."

"No worries. It's just a bowl of rice. Old man, are you working near the fields here? Have you been to Pi County before?" asked Li Huowang, finally revealing his intention.

"Of course! I have been there many times! After all, I've been harvesting the fields at Pi County all these years," replied the old man. He was quite excited to be able to share his experiences and became confident. He used his calloused hands to gesture in the air. "Let me tell you this. Harvesting wheat is all about technique!

Those youngsters don't have the technique and can't do as well as me! For example, you can't hold your sickle too high or too low. You need to be just right!"

Li Huowang interrupted his explanation. "Old man, have you gone to Pi County recently?"

"Yes, I went there before. I came back here this time to bring my nephew or I might've already finished harvesting all of the wheat in Pi County by now. It takes technique—"

"You went there before? Have you seen anything wrong with the people there?"

While Li Huowang was not worried that nothing had happened there, he was worried that the problem wasn't large enough. If the problem wasn't serious, then the Surveillance Bureau would not send anyone there and he would just be wasting time by going there.

Seeing Li Huowang become serious, the old harvester got nervous. He scratched the back of his head and stuttered, "I do—don't think there's anything wrong with them. They always pay and feed me, but for some reason, they prefer to stay in their houses and never come out. They would just place the food and money outside and tell us to take it for ourselves."

Panicky, looks terrible, and they love to stay in their own houses?

Li Huowang carefully pondered the three things and the relationship between them.

Regardless, it doesn't seem like the Surveillance Bureau has solved the situation yet.

Li Huowang was cautious as he asked once again, "Is there anything else wrong with them? Did their faces or physical appearances change?"

"What do you mean? They looked the same to me. One nose, two nostrils, two eyes, two ears."

Li Huowang knew that they might look human on the surface, but the people in Pi County might be something else entirely.

No matter what happened there, I hope it was serious enough.

Li Huowang prayed for the best.

Seeing how the Daoist did not talk to him anymore, the old harvester walked back to his nephew.

But just as he was halfway there, he turned back toward Li Huowang once again. "Oh, I nearly forgot. The people of Pi County apparently like to hit their children! I remember collecting the payment and walking past a window. Back then, I heard their children crying profusely. If I was in their place, I wouldn't hit my child that badly."

Li Huowang started analyzing what he had heard.

Are they hitting their children or are they using their children for something else?

Li Huowang recalled how the water bandits sacrificed the babies to summon a monster. After surviving in this bizarre world for so long, Li Huowang would now always think about the worst-case scenario.

This was also why he grew slightly more troubled when he heard what the harvester just said. He wanted the issue to be large enough that it would attract the Surveillance Bureau, but not large enough that they would be in danger.

By the time Li Huowang snapped back, he saw that the harvesters were gone and the sky was already dark.

Li Huowang shook his head and washed up by the creek. "It's getting more and more confusing. Whatever... I will just see what the situation looks like later and decide what to do."

The two harvesters bid farewell to them on the second day. Since the wheat in Pi County had already been harvested, they were going somewhere else to find work.

Days passed and they met other people along the way. Li Huowang always tried to gain information about Pi County through them.

Unfortunately, all they knew was that Pi County seemed to be suffering from a plague and advised Li Huowang to not go there. There was no new information. The only good thing they found out was that there were no bandits around here.

Perhaps the Liang Kingdom is very good at dealing with them.

Soon, they reached Pi County.

“Is this Pi County?” Li Huowang stood atop a hill and observed the town surrounded by walls. His other eye had grown back completely.

The day was gloomy with dark clouds hanging low. The entire town looked desolate and creepy.

Staring at how the town was built, Li Huowang finally knew why they called it Pi County.

It was because the town was built in the shape of the character “Pi”.

“This place seems ominous. Everyone, be careful,” Li Huowang warned them before walking into the town.

When they entered the town, Li Huowang was visibly uncomfortable; there were too few people in the town. The streets were empty and devoid of life, with only some passersby quickly passing by them from time to time.

At the same time, Li Huowang felt a lot of people were staring at them. The gazes were coming from behind the windows. He could feel a lot of the townsfolk staring at them through the windows.

Just then, a woman carrying a baby walked toward them with a haggard face. When she got close, she was visibly surprised by the appearance of Li Huowang and everyone else. She bit her lips, hugged her crying baby closer, and quickly ran past them.

When the woman passed by them, Li Huowang closed his eyes and smelled the air.

“Awoo.” Bun sat down and nudged Li Huowang with its paws.

In response, Li Huowang patted Bun’s head. “You smelled it too? That’s right. There’s the scent of blood and rust on that woman.”

Chapter 269 - Inn

“Oooowu~” Bun shook its tail. It could indeed smell the two scents, but as a dog it didn't know what Li Huowang was saying.

Just then, Monk's illusion spoke to him, “Daoist, if she has the scent of blood and rust on her, is she a good person or a bad person?”

Li Huowang just shook his head and looked up at the sky. Just then, a single raindrop fell into his eye.

“Let's go, it's going to rain soon. Let's find an inn to stay at first,” instructed Li Huowang.

The rain was initially light, but gradually grew stronger. By the time Li Huowang and the others finally managed to enter an inn, it was pouring in full force.

Shaking the rain off his body, Li Huowang shouted toward the inside of the inn. “Waiter! Owner!”

He shouted for quite a bit before the waiter finally appeared with a white cloth over his shoulder.

When the waiter saw so many outsiders, he was shocked and panicked momentarily as he instinctively tried to retreat.

However, Puppy jumped out and grabbed the waiter's wrist to stop him from retreating. “Where are you going? Can't you see that we are here as paying customers? Quickly ask the cook to prepare a meal for us. My wife and Senior Li are both hungry!”

“Alright, please wait,” replied the waiter, very close to losing it.

When the waiter ran back into the kitchen, Li Huowang frowned. He was worried about what was happening here.

“Xiaoman, go and follow him. Make sure that they don't try to poison us,” instructed Li Huowang.

Chun Xiaoman nodded and went into the kitchen with her sword. Bai Lingmiao followed her soon after.

“Young Daoist, why don’t we leave here once the rain stops?” suggested Lu Zhuangyuan. He didn’t know that Li Huowang had actually come here with a purpose, but as an experienced traveler, he could feel that something was wrong.

“Don’t worry. They are afraid of us instead of the other way around. The town is big and everyone is tired. It’s best if we rest here first,” replied Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Lu Zhuangyuan dared not to argue with Li Huowang anymore.

The Young Daoist is very strong; it would be for the best if I don’t make him angry. Even if this place is weird, I’m sure he will be able to deal with it.

Soon, the fragrant dishes were brought out one by one. Every time the waiter brought out a plate of the meal, Li Huowang took a small piece of it and threw it under the table, allowing Bun to happily eat it.

It was only after seeing that Bun was doing fine that the others started eating.

Munching on the crispy lotus root, Li Huowang silently ate his meal; even so, he could feel the two gazes coming from within the kitchen.

The waiter and the cook were staring at them with fear.

Li Huowang recalled the woman they had passed by just now and remembered how she was staring at them with fear too.

Li Huowang knew that he didn’t look as horrible as he did last time—everything had grown back. And after adjusting his organs little by little, his face should also be quite normal now.

Then what are they afraid of? This is a large town, so there’s no reason to be afraid of just a few outsiders. Did they encounter something?

Li Huowang continued to think of a reason while having his meal.

The rain did not stop even late into the night. It continued to pound the streets with water.

“Waaaa~” Lu Juren’s son, being afraid of the rain, continued to cry. Lu Juren tried comforting his son, but nothing was working.

“Aiyo~ That’s not the way to do it, here let me,” said Luo Juanhua as she took her son, opened her clothes, and started breastfeeding the baby.

“What are you doing?! Xiucai is still here!” Lu Juren quickly stood between his wife and his younger brother, using his body as a shield.

“What are you afraid of? Look at him. Do you think he’s even interested in me?” asked Luo Juanhua.

Hearing this, Lu Juren turned around and looked at his brother. He saw that Lu Xiucai had removed his shoes and was sitting on the bed. His eyes were closed and he continued to chant something. He didn’t even notice that his brother and sister-in-law were discussing him.

Lu Juren was actually against his younger brother learning supernatural powers from the Young Daoist. He knew his younger brother would not make it. Plus, he became like this from just a single touch of the Young Daoist’s sword. Lu Juren was worried that his younger brother would be lost forever.

But alas, Lu Juren was not the patriarch; Lu Zhuangyuan was still alive and he had all the power at the moment.

“Wait, where is father?” asked Lu Juren.

Hearing his question, Luo Juanhua rolled her eyes. “How would I know where your father went?”

Then, Luo Juanhua lowered her head toward her son. “My son, you cannot be as dense as your father. You will grow to be an official!”

At that moment, the door slammed open and Lu Zhuangyuan walked in with a serious face.

“Father, where have you been?” Lu Juren approached him.

“Get lost. Why do you care what I am doing? Go to the kitchen and find me the cook,” growled Lu Zhuangyuan.

Knowing that he did not have any authority here, Lu Juren walked out of the room.

Meanwhile, Lu Zhuangyuan saw Luo Juanhua breastfeeding his grandson. He grinned for a moment, before becoming angry.

“Scoundrel! Quickly bring a cloth and cover her!”

Soon the cook was brought over. The cook had a mole on his chin and his face was as poor-looking as the waiter. His entire face was oily.

“Dear customer, did you call for me? Do you want to eat anything for supper?” asked the cook as he rubbed his hands nervously.

“Hohoho~” Lu Zhuangyuan chuckled and passed some fragmented silver to the cook. “Young man, as you can see my daughter-in-law just gave birth, but she can’t produce any breast milk. Could you please help me cook some braised pork knuckles and carp soup? It’s for her to produce breast milk.”

Hearing this, Luo Juanhua rolled her eyes and pouted. She did not need it. She had so much breastmilk that her son couldn’t even finish it. She could even feed Xiucui if she wanted.

But she chose to not say anything. After all, only an idiot would say no to a free meal of pork knuckles and carp soup.

“Oh~ Alright, I will go and prepare it. I remember that we still have half a pork knuckle in the kitchen,” said the cook as he turned around.

However, he was once again stopped by Lu Zhuangyuan. “Ai, don’t go so fast. I’m not done yet.”

As he spoke, Lu Zhuangyuan retrieved a silver ingot the size of his thumb and stealthily placed it in the cook’s hands. “Let me ask you something. Did something happen to the people around here?”

Hearing this question, the cook, who had already been very cautious, suddenly panicked and threw the silver ingot away as if it were a venomous snake.

“Don’t ask me! I don’t know anything! I don’t know anything!!”
The cook ran out of the room in a panic.

Seeing this, Lu Zhuangyuan sighed and collected the silver ingot from the floor. He then turned to his seemingly empty left side and said, “Young Daoist, looks like the cook doesn’t want the silver.”

Chapter 270 - Fear

Amidst Lu Juren and Luo Juanhua's fearful gazes, Li Huowang's body slowly floated up from within the ground.

Then, he stared at the silver in Lu Zhuangyuan's palms and said, "It seems like he has been threatened by someone else. Alright then, there's nothing much you can do now."

With that, Li Huowang turned toward the door.

As Li Huowang opened the door, he once again sank his illusion into the ground. Once he became invisible again, he entered the kitchen.

The cook remained the same as before as he covered his body in a blanket and stared outside the window while trembling as if he was afraid of something.

Compared to the woman from earlier, the cook didn't have the smell of blood or rust on him.

While Li Huowang was stealthily observing him, the cook suddenly placed both of his hands into his pants. At the same time, his face became very snarly.

Seeing this, Li Huowang frowned and left.

Li Huowang went outside and saw the waiter wiping the tables while looking in the direction everyone was staying.

That fatty was right. The people of Pi County are indeed panicky and their faces really do look terrible.

Realizing that he wouldn't be able to find any information at the inn, Li Huowang walked out into the rain.

Just as he stepped out, he saw an old man who was wearing a raincoat and a veiled hat while coming from the opposite direction. He was wearing wooden clogs.

When the old man looked toward where Li Huowang was standing, he was horrified by what he saw. He cried out loud before directly fainting in the rain.

What the? Did he see me? How did he see me?

Li Huowang looked down but saw nothing wrong with his technique; he was still invisible.

However, after a moment, Li Huowang then realized what was happening. Even though his illusion was inside the ground, his real body could still interact with the physical world. Now that it was raining and he was standing in the rain, others could see a human-shaped void where there is no rain.

It was no wonder that the old man fainted. Even Li Huowang would've been frightened if he saw something like that.

On the other hand, everyone had heard the old man screaming, causing them to look in his direction.

I can't do this now. I need to wait until after the rain stops.

Li Huowang returned to the inn.

Back in the room where the Lu family was staying, they were still discussing what they had seen vehemently.

"Heavens! The young Daoist can phase through walls!" exclaimed Luo Juanhua, shocked.

"Why are you so surprised? Calm down. This is normal," said Lu Zhuangyuan before turning toward his youngest son. He extended his hand and carefully patted his son's head. "Xiucai, did you see that? That is an amazing skill. You need to learn it well. Who knows what else you will be able to learn?"

However, Lu Xiucai instantly growled at his father. If it wasn't for his older brother, then he would've directly spat at his father.

"Don't bother me you old fool! I'm busy!" Lu Xiucai closed his eyes.

Seeing how his youngest son had changed so completely, Lu Zhuangyuan sighed and sat down near him while smoking. He had always controlled his youngest son by beating him; now, that wasn't working anymore and so he didn't know how to teach his son.

The rain continued pouring throughout the night. It finally stopped the next day, but the skies were still dark.

Li Huowang wore a raincoat and exited the inn early in the morning. He walked past the awful-looking people within the town.

When they saw him, everyone scattered and stared at Li Huowang with fear in their eyes.

On the other hand, Li Huowang just ignored all of them and went straight toward the largest administration office of the town.

He had finally decided where to go after thinking about it last night.

If he wanted to find out what was happening within Pi County, then the administration office in charge of the entire county was definitely the place that would contain what he wanted to know.

I've been found.

Li Huowang glanced over his shoulder and saw two town guards following him. They were wearing blue robes and had the same awful look to them. Their lips were purple from the cold and they had heavy eye-bags under their eyes. Currently, they were glaring at Li Huowang's back.

Li Huowang decided to act as if he had not seen them before quickly turning into an alley.

Seeing this, the two town guards ran quickly and entered the alley behind him, but were shocked to find it empty.

"Old Wu, he's gone. What should we do?" asked the younger guard.

The older town guard looked at the ground, but couldn't find any footprints. After a moment, he waved his hand and said, "Let's go!"

Meanwhile, Li Huowang was hiding in a corner of the wall near the roof. After confirming that they had left, he quickly came down and carefully made his way to his destination.

Li Huowang knew that every county would have a book that recorded anything major that happened within the county. This book was Li Huowang's goal.

Li Huowang sank his illusion into the ground and turned invisible before easily entering the administration center. Once there, he searched around the offices and soon found what he needed.

Year of the Rat and Ox, Fourth Month, Famine... People sold their own children to buy food.

Year of the Earth Horse, end of the Lunar New Year, Eclipse.

Li Huowang flipped through the pages until the last entry. However, he was surprised to see that the latest entry was recorded two years ago and the only thing it recorded was that they had a good harvest that year.

Impossible. The entire County is struck with panic and fear, and yet they haven't recorded it down? Or... are they trying to cover it up?

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about it, he heard the painful cries of a boy. Surprised, he quickly placed the book back where it belonged. Then, he gently tiptoed across the hall to where the sound was coming from.

His sharp hearing could pick up the words that came from the child's mouth.

"Father... It's painful... Mother... I don't want it..."

Soon, Li Huowang found where the sound was coming from. It was coming from the firewood room. By now, the voice had also become very clear.

"Father! Stop! Don't pull it! Waaaa~ Mother~ It's painful! Stop..." The boy's voice was very miserable; it was as if he was being tortured.

Is this what the harvester told me about? They are beating up their child?

Li Huowang carefully approached the paper window and used his wet finger to poke a hole through it.

As soon as he looked into the room, his pupils shrank in shock.

He saw a crying boy who was tied to a pillar. He looked quite awful.

Two people stood beside the boy. Based on their looks, they seem to be the boy's parents. Even though they looked reluctant, they still held a metal clamp and used it to pull at the boy's genitals.

In response, the boy shouted, his chained body shaking from the pain.

Li Huowang couldn't believe what he was seeing. The pain that the boy was suffering from was probably almost comparable to his own torture methods.

Chapter 271 - Yin And Yang

The boy tied to a pillar kept screaming as his parents continued to torture him in the small and suffocating woodshed. The sound of his screams was so miserable that even Li Huowang couldn't bear it.

After a while, the pulling force of the metal clamp eventually reduced. Taking advantage of this rare opportunity, the boy tilted his head to the side and gasped, taking in big gulps of air.

On the other hand, the brightly-dressed couple crouched down and carefully examined their son's lower body.

"How? Is it helpful?" asked the woman.

Hearing the woman's question, the man carefully used his fingers to measure a few times, his expression becoming increasingly disheartened with each measurement. "No good! We can't delay any longer. We must lock it, or it will be too late!"

Hearing those words, the child, who was drenched with sweat, was taken aback. He pleaded with a quivering voice, "Dad, I don't want to be locked! I don't want to!"

The man was also hesitant, but eventually sighed as he softly touched the back of the child's head. "Listen to me, Jing'er. A true man shouldn't be afraid of pain. Once the lock is applied, everything will be okay. It may hurt a little, but at the very least, you won't lose your manhood. Without it, you may not even be a man in the future."

"That's fine, then! I don't want to be a man! I don't want to be a man!" The boy continued to yell at his father as if trying to grasp a lifeline.

As he heard his son's cries, the man broke down in tears, clearly feeling torn on the inside. Despite this, he still turned back and picked up an iron box from the ground nearby. After a moment, he opened the box and took out a small silver square lock with a silver chain.

“Dad!! Dad!! Please don't!!” The boy cried out in anguish, his terrified mind already anticipating the excruciating pain that was to come.

Just as the sharp lock was getting closer, the door suddenly burst open, and a gust of wind rushed in, making it impossible for the three of them to keep their eyes open.

Sensing the danger, the man holding the silver lock quickly turned around. With a panicked expression, he opened his hands to shield his son and wife as he shouted, “Who is it? Who is there? Help! Someone, quickly! Someone is trying to assassinate me!”

Upon hearing the commotion, it didn't take long for several constables clad in green to hurriedly rush in. Holding their straight knives, they clasped their fists toward the man. “Lord Yang, what's the matter?”

The county magistrate, Yang Hongzhi, pointed to the open door of the woodshed with trembling hands and fear in his eyes as he said, “The door just opened suddenly. It's here! That thing is here!!”

Meanwhile, Li Huowang was walking on an empty street with an odd expression. His mind was jumbled from what he had just seen as he kept muttering to himself, “They... they...”

Just then, Li Huowang heard another sound coming from the courtyard beside him. He immediately went into stealth mode once again. Then, he climbed over a nearby wall, and once again used his hands to peel open the paper window.

Soon, Li Huowang noticed a thin man in the room. The man was sitting on the edge of the bed, tilting his head back while ripping open his garments like a bat being dissected. He shamelessly displayed himself to the woman in front of him.

The man's expression appeared quite uneasy; it was as if he was awaiting some sort of impending judgment. "My wife... Darling... how is it? Has it shrunk at all?"

The woman carefully examined him for a moment, and then replied in an uncertain voice, "I think... it probably hasn't gotten smaller."

Hearing those words, the man instantly became agitated. "Liar!! I've measured it myself! It's over! Tying it up with a rope won't help! I'm going to become an eunuch soon!"

Upon hearing her husband say this, the woman couldn't help but feel anxious. "Then... then what should we do? Does tying it up with a rope not help at all?"

Upon hearing those words amidst his desperation, the man suddenly pounced on his wife and knocked her to the ground. At the same time, anger replaced the sadness on his face. "Damn it! No way! I haven't even gotten a son yet! You must give birth to a son for me right away!"

As Li Huowang watched this situation, coupled with the boy tied to the pillar he had seen earlier, he finally started to grasp what they were all up to. He stood back up with a strange expression on his face.

So, everyone in this county is afraid of that ... No wonder they were forcefully using chains earlier. But... how is that possible?

Suddenly, he felt a chill run down his spine.

Wait a minute, is all this... really happening or is all this just an act?

"Ah! Dear! You hurt me! It's locked now!"

The woman's cry of pain made Li Huowang look back into the room once again. There was not much to see among the tangled masses of pale flesh and blood. However, after a moment, Li Huowang noticed the chain close to the woman's chest.

Compared to the silver lock and chain he saw earlier, this family could only afford iron ones.

The sharp chain was tightly wrapped around the woman's chest, forcefully pulling at her bosom, causing abrasions and bleeding where the skin met the metal chain. Rust had started to form as the blood continued to erode the chain. This device was basically torture.

With this, Li Huowang finally understood where the scent of blood and rust on the woman from earlier came from. They'd all been locking up to stop their organs from shrinking.

"Dear, don't panic. Look at me, I've locked it with a chain, so that it won't retract. You should do the same—tie it up with a chain, just like me."

Both the man and the woman are 'retracting' here. Just what kind of situation could have caused them to become like this?

Thinking about this, Li Huowang's heart felt heavier. Even with his extensive knowledge, he had never seen this kind of strange change before.

Li Huowang suddenly felt lost. Though he now understood what the residents of the county were terrified of, he did not know exactly what had caused all of this. While he was capable of dealing with the other issues, when it came to something so illogical, he couldn't even find a target to address.

Li Huowang stood on the roof, looking over the empty county. After a while, he stepped off the tiles beneath his feet and headed straight toward the inn.

No more dawdling! Who knows what caused all this. We must quickly find the reason!

In Li Huowang's eyes, the entire county now seemed like a trap. Even if it meant having to use unconventional techniques, it would still be better than sitting around idly while waiting for catastrophe.

Although the people in the county knew that something was wrong, they were deliberately trying to keep it from him. Since diplomacy wasn't working, it was time to resort to more forceful methods.

As soon as Li Huowang entered the inn, he noticed the members of the Lu Family Troupe singing a pink show in the inn's empty lobby. Even though there weren't many people, there were still a few spectators.

Puppy was sitting with his legs crossed as snuggled with the pear-faced woman while watching the pink show with joy. Seeing Li Huowang, he waved his hand, signaling Li Huowang to come over. "Senior Li, come here! The Lu Family Troupe's performance has grown considerably more fascinating!"

Li Huowang glanced at him, then turned and walked toward his room, his voice carrying a hint of coldness, "Puppy, have the waiter come to my room."

"Alright!"

Chapter 272 - Ghost

Not long after, the waiter knocked on Li Huowang's door. When he entered, he saw the guest with the copper coin mask sitting at the round table while sipping tea.

"Yes? I heard that you were looking for me?" The waiter hunched his back as he approached the round table and asked cautiously.

"Sit," Li Huowang said as he poured a cup for the person in front of him.

"You're too kind; it's fine, I'll just stand. Do you have any instructions for me? Is there anything our inn hasn't taken care of properly?" asked the waiter.

Having been in the presence of foreigners for so long, the waiter no longer seemed to be so apprehensive of them.

Soon, a pinky-sized gold ingot was placed in front of the waiter as Li Huowang said, "I have some questions for you. If you can answer them, this gold is yours."

Before the waiter could fully comprehend what was happening, Li Huowang went straight to the point. "Why are the people in the county so afraid of genital retraction? What is the cause of it?"

Hearing this, the waiter, who had a forced smile on his face, was stunned before immediately turning around to flee.

But as soon as he turned around, his head collided with the stone slab on Gao Zhijian's chest. Seeing stars, his body lost all its strength as he staggered backward before falling onto the ground.

When he came to his senses again, he found himself bound tightly with tough ropes made of cow tendons. At the same time, a tall man was standing by, eyeing him fiercely.

Whoosh...

Accompanied by the sound of metal clanging, Li Huowang's set of torture tools slowly unfolded in front of the waiter.

As the waiter saw the sharp tools stained with dark red blood, he shuddered.

"I'm sorry, but I'm not very good with words. When I want to know something, I often tend to resort to my best skill set. I apologize for my lack of manners. After all, I haven't learned much else ever since arriving into this world. But I appear to be quite skilled at torturing people in a variety of ways," said Li Huowang.

As he heard Li Huowang's calm voice, the waiter felt like he had suddenly entered an icy cave, causing him to shudder.

"This thing is used for gouging out a person's eyeballs. Let me tell you something interesting—the eyeballs don't actually feel any pain. If you don't believe me, try prying open your eyelids and touching them. Any pain that you end up feeling will be from the flesh surrounding your eyeballs."

Goosebumps rose all over the waiter's body as the round iron instrument in Li Huowang's hands grazed the edge of his face.

The waiter was terrified by Li Huowang's words. But despite his pale face, he tightly pursed his lips, showing no intention of answering any of Li Huowang's questions.

Seeing that this approach wasn't working, Li Huowang put down the round iron clamp and picked up an iron spindle, displaying it in front of the waiter. "Do you know what this is? This is used for winding intestines, not threads. It's quite easy to use. You just need to make a small incision at your belly button, pull out one end of the intestine from within, wrap it on this spindle, and then continue pulling and pulling... Do you know how that feels? Close your eyes and think about it. If you don't want to think about it, that's fine too. After all, in a while, you'll personally get to experience it. Spoiler alert, it's not a pleasant feeling, and it makes you feel quite empty inside."

As soon as he finished speaking, Li Huowang ripped open the waiter's clothes, revealing his withered abdomen.

The waiter finally broke down just as Li Huowang's fingertips reached his navel.

"I'll talk! I'll talk!!" The waiter exclaimed as an unpleasant smell of urine slowly seeped out from his lower half.

Seeing all this, Gao Zhijian scratched the back of his head. He was quite impressed that Senior Li could intimidate people like this just by using words.

On the other hand, Li Huowang slowly removed his hand from the man's stomach. "Tell me! What's the reason behind the Pi County's people suffering from genital retraction?"

"Ghost! There are ghosts!" The waiter sounded extremely miserable and wretched, with tears and snot all over his face. "The wandering spirits and ghosts travel to the human world to take advantage and reincarnate as men! That's why they want to steal our manhood!"

Li Huowang found the waiter's words to be utterly absurd. "What kind of nonsense is this?"

This wasn't what he had in mind. Originally, he had thought that the genital retraction was caused by evil spirits.

Could they be mistaking certain evil forces for ghosts? Maybe they are being attacked by some strange evil force? But... wouldn't the Surveillance Bureau send someone to investigate such a case?

Li Huowang furrowed his brow in contemplation. Then, he looked at the waiter and asked again, "Have you ever seen these so-called ghosts? What do they look like? Are they the sort you can touch with your hands or the kind that you can't?"

He would be able to be more prepared if he encountered them after learning more about them.

When the waiter heard this, he shook his head vigorously. "No! People can't see ghosts! Their genitals just keep retracting, ultimately shrinking until they are completely gone!”

After seeing that he was now willing to communicate properly, Li Huowang untied the waiter. Then, he helped the terrified man onto a chair.

When he asked again, Li Huowang’s tone was much gentler compared to before, “Alright, isn’t it just a simple matter of answering a few questions? Was it really necessary to hide or run away? Why didn’t you tell me anything sooner? Whether you believe it or not, we are here to help you.”

Hearing Li Huowang’s words, the waiter burst into tears and hid his face. He sounded terrified, with a trace of despair in his voice, “You can’t talk about it! Now, both you and I will be haunted by the ghost because we discussed it!”

Li Huowang felt a shiver run down his spine when he heard this. Instantly, he gazed around with heightened vigilance as one of his hands grabbed the hilt of his sword tightly.

Li Huowang examined everything in the room, from the window to the wooden door and even under the bed. However, in the end, he didn’t find anything unusual; everything appeared to be perfectly normal.

Li Huowang recalled all the strange things he had experienced in the past; this was the first time he had heard that such evil spirits could spread to others through word of mouth!

Despite the numerous loopholes in the waiter’s story, Li Huowang chose to believe that there was some truth to it and not dismiss it entirely.

Li Huowang immediately looked up at Gao Zhijian, who was guarding the main door, and said, “When we leave later, remember not to mention this to anyone else!”

Hearing this, Gao Zhijian vigorously nodded. He too, had no intention of exposing his peers to this danger.

Paying no attention to the danger, Li Huowang stretched out and forcibly released the waiter's hands, his expression unusually grave as he peered at the man's misery. "Who told you all these things? Who said that talking about it would attract ghosts? Did they mention any ways to deal with these evil spirits?"

Though he was carrying two swords capable of exterminating evil spirits on his back, the entity he was faced with this time seemed quite unusual.

"I... I don't know! That's what everyone says!" After saying that, the waiter hesitantly leaned down to untie his belt and cautiously glanced inside, ignoring Li Huowang beside him.

The next moment, the waiter froze in place as if struck by lightning.

Chapter 273 - Death

“It’s turned smaller...” The waiter’s voice trembled, while the entire room was shrouded in an eerie atmosphere.

After checking his lower half, the waiter collapsed mentally, and did not even bother fastening his belt. Instead, he directly knelt onto the ground and started kowtowing continuously in fear. “Grandpa Ghost! I really didn’t want to say it; it was him who forced me! You should look for the right person to settle your grievances! Please don’t steal my manhood! If my manhood is stolen, then I won’t be able to reincarnate! I’ll become just a lonely wandering ghost!”

His words caused Gao Zhijian to cover himself with both hands, while Li Huowang also instinctively looked down.

Could this so-called ghost who steals people’s privates be here right now?

Li Huowang swiftly scanned around the room with an ugly expression on his face.

With his keen perceptions, he would definitely sense it if there really was something watching him within this room.

But he didn’t sense any gazes. This could mean only two things. Either the ghost was deliberately choosing to not look at him, or the entity simply had no eyes.

An invisible evil spirit? Could it be something like the Eighteenth Lunar?

Li Huowang dared not be careless when faced with an unknown enemy like that.

In this eerie place, Li Huowang couldn’t bring himself to believe that an evil spirit capable of harming an entire region was only capable of slowly stealing from others.

Unnoticed by everyone within the room, Li Huowang separated his illusion and his invisible body. At the same time, his right hand grabbed onto the hilt of the sword behind him.

Gradually, the atmosphere in the room became unusually oppressive. Just as Li Huowang was concentrating on surveying the empty surroundings, the waiter, who had been lying on the ground, suddenly stood up and dashed out of the door.

Is it possible for this thing to possess others as well?!

Li Huowang subconsciously raised his sword and stabbed at the back of the fleeing waiter.

Seeing this, Gao Zhijian raised his stone slab, using it to block the sword. They collided with a clang.

In the blink of an eye, the waiter had already rushed out of the door.

Seeing this, Li Huowang turned his gaze filled with killing intent from the waiter onto Gao Zhijian.

Is this thing really so difficult to deal with? It already managed to take control of Gao Zhijian's body?

On the other hand, Gao Zhijian, who was holding the stone slab, could see Li Huowang's look of hatred as the latter looked at himself. Feeling anxious, he quickly said, "It... it's me. I... I... I'm Zhijian."

However, Li Huowang didn't completely trust him at this moment. He looked at the honest face in front of him and asked, "You say you are, and that's it? I judge others based on their actions and not their intentions. Gao Zhijian would have never tried to stop my sword! Who are you?"

"Senior... Senior Li, that person... is not possessed!" said Gao Zhijian.

"If he wasn't possessed, then why did he suddenly run?" asked Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at the clear-eyed Gao Zhijian as he began pondering. Soon, he pointed outside with his sword. “Alright, since you say that you are Gao Zhijian, then prove it. Toss aside the sacred text and go find the waiter.”

The other party’s sudden movements were very strange. Whether he was possessed or not, Li Huowang had to get to the bottom of the matter.

Under Li Huowang’s coercion, Gao Zhijian tossed aside all his belongings in the room and went out to find the waiter who had escaped earlier.

It was quite easy to find the man; he had been scared by Li Huowang into peeing his pants, and so they just had to follow the trail of urine.

The trail did not continue for long. After wandering around the inn, Li Huowang finally found the waiter, pantsless, while hanging from the rafters in the kitchen.

A thick rope was wrapped around his neck, lifting his entire body into the air. As his body gently swayed from side to side, creaking sounds rang out.

It was obvious that the man had done it himself, since there was half a winter melon lying on the floor.

Since he had hanged himself, the waiter’s tongue was stretched out, and his face had turned purplish-black. He looked quite frightening, his eyes seemingly staring at Li Huowang.

“He... he...” Gao Zhijian was quite shocked as he pointed at the waiter, not knowing what to say. This person had been fine until just a moment ago, and yet had hanged himself now. It was all too sudden.

Li Huowang studied the fear and despair in the waiter’s eyes, as well as the hands that were firmly grabbing at his own neck. Then, he turned to look at Gao Zhijian and said, “You’re right; he wasn’t possessed. This guy decided to take the initiative to kill himself while he was still alive and could still reincarnate. Otherwise, he would have never been able to reincarnate.”

The thing that had killed the man was not some ghost stealing his manhood, but his own fear.

Li Huowang held his sword and slowly circled around the kitchen, searching for this so-called ghost. He had encountered many evil spirits before, but he had never been as clueless when dealing with one as today.

Even though he had not seen anything, someone had already died.

As he circled around, Li Huowang shifted his gaze downward to look at the waiter's genitals; they seemed quite small.

“Daoist, what should we do? We don't even know where the rest of them are. You're going to be in trouble!” said Monk, looking worried; it was as though he was genuinely concerned about Li Huowang.

Li Huowang glanced at him and said in a deep voice, “Don't panic. Since this thing spreads through speech, currently, it's now only targeting Gao Zhijian and me. The rest are safe for now. And with my current state, it's still too early for whatever it is to try and kill me. As for Gao Zhijian... he will be fine.”

“Senior... Senior Li, what... should we do?” asked Gao Zhijian. As someone who had always been slower to react, he now seemed a little panicked. He had loosened his pants and was anxiously reaching in and tugging at the thing within. He was afraid that the thing might accidentally shrink into his stomach without him noticing.

Li Huowang stood on the spot and surveyed his surroundings. The kitchen should have been very normal, but now, it seemed exceptionally terrifying. The chili peppers, the kitchen knives, the chopping boards, the firewood; each item seemed to be concealing danger within.

After a while, Li Huowang pulled his pants and looked inside.

Upon confirming that there were no changes just yet, he heaved a sigh of relief. From the looks of it, this process of shrinking yang was not something one-off. It was a gradual process, and he still had time to figure out a solution.

“Don’t panic. As long as we understand the origin of this thing and find out its weaknesses, we will definitely be able to take care of it!” said Li Huowang as he sheathed his sword and turned back toward the inn. “Gao Zhijian, stand guard in the inn! Tell everyone else to stay put and not to run around. Also, don’t tell anyone else about this matter. I will think of a way to expose this thing from its hiding spot!”

“Daoist, where are you going?” asked Monk who had half his body stuck in the wall in a confused voice.

“Now that we know that all the residents of Pi County are victims, they are on our side too. There’s no need to hide anything anymore. I am going to need the Magistrate of Pi County to help me deal with that thing!”

Chapter 274 - Method

Shortly after leaving the inn, Li Huowang once again arrived at the residence of the highest authority in all of Pi County. There were two stone lions at the entrance of the county government gate along with a large drum.

This time, Li Huowang didn't plan to sneak in. Instead, he openly walked to the entrance and had the people inside report to the county magistrate.

Perhaps if the others did the same, they might be considered unruly troublemakers and get thrown out. However, Li Huowang had two longswords on his back, a copper coin mask on his face, and was wearing a red Daoist robe. To top it off, he directly stated that he could help solve the genital retraction problem that the residents of Pi County were suffering from. As a result, he was immediately invited inside respectfully.

County Magistrate Yang Hongzhi lifted his blue-and-white porcelain teacup, used the lid to take out the tea leaves floating on the surface, and carefully took a sip. As he drank his tea, he re-evaluated the strange man before him. The man's attire was bizarre, and he wasn't quite able to guess his origin.

Based on the information he got from his head constable, this person came to Pi County with a troupe that performed pink shows. From the direction they had come from, it was likely that they came from the Qing Qiu region.

Most importantly, this person claimed that he could solve the genital retraction problem, something that had tormented him for a long time.

Since his own son was suffering from the problem, it was worth a try even if there was only a slight possibility of success.

As Yang Hongzhi observed Li Huowang, the latter was also carefully analyzing the various expressions on his face. After carefully interpreting the meaning behind his expressions, Li Huowang had an idea of what he should do next.

“Magistrate Yang, let’s talk about what’s going on. The Bureau is busy and has no time to waste, “ said Li Huowang, breaking the strange and awkward silence between them.

In order to quickly understand the details about the evil spirit causing genital retraction, and to obtain the assistance of the entire Pi County’s administration, Li Huowang had decided to pretend to be someone from the Surveillance Bureau. After all, given the situation, the local official should have already contacted the Bureau.

Since the problem still persisted, it meant one of two things; either the Surveillance Bureau had not yet arrived, or that they had arrived but had not yet solved this problem. Li Huowang could take advantage of this gap to achieve his own objectives.

Upon hearing Li Huowang mention the Bureau, Magistrate Yang was startled and accidentally scalded himself with the tea. He hastily put down the teacup and clasped his hands together before bowing toward Li Huowang. “My heavens! The Rites Department has finally sent someone! Ah, I’ve waited for quite a long time. I must have sent over a hundred letters through carrier pigeons! Each time, they only replied to get me to stabilize public sentiment and wait for good news. However, I can’t even calm myself, let alone the public sentiment!”

Seeing Yang Hongzhi continually expressing his struggles, Li Huowang felt more relieved. Since the magistrate believed him, he wouldn’t need to use the alternative explanation that he had prepared.

“Alright, Magistrate Yang, no time for idle chatter. Tell me about the whole story. How did this issue of genital retraction come about? And when did it start?" asked Li Huowang.

Compared to the waiter, the county magistrate should know quite a bit more. If he wanted to prepare himself before dealing with this so-called ghost that could not be seen or felt, he had to understand more about it.

"Ah! The whole issue started around this year's Ghost Festival. Five miles east of this county, there was a night watchman at a graveyard..." began Magistrate Yang. However, he suddenly seemed to recall something and stopped as his mouth gaped open and fear crept onto his face.

"Go on, what happened next?" asked Li Huowang as he leaned slightly forward.

However, instead of answering Li Huowang's question, the magistrate changed the topic, and bowed to Li Huowang with a troubled expression on his face. "Lord, please save the people of Pi County! This matter affects everyone's lives!"

Li Huowang was about to ask again but suddenly stopped. He understood what the other party was hesitant about. This person also had the same reservations as the waiter who had died earlier.

"Are you afraid that the ghost will cause trouble for you if you speak? Relax, as long as you are courageous and tell me about it clearly, I'll definitely be able to help you deal with these matters," assured Li Huowang.

However, even after this reassurance from Li Huowang, Magistrate Yang didn't show any joy on his face. Rather, he fearfully hid from Li Huowang as though trying to hide from the plague.

Soon after, he brought a few green-clothed constables back. Each of them held a small copper gong, and there was a red cloth bag covering each of the gongs. They surrounded Li Huowang and started chanting while continuously striking their gongs. "If there's something strange, don't blame the one handling the matter!"

Li Huowang watched the comical performance, and asked, "What are you doing? Is this method effective at solving the invisible ghost problem?"

Magistrate Yang nodded vigorously in response.

Li Huowang noticed that each of them held a large pair of tongs and firmly used it to clamp onto their middle fingers. They refused to let go even as their fingers started to bruise.

One of the constables who was sweating profusely from banging the gong, turned around and urgently said to Li Huowang, "Hurry! You've already been targeted by that thing! If you don't want to start retracting, follow us quickly! We are all on the same boat, so do you think that I will try to harm you?"

This statement made Li Huowang instantly tense up. He reached out for a gong, and began to move in a circle while banging it.

At the same time, for some unknown reason, this series of events in Pi County gave him a strange feeling—a sense of familiarity mixed with disgust.

As he continued to ponder, the others surrounding him began to add new movements to their ritual. They draped the red bags containing the gongs on their necks and got down on all fours like turtles carrying their shells before crawling around the round table.

This scene was completely bizarre and absurd. At the same time, the others were all looking at him urgently, expecting him to follow suit.

Is this really effective? Where did they learn this from? How does this deal with the so-called ghost that steals people's privates?

Just as Li Huowang held the gong and draped the red bag across his neck, the others suddenly spread their legs apart, as though preparing to urinate.

However, they were not urinating, and simply took off their pants. Then, they grabbed a handful of red chili powder from behind, and sprinkled it toward their genitals.

Even as they grimaced from the spiciness, these people dared not slow down and continued to crawl on the floor with the gongs on their backs, all the while sprinkling chili powder.

“Daoist, hurry! Follow us! If not, you’ll die soon!” shouted Magistrate Yang.

Watching this ridiculous scene unfold before him, Li Huowang’s brows furrowed as he slowly squatted down and picked up a handful of chili powder.

After a moment of hesitation, he slowly released his hand and watched as the bright-red spicy powder floated from his hand down to the ground.

Why do I feel like this is going overboard? Even if this world is mad, this is too preposterous! It’s like a farce!

Chapter 275 - Familiar

Li Huowang's previous perception of Pi County began to change as he stared at the people in front of him lying on the ground like dogs.

The idea of a ghost stealing people's privates, combined with such humiliating treatment methods and the finishing touch of chili powder all just seemed too ridiculous.

The entire county was buzzing with rumors about "ghosts" stealing people's privates and retracting their genitals. But... what if everything they were saying was completely false? Perhaps there never was such a thing?

As he recalled the waiter who hanged himself earlier, as well as everything else he had witnessed in Pi County, Li Huowang questioned the others lying on the ground, "You guys keep talking about the genitals being retracted, but has anyone here witnessed it themselves?"

Hearing this, the group stared at Li Huowang, and then silently exchanged stares.

Finally, one of the constables spoke up, "My father said so! He witnessed someone experiencing the genital retraction!"

"I'm not asking about your father. I'm asking about you! Have any of you personally witnessed it?" reiterated Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's sharp gaze left the constable stuttering and unable to find any words.

Seeing this, Li Huowang once again shifted his gaze toward Magistrate Yang Hongzhi and said, "Earlier, you mentioned that your son's genitals had become small and needed to be locked with a silver lock. But children's genitals are naturally small. Is it possible that there's nothing wrong with your son at all, and you're just being overly suspicious? Have you never doubted that at all?"

"Really? But how is that possible? The person clearly stated—" said Magistrate Yang.

"Who is that person?! Where is he now?" Li Huowang suddenly raised his voice. Whoever this person was, they had to have a significant connection to this absurd situation.

"He... he... he's dead. He died from the retraction, just because he uttered those... words to someone," replied Magistrate Yang.

"Heh!" Hearing this, Li Huowang's face revealed a faint smirk, his suspicions growing even stronger.

There was no such thing as ghosts stealing people's genitals, and there certainly was no method to ward off the "ghosts". All of it was fake!

As he thought about this issue, he realized the identity of the culprit.

Coming across one's enemies often evokes a strong sense of resentment. Reflecting on their past mistreatment of him, Li Huowang clenched his fists so tightly that they produced a creaking sound. With a fierce expression, he gritted his teeth and exclaimed, "Sitting Oblivion Dao!"

Immediately, Li Huowang took off the copper gong hanging from his neck and fiercely threw it onto the ground. Then, he kicked away the constable blocking his path before charging directly toward Magistrate Yang.

At this moment, he finally realized why he felt that inexplicable sense of familiarity earlier. It was the feeling of being deceived by the Sitting Oblivion Dao, something that he had experienced once before!

Li Huowang kicked Magistrate Yang in the chest before using his longsword to slice at Magistrate Yang's chin. As Yang Hongzhi screamed miserably, his face was lifted slightly by Li Huowang.

However, there weren't any other layers beneath this man's face. He wasn't a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and neither were the other constables. They had all been deceived by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

There was no "ghost" that could cause genital retraction through word of mouth. It was all an absurd rumor spread intentionally by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao had played everyone in Pi County for fools by relying solely on these rumors.

"Who told you about these methods to treat genital retraction? Where are they?" demanded Li Huowang. It was vital to track down the Sitting Oblivion Dao members if they were still residing in Pi County.

Li Huowang's bloodshot eyes frightened the injured Yang Hongzhi into revealing everything without concealing anything.

If Li Huowang had to name a nemesis, then the Sitting Oblivion Dao would undoubtedly be at the top of his list.

"It was a self-proclaimed Shaman! He insisted that a lock could secure one's genitals! However, because he revealed the divine secrets, he too, suffered from genital retraction and died two months ago," responded Yang Hongzhi immediately, struggling to collect himself.

"Oh yeah? He just spread the rumors, and then died from genital retraction himself? What a coincidence! Where's his body? I will need to open the coffin for an autopsy!" said Li Huowang.

With Li Huowang's identity as someone from the Surveillance Bureau and his unyielding stance, Yang Hongzhi eventually complied.

Creak~

Slowly, the black coffin nails were pulled out.

Li Huowang approached the scene while covering his nose. Confirming that there was no corpse inside the coffin, and only a Liu Wan[1] mahjong tile, he realized that his assumption had been accurate. This was indeed the work of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had long since departed. The people of Pi County were just toys that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had grown tired of playing with and thus were casually discarded.

However, Li Huowang wasn't too disappointed either. His goal this time was to join the Surveillance Bureau, and not to single-handedly confront the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

After understanding the events that had transpired in Pi County, Li Huowang devised a plan.

"Everyone, gather around and take a good look! This is the so-called Shaman you've been talking about!" Li Huowang spoke to the others who had retreated to a distance.

However, Li Huowang's previously unusual behavior had frightened all of them. They all just stood there, covering the wounds on their chins while not daring to get too close.

"I said come over here, didn't you hear?!"

Li Huowang's stern words finally made them approach him.

When they saw the empty coffin, their eyes widened in astonishment. After all, they distinctly remembered that someone had been buried there before.

As he observed them, Li Huowang carefully chose his words before speaking slowly, "You have all been deceived. There is no such thing as genital retraction. It was just a rumor. There's no need to be on edge."

"How is that possible?" Yang Hongzhi was in disbelief. After all this time of people's hearts being in turmoil, it turned out to be nothing more than self-induced fear.

"The truth is right in front of you, and you still don't believe it? Go gather all the people in the county. I have something to tell them," said Li Huowang.

Upon hearing Li Huowang's words, Yang Hongzhi hesitated. He just stood in place with an uncertain expression as he contemplated something.

“What’s the matter? Don’t forget my identity. Do you think a fool like yourself knows more about this than the Surveillance Bureau does?” questioned Li Huowang.

This finally convinced Yang Hongzhi. He covered the wound on his chin and walked outside. “Wait a moment, Sir. I... I need to check on my child first.”

After saying that, he dispersed the group of constables.

On the other hand, Li Huowang sheathed his bloodied sword and turned around to walk back toward the inn.

Once he was back at the inn, Li Huowang explained everything to the frightened Gao Zhijian.

“Everything is okay. They are just a bunch of poor souls who have been deceived. We’ll explain everything later,” Li Huowang sat at the Eight Immortals table and spoke to the big fellow in front of him.

After knowing that everything was a hoax and there was no danger in Pi County, Li Huowang finally eased up and was no longer as tense as before.

While he was helping these people recognize the deception of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, he hadn’t forgotten his original purpose in coming to this place. Regardless of who the Surveillance Bureau sent, as long as Li Huowang took care of the trouble in advance, they would have no choice but to contact him.

The beginning was always difficult. But once he managed to get in touch with the Surveillance Bureau, things would be much simpler.

Chapter 276 - Ghost

“Hahaha, are the people of this county idiots? Why would they believe in something stupid like their sexual organs gradually becoming smaller and disappearing?” remarked Puppy.

“You would probably act the same if you see everyone around you doing that,” said Xiaoman.

As they spoke, they suddenly saw many people converging onto the streets. They placed down their tea and walked outside.

“Everyone follow me and bring your weapons. All of you will stay near the perimeter and look for anything suspicious,” instructed Li Huowang.

They didn’t know how Yang Hongzhi spread the word, but the guards had managed to herd all of the terrified people to the streets. At the same time, there were many more who were standing on the walls and roofs in the surroundings.

Thousands of people gathered together like flies.

Yang Hongzhi carefully approached Li Huowang and exclaimed excitedly, “Daoist, this should be alright, yes? Almost every home sent out a person.”

Yang Hongzhi had gone back and checked on his son, and was relieved to see that the boy’s penis had not shrunk. Thus, he now trusted Li Huowang’s words completely.

Staring at the dense crowd, Li Huowang nodded and leaped up toward the head of the stone lion in front of the gate.

“Everyone! Do not panic! I am here to tell you that there are no ghosts that steal away your genitals! You have all been lied to! The shrinking of sexual organs is a giant lie! It was never anything more than a rumor!” shouted Li Huowang.

These words caused everyone to start panicking as they started discussing what they had just heard. The situation almost went out of control.

Ring ring ring~

At that moment, the piercing sound of a bell rang out, covering all the noise. It was so loud that it caused everyone to hold their ears in pain.

Once the sound of the discussion finally died down, Li Huowang stopped ringing the bell and gave it back to Chun Xiaoman.

Everyone slowly removed their hands from their ears.

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang spoke in a loud voice, “Everyone! We’ve checked on the so-called Shaman that “died” from his genitals shrinking away and determined that he had faked his death! He has long since run away! I need all of you to think carefully; have any of you ever seen anyone’s genitals actually shrink back into their abdomens? I am not asking about the stories that you heard from your son or your neighbors, but ones you have witnessed for yourself! Have any of you seen it?!”

In the face of Li Huowang’s question, everyone fell silent.

“I did!” A woman with half a head of white hair walked out from the crowd. She held a baby in her arms.

She carefully undid the baby’s clothes and raised the baby high enough for everyone to see. “Everyone, look at this! My baby’s penis has shrunk! This man is a liar; you cannot trust him!”

Li Huowang carefully looked at the woman and confirmed that she was not from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Then, he turned to look at the baby. “Is this your child? Did you see the ghost stealing his penis?”

“Correct! Look! His penis is gone! Aaaa~ My poor son is so unfortunate!” The woman held the baby and started crying.

It really shrunk?

Li Huowang stared at the baby and saw that it was indeed missing the penis.

But, Li Huowang soon realized another possibility, causing the expression on his face to turn weird as he asked the question, “Erm... Have you ever considered that your baby is a girl?”

The baby’s crotch was far too natural and it didn’t seem like anything had shrunk back there.

Hearing the question, the woman was shocked and showed her baby to the crowd even more enthusiastically. “Fuck you! My stomach was sharp[1] when I was pregnant! How could I have possibly given birth to a girl?! I gave birth to a baby boy!”

Then, the woman kneeled in front of an old man with her baby and explained fervently, “My dear, don’t believe him! You can’t blame me! I really did give birth to a baby boy and then the ghost took away his penis! You can’t blame me for this.”

As they heard the woman pleading so fervently, everyone started feeling uneasy.

“You didn’t want your husband to be shamed and so you forcefully started telling others that your daughter is actually a son. Why weren’t you that smart when you were facing the Sitting Oblivion Dao?” muttered Li Huowang.

Just as the sound of discussion started getting louder once again, and Li Huowang was about to take control of the situation, someone screamed from within the crowd.

Soon, there was an empty space within the crowd. In the middle of the clearing was a beggar covered in tattered rags. Currently, he was holding a rusty knife high in the air while kneeling beside a man.

The beggar had chopped off the man’s penis and was now hanging it on his body with a pleased expression on his face. On the other hand, the victim was crying and shouting in pain.

After a moment, the beggar slowly stood back up and smiled creepily at everyone around him. “Hehehe~ Penises~ All of them belong to me~ I will be able to reincarnate once I collect enough of them~”

As he spoke, his body suddenly floated like a ghost before pouncing toward another man beside him.

“AAAAA!” A woman’s scream woke everyone up as they started running away to save their lives.

On the other hand, by the time the beggar pushed down the man, Li Huowang had already sent one of his fingernails flying toward the beggar.

Dang~

The fingernail hit the beggar’s body, but the sound that rang out was akin to a loud metallic clang.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang started running toward the beggar while weaving through the crowd. By the time he arrived at the clearing, several men and women were already lying on the ground.

Jiang!

Li Huowang ran forward and slashed his sword down on the beggar.

But he would never have expected his extremely sharp sword to not even pierce the beggar’s skin. All he heard was the sound of metal once more.

Everyone else ran up to help Li Huowang.

Gao Zhijian’s footsteps were heavy as he ran over, his club already swinging down onto the beggar.

As Li Huowang fought, he rained more and more blows toward the beggar. But the more blows he exchanged with the beggar, the more Li Huowang felt like something was off. The ghost was different.

It was too weird.

How could a “ghost” not get hurt by a sword that could cut down evil beings? And why did it appear in broad daylight?

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about what to do, he suddenly saw the ghost wink at him. For a moment, he thought that he was seeing things.

Meanwhile, the people of Pi County in the surroundings witnessed as the man wearing the bronze coin veil fought against the ghost. Their emotions rose and fell with the tides of battle.

After some time, Li Huowang managed to stab his sword into the ghost's chest. Then, he then took out a yellow talisman and placed it onto the ghost's forehead. Everything was finally over.

Li Huowang panted and looked at the crowd around him before speaking in a serious voice, "There was indeed a ghost that stole people's genitals, and here it is! I've just killed it!"

1. Superstition: Sharp stomach = boy baby, round stomach = girl baby. 🤔

Chapter 277 - Surveillance Bureau

As he spoke, Li Huowang dragged the “ghost” by the hair and raised it up for everyone to see. “Look closely! The ghost has been killed by me! It’s no longer a threat and the people of Pi County will no longer suffer from having their sexual organs shrink!”

Li Huowang’s voice echoed throughout the entire county.

Bam!

Soon, everyone within Pi County started shouting and celebrating until the entire place shook. Everyone was crying tears of joy. They were no longer plagued by it anymore!

All of them reached inside their clothing and took out the ropes or chains before throwing them high up into the air.

Many of them even kneeled in front of Li Huowang and started calling him their Godfather. It was funny to think that they had previously doubted him.

The town guards quickly used long rods and strings to tie up the ghost’s body before parading it around all of Pi County.

Soon, the news spread and everyone in the County had learned of it.

With this, Li Huowang’s position and popularity within the County rose dramatically. Almost everyone gave him some food while the elders even kneeled and thanked him for saving their grandchildren.

That night, Magistrate Yang booked the best restaurant of the County to treat the guests to a meal.

Having saved all of Pi County, Li Huowang was assigned to the main seat, and many of the high ranking officers from the magistrate's office even poured wine for him.

The worries that had clouded the minds of the people within Pi County had now completely disappeared. The desolate county soon regained its normal hustle and bustle.

Puppy, Gao Zhijian, and everyone else ate the best meal that the restaurant could offer. All of them felt like they were in Heaven.

Even if the ingredients were familiar to them and things that they had cooked many times before, the chefs of the best restaurant were able to turn them into something extraordinary.

“Xiucui, you need to learn properly! Once you become as great as the Young Daoist and obtain justice for others, then everyone will treat you to such a good meal!” Lu Zhuangyuan was busy stuffing his mouth with the delicious food and lecturing his youngest son.

“What do you know, you damned old man? I can't believe that even such amazing food can't stuff your asshole mouth into shutting up!” said Lu Xiucui as he placed down the chicken in his hand and took a bottle of good quality wine, wanting to pour a cup for Li Huowang.

However, before he could do so, Bai Lingmiao took away the cup of wine. “Senior Li can't drink; he gets drunk too easily.”

Then, she took a bowl of the glistening shark fin soup^[1] to Li Huowang. “Senior Li, why don't you have this instead? You did quite well to save everyone within the County.”

Li Huowang smiled forcefully before throwing one of the chicken drumsticks underneath the table, allowing Bun to happily eat it.

As he sensed Bun's tail wagging and hitting his leg, Li Huowang's mood gradually improved to a certain extent.

Li Huowang took the bowl of soup and drank the shark fin soup in one go before standing up. Then, he pointed at Yang Hongzhi and said, “Take care of him and don't let him get too happy or he will die from overdosing on alcohol.”

As everyone laughed, Li Huowang walked out of the restaurant. While the restaurant was crowded, the streets were even more lively. The sound of firecrackers rang out constantly while red paper could be seen flying everywhere, covering the streets and alleys in a festive red color.

Just as the sound of the firecracker stopped, a group of children wearing new clothes ran around while collecting the ones that had yet to explode. The children didn't know what had happened. All they knew was that they would no longer be tormented and that today they would be able to eat good food.

At the edge of the street, a man was wearing a massive puppet head while raising up a ball of flowers. They were performing a Dragon Dance.

The sound of musical instruments came from behind the Dragon Dance.

The children were all attracted to it and stopped collecting the firecrackers. Instead, they ran around happily as they watched the Dragon Dance.

The entire Pi County was reveling in festivities; it was as if they were celebrating New Year's.

However, amidst all this, Li Huowang didn't even have the hint of a smile as he walked around. He looked very out of place.

Li Huowang was not the only one upset. Some of the houses had green couplets stuck on them while white clothes covered their courtyard. These were the houses of the people killed by the “ghost” earlier today. Their families were crying inside their houses.

Li Huowang looked at the sad scene in front of him before continuing to walk. He soon arrived at the morgue.

Even though it was very lively in the town, there were still some people dutifully guarding this place.

Still, the County treated them equally well. The guards were eating from a clay pot filled with meat and drinking wine from a massive black cask.

When they saw Li Huowang walk in, the town guards immediately greeted him politely before inviting him to eat with them.

“All of you, get out first. The ghost has been cultivating for thousands of years and I need to make sure to get rid of it properly,” said Li Huowang.

None of them objected and quickly ran out of the morgue.

As he walked in, Li Huowang saw rows of corpses that were covered with a white cloth on the floor of the cold morgue.

Li Huowang walked past all the cold bodies until he reached the final one and took off the white cloth, revealing the dead beggar who was possessed by the ghost.

The beggar's face was covered in stubby hair and his clothes were tattered, but for some reason, they looked quite neat on him and there was no stench coming from him. He looked quite normal, like someone who would easily blend into the crowd. The only distinguishing feature of the beggar was his unibrow.

As Li Huowang examined the body, the body also opened its eyes and stared at Li Huowang.

Seeing this, Li Huowang took a step back as the beggar tore off the yellow talisman from his forehead. “Interesting. What kind of talisman is this and what is its effect?”

“I don’t know. I just used it randomly. It was drawn by someone else,” answered Li Huowang calmly; it was as if he had already expected all this.

The beggar rolled off the wooden pallet and shook off the dust on his body. As he moved, a metallic clanging sound could be heard from within his body.

“How should I address you?” The beggar bowed toward Li Huowang, his eyes resolute.

“Ao Jing Sect, Er Jiu.” Li Huowang would never reveal his true name and thus, he decided to use the name of the dead Jiang Yingzi.

“If I am right, you must be from the Surveillance Bureau,” continued Li Huowang.

The beggar did not deny it. “Yep. I’m one of the underlings. You are very smart. All I did was wink at you and you followed my plan.”

1. Don’t eat shark fins folk! But I won’t be surprised if the sharks in this world have six dorsal fins 🐟

Chapter 278 - The Creditor

Li Huowang was right. There was never a ghost that stole people's genitals. It had all just been a lie that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had spread. The "beggar", however, had a different approach when it came to dealing with it.

"Was there any need to kill them? Did it really need to be that realistic?" Li Huowang pointed at the several bodies beside them.

"This was something that the Sitting Oblivion Dao came up with. If we did not do it right, then we would have failed. Did you think the people would listen to you just like that? Plus I only killed the normal civilians," replied the beggar.

Li Huowang felt his heart grow cold when he heard that.

How could he say something like that so easily? Is everyone within the Surveillance Bureau like that?

After seeing what he did, rather than feeling mad at the deaths of those innocent people, Li Huowang felt wary of the beggar.

I should be more careful when I come into contact with them next time around or I will become nothing more than their puppet.

As Li Huowang stood there silently, the beggar took the chance to introduce himself, "My name is Hong Da, and I am a creditor[\[1\]](#). A pleasure to meet you."

This was the first time Li Huowang heard of the term. The characters used for the title literally meant "someone who loaned knives to others". However, since Hong Da was able to become an underling of the Surveillance Bureau, the title he held definitely meant something else rather than its literal translation.

"Creditor?" asked Li Huowang.

“Yep, I’m a creditor that doesn’t belong to any sect. Do you want me to loan you one?” offered Hong Da as he opened his tattered robe, revealing the numerous blades hanging from within it.

The blades were all old and rusty. Some of them were even shattered or broken. They were the reason why Li Huowang’s sword had failed to cut him down.

But, this also meant that the rusted blades were not ordinary metal objects. After all, how could a regular rusty blade block the attack of a weapon that was once owned by a military personnel?

“Do you want me to loan you one?” Hong Da asked once again before picking out a broken blade for Li Huowang while smiling politely.

“How should I pay you back after you loan it to me?” asked Li Huowang.

“If I loan it to you, then you will naturally pay me back once the time has come,” Hong Da answered vaguely.

Hearing this, Li Huowang slowly extended his hands and tried to touch the rusted blades while carefully staring at Hong Da.

But in the end, he had just touched the blade for a moment before pulling his hand away. “No need, I already have enough weapons.”

“Fine, fine. No need for it then. Now, since the matters in this County are over, I will take my leave. I hope we will meet again, Er Jiu,” said Hong Da as he kept away the blade with a face full of regret. Then, he bowed and started walking out of the morgue.

Just as Hong Da had touched the bronze door knob, a bloody fingernail flew past his face and stabbed into the wooden door.

“Wait, I’ve heard that the Surveillance Bureau gives out rewards for their missions. Since I took part in the matters of Pi County, I should also get something, right?” asked Li Huowang.

Staring at the bloodied nail embedded within the wooden door,

Hong Da raised his voice eerily, “Oh? And what if I don’t want to give it?”

In an instant, the atmosphere within the morgue tensed up.

“That’s fine too. Let me join the Surveillance Bureau and I will consider the matter between us to be over,” said Li Huowang, dispelling the tense atmosphere.

Hong Da was surprised that someone would say that. “Really? Then let’s go to the Rites Department and register your name.”

“Do we need to go to the Rites Department?” asked Li Huowang, deciding against going there. It was too risky to enter their main camp. If someone found out that he was a Strayed One, then he would definitely die.

“It’s too far away, and currently, I need to urgently get something else done. Hmm... let’s do this instead. I’ve heard that the Surveillance Bureau can contact someone individually through a proxy,” suggested Li Huowang.

Hong Da thought about it for a moment and agreed. “Sure. Then, let me talk to my supervisor. That way, there will be no need to go and find him. If he agrees to your request, then he will come and find you instead. No need to worry. I’ve worked with him for a long time and I will help vouch for you.”

After saying that, Hong Da then walked out of the morgue. Back on the lively street, he quickly took a porcelain doll’s head and used it to cover his own head. Then, he took out a broken fan from his waist and started fanning himself as he walked out of the town.

Once he was out there, the surroundings finally quieted down. Only the sound of insects chirping could be heard.

He continued to walk for an hour before finally throwing away the doll’s head into the forest and saying, “Daoist Er Jiu, there’s no need for you to follow me. If I really was someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, then today’s matters would not have ended this swiftly.”

Hearing this, Li Huowang walked out from within the forest and gave his greeting before walking back toward the town.

It was only after Li Huowang disappeared back into town that Hong Da opened his mouth, "How about it?"

The sound of crunching leaves rang out as someone walked out. The newcomer was a rotund man and wore a red sash over his waist. He wore a green robe and a massive doll head on his head. He was still holding onto a long pole covered in a red sash used for the Dragon Dance.

"No, he's too suspicious and we don't even know where he came from. Also, when you asked him to go to the Rites Department, he directly refused. There's also a possibility that he's someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

The voice was smooth and feminine, completely betraying one's expectations.

Hong Da squatted on the ground as the sound of metal clanking rang out. "I don't think he's someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. They wouldn't do something this simple."

The doll's head slowly turned and looked at Hong Da. "What if they guessed our motives and did this to lower our guard?"

"We already killed two of their higher-ranking disciples today. I don't think we would be that unlucky," replied Hong Da.

However, the man with the doll's head did not move and just repeated the question, "What if they guessed our motives and did this to lower our guard?"

Hong Da growled, feeling annoyed, "Enough with that. I don't feel like messing around today."

Hearing this, the man with the doll head turned and looked toward Pi County. "One of the two swords he was carrying was the bronze coin sword used by the disciples of Luoism, while the other sword that was wrapped in cloth emanated the killing intent that usually belongs to the soldiers. He's even using the secret technique of the Ao Jing Sect. He is too mysterious.”

Hong Da nodded in agreement. “He is indeed weird... But, he is strong. Even if there’s a possibility that he’s someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, we could still make use of him.”

“And then?”

Hong Da squinted and scratched his chin. “And then we observe him while using him.”

Chapter 279 - Technique

Everyone within Pi County ate and celebrated late into the night. Thus, almost everyone woke up pretty late on the next day.

After finding out that Li Huowang's party was leaving, the magistrate dragged his hungover body and his wife to send them off. "Daoist, may you have a smooth future ahead of you! I will write down a detailed record praising you and your activities before submitting it to my superiors! Safe travels!"

Despite Li Huowang's face still being bloody and looking quite scary, Yang Hongzhi sent him off while waving both his hands and smiling.

Li Huowang's acting was also perfect, not letting anyone discover what had happened last night.

Puppy was quite happy when he heard how much they were praising all of them, but Li Huowang didn't say anything about it.

"Magistrate Yang, could you give us a recommendation letter? Mine was destroyed last night from accidentally being soaked in wine," requested Li Huowang as they were leaving.

He learned from Bai Lingmiao that the Liang Kingdom was different from the other places. They might be fine in smaller towns, but without a recommendation letter, they would not be able to enter any of the cities.

Even though Li Huowang would be able to easily handle the issue, he didn't want to trouble Bai Lingmiao.

"Recommendations? Sure sure!" Yang Hongzhi readily agreed. Now that the issue of the ghost had been resolved and his career was steady, the magistrate was more than happy to write them a few recommendation letters.

Actually, the magistrate really wanted to send Li Huowang off as soon as possible; the latter was just too dangerous. Thus, he did his part for the people by sending Li Huowang off till three or four li away before returning.

“Hmph! He was so diligent in sending us off that people might have thought that he was sending off his father. Also, why didn’t he give us some money for our travels?” Xiucan spat onto the ground and grumbled.

Pa!

Suddenly the bronze smoke pipe hit him square in the face.

Li Huowang couldn’t be bothered with their antics; he was busy thinking about what Hong Da had told him yesterday.

He had managed to take the first step and established contact with the Surveillance Bureau. However, it was much more difficult than he had thought. All Hong Da had said was that he would go back and report it. There was no guarantee that it would succeed.

Li Huowang needed backup plans in case this ended in failure.

It would’ve been fine if he had just been directly rejected. Instead, Li Huowang was more afraid that Hong Da was someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

At that moment, Monk’s illusion touched the bronze coin veil on Li Huowang’s face. “Don’t worry. You didn’t even take this off while sleeping. He shouldn’t have been able to discover your true identity. As long as they don’t find out, you will definitely be able to escape.”

However, Li Huowang didn’t feel anything in the face of Monk’s encouragement. Having just a single bronze coin veil to cover up his identity was far too dangerous. He needed another layer of protection if he wanted to feel safe.

But Monk was right. As long as no one discovered what he was, he would be relatively safe.

I need strength. As long as I’m strong enough, there won’t be any problem.

The recommendation letters they got from Yang Hongzhi wouldn't just be useful when trying to enter cities, but they could also serve as temporary identities. With them, Li Huowang and the rest could be considered half-civilians of the Liang Kingdom.

Jiang jiang jiang jiang~

Someone was performing in a regular town of the Liang Kingdom.

Puppy continued to strike the gong while Lu Juren walked onto the stage with his makeup and started singing.

Captivated by their new song, the audience threw food and money onto the stage. Some of them even gave them a basket of pond loaches, causing Luo Juanhua, who was dressed as a beggar, to scurry away in fright. Seeing this, the audience laughed at her.

Meanwhile, Lu Zhuangyuan was at the side of the muddy road, happily counting the money they had received with Zhao Wu.

Li Huowang was quite surprised by just how much money they were earning. After the Lu family decided to change up their performance to something else, the money they started earning was quite a bit more than what they had earned before. And as their employer, he would be able to obtain half of it.

Even though the Lu family was no golden goose, at the very least, they were a goose that was consistently laying eggs with double yolks.

“Brother Zhao Wu, looks like our calculations match! We have earned quite a lot today, so let's have something nice to eat. We can have some pond loaches with tofu today!” suggested Lu Zhuangyuan. Since they already had the pond loaches, he only needed to buy some tofu from the village to make the dish.

Having been around Lu Zhuangyuan for so long, Li Huowang already had a general grasp on his temperament. “Troupe leader Lu, why did I not see Xiucan during the performance?”

The smiling Lu Zhuangyuan revealed a sad expression when he heard about his youngest son. “Him? Forget about him. Even if he manages to learn some supernatural powers, he would never take care of me. We should still rely on others, don’t you think so too, my good grandson?”

Li Huowang walked away when he saw Lu Zhuangyuan was playing with his grandson. He walked toward the large rock where Lu Xiucan was training.

As he got closer, Li Huowang heard Lu Xiucan chanting.

There were two bronze coins in front of Lu Xiucan. As he chanted, the bronze coins became attached together.

He then stomped the ground, causing the two bronze coins to be separated once more.

After training for so long, Lu Xiucan had finally managed to forcefully memorize the chant and learn how to use it!

As he observed the boy, Li Huowang finally came to understand just how much effort Dan Yangzi had put into his practice to obtain his powers before his death.

“Master!” greeted Lu Xiucan.

“Not bad. How are you feeling?” asked Li Huowang, silently observing Lu Xiucan.

“Good! I feel great!” replied Lu Xiucan. In fact, he was overjoyed at having managed to learn the chant. He even felt that he had changed completely into someone else.

Hearing his reply, Li Huowang was disappointed and happy at the same time.

He was disappointed by the fact that his guess was wrong. He had thought that this technique used by the disciples of Luoism would be able to drive away the rage and killing intent from Lu Xiucan’s body.

At the same time, he was happy that Lu Xiucan was fine even after having learned the technique. This meant that the technique that the Nascent Soul had left behind did not contain anything harmful. Now, it was time for Li Huowang to learn it.

“It’s fine for you to train hard, but why did you not perform together with your father?” asked Li Huowang.

Lu Xiucan revealed a look of disgust when he heard that. “I’m now an expert that is capable of using supernatural powers. Why should I join them on stage and go back to being at the bottom of the caste system?”

Li Huowang frowned. He found Lu Xiucan to be detestable. To think that he was this prideful even though he had barely learned anything. How could he look down on his father and brother like that?

But Lu Xiucan was destined to fail. The supernatural power that he learned was only usable with the bronze coin sword. Without it, he wouldn’t be able to do anything even if he had managed to learn the chant.

Chapter 280 - Yinling City

Li Huowang followed the technique written on the parchment and used his dantian while chanting silently in his heart. He then raised the bronze coin sword with his left hand and stabbed it toward the green bamboo shoot on the ground.

The bronze coin sword trembled for a moment and then scattered, each of the coins stabbing into the bamboo shoot.

When Li Huowang retracted the hilt, the bronze coins all flew back before consolidating into the form of a sword.

Li Huowang turned his attention back to the one-meter tall bamboo shoot, and saw that it had been shredded into ribbons.

After that, Li Huowang took a piece of stone covered in moss and slashed at it.

However, at that moment, Li Huowang suddenly felt a strong power coming from within the sword. He felt as if the sword was twisting his hand instead of him swinging the sword.

Just as the bronze coin sword was about to hit the stone, it scattered and the various bronze coins flew past it. Then, the coins cut down a tree behind the stone before rearranging themselves back into his hand.

This sword is very useful.

Li Huowang smiled as he looked at the sword in his grasp. Compared to the other items, it was far more useful and it didn't have any side effects. At the same time, it was also a ranged attack, something that he needed desperately.

Meanwhile, Lu Xiucui's eyes were full of envy as he saw Li Huowang easily grasp the technique in such a short period of time compared to him.

However, even though he was envious, he still praised Li

Huowang excitedly, “Master is amazing! You are the best in the world!”

Hearing the praises of someone who hadn’t studied and didn’t know how to praise someone, Li Huowang's face was filled with disgust.

“Master, what should I learn next?” asked Lu Xiucan. His eyes revealed just how eager he was as he asked this most important question.

Li Huowang didn’t answer him. There were only two reasons why he had decided to teach Lu Xiucan: One, he wanted to see if the technique used by the disciples of Luoism would be able to chase off the rage within Lu Xiucan’s body, and two, he wanted to test and see whether the technique had any side effects.

However, now that his objectives have been attained, Li Huowang needed to think about how to deal with the annoying fellow.

Since it was impossible to chase Lu Xiucan away with his current temperament, Li Huowang needed to think of something else.

After a while, Li Huowang finally said, “Learn. You need to learn how to read.”

Hearing this, Lu Xiucan was stunned. This was completely different from what he had expected.

“Do you know why I managed to learn that technique so much faster than you? That’s because I’m literate,” said Li Huowang.

“So what if I can’t read? I can still learn how to do it without being able to read! I can cultivate to become an Immortal!” shouted Lu Xiucan angrily.

“You don’t want to? Then goodbye. I won’t be teaching you anymore,” said Li Huowang as he turned around.

Seeing him turn around, Lu Xiucan panicked and knelt in front of him before kowtowing three times. “Master, I’m sorry! I was wrong! I will learn!”

By the time Li Huowang walked out from the bamboo forest, there was already a book filled entirely with characters in Lu Xiucui’s hands; he had to memorize all of them. He had never worked so hard before.

On the other hand, when it saw its owner walk out, Bun happily approached Li Huowang and smelled him.

Li Huowang patted its head while talking to the others, “Let’s go. We need to walk faster and enter Yinling City today.”

The ox-cart started moving once more while Li Huowang checked the map. There was a big city just up ahead: Yinling City.

Based on the information he had obtained, Yinling City was one of the largest cities within the Liang Kingdom. It was also where one of the members of royalty lived.

However, all Li Huowang cared about was the fact that they would be one step closer to Cowheart Mountain once they arrived at Yinling City.

Their journey would finally come to an end after they reached Bai Lingmiao’s house.

“Senior Li, I’ve never been to Yinling City. However, I have heard from my grandfather’s brother that the people in Yinling city are extremely rich. When he was younger, he managed to hunt a chicken-feet deer^[1] and sold it in Yinling City. When he came back, he had enough money to build three houses! He also said that Yinling City was extremely gorgeous and the food there was amazing. I can only imagine just how nice their meals would be.”

Bai Lingmiao was blindfolded as she held onto the hem of Li Huowang’s robe. Currently, she was completely different from before.

On the other hand, Li Huowang just continued to silently listen to her as she talked on and on. They were truly a match made in heaven.

Soon, amidst Bai Lingmiao's chirpy voice, they arrived at the city wall that was as tall as a mountain.

As they stood at its base, they saw that the shadow of the wall completely covered all of them. It was truly like a mountain!

"This... This wall..." Puppy stammered.

"This wall is massive!" exclaimed Yang Xiaohai.

"Why are you finishing my sentence?" scolded Puppy as he hugged his wife's waist and followed closer behind the horse carriage.

Soon, they reached one of the city gates where everyone was lining up. The guards, who were wearing robes inscribed with the character for 'soldier', checked the people who were trying to enter.

Compared to Qing Qiu, they were much more stern with the inspections over here. Only after checking everything did they let the people enter.

Seeing this, everyone felt worried; they all tightly grabbed the black veil covering their heads.

As they waited to be let into the city gates, Li Huowang heard the conversation of people in front of them.

"Why are you entering the city?" The guard's tone was cold.

"Sir, I am a performer. I hope this will be enough," said Lu Zhuangyuan as he passed the recommendation letters while hiding some silver underneath them.

The guard took the letter before throwing the silver onto the ground.

After confirming that the recommendation letter had an official stamp on it, the guards that were waiting to inspect their items backed off. "Pass. Next."

Li Huowang sighed in relief as he stood beside the ox-cart housing the Black Taisui.

After they entered, Li Huowang heard everyone behind him gasp loudly before letting out a sigh. However, this was to be expected when they were faced with the massive buildings on the sides of the road. The entire street was busy and bustling with activity.

Staring at the busy city, even Lu Zhuangyuan didn't know what to do. He just stood in the middle of the road, unsure of where to go.

As the people around them saw him, they all had a look of disdain on their faces. It was as if they were mocking him for being a country bumpkin that had never seen a city.

“Why are all of you so worried? We should just do the same thing as usual. Let's find an inn and settle down.” Li Huowang took the lead and everyone followed after him.

However, as he led everyone else, Li Huowang stared at the scene in front of him with a complicated look on his face. He had never expected to see a place so advanced in this world. He had thought that none of the places in this crazy world were any good.

1. author's creation

Chapter 281 - Exquisite Pagoda

There weren't any inns near the city gate. They continued to ride down the street that was wide enough to allow sixteen horses to move side to side. Li Huowang's group had to travel for almost an hour before they found their first inn.

"This place is crazy! If one of our oxen were to defecate on the street, then we would have to pay a fine of ten bronze coins! How the heck do I even go about controlling when they were to defecate?!" Zhao Wu grumbled about what had happened to them just now.

"Yeah! In fact, the ox feces can be used to burn as fuel! We are giving it to them for free here, but rather than thanking us they want to fine us! Fucking bastards!" cursed Lu Xlucai.

"Enough. Since we are in a different place, we need to adhere to their rules. Enter the inn. Since we can finally get some proper rest tonight, we should do so," said Li Huowang as he entered the inn.

Li Huowang was glad that he had asked the magistrate to write them those recommendation letters. To think that they would need them even to just stay in an inn!

"Yikes! Young Daoist, they are even charging us for water! They must be crazy! It's not even tea, but just plain water!" said Lu Zhuangyuan as he carefully hugged the jug of water in front of him.

Li Huowang, who was busy checking the map and trying to get familiar with the geographical locations of the Liang Kingdom, didn't pay him any heed.

"Hmph! To think that it's worse to stay here even though the Liang Kingdom is so big. Our old home was better; at least, there we didn't need to pay to get water.” Lu Zhuangyuan carefully placed the water jug back onto the table.

However, at that moment, his stomach suddenly started rumbling. Since they had rushed to enter the city before nightfall, they had yet to eat lunch.

Li Huowang turned around and looked at Bai Lingmiao who was busy dealing with the bedsheets. “Are you hungry? We can deal with the bedsheets later after we eat.”

“Young Daoist, why don’t we just eat our rations? If we need to pay for even water, then their food must be quite expensive!” suggested Lu Zhuangyuan.

However, Li Huowang just shook his head as he closed the map. “It’s fine. We’ve traveled for a very long time, and should relax every once in a while. Call your family. Tonight, we will have a good meal.”

Everyone perked up when they heard that they would be getting a good meal tonight. They soon walked out of the inn.

By the time Li Huowang and group arrived at the top floor of a five story restaurant, the sky had slowly turned dark. Everyone gasped when they saw that they could see the entirety of Yinling City from up here. The scenery was so pretty that they kept staring at it for a long time.

Since Li Huowang had already seen the modern world before on the ‘other side’, he wasn’t that surprised by the scene. However, he did note that for some reason there were no sects or monasteries here within this city.

“Senior Li, look at that! It’s so pretty! It’s as if the pagoda was made from porcelain!” exclaimed Bai Lingmiao.

A pagoda made from porcelain?

Li Huowang turned around and was surprised when he saw that Bai Lingmiao had not been exaggerating—there was indeed a pagoda built entirely from porcelain!

The roof of the pagoda was installed with rainbow tiles while the pagoda itself was completely white with streaks of blue. As the streaks went from the bottom of the pagoda to the top, they formed many different motifs. Even the bell at the top of the pagoda was golden in color. The bell swung with the wind, forming deep ringing sounds that gave the pagoda an air of exquisiteness and authority.

“It’s so beautiful...” Li Huowang admitted it. This was something that even the ‘other side’ did not have.

Hearing Li Huowang’s praises, a scholar wearing a blue robe opened his fan and said pridefully, “Of course! That is Yinling City’s Exquisite Pagoda. There is only one such pagoda in the entire Liang Kingdom.”

After speaking, the scholar turned to look at Gao Zhijian’s tattered shoes and the clothes worn by the rest of them. Instantly, his face was filled with contempt.

Ignoring the expression on the man’s face, Li Huowang pointed at the pagoda and asked, “Who stays there? Is someone cultivating there?”

The scholar laughed. “Hahaha! You are very interesting. You are right; there are indeed people ‘cultivating’ there.”

Hearing this, Li Huowang suddenly became nervous.

Oh no, is there something like the Righteous Monastery in this city?

Li Huowang squinted, allowing him to see the pagoda even clearer. Through the windows covered by a thin veil, he saw women inside the room.

The women were plump and wore translucent clothes. Their skin was as white as jade, but somehow, they had the blue veins and markings of porcelain vases.

All of them just stood there motionlessly, as if each of them were a beautiful porcelain vase.

Meanwhile, the scholar was desperately trying to hold his laughter back. “Within the Exquisite Pagoda, the men and women would all ‘cultivate’ together hahaha!! It’s a place where they seek pleasure.”

“Why did the Liang Kingdom build a brothel in a pagoda?” Puppy was confused.

At this point, the other people in the room joined their conversation.

“Hey, don’t call it a brothel. Also, why do you think they became the most famous out of all the other places? That’s because they are at the forefront of novelty.”

“As long as you have money, you could even choose one of the girls and decide what to tattoo on her body. I’ve heard before that someone drank too much and ordered the pagoda to tattoo an entire tortoise on a woman’s face.”

Soon, more and more people joined in on the conversation.

“That’s not even the end of it; I once had a chance to touch one of the ladies there. My god, their flesh was as smooth and soft as cotton! It’s amazing!”

As the conversation continued, it got more and more obscene.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang just stared at the Exquisite Pagoda with a hint of contempt on his face.

As expected of the Liang Kingdom, the place where they revel in excess. To think that they would even put so much thought into something like this .

Just then, Li Huowang looked down and saw a beggar lying on the side of the street. The beggar's robes were in tatters, but her face had the same marking as the porcelain vases, but rather than looking pretty and exquisite, the beggar’s markings looked like they were broken.

Everyone loved porcelain vases, but no one loved those that had been broken.

Li Huowang stared at the Exquisite Pagoda one more time before turning to the round table to eat.

At that moment, he realized that as long as you had money, you could do anything within the Liang Kingdom.

“Green Branches Hanging Over The Pond, White Heron Standing Amidst Calm Waters, Yellow Magpie On A Tree During Sunset, Phoenix Soaring Through The Heavens, Yellow Crane Final Farewell.”

The names of the dishes brought out by the waiters were also quite exquisite.

Gao Zhijian extended his chopstick before shrinking back when he saw the carrot that had been carved into the shape of a beautiful phoenix.

“What are you waiting for? Eat,” said Li Huowang as he started eating. Everyone else followed suit.

Soon, the table went completely silent with no one talking. Only the sound of munching remained. Even Li Huowang could not find any faults with the dishes today.

Everyone in the restaurant was looking toward them as they ate in a barbaric way, but Li Huowang couldn’t care less about their gazes.

Soon, it was nighttime. The stars in the skies were as numerous as the lanterns in the city.

“Senior Li, look! There’s lanterns in the skies!”

Chapter 282 - Voice

“Senior Li, look! There’s lanterns in the sky!”

Hearing this, everyone raised their heads and saw the lanterns floating in the skies. They looked akin to luminescent jellyfish.

“Those are just lanterns. Nothing to be in awe about,” said Li Huowang as he brought the bowl close to his mouth and drank the best shrimp soup he had ever had.

The lanterns had numerous surnames written on them as they slowly floated into the skies and merged with the stars. The people who released the lanterns were all crying; it was as if they were conducting a ritual.

There was a river that ran through Yinling City. Currently, the people were lighting candles on boats and sending them down the river.

“The Liang Kingdom sure is busy.” Li Huowang muttered as he looked at the sea of lanterns. He could feel that the Liang Kingdom was very different from the other places they had been too. Their wealth was immense.

“Miaomiao, we’ve passed through the kingdom of Si Qi, Hou Shu, Qing Qiu, and now the Liang Kingdom. Are there any more countries beyond the border of the Liang Kingdom?” asked Li Huowang.

“I don’t think so. If we traveled any further, then we would arrive at the sea,” replied Bai Lingmiao.

With this, Li Huowang’s understanding of this place solidified even further.

So the Liang Kingdom is bordered by the sea? I wonder if there are island countries beyond that.

Even if there are island countries, they probably are...

Just as Li Huowang was busy thinking about it, he suddenly heard an extremely faint voice mixed within the crowd's chatter.

"Hungry. Mouth. Wood."

As soon as he heard the voice, Li Huowang felt all of his hair stand on end. He suddenly stood up and looked around in a panic.

Li Huowang's movements were so sudden and jolting that even the soup on the table spilled a little, causing everyone to turn and stare at him. This caused the atmosphere to become very embarrassing. The people at his table and those around him all stared at him as if he was a psycho.

"Senior Li?"

Sensing the worried gazes of his group, Li Huowang sat back down as tried to calm himself. "It's nothing. You know me. It's an old problem. Continue eating."

Hearing this, everyone continued eating. Only Bai Lingmiao noticed that Li Huowang's hands were trembling.

After finishing their meal, they walked back to the inn. All the while, Lu Zhuangyuan was busy calculating how many pigs they could've bought with the money they had paid for the meal just now. While they might have enjoyed the meal, Lu Zhuangyuan was heartbroken to see all the money he had worked so hard to earn being spent just like that.

"Senior Li, are you alright?" Bai Lingmiao approached Li Huowang and held his calloused hands. His hands had long since grown rough from handling the sword for so long.

"No worries. I'm feeling much better now after eating the Black Taisui," assured Li Huowang.

Once they reached the inn, all of them headed back to their room and discussed the things they saw before washing up.

Nothing happened even after the inn closed and they blew out all the candles.

Late into the night, Li Huowang was sleeping on the bed when he suddenly woke up. He looked at Bai Lingmiao before slowly extracting his hands from around her neck. He then walked out of the room and into the courtyard of the inn.

As it sensed its owner, Bun crawled out from under the horse carriage. It was on duty to guard the carriage housing the Black Taisui.

Li Huowang approached the carriage and opened the tarp before looking inside it. There, he saw the Black Taisui that was still being bound by the cow tendons.

Li Huowang's face was gloomy as he looked at the Black Taisui and remembered the voice he had heard just now.

Ever since he ate the Black Taisui, everything had been normal. In fact, all of it had been too normal, to the point that he nearly forgot that he was a Strayed One. Now, he had heard the voices once again.

Li Huowang looked at the Black Taisui in front of him before calling out in a trembling voice, "Mom, could you call Dr. Wang here? I need to talk to him."

After some time, Li Huowang looked calmly at the Black Taisui. "Wang Wei, is that you? Did you give me some medications a few hours ago?"

However, the Black Taisui did not react. All it did was shift around the dirty slime on its body and make some bubbles.

"If that's you, then increase the dosage and try again," said Li Huowang.

Li Huowang waited for the illusion to come, but nothing happened.

After a while, Li Huowang's breathing became ragged as he glared at the tentacled monster. Then, he growled at it, "Stop fucking around! If you want me to think that the other side is real, then pull me back there if you can!”

Amidst his whisper-shouting, the Black Taisui continued wriggling bit by bit. It tried to extend its tentacles, but the hardened cow tendons bound it tightly.

Pant pant~

Li Huowang took deep breaths as he tried to calm his heart. Then, he continued to stand within the stable, waiting for the world around him to crumble away.

A long time passed before he suddenly heard someone shouting outside while smacking together pieces of bamboo, “Duo~ The weather is hot~ Be careful of the open fire~”

Based on that announcement, Li Huowang knew that it was the fourth section of the night. He had been waiting here for a few hours already, but nothing had happened. With this, he finally calmed down a little.

After that, Li Huowang took out a dagger from his pouch of torture tools and shaved off a piece of the Black Taisui to eat.

He kept munching on the rubbery flesh until he suddenly paused; a feeling of sadness suddenly appeared within his heart.

He had thought that he had let it go, but his reaction even in the face of such a faint hope made him realize that he had just been lying to himself.

He realized that he could never forget about the place where he grew up.

He yearned for it. He wanted the other side to be real and this side to be fake.

Maybe I really am sick. Maybe that side is fake. I have to stop being so suspicious. It was just a fake voice. There's nothing to worry about. That's right... everything is fine.

Just as Li Huowang was lost in his thoughts, the feeling of a foreign gaze instantly made him calm down.

“Who are you?” Li Huowang quickly closed the tarp and looked around only to find a man wearing a doll head standing within the stables.

“Someone told me to come and find you. I heard that you want to work with the Surveillance Bureau. Is that true?” At that moment, a voice as hoarse as Li Huowang’s came from underneath the doll’s head.

Chapter 283 - Information

He is from the Surveillance Bureau? Hong Da honored his promise?

Li Huowang stared at the man warily. The man was wearing a female doll head. The doll head had a red dot on the forehead that shone brightly within the dark stable.

Since the man was someone from the Surveillance Bureau, Li Huowang dared not act rashly. He had deduced that the most likely development at this point would be them wanting to test him and see if he was worthy of joining the Surveillance Bureau or not. However, before that Li Huowang needed to ensure that the man in front of him was not a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about what to do, the man with the doll head spoke up; it was almost as if he knew what Li Huowang was thinking. “Don’t worry, the Three Officials of the Sitting Oblivion Dao have been injured. It’s likely that they will stop their activities for a while.”

Li Huowang pondered for a moment and then spoke slowly, “About Hong Da... I helped him quite a bit last time and I think I could have even handled it on my own. There’s no need for him to get all of the rewards, so...”

Hearing that, the man with the doll head swayed a little before slowly approaching Li Huowang. “To join the Surveillance Bureau is both easy and difficult at the same time. Sometimes, you need to think a bit about others and that will make your path much easier. Do you understand?”

“Hm?” Li Huowang was taken aback. Originally, he did not understand what the man meant, but he realized it soon enough.

He wanted some bribe.

This was good news for Li Huowang. At the very least, people with desires were people who were alive.

After having gone through so much, Li Huowang didn't have high expectations.

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang took out a chest embedded with gemstones and handed it to the man. Within the chest were a number of gold pieces.

"Gold?" The man extended his wrinkled hands and checked it out before throwing the gold and chest onto the ground.

Seeing that the man wasn't moved, Li Huowang took out the gourd from his waist. Then, he took out five lifespan pills that were covered in yellow talismans from within it.

Seeing those pills, the man's voice became discernibly more friendly, "Hmm... Not bad, looks like you know how to do it."

Once he gave the five lifespan pills to the man, Li Huowang received a metal plate that was half the size of his palm. The metal plate had the words "Surveillance Bureau" etched onto its back while the front side had the words "Tenth Pawn, Er Jiu" carved on it. The words were all encircled by depictions of constellations and the whole thing looked quite pretty.

Is this it? Did they prepare it beforehand? Isn't this too convenient?

After receiving the metal plate, Li Huowang looked at the man with the doll's head. "What does Tenth Pawn mean?"

"I don't think I need to explain about the "Pawn" part, but "Tenth" refers to your rank. One to ten, where the larger your number, the lower your rank. You will know soon enough. Now, here's your mission: Go and check if this is related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao. If it is, then you can just deal with it like how you helped Hong Da last time," said the man as he passed a red envelope to Li Huowang.

"Sitting Oblivion Dao? Now?" Li Huowang was surprised at how quickly he had received a mission.

"Why? You can't do it? Then I can just give it to the other pawns,” said the man, wanting to take the envelope back from Li Huowang.

However, Li Huowang continued to hold onto it. “No, I will take care of it. What is my reward and how do I go about increasing my rank within the Surveillance Bureau? Also, is there any information about the enemy?”

As he asked these questions, Li Huowang’s heart was beating rapidly. The only reason he had joined the Surveillance Bureau was to learn more about the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

At the same time, he considered that they might also have information about Strayed Ones.

“Get to work first. If you do well, then you will get your reward. The information about the mission and the enemies is all written inside the letter,” said the man with the doll head. Then, he turned around and walked out from the stable. However, even though the man had turned around, the doll's head did not. The eyes of the doll head were staring at Li Huowang the whole time as the man walked out.

It was only after the man disappeared that Li Huowang turned his attention toward the envelope and the metal plate.

He knew that it wouldn’t be easy. This mission was also a test for him.

He could only join the Surveillance Bureau after passing it. If he couldn’t pass the test, then the metal plate would be nothing but junk.

Could it really be related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao again? Is this a coincidence? Or did they do it on purpose? Did they give me this mission because they are suspicious of me being someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

Does this mean that they are going to send someone over to observe me while I’m doing the mission?

Li Huowang carefully opened the envelope while thinking about the various possibilities.

The letter didn't say much. All it said was that an informant felt that there was a possibility that the Sitting Oblivion Dao was operating in a village, and so they requested the Surveillance Bureau to come and check.

Everything looked normal. There was even a piece of paper that described the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The letter was written in an ancient format that was quite difficult to read. Li Huowang had to spend some time before he finally managed to decipher what it was talking about.

According to the description, the Sitting Oblivion Dao was an organization that appeared out of nowhere. Not even the Surveillance Bureau knew about how they came about. All they knew was that the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao only cared about pleasure.

As long as it was fun, they would even be willing to risk their lives.

They had also managed to trick the Simings into giving them power; however, no one knew how they managed to do it.

Li Huowang had already known about most of it, but there was one word that attracted his attention.

"Siming? So the Surveillance Bureau calls those beings from within the Baiyu Capital 'Siming'? Why do people call them by so many different names?" muttered Li Huowang as he committed the name to memory. Then, he continued reading.

The entire Sitting Oblivion Dao's hierarchy was based on mahjong tiles. Tiao, Bings, and Wan[1] were the lowest ranking ones.

After that were the Four Joys: Dong Feng, Xi Feng, Nan Feng, and Bei Feng[2].

Beyond the Four Joys were the Three Officials: Hong Zhong, Bai Ban, and Fa Cai[3].

Finally, above the Three Officials was the legendary Shai Zi[4] who controlled the entirety of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

As for why they were a legend, that was because no one had ever seen Shai Zi before.

Not only were the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao bizarre and used bizarre techniques, but even the method of joining them was crazy. Rather than joining normally like the other sects, you needed to trick your way into the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

They didn't only trick the Simings and the others, but even themselves.

Thus, if someone wanted to join the Sitting Oblivion Dao, then they had to trick those who were already within it.

All the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao were both liars and victims of lies at the same time.

"I knew it. They are just a bunch of crazy bastards," cursed Li Huowang.

Li Huowang wanted to read more, but that was the end. He felt sad that the information had stopped at that point.

At that moment, a rooster called out, causing Li Huowang to raise his head.

It was already morning—he had spent the entire night standing in the stable.

Chapter 284 - Departure

Even after standing in the stable for an entire night, Li Huowang just rubbed his sore neck as he once again looked at the envelope.

His guess that the Surveillance Bureau had a lot of information he didn't know about was indeed right.

To think that he would be able to obtain so much information from just joining the Surveillance Bureau. He looked forward to obtaining more information about Bei Feng after his position within the Bureau was cemented further.

Even if Bei Feng was not a Strayed One, Li Huowang was certain that he could use the Surveillance Bureau's backing to obtain a method to get rid of the bewilderment and the sense of doubt that all Strayed Ones suffered from.

At the same time, now he was also no longer a headless fly that was just flying around in this chaotic world.

At the very least, if he didn't understand anything, then he would be able to obtain information from the Bureau.

Despite having stayed up all night, Li Huowang did not feel the slightest bit tired as he quickly ran into his room, excited.

He could think about all of that later. For now, the most important thing he had to do was to take care of the mission.

“Ganyuan Village.”

Li Huowang sat on the granite table and started reading the map. He was trying to find where the village was.

Eventually, he found it; however, the place was not enroute Bai Lingmiao's village. It would take a long detour to go there.

So now, he had to choose; he could either deal with the mission first or bring Bai Lingmiao home first and deal with it after that.

But he was worried that the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao would run away if he chose the latter. If he were to arrive too late, then the entire village might end up like Pi County.

At that time, he might not even be allowed to join the Surveillance Bureau.

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about how to do both the things at the same time, Bai Lingmiao walked out with a cake on a lotus leaf. The cake was quite soft and made into the shape of a bunny. It looked very cute and delicious at the same time.

She blew on it before taking a bite. She savored the sweet flavor and revealed a pleased smile.

As he saw this scene, Li Huowang once again realized that Bai Lingmiao was not as mature as he thought. She was still a little girl.

“Senior Li, do you want to take a bite? It’s very sweet,” offered Bai Lingmiao as she showed Li Huowang the cake with its ear bitten off.

Li Huowang shook his head and told her to sit down, “Miaomiao, there is something I need to do first. Once I’m done, I will come back immediately and bring all of you home...”

However, even before Li Huowang could finish what he was saying, Bai Lingmiao stopped him resolutely. “No!”

Her voice was resolute as if there was no room for negotiation, “No matter what you will be doing, I want to go with you! Don’t even think about leaving me behind!”

Li Huowang laughed. “Since when did I ever think of leaving you behind?”

“You did! Back in the Benevolent Nunnery, you said the same thing and you promised us that you will catch up to us! But when I saw you again, you were already dead! I had to bury you with my own hands! Do you know how much pain I felt back then?” Bai Lingmiao started crying.

Looking at the girl in front of him, Li Huowang felt his heart ache. “I just thought that you are almost at your home and so there’s no reason for you to follow me. Plus, this is something minor and there won’t be any danger.”

“If it’s not dangerous, then why don’t you let me follow you?! Also, I can help you in case you can’t solve it yourself. Both me and my sister can help you!” said Bai Lingmiao.

“Sister? Do you call your Second Deity sister?” asked Li Huowang as he recalled how Li Zhi called his Second Deity “his wife”.

“Senior Li, let us come with you. If not, at the very least, let me follow you; you can let the others travel to Cowheart Mountain first,” requested Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang stared at her; he understood that even though the Immortals were finicky, they could still do a lot of things and might be able to help him out of some situations. But this time, he was dealing with the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Also, they were now almost at Bai Lingmiao’s home. He didn’t want Bai Lingmiao to be in danger.

As he was pondering about how to respond, there was a knock on the door.

“Master, are you in there?”

It was Lu Xiucan’s voice.

“Enter,” said Li Huowang as he removed his hands from Bai Lingmiao’s arm and looked toward Lu Xiucan entering the room.

At this moment, the youth was covered in coal dust. Even his face and hands were blackened with it.

“Master, I’ve finished writing what you told me to write,” said Lu Xiucan as he took out some papers and showed them to Li Huowang.

Looking over them, Li Huowang frowned. “Xiucan, I remember teaching you how to write words, not draw talismans.”

Lu Xiucan perked up and was happy when he heard that. “Master, are you teaching me how to draw talismans? Thank you, Master!”

Li Huowang slammed the paper onto the table. “No! I meant that your handwriting is as horrible as the runes scribbled on talismans. Don’t you understand? Is this supposed to be the character for ‘wood’? Why is it so squiggly? And the character for ‘mouth’, why is it round? Can’t you even draw a straight line with a piece of charcoal? Also, why is your entire face black if you are just writing words?”

Li Huowang ranted and scolded him to distract Lu Xiucan from wanting to learn about talismans. Even though Lu Xiucan was hardworking and Li Huowang taught well, somehow the results were still bad.

Li Huowang sighed as he looked at the disappointed Lu Xiucan. “Enough. Go and call your father. I have something to tell him.”

While Li Huowang was technically fine with letting Bai Lingmiao follow him, the same was not true about the others. He couldn’t let the Lu family, Yang Xiaohai, and the women who were with them follow him into danger.

All of them would just drag him down during a battle.

This was different from last time when trouble came to find him. This time around, he would be actively searching for the enemy, and so he needed to prepare.

When Lu Zhuangyuan entered the room, Li Huowang told him to bring everyone who couldn’t fight to Cowheart Mountain.

Li Huowang had decided that he would only bring Bai Lingmiao, Gao Zhijian, Chun Xiaoman, and Puppy to Ganyuan Village.

“Don’t worry Young Daoist, I have traveled for quite a long time; with my experience, I will safely bring them to Cowheart Mountain!” assured Lu Zhuangyuan.

Yinling City was a central hub that allowed access to various different locations throughout the Liang Kingdom.

After speaking with Li Huowang and swearing that he would keep everyone safe, Lu Zhuangyuan dragged the disappointed Lu Xiucan away with him.

Chapter 285 - Sounds Of Hallucination

Li Huowang bowed to Lu Zhuangyuan. "Thank you for your service. Once you reach there, make sure that everyone gets to settle down properly. We will also join all of you once we are done with our mission."

Li Huowang was fine with them heading off on their own because there were almost no bandits within the Liang Kingdom. If there were, then he wouldn't have been fine with this arrangement.

"Master, since I've learned how to use some of the supernatural powers, let me follow you as well!" requested Lu Xiucan.

However, neither Lu Zhuangyuan nor Li Huowang wanted him to follow Li Huowang's party.

Li Huowang glared at Lu Xiucan. "First, learn how to read and write. If you don't know, then ask your father. He might not know much, but he at least knows some of them. You can only learn supernatural powers and techniques properly once you know how to read."

After that, Li Huowang instructed Zhao Wu and Yang Xiaohai about some details.

"Senior Li, don't worry. Even if my body is weak, with me guarding them, I can assure you that I will not let a single horse or a penny disappear," said Zhao Wu.

Li Huowang wanted to say something else when he suddenly snarled and looked toward the empty space to his left.

"Senior Li, what's wrong?"

Li Huowang's face was sullen, but he soon cheered back up before saying, "Nothing. Now that everything is in order, you can depart.”

With that, both groups waved each other goodbye before going their own way.

Lu Juren held his son while speaking to his father, “Father, what do you think about the Young Daoist?”

Lu Zhuangyuan took one look at Zhao Wu and then whispered to Lu Juren, “There’s no need to worry about the Young Daoist. You can’t control what he wants to do. Rather than worrying about that, first worry about your son. If you have the ability, then you would better pour all of your attention into your son so that he can become an official. Then, our ancestors would be proud.”

“Father, why are you...” Lu Juren felt desperate while holding his son, but in the end, he didn’t say anything more.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang led two horse carriages as they crossed a small path.

Since there were so few of them, all of them could fit onto the horse carriage and there was no need for anyone to walk. This way they could conserve their strength as well.

Li Huowang was still thinking about the sound that he had heard just now. He already ate a piece of the Black Taisui yesterday; even so, he still heard that voice. This meant that the voice was not something that could be suppressed by the Black Taisui.

What’s going on? What’s wrong with me?

Li Huowang’s heart became more and more agitated as he thought about numerous scenarios.

Is Wang Wei using some medicine? Or did my illness get worse? No, I’m not a crazy person! This is just a symptom of the Strayed Ones! But... is this a good thing or a bad one?

Lost in his thoughts, Li Huowang clenched his fist tightly, until a pair of soft hands covered his own.

Bai Lingmiao didn’t say anything, and just sat beside him to soothe his agitation.

After a while, Li Huowang closed his eyes and took a deep breath. He reopened them as he tried to calm his heart.

Don't worry. Those were just auditory hallucinations. It's nothing serious. At least it's only appearing from time to time and not affecting me. But... why did it start happening now of all time? Then again it is harmless. It seems that I will have to keep dealing with these kinds of issues from time to time. I will have to take care of them one by one just like the symptoms of a Strayed One. For now, I must pass this test. This can wait till after that.

After he finished composing his thoughts, Li Huowang turned to look at the others. "I didn't have the time to talk about this before, but now that we have some time, I will explain about our enemies this time, the Sitting Oblivion Dao. To put it simply, they are a group of liars and tricksters with powers. You need to remember that they can change their faces, and so you have to be careful of who is approaching you; never let your guard down."

All of them listened attentively to what Li Huowang was saying.

Before this, they had always been on the passive side because trouble found them first. But now, for the first time ever, they would be actively seeking out the enemy first. Everyone was excited yet nervous.

Li Huowang did his best to explain everything he knew about the Sitting Oblivion Dao to them. After all, the more they knew about them, the better their situational judgment abilities would be.

While they were listening attentively, they suddenly heard the sound of horses coming from the front.

Soon a row of strong warhorses separated Li Huowang and the other passersby from the center of the path,

"Aiya, I wonder who is coming?" Puppy was curious.

Through the gaps of the horse legs, Li Huowang saw the guards holding up a massive plate with the words ‘Make Way’ etched on it. Behind the main unit of guards were four guards that rang the gongs, followed by a group of feminine men.

Finally, behind the hundreds of feminine men, Li Huowang saw a massive carriage the size of a small house.

At this moment, a man wearing golden robes with a jade ring on his left thumb was sitting in the carriage. The chairs he was sitting on were all made with jade. He seemed to be the ruler of Yinling City.

Just as Li Huowang was examining the yellow banners marked with a four-clawed dragon, an old man beside him said to his grandson, “The Prince is patrolling the place. Quickly kneel down!”

Is that the Prince of Yinling City?

At that moment, Li Huowang saw the Prince snoring away in his chair. Beside him was a girl, fanning him.

The girl had the same blue porcelain markings. It was clear she came from the Exquisite Pagoda.

By the time Li Huowang snapped back to reality, he saw that everyone around him had kneeled down. Even Bai Lingmiao, Puppy, Chun Xiaoman, and Gao Zhijian did the same. This made him very conspicuous as the only person sitting on the horse carriage.

“How dare you not kneel?!” Several soldiers ran out from the prince’s entourage and surrounded Li Huowang. Then, without even waiting for him to speak, they directly drew their blades.

Li Huowang thought about it for a moment, and then revealed the identity plate given to him by the person from the Surveillance Bureau.

When the soldiers saw the plate, all of them were shocked before they quickly sheathed their weapons.

“Dear Sir, please excuse our rudeness!” The soldiers bowed to Li Huowang before leaving him alone.

Looking at their backs, Li Huowang suddenly felt repulsed by the fact that the Surveillance Bureau was making sure that royalties like the prince were all safe in their position.

Everyone else in this crazy world has changed, so why are the royalties like him still fine?

Li Huowang stared at the fat prince. “Get up and don’t kneel to him.”

After the Prince’s entourage was gone, their remaining journey was quite smooth. Nothing happened even as they reached Ganyuan Village.

The village was situated beneath a mountain. Blue roof tiles could be seen covering the entire area.

From the size of it, it was just a normal village, one that was no different than the others they had seen during their travels within the Liang Kingdom.

Chapter 286 - Ganyuan Village

A child was riding his ox while taking their dog out for a walk. Some women were washing clothes by the river. Everything seemed... normal; it was different compared to what they had seen back in Pi County. There was nothing special about the village based on appearances alone.

But the more normal it seemed, the more abnormal it was to Li Huowang.

He once again took out the envelope and confirmed that this was indeed where the Sitting Oblivion Dao had been spotted; however, the details were unknown.

Thinking back to what had happened in Pi County, Li Huowang told the others to stay back, "Since there is a possibility that members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao are inside, let me sneak in first so that we don't alert them."

"Senior Li, will you be alright?" asked Bai Lingmiao. She wanted to say something else, but stopped. Li Huowang's recent changes hadn't escaped her eyes. While he had recently gotten better, he had suddenly become paranoid once again.

Li Huowang hadn't told her anything about the voices. After all the more he explained, the more worried she would get.

After reassuring Bai Lingmiao, Li Huowang sent his illusion into the ground and made himself invisible; then, he started walking on the path beside the willow tree.

"Again. People. Wind."

At this point, Li Huowang was no longer surprised by the voice. He just shook his head and looked at Monk's illusion that was stuck within a tree.

“Why are you looking at me? It wasn’t me who said it,” said Monk.

“Shh.” Li Huowang placed his finger on his mouth before slowly moving into Ganyuan Village.

He ignored his illusions and was focused completely on identifying any potential threats.

Once he entered, he soon realized that the entire Ganyuan Village was celebrating something. Even the couplets and Door Gods[1] were being changed and given a makeover.

Li Huowang sat on a tree covered in red cloth. As he looked down from atop the tree, he didn’t see anything unusual.

He decided to wait patiently.

It was only after lunch that the villagers suddenly congregated before heading into the depths of the village. All of them were happily chatting like normal.

Li Huowang followed them and stopped in front of a village shrine.

Here, their voices became much softer. The adults would even pinch the children to be quiet if they were too loud.

Everyone just stood there; it was as if they were waiting for something.

Just when Li Huowang was thinking about entering the shrine to investigate, the black door suddenly opened. Then, the villagers brought out a brown deity made from clay. From the vase being held in the deity’s hand, it appeared to be a Bodhisattva.

But this Bodhisattva didn’t have the usual kind and merciful face. It was as if it had gone through the worst storm in its life. Its face had melted away, leaving strands of clay on its face. Two irregular black holes had been poked to make its eyes.

“Heave ho!” The villagers of the Ganyuan village all helped carry the Bodhisattva as they paraded it all around the village.

“A Clay Bodhisattva...” muttered Li Huowang, frowning at what he was seeing.

Li Huowang climbed up a tree and looked at how the villagers paraded the peculiar clay Bodhisattva around the village numerous times. Every time they made a circle around the village, they would place another red veil onto the clay Bodhisattva. The sunlight was quite hot, but the Bodhisattva was covered in layers upon layers of the red veil.

When they were finally done, they brought it back to the shrine and placed it back inside.

After placing the Bodhisattva back inside, they once again picked it up, sang for a bit, and then brought it out of the shrine. Once the clay Bodhisattva was out of the shrine, they once again placed it back inside.

They went to and fro three times before finally placing the Bodhisattva down for good. Then, they lit up some incense sticks and started praying.

Li Huowang wanted to check what the shrine looked like from the inside, but the villagers were blocking the entrance. Thus, Li Huowang had no chance to sneak inside.

After a while, the sun slowly set and the villagers went back to their homes.

When it was night, the shrine keeper locked the door of the shrine before going to sleep.

It was only at this point that Li Huowang slowly came down from the tree.

Before long, the sound of metal being cut in half rang out. The bronze lock was slashed in half and the door was opened slightly.

By the time moonlight illuminated the dark interior of the shrine, Li Huowang had already grabbed his sword tightly.

If the Sitting Oblivion Dao is involved, then they would have definitely tampered with the shrine.

Only after confirming there weren't any traps did Li Huowang slowly tiptoed inside.

Due to the incense sticks, the entire shrine was filled with the smell of smoke. The clay Bodhisattva from before sat in the middle of the darkness, its melted face barely visible.

But it was not the only statue here. There were clay statues of other deities lined up on both sides. They were the Eighteen Arhats.

While the Bodhisattva didn't have a face, the Eighteen Arhats did. They stood there with faces filled with anger or hatred. They all looked extremely real, to the point that anyone stepping inside would feel like they were being watched.

As for the Bodhisattva, it was placed in the middle of the shrine, sitting atop a stone lotus.

The incense sticks lit up by the villagers had already burned out. All of the incense sticks lit up by the villagers were used to worship only the clay Bodhisattva.

There were two other clay statues to the left and right of the Bodhisattva. These two statues still had their faces, and from the looks of it, they were a pair of assistants for the Bodhisattva, one boy and one girl.

The shrine was quite small, and so Li Huowang managed to inspect it fairly quickly. However, he didn't find anything suspicious, and so he once again placed his attention on the Bodhisattva that was shrouded in numerous red veils.

The Bodhisattva wasn't tall, roughly two meters. But due to the stone lotus altar, Li Huowang had to raise his head to look at it.

Given the darkness of the shrine, it was quite horrifying to look at a clay Bodhisattva with its face melted off.

Li Huowang had long since thought that there was something wrong with it.

Should I just cut it apart?

Li Huowang began to ponder his choices.

While thinking about it, he suddenly turned his attention to the clay statues of the assistants.

Wait... They weren't like this just now. Did they move?

Looking at two clay statues staring at him, Li Huowang felt his body go numb from an inexplicable chill.

“You. Come.”

“Who?!” Li Huowang turned around, but didn't see anything.

Wait, was that my auditory hallucination or something from the shrine?

Li Huowang didn't know what to do; he couldn't differentiate it.

1. Deities that act as protectors to the house

Chapter 287 - Blind

Within the dark shrine filled with the smell of incense, Li Huowang stood in front of the three clay statues as he struggled with himself.

Was that voice real or just a hallucination?

He had just entered the village, and rather than finding anything about the Sitting Oblivion Dao, he had managed to confuse himself instead.

Just as he was thinking about this issue, the door to the outside was suddenly pushed open. The shrine keeper poked his head filled with white hair into the shrine, using the light of a candle to illuminate the interior of the shrine.

With this weak light, he checked the interior of the shrine, especially the rafters. However, even after looking around for a while, he didn't see anyone.

"That's strange. There's no thief here. Did the lock break?" muttered the shrine keeper.

The shrine keeper looked around one last time before using a hemp rope to tie the gate closed.

The shrine keeper was about to head back to sleep, but felt that it wasn't safe enough. He went back, took a blanket from his home and decided to sleep in front of the main gate of the shrine. "I don't think the thief would be able to enter now."

Li Huowang would never have allowed himself to get locked in the shrine just like that; he had already sneaked out and was standing on the roof of a nearby building while observing everything that happened.

Except for the noise just now, everything looked normal.

If it wasn't for the envelope that stated the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao were active here, Li Huowang would've simply thought that this was a normal village.

In fact, if he had just been traveling around normally, he too might've fallen for their tricks too.

However, when he thought back to the voice that he had heard, Li Huowang's frown became tighter.

I can't even trust my own senses now. Looks like I will have to bring Bai Lingmiao and the others in here to see if they hear the same thing that I do.

With this in mind, Li Huowang no longer hesitated as he turned around and started walking out of the village.

The village was quiet at night. With the exception of barking dogs, there weren't any noises.

At this moment, Li Huowang was walking along a small path as fireflies danced around in the grass around him. The more he walked, the more he felt like something was wrong.

This feeling was not based on his observation or senses, but just his gut instinct.

After a while, he suddenly turned around and looked behind him; however, there was nothing.

Did someone notice me?

Li Huowang suddenly placed his back against a wall and hid himself in a corner. Then, he slowly made his way back toward where he had just been.

He continued to remain invisible, but moved swiftly. He was already holding his sword, ready to slash down at the person the moment he turned around the corner.

As he got closer and closer to the corner, Li Huowang's heart started beating faster and faster.

However, when he turned around the corner while tightening his grasp on his sword, the only thing he saw there was a wall made from yellow soil.

As soon as he confirmed that no one was following him, Li Huowang felt his entire body deflating. It had just been an illusion.

However, just as he was about to turn around, a pair of hands grabbed onto him tightly.

Impossible! I'm currently invisible, so how did he manage to find me?!

At that moment, without waiting for Li Huowang to even say anything, the one holding him urgently said, "Sh! Be quiet! Keep attracting them! Let them come!"

The voice was very quiet, but Li Huowang decided to obey it and didn't move. He didn't know why he did that; he was too busy thinking about who the voice belonged to.

"Aiya, our luck is bad. They ran away," said the voice.

When Li Huowang felt the hands holding onto him finally let go, he immediately turned around to see who it was.

With whatever light they had available, Li Huowang managed to see a blind man.

The blind man was quite skinny and wore a rumpled black cloak along with a pair of worn-out cloth shoes. He held a bamboo walking cane and carried a bamboo basket on his back. His eyes were completely white and he wore a black cap. His thick beard, which would normally make one look like a sage, instead made him look obscene.

As he looked at the man, Li Huowang finally realized why he was caught. The man was blind!

While Li Huowang was looking at the man, he too was 'looking' at Li Huowang; however, he was using his nose.

"The smell of blood on you is quite strong. Which army did you come from? My surname is Chen, so you can just call me Blind Chen. I'm a Ninth Pawn from the Surveillance Bureau," said the blind man as he showed his identity plate to Li Huowang.

"No, I'm from the Ao Jing Sect. My name is Er Jiu, a Tenth Pawn. I greet my senior,” said Li Huowang, taking out his identity plate as well.

When he heard Li Huowang’s words, Blind Chen’s face lit up. “Oh~ So you are from the Ao Jing Sect. Since you are here, then you must be my reinforcement.”

As he spoke Blind Chen began to carefully knock his bamboo cane on the ground as he swiftly moved toward the exit of the village, “Let’s go. We can talk while we move. I arrived here earlier than you, so I will have to let you know about some things first.”

Li Huowang smiled and followed after him.

“Blind Chen, have you been responsible for this place for some time? Can you tell me what’s happening to the village and who are the culprits?” asked Li Huowang.

“I have no idea what that thing is either. That’s also why I’m still trying to think of a plan to use. All I know is that they move within the dirt. Earlier, I saw that they were targeting you,” replied Blind Chen.

“Is that so? The evil beings this time are so annoying,” remarked Li Huowang calmly.

“Exactly. Evil beings that can travel through the dirt are very annoying to deal with and we don’t even have any idea about what they look like; however, that’s also why the rewards from the Surveillance Bureau for this mission are so good. Oh, if you are here as my reinforcement, then do you have any powers that can be used for this mission?”

“Senior Chen, I don’t think there’s anything amazing about me. All I know are the regular tricks used by members of the Ao Jing Sect,” replied Li Huowang. He hadn’t let Blind Chen out of his field of vision throughout their conversation.

“Hoho~ You can’t say that. I know that the people from the Ao Jing Sect are powerful; it’s just that their techniques require massive sacrifices. Are you here by yourself?”

“Yeah, I came here on my own. Are you alone as well?”

“Oh, I’m alone as well. Hoho~” said Blind Chen. Then, he silently led Li Huowang out of the village.

It was only when both of them were at the exit of the village that the silence was broken.

“Senior Chen, do we really have nothing we can do against them?” asked Li Huowang.

Blind Chen sighed as he sat on a mossy rock. “To think that there would come a day when I would have to call for help. As you can see, I’m blind. On the other hand, those mud bastards are like catfishes. It’s so hard to catch them and even if I did, I could only ever catch them one at a time. Junior Er, do you have something to force them out?”

“As long as you can force them out, I will be able to kill them! Even though I’m blind, I’m confident that I’m stronger than them.” Blind Chen oozed confidence as he said this.

Chapter 288 - Reinforcement

Li Huowang leaned against a tree and thought about it. “Senior Chen, could you tell me everything that has happened ever since you came here? I need to know the situation before I can make a plan. As you know, I have to pay a terrible price to use the techniques of the Ao Jing Sect.”

Hearing this, Blind Chen nodded and started using his cane to poke at the mud below. “After I was given this mission, I entered the village as a fortune teller. Due to this, I managed to touch a lot of faces[1] for the first few days. To my surprise, on the third day, the beings within the walls actually came out and let me touch their faces so that they could get their fortune told. They thought that since I couldn’t see, I was easy to trick; however, my ears are much sharper than that of regular people. That night, I was alone, but then, three more people suddenly appeared in my room! I hadn’t even heard any footsteps coming in from outside. They just appeared out of the dirt and mimicked humans to try and get their fortunes told.”

“I touched their faces to tell them their fortune. Even though their facial structures resemble humans, all of their fortunes pointed to the fact that they were already dead! [2] I stabbed them with my cane, killing one of them and hurting another in the process. Back then, I had thought that I did quite a favor for the people of Ganyuan Village by getting rid of those evil beings, but rather than treating me to a meal, all of them chased me out! I circled back and came to learn that the entire village had fallen under the control of the evil beings. If we don’t get rid of them, then we will not be able to save the villagers. That is why, every night, I wait until everyone in the village is asleep before coming in to kill the evil beings. But as you've seen, they are even more slippery than a catfish. There have even been times when they even tried to ambush me, but I always managed to see them coming."

Blind Chen's throat was parched after the long explanation, and so he squatted down and drank some water from a little puddle that was made from an ox stepping in the mud.

Then, with his throat feeling better, he turned toward Li Huowang and asked, "Junior, I've explained so much. Did you listen to it? Quickly think of a plan."

Li Huowang's voice came from another direction, "I'm listening. Don't worry senior. I'm thinking about how to force them out."

"Yeah. Quickly now. Ah~ next time I'm choosing a mission that is closer to my place. It's so arduous to travel here," said Blind Chen. Then, he once again sat on the mossy rock and brought out a Bagua-shaped mirror[3]. He carefully cleaned it before placing it back.

"Senior, I think I have a plan. Where do the evil beings usually hide?" asked Li Huowang.

"The shrine that houses the clay Bodhisattva. I have no idea why they like that place," replied Blind Chen.

"Then let us go there first," said Li Huowang.

"Sure, but we need to hurry; it will be dawn soon and the villagers will wake up then. It will be quite difficult to kill the evil beings later on," said Blind Chen as he immediately stood up and started using his cane to navigate back into the village. He was following Li Huowang's footsteps.

The village was still quiet and no one was walking around at night. Only the fireflies illuminated their path ever so slightly.

As they walked, Blind Chen suddenly got serious and placed one of his ears against the ground.

“Junior Er, be careful. Something isn’t right. I’ve never heard sounds like these before. There are four people approaching us; two men and two women. One of the men is quite massive, and based on the sound of his footsteps, he should be wearing armor!” said Blind Chen.

Hearing this, Li Huowang also became serious as he looked around. “The four foreigners are probably enemies. Who else would come into a village this late at night?”

After saying that, Li Huowang ran away without waiting for Blind Chen to say anything.

Meanwhile, Blind Chen continued to place his ear on the ground to listen to those sounds.

Soon, the four people left the village.

“Senior, I’ve returned. I used an illusion technique to distract them away from Ganyuan Village,” reported Li Huowang after coming back.

“Let’s go and quickly finish our job. They must be up to something,” said Blind Chen.

Hearing this, Li Huowang nodded and quickly followed after him.

By the time they appeared in front of the shrine once more, it was already the second section of the night. To be more precise, they were in an alley close to the shrine.

“We can only go this far. Any further and you would end up alerting them. That’s how they were targeting you just now,” said Blind Chen.

Li Huowang estimated the distance, and then took out a bronze bell from his robe. “Senior, it might get a bit noisy for a while.”

Then, Li Huowang shook the bronze bell and a piercing sound exploded within the quiet village.

Li Huowang shook it hard, splitting the single Wandering God in front of him into eight separate individuals. Then, he swiftly placed some soil in his mouth and ordered them to attack!

Following his instructions, the Wandering Gods immediately dove down into the ground.

Blind Chen didn't know what was happening; the sound of the bell was interfering with his hearing.

"Junior Er, I don't think this is going to work! At this rate, you will wake the villagers!" shouted Blind Chen amidst the ringing of the bell.

"Don't worry Senior Chen! Even though it's noisy, we can force them out very quickly like this!" said Li Huowang, shaking the bell even harder.

Hearing this, Blind Chen hobbled towards Li Huowang. Once he was behind Li Huowang, he felt his cane touch something and bent down to pick it up. However, just as he bent down, Blind Chen suddenly used his bamboo cane to stab at Li Huowang! There was a sword hidden within it.

It was a vicious strike that didn't produce any sounds under the ringing bell.

But just as the cane was about to stab Li Huowang, he moved his body, causing the sheath of his sword to block the tip of the cane. However, even though Li Huowang managed to block it, the force from the attack still forced him several meters forward.

At the same time, the Wandering Gods that had been waiting in ambush all came out and attacked Blind Chen at the same time.

Just as Li Huowang stood up and was about to shout something, Blind Chen beat him to it.

"Hmph! Sitting Oblivion Dao! Don't think that you can fool me! I never called for reinforcements, and so there's no way that you are one!"

Chapter 289 - Blind Chen

Li Huowang's words got stuck in his throat when he heard what Blind Chen was shouting.

What? He thinks that I am from the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Did he never call for reinforcement?

Li Huowang thought about many things. When he recalled how the man with the doll head gave him this mission, he became even more suspicious.

Meanwhile, without Li Huowang controlling them, the Wandering Gods stopped mid-air and floated like jellyfish without any movements.

No!

Li Huowang snarled and shook the bell even harder. In response, the Wandering Gods immediately continued their assault on Blind Chen.

I need proof! I cannot allow myself to fall into their trap!

Even though Blind Chen couldn't see, he knew where the Wandering Gods were. He dodged their attacks, took out the Bagua mirror from his bamboo basket and started chanting, "Pure Heaven and Earth, muddled Yin and clear Yang!"

As he chanted, a soft light shot out from the Bagua mirror. It swept through the air and the Wandering Gods hit by it all disappeared. Then, he swung the mirror and two more Wandering Gods were cut in half.

Just when Blind Chen wanted to point the mirror toward the remaining Wandering Gods, he sensed an incredible killing intent suddenly appear above him.

By this time, Li Huowang was already halfway to the ground, his sword just a few inches away from Blind Chen's neck.

But then, something magical happened. Blind Chen's head shrunk into his shirt like a tortoise!

This sudden development caused Li Huowang to miss his attacks and before he could do anything else, a hand appeared from the collar and caught hold of his sword hand.

Li Huowang tried to shake it off, but failed; Blind Chen held onto him very tightly, nearly making Li Huowang fall.

Blind Chen used this opportunity to try and stab Li Huowang with his cane. But with the remaining Wandering Gods coming to Li Huowang's aid, his attacks didn't work.

Both of them were attacking each other fiercely and the situation was dire.

But this stalemate was destined to not last very long; Li Huowang had already set a trap.

"Senior Li, we are here to help you!"

Bai Lingmiao, Gao Zhijian, Chun Xiaoman, and Puppy ran from afar and attacked Blind Chen.

Blind Chen couldn't even defeat Li Huowang, much less four other people. With this, his fate had been sealed.

Splat!

A needle wrapped in a white fiber hit Blind Chen's right hand, causing his five fingers to melt like a candle before shifting toward his wrist.

Blind Chen panicked when he couldn't hold his weapon. In the next moment, a gust of wind filled with bloodlust blew at his face, making his hair stand straight up.

Shit!

His heart dropped.

"Zhijian, don't kill him!" shouted Li Huowang.

When Li Huowang's voice rang out, Blind Chen felt that force bend a little before going toward his wrist instead.

With the sound of bones cracking, Gao Zhijian's mace crumpled Blind Chen's wrist.

At the same time, Chun Xiaoman ran over and kicked away Blind Chen's cane. Then, she swiftly took the metal chain from Gao Zhijian and started binding Blind Chen.

"Did you see that? Hehe, he lost to me, Cao Cao!" chortled Puppy.

Li Huowang ignored Puppy and confronted Blind Chen. "Are you a dot or a bamboo? We can finally talk properly now."

"Ptui!"

A glob of phlegm mixed with blood flew toward Li Huowang; however, he easily dodged it.

Gao Zhijian slapped Blind Chen with his massive fist, causing the latter's nose to break and a few of his teeth got knocked out.

"Don't be so harsh." Li Huowang stopped Gao Zhijian and looked at Blind Chen. "I will ask again, who are you?"

"I'm your fucking grandfather!" snarled Blind Chen, his face bloody and red.

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang looked down to his pouch of torture tools and took out a small blade with a thin edge. "Fine, I will do it myself. Hold his head and don't let him shrink into his shirt."

As the blade slowly shaved off the skin on his face, Blind Chen shrieked and howled in pain.

Li Huowang carefully shaved off the first layer, and then started with the second layer. He was as focused as a craftsman hard at work.

Time slowly passed and Li Huowang soon realized that something was wrong. Blind Chen's face had almost been completely peeled off, and yet, there were no signs of another face beneath it!

"You really aren't from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?" asked Li Huowang as he looked incredulously at the weakened Blind Chen.

By now, Blind Chen barely had any breath left in him.

Li Huowang had thought that Blind Chen was someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but now that the proof was in front of him, he knew that he was mistaken.

“Fuck you. Fuck your grandmother...”

Looking at Blind Chen cursing at him weakly, Li Huowang felt his heart tighten. He quickly turned toward the red veiled woman beside him and said, “Miaomiao, quick! Summon the Bai family Immortal and heal him!”

After some time, Li Huowang watched as the shaved off skin on Blind Chen’s face slowly healed and stitched back together.

“Sorry Senior. Even I can’t be sure without doing this. Zhijian, untie him,” apologized Li Huowang.

If Blind Chen was not someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, then this made the man with the doll head extremely suspicious. Maybe the entire “mission” was a trap.

When Blind Che, who was heavily injured, regained his freedom, he quickly distanced himself from Li Huowang. He was terribly weakened as he leaned against the wall and looked toward the direction he heard the footsteps from. “What are you bastards from the Sitting Oblivion Dao doing? Do you think I will ever trust you? Dream on!”

He tried to stand up but his current injuries made it extremely difficult.

“Senior Chen, listen to me,” said Li Huowang, blocking Blind Chen.

“How else can you explain it? You want to say that it was all a misunderstanding? You want me to believe that? Fine! Go as far away from here as you can and I will believe you!” shouted Blind Chen.

Just as the two of them were arguing, they suddenly heard a noise coming from the shrine, causing both of them to stop and look toward it at the same time.

There was a person looking at them from behind the door.

It was the clay Bodhisattva. Half of its body was shrouded in darkness while the other half was exposed in the moonlight. It was using the two dark holes on its face to stare at them.

“See! Do you see now?! They saw how heavily injured I am and now they want to kill me! Now, we can all just die together!”

Just as Blind Chen’s shout rang out, the Eighteen Arhats appeared from behind the clay Bodhisattva. Everytime they moved, their bodies cracked a little, and from within those cracks peeked out something that resembled compound eyes, all of them moving within.

Chapter 290 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Jiang~

Li Huowang unsheathed his sword before standing between Blind Chen and the statues.

“Kill them!” ordered Li Huowang, causing everyone to immediately turn their attacks toward the statues.

Li Huowang was confident in defeating them. Since even Blind Chen could win against them, and his group won against Blind Chen, there was no reason for them to retreat!

Bam bam bam!

Gao Zhijian’s heavy footsteps rang out loud as he charged toward the statues and crashed into them.

But no matter how many times he crashed into them and knocked them down, they would always get back up and surround him.

Seeing his predicament, everyone ran over and tried to help Gao Zhijian; however, the situation did not improve. No matter how many times the statues were knocked down, they would always get up again. Even Li Huowang, who was using his two swords, could not kill them.

“Quick! Help me up and give me my mirror!” Blind Chen shouted from afar.

Hearing this, Li Huowang quickly somersaulted and exited the battlefield. He took one look at Blind Chen and then kicked the bamboo basket into his hand.

Once he got his basket, Blind Chen once again took out the Bagua mirror and bit his index finger. Then, he used his blood to quickly draw a rune on the mirror.

“The Saint’s light will shine forever! The mirror and the soul are bound together and will die together. No fear, no retreat, follow my lead. The Qi of the Heavens and Earth flows swiftly, one that is unimpeded by metal and stones. All shall fall underneath it! Open!”

As he chanted, the Bagua mirror that was stained with his blood suddenly flashed with a brilliant light.

The light lit up the dark surroundings. All of the clay statues that came into contact with the light started melting like the snow in the sun.

Once all the statues had been melted, Blind Chen, who had exhausted most of his strength, fell onto the ground with a pale look on his face.

Li Huowang approached him and carefully lifted him up. “Thank you, Senior Chen.”

“Go away! I still don’t trust you,” said Blind Chen. However, even though he said that, he did not stop Li Huowang from helping him.

At this point, Li Huowang could see quite a lot of the villagers staring at them through the alley and the windows. If they didn’t retreat now, then the entire village might notice them.

“Ouch! Do you want to shake me to death? How can we run during the night? We need to find a place to hide and heal first!” whispered Blind Chen.

Just as the villagers were surrounding Li Huowang and discussing what had happened, he quickly brought Blind Chen to an empty cooking hall. Once inside, Li Huowang took out a small bottle and started pouring the powdered Golden Wound medication on Blind Chen’s injuries.

While treating him, Li Huowang told Blind Chen about what might’ve happened.

“So you were fooled by a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao as well? Ha! If that's really the case, then it would mean that the Sitting Oblivion Dao has infiltrated deep into the Surveillance Bureau. Their trap might've started from the Creditor!"

Li Huowang sighed and kept away the bottle. "Maybe. I have no idea when they started paying attention to me. I didn't even—"

However, Li Huowang suddenly stopped talking. He couldn't just tell everyone that he was a Strayed One.

Blind Chen was still listening silently when he realized that Li Huowang had already finished talking. He huffed in indignation, "I still don't trust you! Once it's dawn, we will go our own ways. I have my own methods to see if you are lying or not."

"Senior Chen, how are you going to travel with your wounds? Aren't you afraid that you will be in danger?"

"Ba! I might just lose my life even faster if I decide to follow you. In the first place, who was the one that injured me?" retorted Blind Chen as he turned around with his back facing Li Huowang.

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about how to persuade Blind Chen, he heard something. "Shh. Someone's coming."

The footsteps that suddenly rang out from in front of the cooking hall made everyone stop breathing. It seemed that the owners of the footsteps were the people who had just gone to investigate the fight who were now coming back.

Soon the footsteps disappeared; it was as if the owners of the footsteps had gone back to sleep.

Just when all of them sighed in relief, the sound of footsteps rang out once again, this time much more numerous than before.

Then, it disappeared again. But not long after, the footsteps rang out once again.

This time, they stopped right in front of the door of the cooking hall.

Bam bam bam!

They were knocking on the door!

Li Huowang signaled with his finger and Chun Xiaoman carefully opened the door.

When the door opened, they saw the clay statue of one of the assistants, its eyes replaced by just two dark holes on its face, staring at everyone.

Crack~

Suddenly, the clay statue split open and antennae belonging to insects extended from the inside of the statue.

But the sound of cracking didn't just originate from there. It rang out even from behind Li Huowang.

Behind me? But there's nothing but a wall there.

Li Huowang turned around in fear, only to find several motifs of Bodhisattvas and the Buddha that were carved onto the wall using clay. Currently, all of them were glaring at Li Huowang!

Crack~

Soon, their bodies split from the wall and crashed into the hall like a tsunami.

While Blind Chen had no time to grab his mirror, Li Huowang didn't waste any time. He immediately took out a pair of metal pliers and used them to crush one of his eyeballs.

Pop!

The clear liquid sprayed around the room and covered the Arhats, enveloping them as they slowly fell to the ground.

When all of them ran out, Li Huowang was surprised to see an innumerable number of clay statues standing on the roofs of the surrounding houses. All of them were glaring at Li Huowang.

"Blind Chen, quickly!" shouted Li Huowang.

"Don't worry! They are all fakes!" said Blind Chen as he rummaged inside the bamboo basket that Puppy had passed to him. Li Huowang was standing with his back toward Blind Chen.

Splat!

Suddenly, two sharp knives stabbed into Li Huowang's heart.

Li Huowang looked down at the knives and turned around. He saw that it was Blind Chen who had stabbed him.

But what made Li Huowang confused was that even though Blind Chen was the one who tried to kill him, Blind Chen's face was currently even more terrified than Li Huowang's.

Blind Chen looked at his hand with fear in his eyes. "Junior Er, this was not me! I didn't do it! My body moved on its own!"

Just as he said that, Blind Chen's body suddenly stopped moving and his aura started to transform. His white eyeballs sank back into his skull and a pair of heterochromatic eyeballs with double irises replaced it. At the same time, the wrinkles on Blind Chen's face also disappeared. Soon, his face became just like Li Huowang.

Then, the Li Huowang with double irises spoke, "Haha! It's so outdated to trick people and evil beings. I've learned a new trick: tricking myself! How about it, boss Hong Zhong? I learned it directly from you."

Chapter 291 - Source Of Auditory Hallucination

In the dark hall, Li Huowang's hands trembled as he stared at the knife tip stabbing into his chest. He was shocked to see another Li Huowang, one with double irises.

“You... Me...”

Li Huowang fell backward as he started losing massive amounts of blood.

The sudden change in the situation left him unable to think properly. He was focused on the name “Hong Zhong” mentioned by the other Li Huowang while at the same time thinking about his impending death.

Just as Li Huowang was about to fall to the ground, the others from his group rushed toward him and carefully propped him up.

Bai Lingmiao's dark fingernails trembled; she wanted to touch the wound on Li Huowang's chest. However, after a moment of hesitation, she retracted her arm and started pounding on her drum.

Dong dong dong~

“Ox-head and Horse-face[\[1\]](#) carry the chains, the Black and White Impermanence[\[2\]](#) holds the flag!”

The sound of the drum was accompanied by her chanting.

Dong dong dong~

“If you wish to ferry the soul of the stubborn boy, life and death are but a line apart~ I know what it means when the soul reaches the gate of hell!”

Dong dong dong~

“If we can't take him away today, the Sorrow King will make his presence known before the God of Hell!”

As she chanted and the red veil on her face started wriggling, while an eerie wind started congregating around her; it was as if something was forming under there.

While Bai Lingmiao wanted to save Li Huowang, the other Li Huowang with two irises would not let her. He immediately threw out three cards toward Li Huowang.

Dang dang dang!

Suddenly, the cards fell onto the ground and made a sharp metallic noise. Gao Zhijian, wearing his armor, had blocked the attack to prevent it from reaching the dying Li Huowang. At the same time, his eyes that were glaring at the enemy were resolute.

“Oh? Boss Hong Zhong, how did you trick all of them into following you? They are so loyal, but...” The Li Huowang with double irises snapped his fingers, causing the clay statues standing atop the roofs to gather around. “...but you are not as good as me. Why don’t you back down and let me become Hong Zhong instead?”

He had just said that when the clay statues all jumped down, crashing toward them like a meteor shower.

At this moment, they realized that all of the clay statues were under his control. From the very beginning, he had been both the good and bad guy. The issue with Ganyuan Village was just a massive trap set by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Ding ding ding!!

Amidst the chaos, the sharp sound of a bronze bell rang out. As tens of Wandering Gods appeared around them and pounced toward their target, Chun Xiaoman grew taller and taller.

“AAAAH!”

At the same time, Gao Zhijian shouted and started swinging the mace he had gotten from the bandit camp, using it to crush everything in his path. His killing intent was laid completely bare.

However, even though all of them did their best to block the clay statues, there were just far too many of them. Their group kept retreating as they fought, their situation dire.

Meanwhile, Bai Lingmiao's chanting became faster and faster. Her red veil was already halfway drenched, either from sweat or tears. However, as she saw Li Huowang slowly removing the two knives from his heart and his wound slowly healing, Bai Lingmiao persevered while hanging onto a single thread of hope.

"Don't worry! Senior Li can be saved! He won't die!" shouted Bai Lingmiao.

With the help of the Immortal families, Li Huowang soon managed to extract the two knives and mend the wounds on his chest.

Clank!

Just as the bloodied knives fell onto the ground, Bai Lingmiao saw a man appearing in front of her.

It was the Li Huowang with double irises.

He was a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao that Li Huowang had told them about!

The fake Li Huowang looked at the Main Deity covered in a red veil and then turned toward the Second Deity before revealing a smile. "Oh? Not bad. You actually managed to heal him."

Splat!

As he spoke, three sharp daggers stabbed into Li Huowang's torso.

When the fake Li Huowang heard the girl behind him cry out in anguish from underneath her red veil, he laughed maniacally, to the point that he had to hold his stomach in pain.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang, who had originally passed out from the pain, woke up upon suffering the new wounds. Then, he took a deep breath and controlled his body which was gradually losing heat.

"Fire. Water. Mouth."

He once again heard the auditory hallucinations. At the same time, with the sound of the bronze bell and the drum, Li Huowang was having an extremely difficult time listening to everyone.

“Enough! Quiet! Quiet!!”

As Li Huowang used his final breath to shout those words, the sounds really disappeared.

But not all of the sounds disappeared. In fact, he could still hear the voice of the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao quite clearly.

“Boss Hong Zhong~ Hehehe~”

At that moment, the fake Li Huowang appeared in front of the real Li Huowang and stared at him. When Li Huowang looked at him, it was just like looking into a mirror.

The sound of drums suddenly rang out as both the Main Deity and the Second Deity pounced toward the fake Li Huowang. However, they were immediately smacked away by the clay statues around them.

“Come now, Boss Hong Zhong, don’t lie on the ground. It’s very dirty,” said the fake Li Huowang as he grabbed the daggers stabbed into Li Huowang’s torso and used them to pull him up.

Looking at the dying Li Huowang, the fake Li Huowang had a look of relief. “Tsk tsk, you should already have had enough fun. Boss Hong Zhong, should I change you back?”

Li Huowang stared at the face in front of him but did not understand what was being said; the auditory hallucinations started again.

“Where... Where are you coming from?” Li Huowang asked the voice.

Looking at how Li Huowang did not reply to him, the fake Li Huowang sighed. “Alright, since that’s the case, I wish you a good journey, Boss Hong Zhong. I will take over your identity and trick the others. Then, I will become the next Hong Zhong. Hehehe~”

Then, the fake Li Huowang grabbed the daggers and started pulling them upward—he wanted to kill Li Huowang by butchering him, and so he steadily shoved the daggers upward toward Li Huowang’s head.

He did not just want to disembowel Li Huowang, he wanted to cut the latter into three parts!

Looking at how Li Huowang struggled even more, the fake Li Huowang laughed like a maniac.

On the other hand, the pain Li Huowang was suffering from made the voices from the auditory hallucination become even more real. Li Huowang felt like the voice was very close to him.

“Who are you? What do you want!?”

Along with his final shout, Li Huowang felt a strong urge to vomit. Then, in the next instance, his neck became as thick as his head.

Suddenly, Li Huowang moved his arms, which were almost completely devoid of blood, and used them to grab the fake Li Huowang before opening his mouth toward the latter’s face.

In an instant, numerous black tentacles covered in red blood burst forth from Li Huowang’s mouth and covered the fake Li Huowang’s face.

Neither side had expected such a situation.

Even Li Huowang hadn’t expected that the auditory hallucinations hadn’t been fake, but came from the Black Taisui within his body!

In a panic and wanting to retreat, the fake Li Huowang fell backward. But the tentacles of the Black Taisui held his face tight. It was even to the point that the stitches that Bai Lingmiao had made earlier started to break.

The tentacles quickly bore into all of the fake Li Huowang’s various orifices.

Sensing this, the fake Li Huowang quickly released his grip on the daggers and touched his face in a panic. At the same time, he threw out four cards toward the blood-soaked tentacles.

The Black Taisui somehow detected the sharp cards that were flying toward it and used all its strength to retreat into Li Huowang's mouth.

As it retreated, the sound of flesh being torn rang out alongside the cry of the fake Li Huowang; the fake Li Huowang's face was torn off by the Black Taisui's tentacles as it retreated into Li Huowang's mouth. At the same time, it also took with it those eyeballs with double irises.

Chapter 292 - Death

“AAAAAAAAAH!”

The fake Li Huowang knelt on the ground as he held his skinless face with his trembling hands while shouting in pain.

He was not just shouting due to the pain of having his face torn apart, but also from getting tricked by Li Huowang.

Meanwhile, the sound of something slimy moving rang out as the Black Taisui's tentacle grabbed the facial skin and the eyeballs of the fake Li Huowang before retreating into Li Huowang's mouth.

Dum~

With some difficulty, Li Huowang finally swallowed the black and disgusting thing in his mouth.

Staring at the fake Li Huowang who was struggling from pain, the real Li Huowang reached back and pulled out the bronze coin sword.

Shua~

As he swung the sword, Li Huowang fell down. At the same time, the fake Li Huowang also fell onto the ground, several bronze coins embedded in his body.

Before dying, the fake Li Huowang smiled creepily as he said, “You are indeed amazing, Boss Hong Zhong. It's no wonder that you are one of the Three Officials...”

Meanwhile, Li Huowang was also lying on the ground as he stared at the night sky. He felt pain all over his body and became lost in thought.

Damn, is this how I die? I can't believe it...

Looking at Gao Zhijian who was being piled on by the clay statues and the Main Deity doing their best to approach Li Huowang, he rolled to his side.

It would be such a waste to not use the pain right now.

With this thought, he tried to move his hand numerous times, but failed over and over. Finally, at the last attempt, he managed to stab his arm into his own abdomen as he shouted, “Rending flesh, pulling bones!”

Immediately, the sound of fighting stopped and was replaced by pained cries.

At that moment, every being within the Ganyuan Village, regardless of whether they were the evil beings hidden within the clay statues, the humans, and or the dogs, all of them felt the same pain that Li Huowang was experiencing.

The clay statues were the first ones to surrender. Under the pain, all of them ran off.

With this, Li Huowang had single-handedly resolved the crisis.

After confirming that the clay statues had run away, Li Huowang released his hand as his consciousness slowly started to fade.

“Li Huowang!”

Just as he was about to lose consciousness, Li Huowang heard someone calling out to him, causing him to instinctively raise his head a little. “Who’s there? I’m here.”

The last thing he saw before losing consciousness was Bai Lingmiao running toward him.

I can’t die. I can’t die.

Fifth section of the night.

Amidst the darkness, the rooster crowed as Puppy walked out of the room while carrying a bedpan. His pale face and the white cloth covering his body indicated that he too was wounded. The only reason he had to be the one to take out the bedpan was because Gao Zhijian’s wounds were even more serious than his own. The clay statues had almost torn off his arms.

Puppy emptied the contents of the bedpan into the toilet as he yawned and went back inside.

As he passed by the second room, Puppy carefully opened the window and looked inside. When he saw Li Huowang who was still lying on the bed without any signs of life, Puppy shook his head and sighed.

Back in his room, he placed the bedpan underneath the bed.

Gao Zhijian's snores suddenly stopped as he asked, "How... How... How..."

"Nothing has changed. It's still the same. Move a little and let me sleep," replied Puppy as he crawled into the bed and covered himself with the blanket. "Sigh, I don't think Senior Li will be able to come back again. Time to split the money we have. Simpleton, how much money do you think I will get?"

The only response he got was some grumbles.

As he heard the grumbling that came from beside him, Puppy hurriedly said, "I'm not cursing Senior Li, but you also saw it, right? Even his organs were disemboweled! The Shamans might be good, but Bai Lingmiao is not an Immortal. How can she possibly revive the dead?"

Bam!

Puppy was shoved off the bed.

"Ai! You!" Puppy grumbled from the pain. Now, having lost all his sleepiness from being shoved off the bed, he took the bronze basin from the wooden frame and went to the courtyard to get some water.

After washing up, he went to the nearby stalls and sat down. "Boss, give me a bowl of sweet jellied bean curd^[1], and two fried breadsticks!"

"Alright! Wait just a moment."

The piping hot jellied bean curd had some sesame seeds and brown sugar sprinkled at the top. Looking at it, Puppy was already salivating.

He took some of the fried breadsticks and dipped them into the jellied bean curd to soften them up before eating. As he bit into it, the flavor of the oil burst into his mouth and he enjoyed his meal.

“The Liang Kingdom really is amazing. To think that they have breakfast even though they don’t have to harvest the fields in the morning, and they even have so much variety for breakfast!” exclaimed Puppy.

By the time he finished his meal, the number of people walking on the street had started to increase.

Puppy licked his bowl clean, and then took out several bronze coins, and gave it to the stall owner.

“Oh, you gave me so much. Thank you!” said the stall owner.

“Who said those are tips? I want three more portions; send them to the second floor of the inn beside us. Also, make sure that you don’t skimp out on the portion size if I’m not looking at you,” said Puppy before merging into the crowd. He was already very familiar with the layout here.

After walking for a while, he turned around and stopped in front of a shop selling coffins. He spat some saliva and smoothed his hair before walking in.

As the man who was calculating something on the abacus saw Puppy entering his shop, he let out a bitter smile.

“Boss Cao, you are here again? Let’s talk inside,” said the shop owner.

“So? I already gave you a night to think about the price. Do you agree to give me a discount or not?” asked Puppy as he patted one of the coffins.

“Boss Cao, this is excellent quality red pine wood. Stop patting it. If you keep doing that, the paint might fall off. Just tell me, do you want to buy it or not? You have been coming here every day to ask about the price, but you still haven’t bought anything. Are you just here to survey the price so you can open up a shop of your own?" asked the shop owner.

"Hmph!" Puppy feigned disinterest. "Of course, I'm here to buy, that is, if you give it to me half a tael cheaper."

Hearing this, the owner of the shop felt his heart skip a beat and his voice lowered, "Do you mean... your Senior Li will soon...?"

Puppy closed his eyes and nodded.

Seeing this, the shop owner came to a decision. "Sure, I will give you a discount of half a tael! This is the lowest I can go!"

"Ok." Puppy walked around the coffin and told him, "Since you already gave me a discount of half a tael, why don't you give me some free funeral clothes as well?"

After two whole hours passed, the dehydrated shop owner finally agreed to Puppy's price. He didn't want to drag it anymore. If he had to drag this out, then he felt that he might die even sooner than that Senior Li that Boss Cao kept talking about.

After paying the deposit, Puppy asked one more time, "Shop owner, you know how to do the ceremony right?"

The owner of the coffin shop nodded. "Don't worry. I know how to arrange everything, from the cooks, performers, and even people to carry the coffins."

"I want the best of the best for everything! I want the best funeral for my sworn brother!" said Puppy.

"Of course! I promise you that it will be the best you've ever seen! No need to worry!" assured the shop owner.

"Oh, and help me order a few more paper dolls, and this time, make them girls. I'm afraid that Senior Li might die from boredom down there," said Puppy.

"Boss Cao is very loyal!" praised the shop owner.

"Sigh, this is the best I can do. When Senior Li dies, they will all be busy crying. None of them will even bother to think about stuff like this. Last time as well, I was the only one who thought about such things.”

“Last time?”

Chapter 293 - Trouble

Once everything had been settled, Puppy walked out of the shop, satisfied with the prices. “Good! This time should be better than the last time.”

He squinted his eyes and stared at the blazing sun. It was already lunchtime by the time he got back to the inn.

“Oh right, the owner said that I had to measure the body to make the funeral clothes. I better do that now.”

As he talked to himself, Puppy walked back to his room, but didn’t find the injured Gao Zhijian on the bed. His heart immediately fell a little. “Wait, could it be...?”

He hurriedly ran towards Li Huowang’s room and saw that the other three were beside the bed. He took a deep breath, rubbed some turmeric over his eyes, and walked into the room.

“Senior Li! Senior Li! Boohoo~”

Puppy made it look like he was pushing Gao Zhijian away, but when he placed his body on the bed, he was surprised to see Li Huowang had his eyes open.

“You are... not dead.”

At that moment, Puppy’s heart tightened up.

If he’s not dead, then that means that I can’t take back my deposit...

“Puppy, are you injured too?”

Li Huowang’s words reeled Puppy back into reality and caused him to let out a smile. “Aiya, these are just some small wounds. Did you know that when those clay statues were surrounding me, I, the great Cao Cao, didn’t even blink!”

“Don’t listen to him. If it wasn’t for me, then he would’ve been dismembered,” interjected Xiaoman.

Puppy frowned at Chun Xiaoman, but didn't say anything. Not only was he weaker than her, now, she was even a head taller than him.

Li Huowang turned to look at the transformed Chun Xiaoman—she had aged considerably, and was now a beautiful young girl. Even though she had dark hair covering her entire body, her figure could not be contained underneath it all.

But this was not a good thing. This meant that during the previous battle, she had spent a lot of her lifespan summoning the Wandering Gods.

“No need to summon so many Wandering Gods in the future. Think properly. Just four Wandering Gods require an entire year's worth of lifespan.” Li Huowang advised her weakly.

“No worries. I'm still young,” said Chun Xiaoman. She wasn't worried about the lifespan she had lost. In fact, she preferred her current body.

“Cough cough~” Li Huowang spat out some blood before speaking slowly, “Miaomiao, go and take the lifespan pills from the gourd and give them to her.”

Not only could the lifespan pills increase one's lifespan, they could also return Chun Xiaoman's youth.

“I really don't need them!” Chun Xiaoman pressed Bai Lingmiao's shoulder with her one remaining arm before turning to Li Huowang and asking in a concerned voice, “Senior Li, you should worry about yourself first. You... What's happening to you?”

Hearing this question, Li Huowang paused. He stared at the rafters above and let out a bitter smile. “What's wrong with me?”

Li Huowang remembered what the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had said. However, he would never believe that he was this so-called Hong Zhong.

But why did he use the same method to try and trick me? The previous group of six from the Sitting Oblivion Dao did the same as well.

Something isn't right... Unless... everything is fake! Or one of them somehow left clues when they died, allowing the living members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao to decipher what the previous members were doing. The dead and living members are both working together to try and trick me!

“Senior Li, let's not think about other matters for now. Your body is still heavily injured so please rest more.” Bai Lingmiao took a pillow filled with rice husk before placing it under his neck, instantly making much more comfortable.

However, after a moment, Li Huowang shook his head and felt a splitting headache. Enduring the headache, he asked, “No, I'm not sleepy. First, tell me everything that happened after I passed out.”

Given that the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had been killed, and the clay statues chased away, there wasn't much to say except for how they cleaned up after the battle.

“Ai! Why are you talking about all these useless things? You all really don't know what Senior Li is concerned about,” said Puppy as he excitedly squatted by the bed and took out a bamboo basket. “Senior Li, look! We have all of the assets of that fraudster! I didn't even throw his clothes away. All of these are ours!”

As he spoke, Puppy pulled the curtains and allowed Li Huowang to see the items within the basket: the Bagua mirror, and the bloodstained metallic cards.

As he saw those items, Li Huowang felt relieved. He didn't want them for himself, but he still remembered the test that the Surveillance Bureau had given him.

The member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao was dead while he was still alive. With this, he was finally an official member of the Surveillance Bureau.

Now that he was an official member, he would finally have an organization behind him. No longer would he need to guess everything like Dan Yangzi when it came to cultivation or other information.

As long as he didn't expose his status as a Strayed One, no one would attack him too.

"Hehe, and what if you managed to claim those things? As if you know how to use any of them," A haughty voice came from behind Puppy, causing Li Huowang perk up in surprise.

As if powered by an unknown source of strength, the weak Li Huowang suddenly sat up. Immediately, he pushed Puppy away before turning to look toward the illusions in front of him.

The headless Peng Longteng, the disemboweled Jin Shanzhao, the bored Monk, and finally the faceless member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!

The face of the member of Sitting Oblivion Dao was completely skinless, and his eyes were replaced by two black holes. His teeth were displayed out in the open without any lips, forcing him into a perpetual smile.

But suddenly a massive force threw both of them away.

"Why are you here?! Why did you become one of my illusions?! Why?!"

As Li Huowang shouted, his wounds started to bleed once again. Just as he was about to say something else, he stopped and grabbed his own throat.

"Cough cough~ Blegh!" Li Huowang coughed as a single black tentacle came out from his mouth.

Seeing it, everyone was shocked.

"Quick! Pull it out!"

But just when all of them wanted to help and were about to pull it out, Li Huowang blocked them from doing so.

After stopping them, Li Huowang kneeled down and used his trembling hands to carefully push the tentacle back into his mouth.

Under everyone's gaze, Li Huowang coughed as he forcefully swallowed the Black Taisui.

Chapter 294 - Plan

After a few days of rest, Li Huowang finally regained his calmness.

Li Huowang stood by the window as he stared at the floating illusion of the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The faceless member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao was sitting on Peng Longteng's shoulder as he smiled at Li Huowang, feeling amused.

There's no need for me to be troubled. It's just an illusion. It's not the first one and I'm already used to it.

Li Huowang consoled himself.

Based on his behavior, he will keep trying to annoy and trick me. Since I know that he's a liar, I just need to ignore him completely.

"Really? That might not necessarily be the case." The member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao raised his hands and clapped. "It might be a big problem for us to be residing in your consciousness. We might only be four people now, but there might be more than forty the next time around~"

Li Huowang just ignored him and slowly limped back toward the table.

"Hehe, why aren't you talking?" asked the faceless man.

Just as the faceless member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao was about to continue annoying Li Huowang, Monk spoke up, stopping him, "Sigh, stop annoying the Daoist. Can't you see that he already has a lot to think?"

"Oh? And who are you?" asked the faceless man.

"I'm no one, just a monk. What's your name?" replied Monk.

"My name?" The member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao looked at Li Huowang and smiled. "I'm Hong Zhong."

Hearing this, Li Huowang turned around and looked at him. “You are Hong Zhong? I think you want to become one so much that you’ve gone crazy.”

Right at that moment, the door opened and Bai Lingmiao walked inside while carrying some food.

Looking at Li Huowang, who was walking around, she was shocked and immediately placed the food down to assist him. “Senior Li, your wounds are still not healed. You can’t walk right now!”

After carefully assisting him and seating him down at the table, Bai Lingmiao lifted a bowl of oily chicken soup, took a spoon, blew on it, and then fed Li Huowang.

“I’m injured, not disabled,” said Li Huowang as he took the spoon before chugging down the soup. The room became quiet while he ate.

After a while, Li Huowang spoke up, “Miaomiao, to think that the Immortal family would be so useful this time around. They were even able to pull me back from the clutches of death. Looks like bringing you with me this time around was the right thing to do. How many lifespan pills did they take from the gourd?”

Bai Lingmiao hesitated. “Actually... The Immortal families...”

However, before she could finish, a long black fingernail tapped Bai Lingmiao’s shoulder.

Li Huowang stopped eating; only after seeing that it was the Second Deity did he continue his meal. “Is something wrong?”

As far as Li Huowang was concerned, it was very rare for the Second Deity to make an appearance in daylight. In fact, this was the first time it did so.

Under his gaze, the Second Deity placed a red veil to cover both her and Bai Lingmiao’s heads.

Feeling puzzled, Li Huowang stared at them and tried his best to listen to what they were whispering about.

However, he couldn't hear anything except for some minute sounds.

What are they doing? They must be quite literally stuck together at this point. Is she hiding something from me?

Just as Li Huowang's was wondering about the situation, Bai Lingmiao pulled down the red veil. At this point, the Second Deity had disappeared, leaving behind only her.

"Tell the Second Deity that it was a good magic show," said Li Huowang as he picked up his chopsticks and continued eating the remainder of his meal.

Seeing him like this, Bai Lingmiao revealed a forced smile.

"Are you alright? What did she say?" asked Li Huowang while eating.

"Nothing."

"If it's nothing, then let's eat first. Don't just stand there," said Li Huowang. He knew that forcing her to answer him wouldn't work. The best course of action for him would be to ask Chun Xiaoman later on. After all, she was Bai Lingmiao's close friend.

Just as Li Huowang was lost in his thoughts, Bai Lingmiao suddenly gasped and pointed at his nose. "Senior Li, your nose ..."

Li Huowang touched his nose, only to feel a slimy tentacle coming out from one of his nostrils. However, he did not panic and simply pushed it back inside his nose.

"Senior Li, I've wanted to say this for a while, but the thing you ate was not right! Why don't we let it go?" pleaded Bai Lingmiao.

By this point, any sane human could see that there was a serious problem with Li Huowang's body.

However, Li Huowang was adamant in his refusal. "No."

When she heard his refusal, Bai Lingmiao felt quite sad.

Seeing her like this, Li Huowang sighed. "These are just some minor issues. We can fix them."

Li Huowang naturally knew that there was something different about the Black Taisui in his body. Something unexpected had happened and things might take a turn for the worst.

Even so, he couldn't stop eating it. Even if the side effects were big, he had to continue eating the Black Taisui's flesh so that he could suppress his hallucinations.

Compared to that, dealing with the Black Taisui in his stomach was nothing.

Li Huowang patted Bai Lingmiao's soft hands and said, "Don't worry. Everything will be fine. Eat."

Bai Lingmiao wanted to say something but the words were stuck in her mouth. She just frowned and started eating her meal.

After their meal, Li Huowang once again lay down on the bed. According to Bai Lingmiao, he needed to rest a lot.

Soon, the room turned silent, to the point that one could even hear a pin drop. However, Li Huowang couldn't rest while the issue hadn't yet been resolved.

"Let's talk," Li Huowang said while looking toward the rafters.

"Hong Zhong, I think he's talking to you," said Monk, his body halfway inside a wall.

Hong Zhong shook his bloodied head. "No, he's talking to the Black Taisui in his stomach. This is fucking interesting, hehe."

Meanwhile, Li Huowang ignored the two illusions and just waited for a reply.

Even though he couldn't stop eating the Black Taisui, he still needed to resolve this issue. At the very least he must slow it down.

Based on how it had saved Li Huowang the last time around, he had a feeling that he might be able to communicate with it.

But, it didn't look like it wanted to appear; the Black Taisui would appear whenever he didn't want it to appear, but when he needed it, it would not appear.

After a while, Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and put a finger into his ear. Then, he pulled out an entire wad of cotton from inside his ears.

The moment he did, his ears were bombarded by a slew of loud noises.

Chapter 295 - Tuoba

After pulling out the wad of cotton from his ear, a buzzing sound completely drowned his hearing. Immediately, the sound of people talking in the room adjacent to him, the sounds coming from the streets, and even the sound of his heartbeat were magnified.

Li Huowang endured the pain and closed his eyes as he tried to locate where the voice had been coming from. After some time, he finally managed to pick out the broken voice of the Black Taisui amidst all the chaos.

“I’m talking to you! Can you hear me?!” Li Huowang shouted loudly.

The Black Taisui answered, but it was not speaking coherently; it was piecing together words that meant nothing. “Mouth. Sky. Wu.”

“What are you talking about?! Do you understand me? If I die, you die too! Let’s talk!” shouted Li Huowang once more.

Since the Black Taisui could crawl out from his nose or mouth at any time, Li Huowang knew that he couldn’t ignore it. He had to deal with it right now.

Li Huowang wanted to negotiate with it. He felt that regardless of what its plans were, they could surely come to agreeable terms.

But no matter what Li Huowang did, it did not react as he had thought. It was still using simple words to answer.

As he continued listening to the fragmented words, Li Huowang had a feeling that he was talking to a child who had just learned how to talk.

“Wait... a child?! A CHILD?!” Li Huowang suddenly remembered something. He immediately crawled out from the bed and called for the servant to bring him a brush along with some ink, and paper. Then, Li Huowang ignored the chaotic sounds around him while writing down what the Black Taisui was talking about.

“Mouth. Wood. Water. Fire. Field. Art.”

He wrote down the characters one by one and looked at their arrangements. They were very familiar to him. He then remembered something.

“No wonder the arrangements of the characters sounded so familiar! It’s learning what I taught Lu Xiucui!”

Li Huowang finally understood why the Black Taisui was speaking in such a fragmented manner; it only knew these words!

The Black Taisui had only learned these words coincidentally while Li Huowang was teaching Lu Xiucui. It didn’t even know the meanings of the words and was only repeating it.

“It can’t even speak right now. How should I communicate with it?” Li Huowang wondered aloud as he stuffed the wad of cotton back into his ears and started wandering around his room. He thought of a few different solutions, but in the end, he rejected all of them.

In order to suppress his hallucinations, Li Huowang had no choice but to keep the Black Taisui inside his stomach. Due to this, he needed another way to get rid of this trouble.

After thinking for a while, Li Huowang finally decided on the crudest method—teaching the Black Taisui words.

After it learned how to talk, Li Huowang would then be able to converse with it. The battle with the Sitting Oblivion Dao this time around had shown Li Huowang just how much of an asset it could be. As long as he could communicate with it, he might even be able to use it as a secret weapon.

Li Huowang didn’t know how long it would take to teach a bunch of tentacles, but he knew that it would take a long time. Thus, this method could be considered quite crude.

“Fine, if I have to teach it, then so be it,” said Li Huowang as he sat down, took out another piece of paper, and started to write. Since it would take a long time to teach the Black Taisui how to speak, Li Huowang had decided to take it slow.

Compared to this, he had a much more urgent matter to attend to—to get his reward from the man with the doll head. This was the first mission he had completed after entering the Surveillance Bureau.

After his wounds had healed halfway, Li Huowang told everyone to prepare for travel. No one could stop him this time.

Bai Lingmiao argued with him and finally managed to persuade him to buy a carriage so that he could lie down in it during their trip.

They traveled for a long time before Li Huowang and group once again reached the prosperous Yinling City. By this time, the wounds on Li Huowang's torso had also finished healing. However, his missing eye and the ribs hadn't yet grown back.

Li Huowang had noticed that compared to his fingernails, skin, and flesh, it took quite a bit longer for him to regrow his bones and eyes.

"Senior Li, according to the map, we can just take the side path. There's no need for us to enter the city. Troupe leader Lu's group is likely to be performing along the way and we might be able to catch up to them," suggested Puppy suggested as they waited at the gates of Yinling City.

"No need. We will enter the city. Go and get some rooms at the same inn as last time," said Li Huowang. He would never tell Puppy that he was actually here to collect the rewards.

Their mission this time had been quite arduous, and so Li Huowang was looking forward to it.

Li Huowang had thought that he might have to stay for a few more nights if the man hadn't come yet, but it was clear that they had many informants within Yinling City.

During the second section of the night, just as Li Huowang was hobbling into the stable, the man was already there, waiting for him. He was holding a yellow sack while sitting on a pile of horse feed.

Without waiting for Li Huowang to speak, the man jumped down and approached him, his tone much friendlier than usual. “Hoho, looks like you are indeed quite strong. Good job on the mission in Ganyuan Village. We hadn’t expected you to be able to keep casualties to zero.”

Hearing his friendly tone, Li Huowang felt his heart relax a little. This meant that he had passed the test and was finally officially a part of the Surveillance Bureau.

“No, no. It was just luck,” said Li Huowang humbly.

“Luck is also part of your skill. No need to be humble. Also, are you hurt? The Surveillance Bureau can treat you no matter the injury,” said the man with the doll head.

In response, Li Huowang shook his head.

Then, the man then grabbed the doll head and took it off.

Beneath the doll head, Li Huowang found a man with a friendly face. He looked well off, plump, and had eyes the size of beans. It was an amicable looking face.

The man smiled and shook Li Huowang’s hands. “Sorry about that. Without testing your powers and background, I really wouldn’t dare bring you into the Surveillance Bureau.”

Then, he fished out five lifespan pills covered in yellow talismans from his sleeves and handed them to Li Huowang. “Here, you gave me these the last time around, and so I’m returning them back to you.”

Just as Li Huowang was about to refuse, the man stopped him.

“Take them first and listen to me,” said the man as he pushed the pills into Li Huowang’s hands and began to explain in a calm manner, “You should know that I would have to take responsibility for you to join the Surveillance Bureau. If anything had happened, then I too would have been held responsible. Those lifespan pills were just collateral for that. But now, since you want to join the Surveillance Bureau for real, there’s no need for it.”

The man revealed a smile, providing an offer that no one could reject.

“My surname is Tuoba, and my given name is Danqing. Junior Er Jiu, if you don’t mind, then you can just call me brother Tuoba,” said the man.

This was the first time someone told Li Huowang their surname with good intentions. He knew what it meant and immediately bowed politely. “Thank you brother Tuoba.”

“Haha, then I will take it that you’ve joined the Surveillance Bureau. From now on, we are one family. I wish brother Er Jiu the best of luck!” said Tuoba.

Looking at the lifespan pills in his hand, Li Huowang felt a warmth in his heart. While he didn’t care all that much about the pills, he was touched by Tuoba’s attitude.

After coming out from the Zephyr Temple, except for the now deceased Abbess Jingxin, everyone else he had seen had been trying to kill him or fight him. Not once did the onslaught of enemies stop.

At this point, Li Huowang was no longer a naive boy. He knew that Tuoba had most likely put an act to be courteous; however, he had never been treated this kindly before in this world, not even for the sake of trickery.

Then, Tuoba Danqing extended his hands and brought Li Huowang out of the stable. “Come now, this is not the place to talk. Let’s go somewhere more comfortable.”

Chapter 296 - Treasure

After some time, Li Huowang was sitting on the stool while running his hands across the golden sandalwood table in front of him, feeling the soft animal skin beneath his feet. As he surveyed the luxurious interior of the room, he knew that having a meal at this place was bound to be quite expensive. He'd seen this restaurant next to the Exquisite Pagoda before. Judging based on where it was located, it must be pretty well-known in all of Yinling City.

Creak~

The door opened, and a beautifully dressed woman with a light fragrance entered the room and placed various delicious dishes on the round table.

As Li Huowang looked at the dishes, he realized that he couldn't even discern the ingredients used to make some of the dishes on this table, let alone having eaten them before.

"Hehehe~ Come, come, Brother Er, let's toast," said Tuoba Danqing as he lifted the silver pot, about to pour a cup of wine in front of Li Huowang.

Li Huowang felt a little uneasy. "Brother Tuoba, I'm not good with drinks. Please forgive me."

After saying that, Li Huowang picked up the teapot beside him and poured some tea for himself. "I'll use the tea instead of wine. I raise this toast to Brother Tuoba, wishing you all the best!"

Tuoba Danqing grinned as he raised his wine glass and clinked it against Li Huowang's teacup. "Alright~ Here's to Brother Er's smooth journey to the Immortals' residence!"

Li Huowang placed the teacup under his mask and took a small sip.

Meanwhile, Tuoba Danqing rolled up his sleeves, lifted his chopsticks, and started jabbing them into the dish placed before him, emitting white steam. "Come, come, let's eat! Try this dish! It's called 'Myriad of Colors', and is a specialty of Yinling City. You won't find it anywhere else."

With their chopsticks raised and cups clinking, the atmosphere in the room soon became much more relaxed. Mealtime conversations had a distinctly different ambiance compared to discussions that happened elsewhere.

Tuoba Danqing's plump face turned rosy as he smacked his lips a few times while savoring the food. Then, he leaned on the round table with his elbows, and slurred, "Brother Er, from now on, we're like family. If there's anything you don't understand about the Bureau, feel free to ask me. Also, remember this: You're part of the Surveillance Bureau now. If you ever encounter any issues in official matters, then you can always invoke the name of the Surveillance Bureau. As long as it's not a major issue, most government offices will show some leeway."

"Thanks a lot, Brother Tuoba. In that case, I've indeed encountered some difficulties," said Li Huowang as he extended his hand, bringing out the Bagua mirror he had prepared in advance. "This item belonged to a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. It's incredibly powerful, but I can't find the method to activate it. Brother Tuoba, please take a look."

"An item that was originally owned by someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Haha, they don't have anything of their own. It's obviously something they swindled. Let me take a look," said Tuoba Danqing as he took it and carefully examined it. However, even as he started examining it with his hands, his mouth never stopped talking. "Brother Er, how did it go that day? Tell me, how did you deal with that member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao?"

Naturally, there was nothing to hide, and after glossing over some of the details about the Black Taisui, Li Huowang told Tuoba Danqing most of what had happened that night.

“Ha, those damned scammers from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, always claiming that others belong to their group. This kind of scam is as old as they come,” Tuoba Danqing sneered with a hint of disdain on his face. “However, even with such a simple scam, there will always be a few naive individuals who fall for their tricks. The truth is that I’ve already seen through all their tricks. I’ll kill as many of those bastards from Sitting Oblivion Dao as they come. All that talk about the Three Officials or the Four Joys, and the dices or the flowers, it’s all useless nonsense!”

By this point, it was obvious Tuoba Danqing was starting to brag. Naturally, Li Huowang wouldn’t expose him and just went along with it.

There was nothing wrong with a bit of boasting over drinks. In fact, it actually made Li Huowang feel that Tuoba Danqing was also a human being.

“This looks like a Daoist artifact. But can you see? The positions of the symbols on this Bagua mirror are not right. The Kun is above, and the Qian is below. In Daoism, this is the opposite of the reversal of heaven and earth. As far as I know, there are only three families in the Liang Kingdom that practice something like this,” said Tuoba Danqing as he handed the mirror back to Li Huowang. “Alright, take it back for now. I’ll look into it and get back to you. If there’s a matching cultivation method, then I’ll send you a letter. Regardless, this thing should be quite valuable. I estimate it to be worth at least three to five decades of lifespan. Brother Er, you are very lucky to have this.”

If one looked beyond the surface, this also implied that within the Surveillance Bureau, the currency for transactions was not gold or silver, but rather lifespan.

“Thanks again, Brother Tuoba,” thanked Li Huowang as he took back the mirror.

“You don’t have to thank me for such small matters. We are all on the same side. Let’s drink!” Tuoba Danqing lifted his wine glass and took a gulp, letting out a satisfied burp. Then, he picked up his chopsticks to start eating.

After a while, Tuoba Danqing suddenly seemed to have thought of something. He placed his chopsticks on the edge of his dish and reached his hand into the cloth bag under the table. After digging around for a while, he pulled out over a dozen dark pills.

“Here, I almost forgot. This is your reward, thirteen years of lifespan. Take them, and use them well. They are sealed with elixir techniques, and are slightly different from your usual methods,” said Tuoba Danqing as he handed the pills over to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took out the gourd from his waist. With a few movements of the small mouth of the gourd, its entire front half cracked open, revealing a sharp opening. Then, the gourd swallowed the lifespan pills one by one.

Upon seeing Li Huowang’s gourd, Tuoba Danqing’s slightly intoxicated expression revealed a hint of satisfaction as he said, “Brother Er, that won’t work. That thing is not even as strong as my tattered cloth bag. Though mine is worn out, it can hold more than yours. In the future, find some time to go to the capital and buy some useful goods.”

“Oh? The Surveillance Bureau has a dedicated place for trade?” Li Huowang was taken aback, realizing the potential significance of this fact for both future intelligence-gathering and strengthening of his abilities.

“Wouldn’t it be weird if they don’t have one?” asked Tuoba Danqing.

Hearing this, Li Huowang agreed before quickly pouring himself a small amount of wine, raising his cup to toast Tuoba Danqing.

Li Huowang's sharp senses made it easy for him to get tipsy, but sometimes, getting a bit drunk was just what he needed.

As the night went on, the drinks kept flowing. Slowly, their camaraderie became so strong that it almost reached the point of them performing traditional rituals like burning yellow paper and sacrificing a chicken to become sworn brothers.

As he listened to Tuoba Danqing's voice, Li Huowang was reminded of his dormitory mates; it was as if he had returned to the time when he was in high school before his illness began. Back then, he wasn't mentally ill, and there was no transmigration. Yang Na was real, and his future was bright.

Ah... how great would it be to once again go back to that time...

But now, I've already joined the Surveillance Bureau. The precarious days are behind me, and from now on, each day will surely be better than the last. Some day, I'll live a life even better than the one before!

In a daze, Tuoba Danqing embraced Li Huowang's shoulders, leaned against the window sill, and gazed at the quiet Yinling City outside. His voice carried a hint of emotion as he said, "Dear brother~! Look at how beautiful Yinling City is. Honestly, I haven't been here much."

"Brother Tuoba, I apologize! I'll punish myself with three cups! I'm sorry for making Brother Tuoba run around!" said Li Huowang. He was so drunk that his tongue was tied, and at times, he didn't even know what he was saying.

"What are you apologizing for? What nonsense are you talking about? I just happened to pass by. It's not specifically for you, my friend. Can you guess what I was doing before?" said Tuoba Danqing.

"How could I guess? Brother Tuoba...", Li Huowang hiccuped before continuing, "...look, the sun is almost up. How about we call it a night?"

Hearing that Li Huowang didn't pick up on his cue, Tuoba Danqing got a bit annoyed. "Come here, let me show you a real treasure! It'll broaden your horizons, my friend!"

Then, he pulled Li Huowang back to the table, plopped down on the ground, and rummaged through his tattered yellow cloth bag. Soon, he forcefully pulled out a man's head, along with a mass of bloody and mushy internal organs.

"Hmm?" Li Huowang looked at it in bewilderment. "Brother Tuoba, what is this?"

"Hehe, you don't know, huh? This is the Strayed One we specially obtained from the depths of Qing Qiu with Lord Jixiang," said Tuoba Danqing.

As soon as these words came out, the illusion of Hong Zhong burst into laughter, doubling over as he struggled to catch his breath.

Chapter 297 - Strayed One

“Hahaha!” Hong Zhong’s laughter echoed within Li Huowang’s head incessantly. “Strayed One! Li Huowang, hahaha!”

Meanwhile, Li Huowang held the cup in his hand and just sat there, dumbfounded. He looked at the half-corpse in Tuoba Danqing’s hands, at half the head of the half-dead person and the internal organs hanging from the head. After a long pause, his eyes gradually widened, and shock appeared on his face, “So... this is a... Strayed One..”

At that moment, his clenched fist under the table tightened, but his face showed no emotions.

The drunken Tuoba Danqing was quite satisfied with Li Huowang’s surprise, and replied with pride, “How’s it? You haven’t seen it before right? Truthfully speaking, it’s also my first time seeing a living Strayed One!”

Li Huowang reached out a trembling finger to touch that Strayed One’s face. It was a square-faced middle-aged man with a beard. He seemed to be around forty years old. Just based on appearance, he had an average-looking face. However, his five organs were extremely distorted. The sorrow and despair in the eyes was something that was frozen in death.

Li Huowang understood his agony very well. He knew that only those that died under extremely painful situations would sport such an expression. This person, who had an identity extremely similar to his own, had suffered a pitiful death.

“Ah, touching him once is good enough. In fact, normally you wouldn’t even be qualified to see such a treasure. Even letting you have a glance of him is already making a huge exception. After all, this is a coveted treasure that is about to enter the treasury,” said Tuoba Danqing.

Hearing this, Li Huowang numbly raised his arm and poured the contents of his wine-cup into his mouth. His expression and body gradually became relaxed as he asked, “Brother Tuoba, why... does this Strayed One only have a brain and his organs left?”

This question seemed to strike something within Tuoba Danqing’s heart, and he slammed the table in frustration. “Ah! We wanted to keep him alive, since Strayed Ones are much more useful alive than dead. But guess what? When Lord Jixiang and I got close to the border, we were unexpectedly intercepted! We tried our best, but only managed to seize this much. It’s quite a pity.”

Li Huowang nodded. The strong smell of alcohol covered the astonishment on his face. “Ah, Brother Tuoba, it’s a pity indeed. If only this Strayed One was still alive. I heard that the bewilderment within the Strayed Ones’ brains is very useful.”

Tuoba Danqing continued, “That’s not all! The physical body of a Strayed One is also a treasure! Brother Er, the Strayed One’s flesh, organs, and bones are all precious materials! Let me tell you something: Lord Jixiang has a powerful artifact made from the Strayed One’s wealth attraction. It can immerse the consciousness of others into bewilderment when they least expect it. Apparently, he did not sell it even when someone offered two hundred years of lifespan!”

“Wealth attraction?” questioned Li Huowang.

“Wealth attraction is the tongue, and the tongue is the wealth attraction. Brother Er, you don’t even know such euphemisms. You still have a lot left to learn,” said Tuoba Danqing.

“Regarding Strayed Ones, I’ve only ever heard about them, and never seen one. I didn’t expect there to be so many intricacies to the whole thing. Brother Tuoba, you’ve truly broadened my horizons,” said Li Huowang as he raised his wine-cup to toast Tuoba Danqing.

“Broadened your horizons, right? Hehe, follow me more in future, and there’ll be even many more eye-opening things to see. Come, drink some more!” said Tuoba Danqing as he casually stuffed the Strayed One back into his cloth bag before continuing to drink.

They drank from the second section of the night all the way until dawn before Tuoba Danqing finally fell asleep and they called it a night.

Li Huowang supported the mumbling Tuoba Danqing to the guest room and onto his bed. Then, he gently shifted the yellow cloth bag containing the Strayed One and placed it beside the man’s pillow.

Creak~

As Li Huowang closed the door and left, Tuoba Danqing, who had been snoring with his mouth open, suddenly opened his eyes. At this point, there was no trace of sleepiness in his eyes. He propped up his head and first looked toward the door, then reached for the yellow bag beside his pillow. He had a look of admiration on his face.

Not bad. This person saw the Strayed One, but did not reveal even a single trace of greed. This person that Hong Da brought this time around is much more trustworthy than the one from before.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang swayed down the large street, reeking of alcohol. Apart from the two swords on his back, he was also carrying a large bag of items.

Basking in the early morning sun, Li Huowang’s expression was neither happy nor sad as he silently walked on.

When the other people on the road smelled the pungent odor of alcohol and saw his strange attire, they instinctively covered their noses and avoided him.

“Where did this drunkard come from? Drinking so early in the morning.”

“Exactly! The younger generation nowadays is more and more unbecoming.”

As he listened to these voices, Li Huowang soon arrived at his own inn. When he pushed open the door, Bai Lingmiao, who had been anxiously pacing around, immediately came forward.

“Senior Li, why did you leave without saying a word? You made me so nervous! Did you drink?” asked Bai Lingmiao.

On the other hand, Li Huowang just opened the items in his hand, revealing food boxes woven with bamboo. “I went out for dinner with someone. Let them all come out and taste some of this delicious food.”

After saying that, he lay down on the bed and took a deep breath.

Seeing Li Huowang’s low spirits, Bai Lingmiao couldn’t care less about eating. She sat on the bedside and looked at his back as she asked, “Senior Li, what happened to you?”

Li Huowang once again sighed deeply. “Nothing much. It was just that some things were not as I had expected. Miaomiao, I once again realized that nothing is reliable in this damned place. We can only rely on ourselves for everything.”

As he spoke, he recalled that twisted face once again.

Aside from the Abbess’s son, this was Li Huowang’s third time encountering a Strayed One. And this one was forcibly torn into two halves due to being contested by different parties.

As he remembered that face, Li Huowang understood that the Surveillance Bureau, a powerful organization, was not his backing, and it never could be. On the contrary, they might become his enemies at any time. It was wishful thinking to rely entirely on the Surveillance Bureau to find his footing in this dangerous world. He realized that these dangerous people could only be used from a distance and should never be approached with good intentions. As long as he tore off his mask, a friend who was drinking with him just a moment ago might bind him up to sell him.

He was a Strayed One, and that was an original sin. As long as he carried this identity, he would be a piece of meat which everyone would want to take a bite out of.

Bai Lingmiao seemed to sense Li Huowang's gloomy mood as she knelt down beside him. She reached out her hand and gently patted his back to make him feel more comfortable. "Senior Li, don't worry. No matter what, you still have us."

Chapter 298 - Going Home

While the two of them were engaged in conversation, a ruckus emerged from the neighboring table.

Hearing a loud thump, Li Huowang lifted his head and peered toward the source of the sound, only to see Puppy sneakily making his way outside while holding a food box.

“Senior Li, is the food you brought back for us to eat?” Puppy asked cautiously.

Li Huowang laid back down with a wry smile on his face. “Yeah, after all, it is only you guys here.”

In this world, his group of fellow disciples were the only ones that he could trust, even if they might not be particularly helpful.

After a moment, Li Huowang propped himself up from the bed. As soon as he sat up, the exhaustion on his face immediately vanished.

“Puppy, put down the food box, and call Gao Zhijian and Chun Xiaoman over. Let’s all eat together. Once we’re done eating, we’ll leave,” said Li Huowang.

“Where are we going?” asked Puppy.

“We are heading home!”

A few days later, Li Huowang, Puppy, Gao Zhijian, Bai Lingmiao and Chun Xiaoman set off in a carriage.

Bai Lingmiao drew down the curtain and warmly spoke to the carriage driver, “Sir, thank you for allowing us to catch a ride. If we were to travel on foot, then it would have taken us a few days to get there.”

Hearing this, the old carriage driver let out a smile, revealing his few remaining teeth. “No problem, it’s conveniently on the way. But, young lady, your home is quite remote. If you hadn’t told me about it, then I wouldn’t have known that there was a village at the foot of that mountain.”

Hearing this, Puppy immediately expressed his discontent. “Remote? We agreed on a fixed payment before! What’s this? Are you trying to hike up the price?”

Chun Xiaoman gave Puppy a disapproving glance and scolded, “Shut up! Why are you so full of nonsense?! No one will mistake you for a mute even if you don’t speak!”

On the side, Gao Zhijian huddled his limbs, stammering as he tried to intervene.

Sitting in the back, Li Huowang silently watched the lively show inside the carriage. Things were definitely way more relaxed than they were before.

Ever since he transmigrated, Li Huowang had rarely seen such a vibrant scene.

At that moment, Bai Lingmiao’s soft arms wrapped around Li Huowang’s hand. With a smile, she asked, “Senior Li, what’s on your mind right now?”

Knowing that she was about to reach home, Bai Lingmiao was radiating joy from head to toe.

“I’m wondering what Cowheart Mountain is like. I don’t know if we’ll be able to get used to staying there. You also know that it’s hard for me to get along with others,” said Li Huowang as he rolled up the bamboo curtain and gazed at the lush greenery outside. The area was covered with thick, dense forests.

“You’ll get used to it for sure! Everyone in our village is awesome, just like my grandpa. He grows melons. If someone is passing by the village and gets thirsty, they can even have the melons for free. You’re also nice, and so you’ll definitely get along with him. And my parents too! If anyone in the village is faced with any trouble, both of them would always pitch in, offering money and effort to help. Despite living in the village for such a long time, they've never had any disagreements with anyone! Oh, and my younger brother and his buddies. Don't worry, they won't dare to be rowdy. If they give you a hard time, then just let me know and I'll straighten them out!" said Bai Lingmiao as she eagerly showed off her fair-skinned fists, waving them in the air as if she was ready for action.

Seeing her adorable behavior, Li Huowang smiled to himself. It seemed like she had a completely different personality in front of him compared to what she showed her family.

Li Huowang wrapped his arm around her shoulders and shook his head. "I'm not worried. If they could raise you so well, then they must be doing something right. By the way, Miaomiao, I remember that you used to wear a gold bracelet. Your family must be quite well-off, right?"

Hearing this, Bai Lingmiao smiled modestly and replied, "We are not exactly wealthy; we are just a bit better off than the average folks."

Li Huowang chuckled. If the girl's family had money, and he continued sticking around, then he might just unintentionally become the burdensome son-in-law.

Guess I will be the burdensome son-in-law then. Regardless of how the place turns out to be, after drifting around aimlessly for so long, it's finally a chance to settle down.

Then, all of a sudden, Bai Lingmiao got excited as she eagerly pointed out of the carriage window. "Look, everyone! That's Cowheart Mountain!"

Li Huowang squinted, focusing on the distant mountain covered in green.

It's really massive, but how on earth does it resemble a cow's heart?

Brushing aside this silly question, Li Huowang's thoughts drifted elsewhere as he began to worry about the Lu Family Troupe.

They left quite a bit before us. They should have already reached the foot of Cowheart Mountain. Let's just hope that nothing unexpected has happened to them.

With this lingering concern in mind, Li Huowang gradually made his way toward the foot of Cowheart Mountain.

But his worries were short-lived. All of Li Huowang's worries dissipated in an instant when he saw Yang Xiaohai, barefoot and accompanied by a round-faced woman, standing in the rice paddies as they gathered loaches.

"Senior Li is back!! Senior Li is back!"

Accompanied by Yang Xiaohai's enthusiastic yell, the rest of the group started appearing from the stacked layers of tiled houses.

After nearly half a month of not seeing each other, this reunion filled Lu Zhuangyuan with excitement as he enthusiastically grabbed Li Huowang's hands. "Daoist! You're finally back! We've been anxiously waiting for you."

"Troupe leader Lu, the journey here must have been quite tough. Did everything go smoothly?" asked Li Huowang.

"No, no, it wasn't tough at all! The number of people is the same as before! No one went missing!" said Lu Zhuangyuan before subsequently showing concern for Li Huowang's lone eye; it was as though they were very close to each other.

"Let's go, don't just stand here. We'll discuss more inside," said Li Huowang.

Just as Li Huowang was about to step in, Lu Zhuangyuan stopped him. Then, he sneaked a glance at Bai Lingmiao as a trace of unease appeared on his face.

"Uh, Daoist... There's no need to head in so quickly. First, I have to speak with you privately," said Lu Zhuangyuan.

Li Huowang clearly didn't quite understand what he meant. "Just say whatever you need to. Why does it have to be in private?"

Li Huowang couldn't fathom a reason for him and Lu Zhuangyuan to have a private conversation.

"Oh... Daoist, you see... it's better to discuss some matters privately," said Lu Zhuangyuan as he came closer to Li Huowang while making subtle facial expressions in the direction of Bai Lingmiao.

Seeing this, Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat as he glanced at Bai Lingmiao who was standing beside him.

If Troupe Leader Lu is insisting on discussing things privately with me, could it be because there's a major problem with Miaomiao's hometown?

Li Huowang finally understood what Troupe Leader Lu was trying to convey, but unfortunately, Bai Lingmiao had also caught on to it.

"Troupe Leader Lu... What happened to my hometown?" asked Bai Lingmiao.

As she saw Troupe Leader Lu shiftily avoiding her gaze, tears welled up in Bai Lingmiao's eyes.

"Dad! Mom!" Tears streamed down Bai Lingmiao's face as she brushed past the others and ran along the winding path toward the village.

Sensing her unease, Li Huowang hurriedly followed suit.

"Dad! Mom! Grandpa!! Your daughter is back! Where are you guys?" shouted Bai Lingmiao, her cries mixed with sobs echoing continuously throughout the village. She opened every door in the village, hoping to find her family, but only disappointment awaited behind each one.

Chapter 299 - Cowheart Village

“Dad! Mom! Where are you guys?!” Tears streamed down Bai Lingmiao’s face as she continued to search throughout the entire Cowheart Village.

Behind her was Li Huowang, who was also searching with her; however, he could see that they were the only ones left in the entire village.

At this point, Lu Zhuangyuan approached carefully with a smile.

“What’s going on?” Li Huowang furrowed his brows as he questioned Lu Zhuangyuan.

In response, the latter wore an innocent look and replied, “Daoist, how would I know? I just arrived here and there was nobody in the entire village. At first, I was surprised and thought that I had gotten the location wrong, so I went searching several miles around here. But after covering the entire Cowheart Mountain, this was the only this place left.”

Li Huowang remained silent. After a while, he took a deep breath and walked toward Bai Lingmiao in the distance. Currently, she was constantly searching the entire village tirelessly without finding anything.

As Li Huowang saw her sweating profusely, and turning back toward the first house to restart her search, he rushed over and grabbed her shoulders, and then pulled her into his embrace.

At this point, Bai Lingmiao finally couldn’t hold it in anymore. She leaned on his shoulder and burst into tears, “Senior Li, my family is gone!”

Such a long period of anticipation had culminated into nothing. Li Huowang knew what kind of feeling it was, and he could empathize with her. “Don’t cry; maybe they just left temporarily. They may yet not have faced anything unexpected. Think positively.”

Standing beside her, Lu Zhuangyuan also tried to console her as he spoke, “Miss Bai, the Daoist is right. Perhaps they were seeking safety and left just like us. When they return from their refuge, you will be able to meet them again.”

The rest of them also saw the situation and came up to console her.

However, their words did not ease Bai Lingmiao much. She was no fool. The disappearance of all the people of an entire village wasn’t a trivial matter.

Bai Lingmiao’s crying completely overwhelmed the joy of reunion, and cast a shadow upon the entire group. Not a single person spoke all throughout dinner.

After dinner, Li Huowang wandered around the entire village with the moonlight guiding him. He was not looking for people, but searching for clues.

The entire village couldn’t just have vanished without a trace; they must have encountered some troublesome situation. Even if they had been devoured by evil spirits or deceived by the Sitting Oblivion Dao, there must be some traces left behind.

“Daoist, I previously told Ms. Bai that her family was hiding from a crisis. But that was just to make her feel better. In my opinion, they’re probably not hiding from a crisis. Who would hide from disasters without even locking their doors? When we first entered the village, the pigs in the backyard were starving and didn’t even look like pigs anymore.” Lu Zhuangyuan followed Li Huowang as he babbled on.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang squatted down to examine the patterns on the stone path. "When you guys first came here, was this village in a mess?"

"No, not at all. The clothes were still hanging outside. Cows, dogs, everything seemed fine. Just that the people were missing. I even specifically checked through the cabinets in each household. The clothes weren't missing. It's clear that they didn't just leave for a long trip," explained Lu Zhuangyuan.

Li Huowang gazed through every inch to look for details and any potential dangers. When he pushed open a door and still found no clues, he removed the cotton from his ears before carefully listening to his surroundings. He roamed around the village, and even invited a Wandering God to help search underground.

But this time was different. There were no hostile gazes, evil spirits, or anything.

When Li Huowang returned to the Bai Family's courtyard, he saw Luo Juanhua and Chun Xiaoman standing in the bright hall, one on each side as they consoled Bai Lingmiao. The others were also standing around, discussing in groups of twos or threes. When they saw Li Huowang return, they all looked over.

"Go and rest first; let's discuss tomorrow," said Li Huowang.

After Li Huowang spoke, the rest did not stay around, and left with their groups.

Given that she had been crying, Bai Lingmiao's pink eyes had become somewhat red. They were filled with deep sorrow as she turned to look toward Li Huowang and sniffled.

"It's getting late. Where's your room? Go and take a bath first," said Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Bai Lingmiao pursed her lips and stood up before walking toward the bathroom.

After some time, the two of them silently lay down in a bedroom filled with a faint fragrance.

The layout of the room and the white mosquito net hinted that this was Bai Lingmiao's previous bedroom.

At this moment, Bai Lingmiao was curled up on the bed, her shoulders shuddering constantly as she tried not to bawl. Then, in the next moment, she felt herself being carried over before leaning against a strong chest.

"Don't cry. When we encounter trouble, we solve it. We are now people with some abilities. Do you think we can't find them?" assured Li Huowang.

With this, Bai Lingmiao's shoulders finally stopped twitching. Her head nuzzled against Li Huowang's chest. Then, she suddenly broke free of his embrace and picked up her drum that was placed before the mirror before dashing out of the house.

Dong dong dong! Dong dong dong!

"In the heavens, matters are handled by flying Immortals; while on earth, they are handled in red and yellow! While in the netherworld, summon the sorrowful King to assist... I stop the horse to ask for the country's name, hold the reins and look for the homeland. Whether surnamed Zhang, Wang, Li or Huang... Zhao, Qian, Sun, Li, Cun, Xiao, Zhou, Wu Zheng, Wang, Yan, Zhang..."

As Li Huowang listened to the rhythmic drumbeat outside, he slowly closed his eyes.

The next day, when he opened his eyes again, he found that Bai Lingmiao, who was usually an early riser, was lying soundlessly on the bed.

"How is it? What did the Immortal families say?" Li Huowang asked as he wore his clothes.

"They can't find them," replied Bai Lingmiao through her agony. "Even the Immortal families cannot find them... Senior Li, do you think that my parents are really gone?"

Li Huowang walked over, patted her shoulder, and then turned to walk out of the room. "I'm leaving. While I'm away, help keep an eye on things."

Just as he turned to leave, Bai Lingmiao opened the door. With her reddened eyes, she asked dumbfoundedly, “Senior Li, where are you going?”

“Where else? Since even the Immortal families can’t help, I have to think of a way to find out where all the members of the village went. Can I ignore it if you’re like this?” said Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Bai Lingmiao leapt toward him and hugged his waist. Her tears stained his clothes as she thanked him profusely, “Thank you, Senior Li...”

Seeing that his reaction had consistently been cold, she had assumed that he did not care about her family’s situation at all. She had never expected him to have already figured out what he had to do, and it was just that he hadn’t mentioned it.

Chapter 300 - County Magistrate

“Do we still need to thank each other? If it weren’t for you, I would have died a long time ago. Your troubles are my troubles as well. Don’t cry, and just wait for my updates,” said Li Huowang as he gave Bai Lingmiao’s hand a reassuring pat before gently letting go of it and leading her outside.

Li Huowang wasn’t good at expressing affection, but he didn’t want Bai Lingmiao to go through the same things that he had gone through. That feeling was too painful.

Bai Lingmiao quickly followed, her voice filled with concern as she asked, “Senior Li, do you know where my parents went?”

“I don’t know,” replied Li Huowang.

“So where do we even start looking?” asked Bai Lingmiao.

“Don’t worry, I have some status now; there is bound to be a solution.” Li Huowang took out his Surveillance Bureau badge and waved it in front of Bai Lingmiao.

Villagers disappearing overnight wasn’t a small matter. The county magistrate who oversaw Cowheart Village must know something; for now, he could start investigating from there.

After deciding on the course of action, Li Huowang checked the map, led out a horse, and then mounted it. He wasn’t an expert at riding horses, but that wasn’t a problem for him. He’d figure it out after a few tumbles. He was completely unfazed, unlike the others who would be hurt.

After a day and a night of tumbling, Li Huowang finally reached the largest nearby county town right as dawn broke.

Glancing at the moderately-sized county town ahead, the dusty

Li Huowang walked in, leading the horse by its reins.

Meanwhile, County Magistrate Wang woke up and gently kicked the covers with his eyes still closed. The concubine on the other side of the bed quickly got up, knelt on the floor with her forehead touching the ground, and said, "Master, please change into a fresh pair of clothes."

County Magistrate Wang slowly opened his eyes. With the gentle support of his concubine, he sat up. A peeled willow branch was already within his reach as he extended his hand. Gently dipping the willow branch into the fine salt held by the maid, he placed it in his mouth and started using it to brush his teeth. After he finished brushing his teeth, the maid promptly handed him the prepared sandalwood spittoon.

He took a sip of the warm water and puffed his cheeks before lowering his head and spat into the spittoon.

As County Magistrate Wang closed his eyes, the maid held a towel as she carefully and meticulously wiped his face. Then, she stepped back as another maid slowly approached him while holding the official attire.

After several maids helped dress him up, he finally strolled out from his bedroom, adorned in a navy-blue official uniform.

As soon as he stepped out, a wave of heat hit him. He looked up at the blazing sun, as a hint of displeasure crossed his face.

"Another scorching day. There's hardly been any cooling days lately," complained County Magistrate Wang as he walked forward, with two maids holding fans, hastening their steps to catch up to him.

He had walked only a few steps before reaching his usual large wooden desk. Here, his trusted assistant, Steward Hu, had been waiting for him for quite some time.

"Update me. Has anyone lodged any complaint or accusations recently?" asked County Magistrate Wang.

The mustached steward revealed a faint insincere smile. “Master, there’s only one today. The informant handed over ten pieces of silver.”

“Really?” County Magistrate Wang picked up the crystal-clear noodles and took a few bites while leisurely asking, “And who is the accused?”

“The accused is a horse dealer from Qing Qiu; he offered up one piece of gold,” replied Steward Hu.

“Mmm~! The noodles are quite good today! Too bad there’s not enough,” commented County Magistrate Wang.

Hearing this, Steward Hu immediately grasped the situation. “Understood, Master. I will handle it privately with them.”

Then, reaching into his pocket, he took out a piece of paper and began reading the written complaint.

While nodding and swaying as he listened to the written complaint, County Magistrate Wang suddenly noticed a man emerging from within the ground. Witnessing this bizarre scene, he was initially startled, and then his expression turned anxious. Finally, he abruptly stood up, causing the bowl of noodles in his hand to spill all over the table.

“Who... who are you? How dare you try to assassinate an Imperial Official! The Surveillance Bureau will not let this go unpunished!” shouted County Magistrate Wang.

Li Huowang looked at the trembling man before him, not bothering to engage in small talk. He directly took out the badge and displayed it to the man before him. “I have some questions for you.”

Seeing the badge in Li Huowang’s hand, County Magistrate Wang immediately emerged from behind his assistant, his face showing a fawning smile. “Ah~ A high-ranking official from the Surveillance Bureau! Sir, please, have a seat and enjoy some tea!”

“Enough with the formalities. Tell me, what happened to the people in Cowheart Village? It's been a while since anyone has seen any of them. You wouldn't happen to be clueless about it, would you?" asked Li Huowang.

The man was clearly taken aback when he heard this. He then whispered to Steward Hu, "What's going on in Cowheart Village?"

"Master, have you forgotten? The entire village disappeared, and you instructed Constable Cao to look into it. He wanted to discuss something with you earlier, but you were occupied and didn't have the time to listen," replied Steward Hu.

"Stop standing there! Go and get Cao Xin immediately!" ordered County Magistrate Wang.

"Constable Cao has gone out for patrol! I don't know where he is," said Steward Hu.

Upon hearing this, County Magistrate Wang gave Li Huowang an awkward smile. "Sir, shall I take you to find Constable Cao? He's responsible for handling such matters."

"Let's go. I don't have time to waste," said Li Huowang as he walked out.

Seeing Li Huowang heading out, County Magistrate Wang and Steward Hu quickly followed after him.

Clang~

At that moment, a sharp noise echoed.

"County~ Magistrate~ is~ heading~ out~"

Then, under the deliberately prolonged announcement, County Magistrate Wang, donned an official hat and took his seat in a blue sedan chair. Halfway through, he turned around and smiled at Li Huowang before suggesting, "Sir, why don't you take a seat?"

"Hurry up, and get on. I don't have time to waste," said Li Huowang.

"He he he." County Magistrate Wang sat in the sedan chair, smirking to himself. However, before he could get comfortable, Li Huowang's words sent shivers down his spine.

“With the disappearance of so many people, haven’t you reported the situation to the Surveillance Bureau?” asked Li Huowang.

Hearing a hint of accusation in those words, County Magistrate Wang panicked. He quickly opened the curtain of his sedan chair and began to shift the blame. “Sir, we are still investigating the matter. Reporting without conclusive evidence could lead to mistakes. If I end up making a wrong report, it’s just me who bears the consequences. I wouldn’t want to waste your time on a wild goose chase. Ah, I sincerely apologize. It’s all because of my incompetent subordinates taking their time. It’s a shame that a person of your stature has to personally investigate. After sorting out this mess, I must invite you to the White Tower for a feast as an apology. I’ll punish myself with three cups!”

Hearing his fawning, Li Huowang impatiently gestured forward. “Hurry up.”

If not for Constable Cao’s potential findings, he wouldn’t have even bothered talking to such a talkative person.

The sedan chair swayed with a creaking sound as the bearers moved in unison.

The town was relatively small, so finding the patrolling constable was not all that difficult. Soon, Li Huowang spotted him in green clothes, standing at the entrance of a brothel, flirting with the women inside.

When the constable and his subordinates spotted the County Magistrate’s sedan, they promptly straightened their expressions, adjusted their hats, and continued their patrol along the streets with a purposeful stride.

“Ah, County Magistrate.” Constable Cao bowed with clasped hands, acknowledging the presence of the sedan. “County Magistrate, you’re out quite early, trying to understand the sentiments of the people. Please take care of yourself too, and don’t exhaust yourself for the sake of the common folk.”

“Ah, what’s a little hardship for the sake of the people?” started County Magistrate Wang, but upon seeing Li Huowang’s face darken, he quickly became serious and asked, “Constable Cao, have you found anything on the case of the missing villagers from Cowheart Village? Think carefully before you answer. This is a high-ranking lord from the Surveillance Bureau. He came personally to handle this matter!”

“Ah?” Constable Cao looked at Li Huowang in surprise. “But it was the Surveillance Bureau who took away the people of Cowheart Village.”

Chapter 301 - Sounds Within The Mist

“But it was the Surveillance Bureau who took the people of Cowheart Village away.”

Constable Cao’s words shocked Li Huowang.

How is that possible? Why would the Surveillance Bureau take away Bai Lingmiao’s family?

But he recovered quite quickly.

Wait, maybe that wasn’t the real Surveillance Bureau. Maybe someone was impersonating them!

But whether it was genuine or an impersonation, it was not good news for Bai Lingmiao’s family.

Having witnessed this from Hong Da, Li Huowang knew that the Surveillance Bureau was quite ruthless and would not hesitate to take people’s lives to accomplish their mission. But, if it was an impersonation, then it would be even more complicated. The only possible outcomes were bad and worse.

“Which way did they go?” Li Huowang asked Constable Cao with a serious expression. At this point, they could only try chasing after them. It was uncertain whether they could even catch up.

“From the looks of it, they were headed toward the capital. I don’t know how far they’ve gone,” replied Constable Cao.

Seeing Constable Cao pointing toward the west with his trembling hands, Li Huowang swiftly stepped onto the saddle with one foot, mounted his horse and galloped in that direction.

Watching Li Huowang’s figure receding into the distance, County Magistrate Wang breathed a sigh of relief. At that moment, his assistant approached him from the side.

“Master, I think there’s something suspicious about this matter. Do you think that there might be some conflict between these two groups of people?” said Steward Hu.

County Magistrate Wang looked impatient as he replied, “If it’s suspicious, then so be it. What do the Surveillance Bureau’s matters have to do with the Magistrate’s office? Let’s head back!”

Clippity-clop.

Meanwhile, the sound of horse hooves echoed continuously as Li Huowang rode his horse to move in the direction pointed toward by Constable Cao. On the back of the horse, he swayed rhythmically, his mind a chaotic mess filled with various conjectures.

If it’s not the Surveillance Bureau, then, could it be...

“Hehe... don’t be so jumpy. From my perspective, this doesn’t seem like the work of any other faction besides the Surveillance Bureau.”

Hearing those words, Li Huowang immediately turned his head to look at Hong Zhong who was lying in mid-air, looking bored as he yawned. “From your perspective? Can I even trust half the things you say? With the way you put it, I’m even more inclined to suspect that the Surveillance Bureau is being impersonated by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

“If you don’t believe me, then so be it. But remember, the Sitting Oblivion Dao is known for pulling off their schemes openly. There’s never been a notion of changing locations,” said Hong Zhong as he sat up. Then, he stretched lazily, and chuckled before continuing, “Hehehe, besides, who says that we don’t speak the truth? The art of lying requires one to mix a single truth with nine lies. If all we did was tell lies, then who would fall for it?”

In the end, Li Huowang chose to ignore him and focus on the road ahead, mentally preparing for whatever challenges might lie ahead.

Riding for several days straight took its toll on both the horse and on Li Huowang. Although Li Huowang could endure it given his resilient body, the horse still needed sufficient rest.

One evening, Li Huowang tied the horse to a tree and promptly climbed up before closing his eyes to rest.

Li Huowang wasn't sure how much time had passed when the whispers of the Black Taisui woke him up. When he opened his eyes again, the sky had already turned completely dark.

Shaking off the drowsiness, Li Huowang rolled down from the tree and gently patted the neck of the horse who was still sleeping. Soon, the sound of horse-hooves resumed, echoing through the empty dirt road and into the distance.

As Li Huowang was pondering how long he would be able to endure this life on the road and whether or not he would be able to find them, he noticed something.

Under the dim moonlight, Li Huowang crouched down by the roadside and studied the densely packed footprints on the ground. He observed the multitude of footprints that came in various sizes and instinctively felt that these must be the people he was looking for.

As Li Huowang noticed the specks of blood in some of these footprints, he pulled the reins and urged the horse forward. "Let's go!"

Perhaps because they were traveling in a large group, these folks weren't able to move all that fast. As Li Huowang relentlessly chased on horseback for an hour, the footprints on the ground became more and more pronounced.

At this point, Li Huowang decided to dismount from the horse to avoid arousing suspicion. He concealed his illusion in the soil before moving forward stealthily.

The pitch-black sky gradually gave way to a deep blue. Just as dawn was about to break, Li Huowang finally found a group of prisoners huddled together, dozing off in a nearby grove.

People of all ages and genders could be seen wearing wooden shackles around their necks, giving them the appearance of heinous criminals in custody.

Initially, Li Huowang hadn't been sure whether these really were the people he was searching for. However, when he spotted a pretty woman who shared a strong resemblance with Bai Lingmiao, he realized that he was on the right track.

Despite their worn-out appearance and ragged clothes, all of them appeared to be healthy, and with all their limbs intact. This fact finally allowed Li Huowang to ease up slightly.

As long as these people are still alive, there is still room for redemption.

Li Huowang didn't reveal himself immediately. Instead, he began to circle around these people, searching for those responsible for escorting them. If they were enemies, then he would confront them. If they were from the Surveillance Bureau, then negotiation was the way forward. Either way, Li Huowang was determined to rescue this group of people.

He circled around them for a while, but didn't catch sight of a single person of authority.

There's no way that nobody's keeping an eye on them. If that really were the case, then the Bai family would have long since made a run for it.

While he was still confused, he heard an incredibly peculiar clattering sound from behind him. It was like the sound of something swaying in a bamboo tube.

Li Huowang slowly turned around and noticed that a faint white morning mist was starting to rise up from within the dim forest. The clattering sound was coming from within this mist.

As the clattering sound drew near, and the slumbering Bai family members began to wake up. Upon hearing the sound, fear emerged in all their eyes, and some of the children instinctively started crying.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang could catch the whiff of a pungent odor, and he clearly sensed that something was stirring within the white mist. Yet, he couldn't quite make out what it was.

By now, Li Huowang no longer wanted to wait idly. Ignoring whether it was a blessing or a curse, he grabbed the hilt of his sword with one hand, and held his breath as he cautiously ventured into the white mist.

As he approached, the clattering sound slowly grew louder. Li Huowang slowly followed the sound to its source.

Clatter~ clatter~ clatter~

Along with this peculiar sound, a wooden figure, wearing a black watermelon hat with two rosy cheeks, swayed and floated out from within the thick and white morning mist.

Clatter~ clatter~

Each time the wooden figure's head swayed, the peculiar clattering sound emanated from inside its head.

The instant Li Huowang laid eyes on this thing, every hair on his body stood on end. However, when he noticed that it wasn't paying any attention to him, he didn't act immediately.

What on earth is this thing?

As the wooden head slowly floated closer, Li Huowang clenched his teeth, and remained on high alert. Soon, a powerful gaze descended from above and pressed down on him, making every breath feel difficult.

At this point, Li Huowang suddenly looked up and saw a devilish and pale face slowly descend from within the hazy mist, with a wide, bitter smile.

Li Huowang finally grasped what it was as it fully presented itself before him.

Chapter 302 - Impermanence

The face stretched out to several feet wide, and had a blood-red tongue that measured two or three feet in length hanging from its mouth. Beneath this terrifying face was a hunched figure that was over thirty feet tall. It was a grotesquely large White Impermanence!

That wooden head swaying in the air was just a pendant hanging from its chest!

Clatter~ clatter~

Accompanied by this strange sound, the White Impermanence crouched down, and then peered and sniffed in Li Huowang's direction, making humming and grumbling sounds as if it were searching for something.

While Li Huowang was currently invisible, this entity could still sense something. It was just a matter of time before he was discovered.

This thing is not easy to deal with!

Coming to this conclusion, Li Huowang didn't hesitate and unleashed his killer move. He faced the White Impermanence and lifted his right hand with his fingers spread open.

With a swift motion and a slicing sound, his left arm was cut off. Then, it flew out at an incredible speed, and pierced through the White Impermanence's[\[1\]](#) eyes.

Racked with pain, the White Impermanence opened its mouth and let out a deafening roar.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang didn't hesitate and immediately leaped into action. With a single hand, he raised his sword and jumped straight toward its open mouth.

In response, the White Impermanence sent its sharp nails whistling toward Li Huowang. But because of its injured eyes, its aim seemed off; it only managed to leave a deep wound on Li Huowang's neck.

In the next instant, Li Huowang slid down its throat amidst the continuous sound of flesh being torn apart. Just as he was about to slide to the bottom, a wooden mask appeared from seemingly nowhere and covered Li Huowang's face.

In an instant, Li Huowang felt the world go dark; at the same time, he suddenly couldn't breathe.

Li Huowang vigorously shook his head as he tried to remove whatever was on his face. However, no matter what he did, the mask clung to his face without budging in the slightest.

Realizing his situation, Li Huowang didn't hesitate as he pulled out a thin willow-leaf knife and inserted it along the edge of his jaw. He nearly suffocated as he peeled off a substantial portion of the skin on his face. Then, he immediately tried to breathe, only to find himself unable to inhale anything.

What on earth is going on?!

Li Huowang quickly surveyed his surroundings in a state of panic. When he realized that he couldn't see Hong Zhong and Monk, alarm bells rang loudly in his mind.

But then, he suddenly snapped out of it.

In the next moment, there was no sign of the towering White Impermanence being around. At the same time, the mist-covered forest was now brightly lit.

The only thing that remained the same as before was that he still couldn't breathe.

His face soon turned a shade of purple as he reached for his neck and found a rope that had completely sunk into his flesh. After a moment, he grabbed the handle of his sword, and exerted pressure with his thumb as he tried to forcefully cut the rope.

Accompanied by a spine-chilling scream, foul-smelling blood started continuously spraying out of Li Huowang's neck. At the same time, the rope around his neck shrunk toward the forest, and Li Huowang fell from the air like a lifeless corpse.

"Daoist, are you okay?" asked Monk as he quickly approached Li Huowang and expressed his concern.

Holding his neck, Li Huowang shook his head and got up unsteadily. "I'm fine."

After answering Monk, Li Huowang immediately looked around.

Rays of sunlight seeped through the gaps in the leaves as they cast a pattern on the forest floor. The scene appeared so normal that it was as if everything that had just happened earlier was nothing more than an illusion.

Was it an illusion?

Li Huowang glanced at his perfectly intact left arm with a hint of confusion. However, when he touched the wound left behind by White Impermanence's nails, his gaze became more determined.

This was definitely not an illusion. I just don't know what method that thing used when we fought.

Luckily, the attack just now injured it. It shouldn't come back for a while.

"Oh no!" Suddenly, Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and rushed back.

When he rushed out of the woods and saw that the Bai family members were still huddled together, he finally breathed a sigh of relief.

As long as everyone is safe, that's all that matters.

As Li Huowang approached them, the Bai family members were visibly startled by his presence.

A Daoist with a bronze coin veil and blood dripping down his neck, approaching them while holding a sword. It was a sight that would instill fear in just about anyone.

Soon, a sharp crack rang out, and the thick wooden shackles were split open. Li Huowang wielded his sword and freed all of them from their restraints.

Gradually, the Bai family members grasped that the Daoist was here to rescue them. As the truth finally sank in, tears welled up in the eyes of some of the women.

The one with the greatest authority in a clan would usually always be the elderly, and Cowheart Village was no exception.

Soon, an elderly individual, with just a single lower front tooth remaining, led the others forward. He was about to kneel before Li Huowang. "Thank you, Sir, for rescuing our entire village."

However, Li Huowang quickly reached out to support the elderly person. "Elder, please don't kneel. I came here at the request of Miss Bai Lingmiao to rescue all of you."

As soon as he said that, several people in the crowd became incredibly excited. The middle-aged woman who bore a striking resemblance to Bai Lingmiao was overjoyed and tearful as she turned to the man beside her and exclaimed, "Our daughter is safe! She's alive! Our daughter is alive!"

In an instant, a hum of excitement filled the air as Li Huowang was surrounded by Bai Lingmiao's relatives. Questions flew at him from all directions, and he found himself unsure about which one to respond to amidst all the clamor.

"Enough!" At that moment, a loud and commanding voice silenced everyone. The voice came from a robust man who was supporting the elderly person with a single tooth. He had a look of composed confidence with a slight stubble on his chin.

"Don't you see that our benefactor is injured? Moreover, is this the appropriate place for questions?" asked the robust man.

With that, he clasped his hands together and bowed toward Li

Huowang and said, "I am Bai Sai, the leader of the Bai family. Benefactor, what do you think about leaving this place for now?"

Li Huowang touched the wound on his neck and nodded. "Alright, let's leave."

Although he had driven that thing away, there was no guarantee that it wouldn't return with others of its kind to seek revenge.

With their wooden shackles removed, they gathered around Li Huowang as they left the area together. Along the way, it was clear that the others were eager to talk to Li Huowang, but were clearly hindered by the robust man's authority and dared not speak up.

However, unable to contain her emotions, Bai Lingmiao's mother walked over to Li Huowang and handed over her handkerchief. "Benefactor, your neck is still bleeding, use this to cover it for now."

Li Huowang expressed his gratitude and accepted the handkerchief.

Then, the woman couldn't help but ask, "Sir, how is my daughter? Has she grown taller? Has she lost weight? Is she facing any mistreatment outside?"

Her words were filled with deep concern.

Seeing her like this, Li Huowang was reminded of his mother. His mother was just like her, constantly worrying about the same things.

"She is doing well and hasn't faced much hardship. But she often mentions you," said Li Huowang.

Upon hearing Li Huowang's response, the beautiful woman couldn't help but burst into tears.

On the other hand, Li Huowang maintained his composure. He knew that without unraveling the cause and effect of this matter, it couldn't yet be considered resolved.

After thinking for a moment, Li Huowang shifted his gaze toward Bai Sai who was still supporting the elderly man, and asked, “Chief Bai, do you mind shedding some light on what exactly happened? Why were all of you captured? Also, what was it that I just fought with?”

As soon as Li Huowang posed his questions, the discussion around him instantly quieted down, and all eyes turned in his direction.

After a long sigh, Bai Sai replied, “Benefactor, to be honest, I don’t know what is going on either. Ever since my son picked up that stone, strange things have been happening. One day out of the blue, we just found ourselves wearing wooden shackles and forced to move forward by the person wearing a wooden mask. Fortunately, you saved us. Otherwise, who knows where we would have been taken.”

Li Huowang frowned. Despite the lengthy explanation, it felt like the other party hadn't really said anything at all.

“Heh, Li Huowang, be careful. He is trying to deceive you.”

Li Huowang lifted his gaze, and looked toward Hong Zhong who uttered those words.

1. a deity in chinese folk religion that plays a role in guiding the deceased through the afterlife 🙌

Chapter 303 - Bai Family Members

“Heh, Li Huowang, be careful. He is trying to deceive you.”

Li Huowang lifted his gaze, and looked toward Hong Zhong who uttered those words.

Hong Zhong, who had no facial skin or eyes, sat atop Peng Longteng’s shoulder as he grinned to reveal his white teeth.

As he looked at this scene, Li Huowang’s lips twitched slightly. He did not say anything as he looked around at the crowd.

He was still not composed enough. He couldn’t remain completely calm in the face of this illusion’s words.

After that, Li Huowang completely ignored the words spoken by Hong Zhong. He wouldn’t even believe the punctuation marks of whatever came out of that fellow’s mouth.

Li Huowang’s gaze shifted from Hong Zhong to Bai Sai beside him. He wanted a more detailed explanation about what he had said previously. “Chief Bai, you mentioned that your son picked up a stone and then they came to cause trouble for you guys. Could you tell me more about the stone?”

Bai Sai tried to think back and then gestured with his hands to illustrate the size. “It was an orange-colored stone. It was about this big, and was warm to the touch. The kid picked it up from the fields and brought it home, planning to give it to his grandmother to help her warm her knees.”

“Is the stone still around? Can I have a look?” asked Li Huowang.

Bai Sai sighed in frustration. “Our whole family was taken away, so that thing didn’t manage to escape either. It was taken away long ago by that person with the wooden mask.”

A fist-sized stone that generates its own heat?

If that stone was some kind of natural treasure, then this could just be a matter of someone impersonating the Surveillance Bureau to try and seize treasures for themselves. However, that didn’t quite make sense to him either. Li Huowang tried to place himself in the shoes of the thief. If he were the thief, then he would either steal it or openly rob them, and then exterminate all these people.

It was simply not logical to keep all these people bound with wooden shackles and drag them on such a long journey toward the capital. There must have been some purpose behind these actions.

After consolidating his thoughts, Li Huowang faced Bai Sai once again and asked, “Chief Bai, how tall was the person with the wooden mask that you mentioned?”

He had a feeling that this person was the one responsible for the illusion of the White Impermanence that he had seen earlier.

“About the same as you. They had a young voice. Along the way, if someone didn’t obey their instructions, that wretched thing just caused them to see terrifying things in their head,” replied Bai Sai.

As they heard him, some of the people in the crowd showed a hint of fear. From the looks of it, they had previously been tormented by that masked man’s ability.

Li Huowang nodded silently. It seemed that the White Impermanence he had seen earlier was fake, and something fabricated by that person through some method. However, calling it an illusory technique didn’t seem right either. After all, ordinary illusory techniques shouldn’t be able to deceive him now.

As it was, there was too little information available right now, and Li Huowang was still puzzled about what had happened earlier.

“Benefactor, since we’ve escaped, let’s not care too much about it. For now, we should focus on leaving. If that person holds a grudge and comes back, then we'll be in big trouble," said Bai Sai, worried for the well-being of the entire Cowheart Village.

Li Huowang still wanted to continue questioning, but stopped upon hearing Bai Sai's words.

Anyway, these people were Bai Lingmiao's family, and he definitely had to save them.

Without the wooden shackles to bind them, everyone walked much more effortlessly. Now that they had survived their ordeal, their faces were much more relaxed.

Just like this, they walked all the way until noon; by then, the elderly and children among the crowd couldn't continue any longer, and so they decided to take a break.

"Mom, I'm hungry," said a child as he tugged on his mother's clothes.

The adults were hungry as well, just that they were not saying anything.

While Li Huowang did have some dry rations on his horse, with with so many people to divide it, that wouldn't even be enough to fill the spaces between their teeth.

As Li Huowang looked at their empty hands, it was obvious that they had no food. He thought about it for a moment, and then said, "We should be able to reach a village tomorrow and buy some food there. As for today..."

He paused for a moment as patted the slender neck of the horse before continuing, "...let's kill the horse first."

One horse would provide enough meat for quite a few people.

However, Bai Sai immediately shook his head. "Benefactor, there's no need to do something like that just to fill our stomachs a little. There's no need for Benefactor to kill your own steed."

After that, Bai Sai turned around and barked orders toward the crowd, "That... Liang Zi! Bring the members of the third and fourth houses with you to the forest and find something to eat. Hurry!"

“Yes!” replied a sturdy youth. Then, he led a few people toward the forest.

Li Huowang was about to go and help them, but was stopped by the others. “Benefactor, please sit down first. Let the juniors handle this. Feng, look at how much he is sweating. Go and grab some big leaves to fan him!”

Unable to push away their help, Li Huowang was forced to sit down as he was fanned by a plump lady.

Originally, Li Huowang had thought that Liang Zi’s group had gone into the forest to find some wild fruits or vegetables. However, after an hour, when he heard the rustling of the leaves, he saw that they were actually carrying back two flower deers and several smaller roe deer.

When Bai Sai noticed Li Huowang’s surprised look, he was very pleased as he said, “We rely on the mountains for sustenance. Our Bai Family is naturally good at hunting. Catching these wild animals is nothing astonishing.”

After that, he immediately shouted for some people to start a fire. Soon, the best parts of the deer were served to Li Huowang on a flat stone.

As he looked at the expectant faces around him, Li Huowang felt a bit awkward; he had never been treated like this before.

The others only began to eat the reminder of the deer after they saw Li Huowang pick up his portion and stuff it into his mouth beneath the bronze coin veil.

That night, when he was on night guard, Li Huowang once again enjoyed special treatment.

“Benefactor, you can go and rest. Let the younger generation keep watch. They have a strong spirit, and the ordinary supernatural beings won’t dare to approach them,” said Bai Sai.

“Young people have a strong spirit?” Li Huowang glanced at the youths beside the fire and asked, “Chief Bai, what type of saying is that?”

“Ah... saying? There’s nothing like that. My dad taught me this,” replied Bai Sai.

Hearing this, Li Huowang sighed in disappointment. In the end, it turned out to be something he had just heard and was without any foundation.

Why are the people here all so superstitious?

When Li Huowang slowly closed his eyes, the surroundings gradually became quiet. Aside from the crackling sound of the burning wood, the breathing sounds of the people also became slower.

After some time, in a daze, Li Huowang suddenly felt something approaching him. When he opened his eyes, he found himself in a hazy mist. There was also no sign of Hong Zhong or Monk, allowing him to immediately realize that this was not a real place.

“Who?” shouted Li Huowang, his voice echoing within the misty world.

‘Who?’

‘Who?’

Through the mist, he caught a glimpse of the giant White Impermanence he had seen earlier. It did not walk out, and was hung by a rope around its neck.

“Who are you?” a creepy voice rang out in response to Li Huowang’s question, echoing through the mist, “Why did you ruin my plans?”

‘Who are you?’

‘Who are you?’

‘Why did you ruin my plans?’

‘Why did you ruin my plans?’

Chapter 304 - Deceived

Li Huowang stared at the White Impermanence shrouded in white mist, his expression solemn as he contemplated how to negotiate with this entity.

However, at that moment, he suddenly felt someone near him and woke up.

He quickly turned his head and saw a young boy who seemed to have just learned how to walk. The young boy was sitting on the ground in open-crotch pants, and out of curiosity was using his fingers to touch the bronze coins on his veil.

Li Huowang glanced around to see that the others were still sleeping. After a moment, he bent down to pick up the child, and then walked over before quickly handing him to a woman's embrace. Then, he stood up and quietly walked toward where Bai Sai was sleeping.

Before Li Huowang could even get close, Bai Sai had already woken up. They exchanged glances, and then he walked toward the surrounding forest.

Once there, Li Huowang swatted a mosquito on his neck before speaking in a solemn voice, "I dreamt of that person just now. He's still watching us and hasn't left."

"What?!" Bai Sai's face turned deathly white as he anxiously started pacing back and forth anxiously in the woods.

"Don't panic. I was just giving you a heads-up. No matter what that thing is, I've already promised Bai Lingmiao that I'll bring all of you back," assured Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Bai Sai's expression improved slightly. "That's good to hear. With your help, they won't dare cause trouble easily. But... what do you think that person is trying to do? Why are they still coming after us even after taking away that stone?”

Li Huowang shook his head; without having that thing before him, he couldn't really figure out why the other party was behaving like that.

“Let's go back. If something happens to the others, please inform me immediately,” said Li Huowang as he turned to leave.

However, just as Li Huowang was about to leave the forest, Bai Sai's voice rang out once again, “Benefactor, do you have some relationship with the Second Niece?”

“What?”

“Oh, Second Niece is Lian's daughter, Bai Lingmiao. Based on seniority, she needs to address me as Second Uncle,” explained Bai Sai.

When Bai Sai saw Li Huowang stunned in place, he walked over emotionally and started sizing up the young Daoist in front of him.

“Ah~ the Second Niece has found herself a good family. Very good.” The more he looked at Li Huowang, the more fond he became of him.

After a while, Li Huowang said awkwardly, “Chief Bai, let's talk about this matter again after overcoming this difficulty together.”

“Alright. Rest assured that I won't tell anything to Second Niece's parents. When you are ready, you can tell them yourself,” said Bai Sai.

With this, Li Huowang could feel that the sense of distance between them had reduced by quite a bit.

“Alright! Let's work together and get through this calamity, and then we can enjoy ourselves at your wedding feast!” said Bai Sai.

After this conversation, Bai Sai's worries about the danger from before vanished without a trace.

The next day, everyone woke up and they resumed their journey. This time, they continued till they arrived at a village.

Once at the village, Li Huowang immediately took out some pieces of silver to buy all the livestock in the village.

When the single-toothed old man witnessed this, he wanted to dissuade Li Huowang. However, after Bai Sai whispered something in his ear, he just climbed onto a bullock-cart without saying a word.

Originally, due to the delay caused by the young and old, their progress hadn't been very fast. However, after they purchased the livestock, their speed instantly increased to another level.

During this period, Li Huowang was extremely nervous. Even while sleeping, he kept one eye open, wary of being on the receiving end of an unexpected attack.

However, strangely, nothing happened after that night. The gigantic White Impermanence never reappeared, not even in his dreams.

This won't do. How can we defend against the enemy from afar? Instead of waiting, we should find a way to pull him out of hiding.

Just as he was contemplating what to do, Li Huowang felt something amiss. "Chief Bai, I don't think this is the road back to Cowheart Mountain?"

Li Huowang arrived here by riding on the back of a horse, and now, his surroundings were clearly different. Even a dull person would notice that something was wrong.

Bai Sai wiped the sweat from his face and nodded as he explained, "Yes, we won't return to Cowheart Mountain just yet. I know of a place, and reaching there requires going through a winding path. Perhaps this will allow us to shake off the one following us."

"Oh? Is there such a place? Where is it?" asked Li Huowang, feeling curious.

"Actually, it's not too far ahead; in fact, we should reach there today," said Bai Sai as he pointed ahead.

Li Huowang looked forward, but all he saw was a dirt road without much else.

However, the environment soon changed. The ground became more muddy, and Li Huowang's boots were completely covered in black mud. Occasionally, they would also see pools of stale water emanating rotten stench and the countless black bugs wriggling within. The hot weather mixed with the foul odor made them feel even more dizzy.

As they continued to advance, the environment around them gradually transformed into a swamp.

Just as Li Huowang felt like asking Bai Sai whether they were going in the right direction, a vast golden reed marsh appeared in the distance. The reeds all towered a few meters tall, and they swayed gently in the wind.

“This is it. Once we enter here, even Immortals won't be able to find us there. With this, we should be able to shake off our pursuer!” said Bai Sai as he moved to lead everyone inside.

Just as he wanted to lead the Bai family members into the reed marsh, Li Huowang stopped him and asked with a worried look on his face, “Chief Bai, entering might be easy. But will we be able to come out?”

No matter how Li Huowang looked at it, this place did not seem safe.

Bai Sai confidently patted Li Huowang's shoulder. “Relax. Since I dare to bring my family in, I naturally have a way out. Even my son and parents are inside. I should be more worried than you.”

Li Huowang was surprised. He had a feeling that this Chief Bai had some cards that he did not know about.

Since the other party had spoken, Li Huowang did not try to stop him. Soon, the carts and mules started making their way into the reeds.

However, just as they stepped in, a thin mist began to pervade the surroundings.

Li Huowang was exceptionally familiar with this mist. Without any hesitation, he grabbed the hilt of his sword and decisively stood before them all. “Go ahead! I’ll hold them off!”

At the same time, with Li Huowang’s declaration, the ground began to shudder. That giant White Impermanence gradually revealed a part of itself through the mist. A wooden mask could be seen hanging on its chest.

Seeing that the Bai family was about to escape its pursuit, this thing could no longer restrain itself.

After a moment, the White Impermanence opened its mouth to reveal a long, red tongue. At the same time, a dense white mist spewed out and caused their surroundings to become even hazier.

Whoosh!

The black-tassel sword was unsheathed, and a dense killing intent enveloped Li Huowang as he stood there as though he was unmoveable.

Meanwhile, the White Impermanence continued to remain motionless within the mist.

Amidst the chaos, Li Huowang thought of what Tuoba Danqing had told him, and whipped out the badge on his waist. “The Surveillance Bureau is on official duty! If you don’t want to die, then scram!”

Immediately, the swirling mist around them ceased moving.

“Ah, so you’re from the Surveillance Bureau. Why didn’t you say so earlier? Then this is just a misunderstanding between internal parties.” This abrupt voice came from the giant White Impermanence’s mouth.

“You’re from the Surveillance Bureau? How can you be?” asked Li Huowang, feeling astonished as he looked up at the three-meter tall White Impermanence. Ever since the first time he had seen this thing, he had completely ruled out the possibility of it being related to the Surveillance Bureau.

“Hold on,” said the giant White Impermanence as it sank into the white mist. Soon, a man with a wooden mask on his chest stepped out from within the mist. As he approached, he also brought out a badge which was quite similar to Li Huowang’s. It was the Surveillance Bureau badge.

“See? I’m even one rank higher than you,” said the man.

After confirming that the opponent’s token was genuine, Li Huowang suddenly felt relieved, and his expression warmed up. “Since you’re also from the Surveillance Bureau, that’s easier to handle. There must be some sort of misunderstanding here.”

However, the person with the wooden mask shook his head. “No, no, there’s no misunderstanding. The White Lotus Sect is extremely wicked. They are a bunch of evil cultivators. My senior and I spent a great deal of effort to capture them. Yet, you barged in and broke through my senior’s restraints.”

“What? Impossible!” Li Huowang’s mind buzzed as he looked at the reed marsh behind him.

By now, the last member from the Bai family, Bai Sai, had already stepped in. As he entered, he glanced at the badge in Li Huowang’s hand, revealing an incomparably cold as he turned around and disappeared into the reed marsh.

“Brother, think about it. If they were not responsible for the deaths of too many, would the higher-ups send people from the Surveillance Bureau here? That too two of them together?”

Chapter 305 - Reed

When Li Huowang saw Bai Sai enter the thick reed marsh, he rushed after him, “Wait!”

However, at that moment, a giant hand, larger than his own body, suddenly grabbed onto Li Huowang. But when he lowered his head to see the assailant, he found that there was no claw around him. He abruptly turned his head and glared at where the Surveillance Bureau person with the wooden mask was. He had a feeling that this must be another one of his illusory techniques.

When the other party saw Li Huowang’s hostility, he raised both his hands as he took a few steps back and said, “Brother, I’m just trying to help you. With everyone now being aware of your identity, going in alone like this is just asking for trouble.”

However, Li Huowang just shook his head impatiently as he tried to recall the bits and pieces of information that Bai Lingmiao had described to him previously.

Based on what Bai Lingmiao had said, her family members were all kind and good-hearted people. It was completely different from the description given by this person.

Could it be that... Bai Lingmiao lied to me? No, she couldn't have!

Li Huowang’s doubtful gaze soon turned confident.

His previous interactions with the Bai family did not match what this person said.

There must be some sort of misunderstanding. I need to clarify things with them in person!

After deciding that, Li Huowang left the masked person from the Surveillance Bureau behind and headed straight into the reed marsh.

As Li Huowang entered the reed marsh, the sky immediately darkened. The sausage-like reed stalks above seemed to cut off any and all connection with the outside world. He carefully examined the footprints on the ground and followed after them.

“Chief Bai! It’s me! Come out and talk!” shouted Li Huowang.

However, in the end, Li Huowang received no response. He looked back at the vast field of yellow reeds behind him, and then spoke once more, “Don’t worry. I am very close with Second Niece! If the Bai family is facing any undisclosed troubles, then I will undoubtedly offer my full assistance!”

Li Huowang’s voice resonated through the reed marsh as he continued to shout, “I’m on your side! This is also my first time encountering that guy with the wooden mask. He won’t dare to harm you guys as long as I’m around!”

After Li Huowang finished speaking, two young men from the Bai family emerged from the reed marsh and silently started observing him.

Upon seeing them, Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief and continued speaking, “I understand that you may doubt me due to my affiliation with the Surveillance Bureau. In reality, my connection with the organization is not as close as you might think. How about this? Let’s return to Cowheart Village. Second Niece is already there. She can explain everything to you.”

The two young men remained silent, widening their stance as they stripped off their clothes and assumed a defensive position.

Li Huowang couldn’t understand what they were doing. It looked like some sort of martial arts stance, yet they were not clenching their fists. If it was some spell technique, then there were no distinct hand gestures.

As their hands moved through the air, the two men started chanting incantations, “Immortals bestow true divine skills, heavenly soldiers and generals reveal divine abilities. All Immortals, heed my command, swiftly enter my mortal body!”

In the next moment, Li Huowang saw as a tall and slender glowing shadow wrapped in black cloth emerged from the ground before drifting toward their bodies.

What kind of evil spirit is this?

Li Huowang quickly unsheathed his bronze coin sword, ready to ward off the evil entity.

However, before Li Huowang could approach, the two young men from the Bai family suddenly looked up and glared ominously at him.

A shocked expression appeared on Li Huowang's face as he came to a halt and observed the two individuals before him exhibiting an demeanor entirely different from before.

What... is this? Divine intervention? Have they been possessed by evil spirits?

If Li Huowang had previously had any doubts about the statements made by the member of the Surveillance Bureau, seeing these two individuals' demeanor had only solidified his doubts.

"Listen, I don't want to fight. Whatever you've done in the past is none of my concern. It's the Surveillance Bureau that is finding fault with you guys!" said Li Huowang.

Swoosh!

Suddenly, the two bare-chested youths suddenly lunged toward Li Huowang. There almost seemed to be a phantom image following behind them. They appeared to be possessed by some unknown evil spirit, with each part of their body seemingly existing independently.

As they approached, their fingers split apart in different ways, like the heads of slithering snakes, thrusting straight toward Li Huowang's neck.

These two individuals didn't appear to be all that strong, and so Li Huowang did not retaliate. He knew that all the techniques that he had learned were lethal moves. If he were to retaliate, then these two individuals would either end up dead or at least severely wounded, something that he did not want to do.

Thus, Li Huowang twisted and turned in the reed marsh, constantly dodging the two individual's blows.

While he did not know what kind of evil spirit had possessed them, their agility was beyond imagination. Li Huowang found himself in a very passive situation.

Snap!

When the two opponents directly pounced on him, Li Huowang was taken by surprise. Instead of attacking Li Huowang directly, they moved to snatch the bronze coin sword in his hand.

Li Huowang tightened his grip, but in the next instance, he suddenly felt something approaching him from behind. "Oh no!"

Clang!

Li Huowang turned his head, only to see a cold light flash as the sinister black-tassel sword stabbed fiercely toward his face. He wanted to block and retaliate, but both of his hands were restrained by the two Bai family youths.

In this critical moment, Li Huowang instantly shifted his position, forcefully moving his body a few inches to the left. At the same time, he muttered an incantation, and his bronze coin sword split apart. Immediately, a red radiance flashed and effortlessly cut through the fingers closing in on him. Then, he forcefully kicked the person in front of him, creating a distance between himself and the others.

As soon as Li Huowang met eyes with the person holding onto the black-tassel sword, the latter suddenly knelt. At the same time, the eerie look on the man's face quickly faded away, giving way to a twisted expression. The black-tassel sword in his hand fell weakly to the ground as he knelt there with a furious expression while letting out wild roars.

Li Huowang looked at the two young men and their sliced-off fingers, and then toward the other Bai family member who was possessed by the potent killing intent, and then sighed. "Did it have to come to this extent? Couldn't we have had a civilized conversation instead?"

Just as Li Huowang finished speaking, the reeds surrounding him started to shake. Soon, those men's sinister faces emerged and vanished amidst the yellow reeds.

As he looked at those lifeless faces, a chill ran down Li Huowang's spine. Almost half of the Bai family had been possessed by evil spirits, their faces cold and lifeless.

Amidst the crowd, a single-toothed old man, supported by Bai Sai, came forward and began to speak in a trembling voice. The old man chanted rhythmically, almost as if he was mimicking a song. Noxious black mud oozed out from the corner of his mouth.

As the familiar yet abnormal voice echoed in the surroundings, several familiar figures appeared in front of Li Huowang.

These were the Wandering Gods.

Although the figure of the Wandering Gods that was condensed was unusually blurry without the support of the bronze bell, Li Huowang could still recognize their appearance after having encountered them so many times.

As he stared at the elusive figures of the Wandering Gods in mid-air, Li Huowang recalled the things that Bai Lingmiao had told him about back when they were at Zephyr Temple.

Why did an ordinary girl like Bai Lingmiao know about evil spirits such as the Wandering Gods?

This scene finally made everything clear. This old man was probably the grandfather who used to tell her stories.

Chapter 306 - Punctured Stomach

Seeing the cold look in their eyes, Li Huowang sighed. There was nothing he could say to change things. If he continued to push on, then blood would definitely be spilled. He didn't want to hurt Bai Lingmiao's family.

Li Huowang knew more than anyone else just how much her family meant to Bai Lingmiao.

After a moment, Li Huowang turned around and walked into the dense reeds to try and find his way back.

If that masked man is still there, then I need to think of a way to hold him down and stall for time. The Bai family needs time to escape.

However, the more he walked, the more uncertain he grew. Based on the amount of time he had walked for, he should've already exited the field of reeds.

After a while, he suddenly remembered what Bai Sai had said before: it was quite easy to get lost within the reed fields.

Wait, am I lost here?

Li Huowang stood still and turned around as he tried to get his bearings by observing his surroundings.

Shua!

Suddenly, a flash of metal shot out from amongst the reeds, forcing Li Huowang to dodge it.

But in the next instant, he felt an excruciating pain from his waist.

Suffering from the pain, Li Huowang instinctively opened his mouth, only to see black tentacles as they trembled and tried to come out of his mouth.

Sensing the tentacles in his mouth, Li Huowang realized something terrible.

Oh no, they have punctured my stomach!

However, before he could even react to it, more and more arrows shot out from within the reeds. The rain of arrows completely covered Li Huowang.

When arrows finally stopped, Li Huowang walked out from within the pile of arrows while holding onto his bleeding abdomen. At the same time, he eyed the field of reeds around him warily, the warmth in his eyes gone completely.

Based on the number of arrows, it was clear that the Bai family had hidden weapons within the field of reeds. This meant that the reed field was their territory and that Bai Sai hadn't been truthful with him.

After a moment, Li Huowang carefully projected his illusion underneath the ground. After turning invisible, he slowly walked away.

I need to ask Bai Lingmiao what is going on!

Li Huowang moved slowly, his surroundings completely silent. He couldn't hear anything else.

After four hours, Li Huowang finally stopped, panting for breath. He released the grip he had on his abdomen and looked at the bloody mess with a worried look in his eyes.

While the Black Taisui is injured, it isn't dead. I just hope that it can still suppress the illusions.

Just as his thoughts reached this point, his surroundings suddenly started to shimmer, causing him to panic. He only sighed in relief after confirming that his surroundings hadn't changed.

Don't scare me like that. If I end up getting trapped in a hallucination right now, then I'm fucked!

At that moment, something suddenly burst out from the ground and phased through Li Huowang's abdomen.

Immediately, Li Huowang felt an agonizing pain; it was as if his intestines had been severed. Cold sweat instantly covered his body.

Then, at that moment, another Wandering God appeared from beneath the ground and attacked Li Huowang. When Li Huowang cut it down with his sword, it dissipated like the wind.

Meanwhile, the remaining Wandering Gods continued to hover over Li Huowang like spirits, waiting for an opportunity to attack.

“What is happening? I’m already invisible, so how did they find me?” muttered Li Huowang.

After a moment, he looked down and saw how.

Blood.

His blood that had been dripping onto the floor was the thing that revealed his location!

At that moment, as if sensing an opening, all of the Wandering Gods attacked together.

In the face of this furious assault, Li Huowang replaced his sword with the bronze coin sword. As he chanted, the bronze coin sword exploded and sent the Wandering Gods flying, killing them.

“What are you guys doing? Don’t forget that I saved all of you!” shouted Li Huowang.

Li Huowang felt quite depressed. He had already done his best to not hurt them, so why were they attacking him relentlessly?

Suddenly, the earth beside Li Huowang bulged and exploded before a man leapt out and swung his blades down upon Li Huowang.

Finally, Li Huowang snarled and decided to fight back. Even if he killed someone, it would be better than him dying.

But just as he was about reach out for his torture tools, Li Huowang stopped his hands.

He saw the face of the man in front of him.

It was Bai Lingmiao’s father!

“Stop!” Li Huowang instinctively raised his hands to guard himself, causing his palm to be cut in half.

Then, several spears shot out from within the reeds and stabbed Li Huowang, puncturing his abdomen and nailing him to the ground.

As if on cue, even more spears shot out and stabbed Li Huowang's limbs into the ground. Everything seems to be under the Bai family's control now.

Li Huowang looked at their cold faces and spoke up with difficulty, "Is there a need to do this? What did I ever do to you?"

In response, one of the ladies from the Bai family said hatefully to Li Huowang, "You have no idea just how much we hate the Emperor and his officials! Since you are a dog of the Emperor, we will do whatever we want to you!"

Li Huowang swallowed his saliva with difficulty. He felt that his head was heavy and that he was disoriented, but still forced a bitter smile. "Now that you've won, bring me back to Cowheart Village. Ask Bai Lingmiao what to do with me. I'm her husband after all."

Immediately, sounds of discussion erupted all around him.

After a moment, Bai Lingmiao's mother ran to the front and glared at Li Huowang. "The parents have the last say in who their child marries! We will decide who she gets married to; we will never let her marry one of the Emperor's dogs!"

On the other hand, Bai Lingmiao's father looked at Li Huowang and his sorry state. Then, he threw away his blade and pulled his wife back before whispering something to her; it looked like he had his own plans.

After that, he walked over and looked at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked back at him, only to see that the man looked like an orange. This caused Li Huowang to laugh out in pain.

But the more Li Huowang laughed, the more realistic it looked to him. The man's head slowly became a mushy and moldy orange.

“An orange?”

At that moment, a raindrop fell from the sky and splattered onto Li Huowang's face, causing him to wince from the pain.

Li Huowang suddenly found himself squatting beside a garbage can in the rain. He was shivering while holding onto the moldy orange in his hands.

As if he had been electrocuted, Li Huowang jumped out and threw away the orange, causing it to fall into the mud.

Then, he looked around and realized what had happened. “Shit! The Black Taisui in my stomach got attacked, and now it has lost its power to hold back my hallucinations!”

But, at the same time, a thought popped up in his mind.

But... why am I on the streets? Shouldn't I be locked up inside the mental hospital? What happened?

Li Huowang looked down and saw what he was wearing. He was wearing a dirty jacket over his body, while his cotton pants were completely soaked in water. He was wearing a shoe with a hole that was showing his left toe, and he only had a sock on his right.

Soaked in the rain, he looked completely like a beggar.

Unable to find an answer to his questions, he felt a sudden pain from his abdomen.

He was hungry.

He had never felt this hungry in his life; it was as if he hadn't eaten for ten days or more.

After a moment, Li Huowang squatted down beside the dirty water and picked up the moldy orange and started eating it.

Just then, a car ran past a puddle and splashed him. However, he didn't care.

Completely drenched, Li Huowang was soon shivering from the cold. He cuddled himself as he sat beside the green trash can while continuing to eat the moldy orange.

Chapter 307 - Cold

When he bit into the cold and rotten orange, Li Huowang not only tasted the mold, he also tasted the weird taste of the rotten fruit. But Li Huowang was too hungry to care. Right now, this moldy orange was even more delicious than an extravagant meal.

After eating the orange, Li Huowang stood up, feeling quite a bit better. Then, he shouted into the rain, “Chief Bai! Don’t be afraid! It’s my illness! I have an illness!”

At that moment, a man holding an umbrella saw Li Huowang and quickly pulled his wife before running away. At the same time, the others on the street did the same. Soon, the street that already had very few people due to the rain was completely deserted.

However, Li Huowang ignored whatever was happening around him. To him, the situation on the other side was more dire. After all, on the other side, he was practically bound and waiting to be executed. He had to do something to save himself!

Li Huowang continued to stand in the rain but felt like nothing had changed. This made him very annoyed. Based on his experience, the other side should also change according to what was happening here.

“Chief Bai! Where are you? Give me a sign! As I am now, I can’t see you!”

As he shouted, Li Huowang saw several men holding an umbrella coming toward him, causing his eyes to light up.

Wearing his torn shoes and socks, Li Huowang ran toward them while stepping into the puddles and shouted, “Chief Bai!”

The man was visibly frightened by Li Huowang who suddenly approached him in the rain.

“Chief Bai! You have to remember that I was the one who saved all of you! Do you really want to hurt the person who saved you?” Li Huowang felt that this was not enough and said something more convincing, “Also, Bai Lingmiao is pregnant with my child! No matter what, I’m already half a step into the Bai family!”

“Where did this lunatic come from? Shit... he’s scary.” The man holding the black umbrella took two steps back and tried to go around Li Huowang.

However, Li Huowang would never let him go past. He took another step and blocked the man with his arms. “Chief Bai, if you don’t believe me, then you can ask Bai Lingmiao herself!”

When the man saw Li Huowang blocking him again, he sighed. “Sir, please spare me. You are indeed pitiful, but so am I. I still have to go to work to pay off the mortgage.”

“What are you talking about? Sorry Chief Bai, but now that I’m in a hallucination, your words are twisted into something else. Wait here for just a moment. I will return back to normal soon,” said Li Huowang.

The man clearly didn’t know what Li Huowang was saying. However, he was horrified when he realized that Li Huowang wanted to stay close to him.

“Shit! There’s a crazy bastard here!” shouted the man as he ran away.

Li Huowang wanted to chase after him, but fell over after just a few steps; his body was too weak. He had been holding on purely because of adrenaline.

“Cold.” Li Huowang’s lips were purple and his teeth never stopped chattering. It was so cold that he couldn’t even feel his fingers.

Li Huowang just lay there in the rain, his body completely limp. He didn’t have any strength left.

He didn’t know how long had passed before his will to survive kicked in. Then, he used whatever remaining strength he had to crawl toward the sidewalk where the rain would not reach him.

“Go away, you crazy bastard! I will hit you!”

“Eh! Aiya! You stepped on my store’s rug!”

“Mom! Look! There’s a lunatic in front of our house!”

Li Huowang shivered as he hobbled forward while sounds continued to swirl around him. Looking at his surroundings, he felt slightly at ease.

Since I’m not dead, my words from just now must have worked.

However, he soon started to feel terrible. His head started to swim; it was as if he had gotten a fever from the rain.

“If... if I die here, I would still be fine in reality... right?” Li Huowang’s voice was weak and uncertain.

At that moment, he suddenly saw a place where he could hide from the rain. It was a small opening under a bridge. Gritting his teeth, he ran straight toward the opening. He almost got hit by a yellow school bus, the various faces inside staring at his back.

Finally, once he was under the bridge, all of the noises stopped. Li Huowang panted as he slid down against the wall.

However, even though he was out of the rain, Li Huowang’s body was still in shambles.

Why is it taking so long? Why have I not returned yet?

Just as Li Huowang was waiting for time to pass, he saw something on the ground. He slowly inched forward. Once there, he found some plastic straws, bottles, some aluminum foil, and a lighter with very little fuel left.

Li Huowang stretched his hands out, picking up the lighter. At the same time, he realized that he had lost his sense of touch.

He tried igniting the lighter but there was no fire. Just as his head was once again starting to become heavy, a small red fire lit up.

He looked around and saw the plastic bottles. He carefully picked them up and placed them underneath the fire. The plastic straws lit up and slowly burned down toward the plastic bottle.

As the bottles started to burn and a small flame was made. Then, Li Huowang carefully placed his frostbitten hands close to it. The fumes were toxic and smelly, but it was warm.

When the warmth from the flame started spreading into his hands, he finally felt his body warming up. Soon, his body stopped shivering and his lips turned from black to purple.

“Who’s there?!” At that moment, Li Huowang looked toward the entrance of the opening, and felt his scalp go numb.

There was a young child wearing boots standing there with an umbrella. She was a cute little girl, around eight years old with double ponytails and a cute cherry shaped red-colored hair clip.

Her large eyes were filled with curiosity. However, as soon as she saw Li Huowang, that curiosity turned into fear.

“Eighteenth Lunar?” Li Huowang stared at that child in disbelief. It was the very same child he had held hostage when he crashed into her kindergarten.

From her school bag, it was clear she had graduated from kindergarten and was now in her first year of primary school.

No, she’s not the Eighteenth Lunar. She doesn’t correspond with anything in the real world. There’s no one within the field of reeds except for the Bai family, so she’s probably one of them.

Li Huowang thought about it and slowly walked toward her. But just as he started moving, the child ran away shrieking.

Li Huowang reached the entrance and found a small piece of the chocolate that she had thrown down. After a moment, he picked it up and ate it. It was sweet and delicious. It reminded him of the chocolate Yang Na had given him on Valentine's Day.

Why am I homeless and on the streets? Was I abandoned by my family?

The bitterness Li Huowang felt in his heart was not undone by the sweetness of the chocolate.

After a while, Li Huowang sniffled and walked back to the small fire he had made. He squatted down and stared at the fire.

“It’s just a hallucination. This is for the best... This is for the best...” He kept mumbling to himself.

Chapter 308 - Warmth

Time slowly passed. As he stared at the flames that were dying out, Li Huowang took off his punctured shoes. He wiped off the water before throwing them into the fire.

With the addition of new fuel, the fire grew stronger and the temperature rose a little. It was to the point that Li Huowang was forced to retreat a little from the flames.

However, even though he moved back, Li Huowang felt the temperature growing higher and higher instead. He, who had been on the verge of dying from hypothermia until just a moment ago, was now covered in sweat.

“Wait, why is it suddenly so hot?” Li Huowang removed his wet clothes and saw a plume of black smoke rising from his body.

Phew~

Li Huowang breathed out, only to see sparks coming out from his mouth.

“Hot! It’s too hot!” shouted Li Huowang as he stood up and removed all of his clothes.

But in an instant, Li Huowang saw as the small fire grew large and enveloped him.

“AAAAAAAAAAAAAAH!”

Li Huowang knelt on the ground in pain. The pain was so intense that it almost caused him to faint.

“What is happening?” Li Huowang raised his head and saw that flames had covered everything around him. There were flames everywhere. The entire field of reeds was on fire. Not a single inch of it was left untouched.

Through the flames, Li Huowang saw the people around him running and crying until they could no longer move. Then, they fell onto the ground and became fuel for the fire.

At that moment, Li Huowang realized something—he was lighting up some plastic bottles in his hallucination, but in reality he had lit up his own body to conduct one of the rituals from the Profound Records!

“No! Nonononono!” Covered in flames, Li Huowang stood up and ran toward them in a panic.

Li Huowang got close, but in the process, the flames burning his body became even more intense. The closer he got, the faster the people around him burned up,

At that moment, Li Huowang saw a lady fall in front of him, her finger pointing toward the direction of Cowheart Mountain as she muttered, “My little girl...”

“Why is this happening? I had already suppressed it! So why?!” Li Huowang punched the ground with his blackened fist.

Li Huowang didn’t know when the fire stopped. When he finally came back to his senses, everything around him had been burned to the ground while he just kneeled there motionlessly with white smoke coming off him.

His entire body was in immense pain, but it was nowhere near the pain in his heart.

He was the one who burned all of Bai Lingmiao’s family, and now he had to tell her the truth himself.

“Tsk tsk tsk.”

At that moment, the man with the wooden mask appeared and looked at the surroundings in awe. As he looked at Li Huowang’s bronze coin veil that had been heated to the point of glowing red, the man with the wooden mask slowly approached and checked on Li Huowang. “Hey, are you still alive?”

Hearing his voice, Li Huowang raised his head slightly. Black ash fell from his neck.

Seeing that Li Huowang was still alive, the man with the wooden mask sighed in relief and quickly helped him up. Then, they slowly walked out from within the field of reeds that had been burned to the ground.

“Why are you risking your life? This was just a minor mission from the Surveillance Bureau. You must be new right? Let me tell you this: the next time you see a mission with very little reward, you don’t have to go all out. Plus, they are just a group of people from a regular sect, the White Lotus Sect. Do you need to go all out like that? Are the people from the Ao Jing Sect all this irritable?” said the man.

However, Li Huowang didn’t say anything and just continued walking.

“I’m Liu Zongyuan from Moongate. What is your name? Wait... are you practicing noble silence like the monks?” asked the man as he introduced himself.

At that moment, having walked out from the burnt field of reeds, Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and touched the wound on his stomach. He saw that the lance that had stabbed into his stomach had been burnt into charcoal and was embedded within his abdomen.

Li Huowang carefully pulled it out and saw a hole the size of a walnut in his abdomen. Then, he carefully placed his burnt finger into the hole.

“Yikes.” Liu Zongyuan felt his scalp go numb when he saw what Li Huowang was doing.

Just as Li Huowang’s finger was about to push into the hole, a dried tentacle trembling stretched out from the hole. Then, it coiled around Li Huowang’s finger. At the same time, a bizarre eyeball could be seen within his stomach.

“Huh? You are quite weird. What’s that thing inside your stomach? I’ve never heard of the Ao Jing Sect having something like this,” said Liu Zongyuan.

Li Huowang looked at Liu Zongyuan and lied, “Nascent Soul.”

“A Nascent Soul? Don’t they usually place those on the neck? Why is it inside your stomach? Aren’t you afraid of turning it into poop?” questioned Liu Zongyuan.

However, Li Huowang just ignored him and continued walking.

“Aiya, there’s no need to be so cold. The mission is already over,” called out Liu Zongyuan as he followed Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Li Huowang smiled bitterly. “Yeah. It’s over. You are right.”

“Are you feeling sad for them? You don’t need to. Do you know why the other villages around Cowheart Mountain disappeared? It’s because they killed all of them. They have killed many times more people than you ever have. So, you were actually enacting justice for the Heavens,” said Liu Zongyuan. He thought that Li Huowang was feeling guilty about killing all of them.

At this point, Li Huowang removed his hands from Liu Zongyuan’s shoulder. “You should go. We will go our separate ways from here.”

“Go?” Liu Zongyuan stood there with a confused look on his face as he looked at the charred Li Huowang. “Where can you go looking like that? The bugs will directly eat a delicious chunk of barbecued meat like you.”

“Don’t worry. I can handle them. Just go,” said Li Huowang as he sat down on the ground.

Liu Zongyuan scratched his head and turned toward a small forest. He took a few steps, but then sighed and approached Li Huowang once again. “Nevermind. I would rather help you out all the way. Close your eyes.”

“What are you doing?” asked Li Huowang as he looked at the wooden mask.

“Just do as I say. Do you think I would hurt you? If I don’t take care of you, then you will just die in a couple of days,” said Liu Zongyuan.

Hearing this, Li Huowang raised his burnt hands and covered his eyes. His eyelids had also been burned off.

Shua shua shua~

His eyes closed, Li Huowang suddenly felt something moving on his body. He felt the soft fur and thought it resembled a brush.

Half an hour later, Liu Zongyuan's voice rang out once more, "Ok, you can take down your hands now."

Li Huowang put down his hands and saw that the skin that had been burned off had regrown. But on closer inspection, Li Huowang noticed that it wasn't his skin. It was a thin layer of pink paper. The color reminded him of the paper dolls that people burned for the dead.

At this point, Li Huowang not only had a layer of paper skin, but he was also wearing a paper shirt.

But for some reason, even though it looked cheap, all of the pain was completely gone; it was as if he was never burned.

"Don't touch water and don't get wet in rain or it will lose its effectiveness," said Liu Zongyuan.

"Which sect are you from? This is very special." Li Huowang looked at the person wearing the wooden mask.

"Didn't I tell you? I'm from Moongate. This is a special method that involves gluing. Other than that, we also specialize in arrangement, fusion, pass, moon, parting, pull, and open," replied Liu Zongyuan.

When Liu Zongyuan saw Li Huowang just sit there in a daze, he laughed. "You don't understand it? Hehe, that's a good thing. We intentionally explain it as such so the others wouldn't know the specifics of our powers. Oh, you haven't told me your name yet."

"Er Jiu."

"Alright, goodbye Er Jiu." Liu Zongyuan turned around and disappeared into the forest.

As he saw Liu Zongyuan disappear into the forest, Li Huowang inspected the skin made of paper. He found that the skin would easily puncture or break if he used too much force.

However, the pain couldn't do anything to Li Huowang. He just remained seated and stared in the direction of Cowheart Mountain.

His eyes were filled with despair.

“ I have killed everyone within the Bai family. How am I going to tell her...?”

Chapter 309 - Return

“Cough.”

With a light cough, Li Huowang instantly caught everyone’s attention. All of them looked at Li Huowang with confidence as he continued speaking, “Everyone! We don’t have to travel anymore! We will settle down within Cowheart Village. From now on, this will be our new home!”

“Senior Li, what about Yang Xiaohai? We still haven’t sent him home,” asked Puppy while patting the assistant’s head.

Hearing his name suddenly being mentioned, Yang Xiaohai panicked. He had never thought that they would suddenly talk about him, causing him to stammer. “I ...”

However, he was interrupted by Li Huowang, “He’s lying about his home. He never had one. He’s a beggar.”

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly felt someone holding his arm and saw that it was Bai Lingmiao. He looked at her eyes and saw her expectant gaze. Seeing that gaze, Li Huowang felt his chest warm up as he turned toward everyone. “Since we are now here, I will tell you about everything. Everyone has seen how chaotic this world is. If all we cared about was having our own piece of land, then we wouldn’t be all that different from the oxen in the fields. If we want to protect ourselves, then we cannot rely on others! From now on, I will teach everything that I can to everyone! I will also think of a method to have everyone know at least one technique or superpower.”

Hearing this promise, everyone became excited as they started excitedly discussing what they would be able to do in the future.

On the other hand, as he looked at everyone, Li Huowang’s eyes turned serious. He had come to understand that he couldn’t rely on the other sects or the Surveillance Bureau. He could only rely on himself and the people in front of him. If all of them wanted to survive in this bizarre world, then they had to have their own strength! Only then would they be able to avoid suffering like him.

“Everyone, the first thing we are going to learn is to learn how to read and write!” announced Li Huowang.

“Read and write?”

“Yes! Read and write,” said Li Huowang as he touched his abdomen, “That’s right, all of us have to be literate first. After that, we can establish our own sect that would allow us to stand firm in this world! Everyone thinks that we are a bunch of freaks, but we will let them see that even we can survive on our own in this world! We will show them that we are not freaks! That no one can sell us off anymore! That no one can bully us anymore! That we too can get better and better as long as we work hard every day!”

“Yeah!”

“Hooray!”

“Yay!”

Everyone’s cheers almost caused the entire village to shake. As he looked at everyone who had traveled with him for so long, Li Huowang revealed a happy smile.

As rainwater splattered on his face, Li Huowang’s smiling face and everyone’s cheers suddenly disappeared.

The rain continued to fall as Li Huowang just stood there while holding a paper umbrella. He stood in front of Cowheart Village and stared at the white smoke rising from the village.

At this moment, there was no one else around him; he was the only one standing on the yellow dirt path.

All that from before had been nothing more than his memory.

Li Huowang stood there for an entire day and night. Due to the humidity, his paper skin soon started to get moldy. Even so, he did not care.

It was only when he saw Yang Xiaohai walk out of the village with a raincoat that he moved his almost immobile joints toward the village.

Seeing Li Huowang finally move, Hong Zhong, with half his body stuck in a tree, started chuckling. He nudged Monk and said, "Monk, hehehe, get ready for a good show."

As soon as Li Huowang approached the entrance of the village, Yang Xiaohai spotted him immediately and happily ran over to greet him, only to be horrified by the man's appearance.

"Yikes! Senior Li! Where is the skin on your face? Why are you wearing paper clothes?" asked Yang Xiaohai.

"Where is Miaomiao?" Li Huowang's hoarse voice was filled with the scent of blood.

"Senior Bai should be in the house. Senior Li... what's wrong? Do you have news about the Bai family?" asked Yang Xiaohai, concerned.

Li Huowang remained silent for a moment before walking toward Bai Lingmiao's house one step at a time.

Gradually, everyone saw that Li Huowang had returned and ran over to greet him. However, the cheerful atmosphere soon turned cold when they saw what he looked like.

Puppy carefully approached him and asked, "What's wrong, Senior Li? Looks like you couldn't find them? It's fine. None of us blame you."

Li Huowang gritted his teeth and pushed him away. Then, he started running.

When Li Huowang arrived at the main gate of Bai Lingmiao's house, he ran into the anxious-looking Bai Lingmiao.

As soon as Bai Lingmiao saw that Li Huowang had returned alone, she felt her heart drop. But when she saw just how terrible Li Huowang looked under the rain with his burnt skin, she felt a pang in her heart. She immediately grabbed his wrists and pulled him toward her room.

Once inside, Bai Lingmiao used a soft towel to carefully dab Li Huowang's body and pull away the moisture from his skin. She didn't dare to rub his body for fear that she would rub off his skin and flesh.

Bai Lingmiao had seen just how serious his wounds could be. She knew that Li Huowang must've encountered grave danger to force him to use a technique that would hurt himself to this extent.

As Bai Lingmiao washed the towel in a bronze basin, she said, "Senior Li, it's alright. I'm fine. There's no need to worry about me. After staying here for so many days, I've already come to terms with the fact that they are gone. Since they are missing, let's just wait here. I'm sure they will return one day."

However, Li Huowang just gritted his teeth, both his hands shaking continuously.

Just as he was about to tell Bai Lingmiao the truth, Hong Zhong suddenly appeared beside him and started gesturing excitedly. "Quick! Tell her that you didn't find them! Tell her that the Bai family most likely ran away to avoid some disasters!"

Hearing this, Li Huowang glared at the annoying Hong Zhong.

"Why are you glaring at me? I'm only saying this to help you! Look, the Bai family is already dead. There's nothing to be gained even if you tell her now. She would be completely devastated! She may even come to hate you, the one responsible for the deaths of her family members! But if you do as I say, then she won't be sad and would even be able to retain a sliver of hope!"

Chapter 310 - Speak

"You want me to lie to her!" Li Huowang spat out his words from the gaps of his teeth.

"And what's wrong with that? Do you dare to look down on lying? We can use it for both evil and good! If you do as I say, then at most, you would just be telling a little white lie," said Hong Zhong.

Seeing this, Monk sighed and pulled the excited Hong Zhong away from Li Huowang.

On the other hand, when she sensed that something was wrong, Bai Lingmiao's voice became a lot more gentle, "Senior Li?"

She extended her soft white palm and carefully caressed Li Huowang's charred fingers. "Senior Li, don't think about it too much. You must be tired after traveling for so long. Rest now. We can talk tomorrow."

After saying that, Bai Lingmiao carefully held Li Huowang's hands until he reached the bed. She was not the slightest bit afraid of his horrifying looks and just let him sleep in her bed.

As he lay down, Li Huowang took a light breath. The smooth silk sheets and the rice husk pillow were both filled with Bai Lingmiao's scent.

"Senior Li, you were completely soaked in the rain earlier. Let me make some ginger soup for you to stave off the chills," said Bai Lingmiao as she stood up and headed to the kitchen.

However, at that moment, Li Huowang raised his hand and caught her wrist. "Miaomiao, can I ask you a question? What were the members of Bai family like in your eyes?"

"My family? All of them were good. They all helped each other and never argued with each other," said Bai Lingmiao matter-of-factly. Then, she suddenly asked, "Senior Li, why are you asking me this?"

"Was there anything weird going on with your family?" continued Li Huowang.

"No, but for some reason all my family members would enter the ancestral hall quite frequently. When I was younger, I wanted to take a look at what it looked like on the inside. Back then, I kept pestering my grandfather to let me see it, but he said that I can't go inside because I'm a girl," explained Bai Lingmiao.

As she spoke, Bai Lingmiao suddenly caught on to something and covered her mouth with her hands. "Senior Li, did you find them? Where are they? Are my parents still fine?"

Li Huowang tried to take deep breaths, but the pressure within his heart was still there. He really wanted to do as Hong Zhong told him so that nothing would change, but he just couldn't do it.

"Miaomiao, I'm sorry. They are all dead. I killed all of them," said Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Bai Lingmiao immediately froze up like a statue.

Li Huowang continued to lay on the bed as he carefully and slowly told her everything that had happened.

As she continued to listen, Bai Lingmiao remained silent, but her hands grew colder and colder.

When Li Huowang finished telling her the truth, the room turned silent. Only the sound of rain could be heard.

After a while, Bai Lingmiao's white lashes fluttered and tears started streaming down her eyes. Her voice trembled as she spoke, "Senior Li, did I do something wrong? Why did you murder my entire village?"

Li Huowang recalled everything Bai Lingmiao had done for him and everyone, how she sold her gold anklet to secure money for their travels, how she cried every time he got hurt, and how she looked forward to getting back home.

“I don’t know why. I just felt cold and wanted to start a fire. I really just wanted to start a fire to warm myself up...” Li Huowang kept repeating over and over.

Bai Lingmiao’s face showed fear as she suddenly pulled her hand from his and slowly backed away.

She suddenly sprinted toward the door, but Li Huowang caught her and hugged her from behind.

With this, Bai Lingmiao finally broke down. She cried and struggled, her fists landing on Li Huowang’s body as she screamed. She even turned around and bit into his charred body, ripping off some scabs.

However, when she saw the blood flowing out from Li Huowang’s body, she clasped her hands over her face and cried loudly as she slowly slid onto the ground.

Soon, both of them turned silent. One of them was standing still while the other was crying on the ground.

As Li Huowang silently looked at Bai Lingmiao’s white hair, no one knew what he was thinking about.

They remained there for a long time until the room slowly became dark.

Still sobbing, Bai Lingmiao finally stood up when it was night. She didn’t even look at Li Huowang as she headed for the exit.

Li Huowang stopped her again. “No, this is Cowheart Village, your home. The one who should leave is me.”

After that, Li Huowang didn’t say anything as he directly left. He didn’t even want to defend his actions.

“You already knew that your relationship with her would be over once you told her the truth. Why do you still do that?”

Li Huowang’s face was as still as a wooden doll as he ignored the illusions.

“Do you regret not telling her a white lie instead?”

“A lie is a lie! There’s nothing like a kind lie or an evil lie! I will take responsibility for my actions! I will not lie to her!” shouted Li Huowang, his sudden outburst scaring the others.

“Senior Li, why are you leaving when you just got back? Miaomiao is worried about you. At the very least, you should consider her feelings, right?” asked Chun Xiaoman.

“Take care of her. Live a stable life here. This world is too chaotic, and you all should just stay here and not move anywhere,” said Li Huowang before moving toward the exit.

As Li Huowang passed through the village, more and more people gathered around him. By the time he finally arrived at the entrance of the village, their entire group was gathered around him.

“Senior Li, where are you going? Should we follow you?” asked someone.

“Stand there! Don’t follow me!” shouted Li Huowang, causing all of them to be rooted in place.

Drenched in the still falling rain, he turned around. He looked at everyone before taking a deep breath and shouted, “Scram! Don’t come any closer! We are done sending everyone’s ashes back to their homes! Even the final words that all of them entrusted to me have been sent to their families! I’ve fulfilled all of the promises, so what else do you want me to do?! Do all of you see the wounds on my body? I’ve already done enough for all of you! I’m tired! Do you bunch of freaks want to drag me down for the rest of my entire life?!”

When he saw the pained expressions on all of their faces, Li Huowang turned around and ran away. He wasn’t sure whether his face was wet from the rain or due to his tears. He had already made his decision while on the way back to the village.

He couldn’t stay with them. The closer he was to them, the more afraid he was that he would burn all of them down like he did the Bai family.

A lunatic who didn’t know what he would do was fearsome enough, but a lunatic with supernatural powers was even worse.

Chapter 311 - Lunatic

After departing from the Cowheart Village, Li Huowang silently walked down a muddy path.

As he walked through the rain, the paper clothes and skin became damp from the rain and slowly fell onto the ground in a mush.

Currently, Li Huowang has buds of fleshy growth growing from his burnt skin. As the rain fell onto these buds, it caused Li Huowang intense pain. Even so, he did not try to avoid it. He just took it all.

Soon, the rain stopped and the skies gradually grew brighter.

Finally, Li Huowang stopped when he saw an abandoned temple. He hadn't slept for a few days and was really tired.

Standing in front of the temple, he looked at the broken sign and the couplets covered in moss. Even though the couplets were faded, he could faintly read the words inscribed on it.

"Nothing is set in stone, everything is done by another man; your state of mind is within your control, take a step back and feel it expand."

After reading the couplet, Li Huowang entered without a word. The temple wasn't all that large. Other than a clay statue that was cut in half, everything else had been taken away from inside it.

The roof was leaking and there was water everywhere. Li Huowang stood at the only corner without a leak and stared at the rain that was dripping into the temple.

"See, you didn't listen to me and now you are alone. You should have just listened to me," said Hong Zhong as he circled around Li Huowang with a face full of glee.

On the other hand, Monk walked over and consoled Li

Huowang. “Don’t be too sad. This was not your fault. You didn’t want to kill them. You can just do more good deeds and pray to Amitabha. Buddha will not blame you.”

However, Li Huowang completely ignored the two illusions. He kept thinking about how he had become a beggar within the hallucination as well as Bai Lingmiao’s cold eyes.

Not only did his family abandon him, but he was also the one who caused Bai Lingmiao to no longer have a family. He was nothing but a walking disaster.

Jiang~

After a while, he unsheathed his sword and stared at his reflection.

At that moment, a question popped within his mind.

Why do people live? Since my life is already so miserable, what use is it for me to remain alive?

In an instant, everything turned quiet as Jin Shanzhao, Peng Longteng, Monk, and Hong Zhong all surrounded Li Huowang.

“Hey hey hey, what are you thinking? Li, calm down,” said Hong Zhong as he tried to calm Li Huowang down in a panic.

“Yeah. Daoist, why are you doing this? If you really think that there’s no meaning to life anymore, then you can become a monk instead. Why do you seek death?” said Monk.

Meanwhile, the silent Peng Longteng moved as she gestured at him with her headless body, trying to show that she really looked down on him.

On the other hand, Jin Shanzhao, who always had his mouth open but couldn’t speak, had shut his mouth as he stared at Li Huowang worriedly.

However, Li Huowang ignored all of them and examined the blade of his sword. He had never looked back on his life as intensely as he had right now.

“Aiya, it’s just a girl. There’s no need to worry about anything; even if you don't have all of them, you still have us!" Hong Zhong smiled and pointed at himself.

Hearing this, Li Huowang finally snapped. He snarled and slashed Hong Zhong's body, causing the clay statue behind Hong Zhong to be split in half.

Cold steel flashed within the abandoned temple as Li Huowang sliced mercilessly and wildly at the faceless Hong Zhong, the headless Peng Longteng, the bodiless Jin Shanzhao, and the merciful Monk.

But no matter how sharp the blade was and no matter how hard Li Huowang swung it, he still couldn't hurt them.

"You guys! It's because of you! What are you!? Why do you keep following me!?" Li Huowang roared in anger.

"WHY AM I A STRAYED ONE?! WHY AM I THE ONE WHO IS ILL?! WHY ME?! WHAT DID I DO WRONG? WHY COULDN'T IT BE THE OTHERS? I JUST WANT TO LIVE PEACEFULLY! WHY IS THIS SO HARD?!!"

He swung his sword again and again until he stumbled, sending the sword flying away.

He fell onto the ground and stopped moving. He was tired, too tired.

He was sleepy, but he couldn't fall asleep. His head kept pulsing nonstop.

At that moment, Hong Zhong slowly approached and consoled him, "Don't worry. All you need to do is listen to me and I will be able to trick many women for you."

However, Li Huowang did not react to him. All he did was lay on the ground without even blinking his eyes.

Soon, his surroundings started to distort and shift. When Li Huowang snapped back to reality, he saw that he was lying face down underneath the bridge. It was extremely humid and cold.

When he realized what was happening, Li Huowang chuckled bitterly. “Hehe... Heh.”

He chuckled and laughed until he felt very thirsty. At that point, he stood up and started walking toward the river.

Due to the rain, the water level had risen. After reaching the river bank, he lay down on the ground and dunked his head into the water to drink some of it. When he had drunk his fill, he felt very hungry. He stood up, wiped his face, and walked out from under the bridge.

After the rain, the sky was clear and the air was crisp. There were many people walking around on the streets too.

However, when Li Huowang appeared on the streets, no one walked within a radius of five meters around him. His clothes were in tatters and he was very dirty.

“Shh. Don’t let him hear you. His ears are very sharp.”

“He’s also someone pitiable.”

Li Huowang just ignored all of them as he continued to search for something on the streets. After a while, he stopped beside a trash can. Then, he opened the lid and looked inside, trying to find some food.

People nowadays were quite wasteful. Soon, Li Huowang found two cups of unfinished boba tea and a single vegetarian bun with a chunk bitten off from it.

Snap!

At that moment, a sudden flash of light occurred as a man put his phone down from beside Li Huowang. The man was smoking as he uploaded the photo he had just taken. “Hey, look! It’s the new beggar model.”

Meanwhile, Li Huowang, after finding several cold skewers in the trash can, started walking back toward the area underneath the bridge while eating them.

Several youths ran past him. All of them were laughing and pointing at him when suddenly one of them threw a pebble and shouted, “Hahaha! Hey you crazy bastard. Do you want a smoke?”

Seeing this, Li Huowang suddenly grinned and started laughing. “Hahaha! You are right! I’m indeed crazy! I’m just a lunatic!”

Chapter 312 - Li Huowang

Li Huowang waved his food as he leaped onto a parked car. Immediately the car's alarm started blaring.

"I'm a lunatic! I'm mentally ill!" shouted Li Huowang, his voice spreading out far and wide.

Li Huowang's behavior soon attracted everyone's attention. When the owner of the car ran over with a broom to brush Li Huowang away from his car, more and more people started gathering around them.

On the other hand, Li Huowang just kept laughing maniacally, stopping only when he spotted a cute little girl. He saw that the girl's mother was dragging her far away from him.

The little girl was wearing a cherry hair clip.

When he saw her, the maniacal expression on Li Huowang's face slowly dulled down, gradually replaced by pain.

After a while, he jumped down from the car and left with his food, completely ignoring the car owner who was beating him with the broom.

Back underneath the bridge, Li Huowang refilled the cup of boba tea with some river water and drank it. Then, he ate the bun. It tasted weird from being spoiled, but he didn't care. He didn't want to know what he was eating on the other side either.

Li Huowang ate the bun quite slowly, savoring its taste.

"Uncle?"

Hearing the voice, Li Huowang turned around and saw a little girl in a white dress standing beside the bridge. The sunlight reflected off her dress and made her look like she was glowing.

As Li Huowang looked at her face, he unconsciously called out, "Eighteenth Lunar?"

The little girl was visibly afraid and hesitantly said, “I’m... I’m not Eighteenth Lunar. My name is Liu Yuhuan, and my mother calls me Huanhuan.”

When Liu Yuhuan saw Li Huowang stand up, she took a few steps back. Then, she hastily opened her bag, took out a piece of paper, placed it on the ground, and then placed something else on the paper. After that, she took one hurried glance at Li Huowang and ran away.

Li Huowang approached the paper and saw that it was a bag of buns. The buns were shaped like the faces of pigs, something that would be quite appealing to children.

After a moment, Li Huowang smiled, took the bag, opened it up, and started eating the buns.

The buns were warm, a clear indication that they were freshly baked. These weren’t her leftovers but something she bought specially for him.

Li Huowang sat down and carefully ate the meat-filled buns. They were delicious.

As Li Huowang munched on the buns, his surroundings once again started shimmering. He soon found himself sitting on the side of a muddy road while eating a mudball.

“Hehe...” Li Huowang shook his head in defeat as he finished the mud ball.

After finishing his meal, Li Huowang returned to the temple and picked up his sword under the gaze of the four illusions.

Just then, Li Huowang heard the sound of footsteps and a horse-carriage. He was quite familiar with those footsteps.

“Miaomiao?!” Li Huowang ran out with his sword, only to see someone unexpected.

It was the Second Deity.

Even though the rain had stopped at this point, the Second Deity’s red veil was wet. Tears were streaming down from underneath the red veil.

Li Huowang stood in front of the temple with a complicated look on his face. He stared at the horse carriage for a moment and then turned to the Second Deity and asked, "What are you doing here?"

"Woof woof!"

At that moment, Bun squeezed out from the back of the horse carriage, shook the rain water off its fur, and happily ran over to Li Huowang. As it excitedly jumped on Li Huowang, it left behind many muddy pawprints on his shirt.

Just then, the Second Deity removed the tarp covering the horse carriage, allowing Li Huowang to see the Black Taisui that was being bound inside the carriage. Then, she took the horse carriage and held Li Huowang with her cold hands before leading him into the temple.

Once they were back at the only dry spot within the temple, the Second Deity used a towel to wipe Li Huowang dry. Then, she took out new clothes and shoes from within the horse carriage and handed them to him.

After the Second Deity waited for Li Huowang to wear his shirt, she took out his old red Daoist robe and donned it on Li Huowang.

Just as the Second Deity lowered her head to help Li Huowang tie his belt, Li Huowang extended his hands and pulled off the red veil.

At that moment, Li Huowang saw the Second Deity's face blossom like a flower.

The Second Deity's face was like a flower covered in snake scales, porcupine quills, and many other animalistic features. And in the middle of the flower was a face, half of which resembled Bai Lingmiao's face. She was crying as she looked at Li Huowang. The other half resembled a fox-like creature. With time, her face shifted and her facial organs twisted and turned. Sometimes, the face would look more human-like, while at other times it looked more like a beast. Even the number of eyes changed.

The Second Deity hugged Li Huowang lightly, but eventually tightened her grip. “Husband.”

As she spoke, the Second Deity reached behind Li Huowang and carefully pried open his palm to let the sword fall from his grip. She then removed the white cloth wrapped around her wrist and used it to carefully cover Li Huowang’s eyes which didn’t have any eyelids.

“Husband, we will wait for you. We will wait until you’ve been treated,” said the Second Deity.

Hearing those words, Li Huowang finally hugged her back. He looked at her feline eyes and hugged her even tighter.

This bizarre world was a pit of despair to many. Li Huowang’s life thus far had been steeped in pain.

Even so, no one truly wanted to die. Sometimes, all it took was one pull from someone to save a person’s life.

The Second Deity eventually left, but not before handing over the horse carriage with the Black Taisui and Bun to Li Huowang.

After the Second Deity left, Li Huowang sat on the ground as he stared at the ceiling. A long time passed before he once again picked up his sword.

Looking at his face through the reflection on his sword, he snarled and stabbed it into the air, aiming right at a black pigeon.

“Wait, a pigeon?”

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about what it was, the pigeon flew down and landed on Li Huowang’s shoulder. He then saw that there was a small letter tied to the leg of the black pigeon.

When he opened the letter, he saw that there was a symbol at the top. Li Huowang thought that the symbol looked like an eye under the character of Heaven. As he read its contents, he was shocked and quickly rode the horse carriage away from the temple.

The letter was from Tuoba Danqing. He was telling Li Huowang to once again meet him at Yinling City, at the same place.

Li Huowang then remembered his plan. He needed to find out more about Bei Feng through the Surveillance Bureau.

At that moment, a strong sense of unwillingness surged up from deep within his heart and suppressed all his pain.

“Bun, let’s go! This fucking place won’t kill me that easily! Since I have nothing to lose, I’m not afraid of anything! Even if I die, I’m going to gouge a chunk of flesh out of death itself before going down! I will get rid of my status as a Strayed One! And then... And then I will finally...”

Chapter 313 - Yinling City

Still wearing his veil, Li Huowang controlled the horse carriage while walking amongst the crowd. Yinling City was still just as prosperous as he remembered. No one paid attention to him.

On the other hand, Bun, who was afraid of the crowd, was currently hiding under the horse carriage as it slowly moved forward.

Once Li Huowang arrived at the inn from before, he took some of the broken pieces of silver from the horse carriage and paid for a room.

The horse carriage had everything he might have needed. This included not only silver and clothes, but even dry rations.

After a while, Li Huowang opened the tarp and checked on the bound Black Taisui. He then took a piece of jerky and shoved it into the Black Taisui's sticky body. After that, he took out a knife and cut a portion of the Black Taisui and ate it. While it was disgusting, he was used to it.

By now, he had eaten a lot, but the Black Taisui's size remained almost the same.

After inspecting the cow tendons that were tying the Black Taisui down, Li Huowang talked to it, "Can you hear me? Can you repeat what I'm saying?"

However, the Black Taisui did not respond to his questions and just continued to undulate its disgusting body, expelling gunks out from within its body. There wasn't even a reaction.

Lost in thought, Li Huowang patted his own abdomen.

*Maybe only the piece of Black Taisui inside my stomach can talk?
Or maybe it's only because my hearing is so sharp that I can hear it?*

He didn't know whether it was normal or not because he hadn't encountered anyone else who had eaten a Black Taisui.

After a while, he covered the horse carriage and talked to Bun instead, "Make sure you guard it well. If the Black Taisui moves or if someone gets close to it, you have to bark loudly. I can hear you even from my room."

"Woof woof!" Bun shook its tail.

Li Huowang patted Bun's head and walked into the inn.

Once inside, Li Huowang opened the window and looked down at the prosperous city before taking a book out from within his clothes.

Li Huowang didn't know whether the Black Taisui inside his stomach could learn from him like this, but he felt that there was no harm in trying.

In fact, if the Black Taisui could talk to him, then he might even be able to benefit from it. Even if it couldn't help Li Huowang directly, it would already be very helpful if it didn't do anything else and just sat quietly inside his stomach.

"All humans are kind in the beginning, but their behavior changes according to their environment..."

As he spoke, a black tentacle sprouted out from his belly button, shook around, and then retreated back.

"Lychee, this is a lychee," said Li Huowang as he peeled the fruit, "Eat."

He then placed the translucent fruit into his mouth.

"No, it's not kill, but eat."

When the other houses lit up their lights, Li Huowang finally felt that the time was right and walked out. He came to where he previously drank with Tuoba Danqing. When he walked in, he was immediately guided by a server.

It was clear that Tuoba Danqing had instructed the server beforehand as the moment Li Huowang sat down, delicious food was served.

Li Huowang waited in the room for a while before he heard Tuoba Danqing's unique laughter.

"Hehe~ Junior Er, long time no see." The door opened with a creak and Tuoba Danqing walked in. He was wearing a robe made from brocade silk. "No need to stand up. Please sit. We are all brothers here, and so there's no need to be courteous."

As Tuoba Danqing walked in and closed the door, Li Huowang removed his veil.

Tuoba Danqing's eyes revealed a myriad of emotions when he saw Li Huowang's charred skin behind the bronze coil veil. Even so, he managed to hold it all in and didn't say anything. He just laughed and poured a cup for himself. "Come, drink with me."

However, after learning how Tuoba Danqing did stuff, Li Huowang was no longer hasty. Slowly, Li Huowang drank his fill of wine. Thankfully, he had drunk a lot of water beforehand, and thus didn't get drunk that easily.

After drinking and eating, Tuoba Danqing coughed lightly, signaling that he was about to start talking about business. "Junior Er, about the mirror you asked... I managed to find the owner. The member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao fooled a blind person to acquire it from him."

"Oh? Is he a blind old man with the surname Chen?" asked Li Huowang.

"Huh? How did you know?" questioned Tuoba Danqing, puzzled.

Seeing the man's response, Li Huowang took a quick glance at Hong Zhong's illusion. As he had thought, that member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had even used the fake identity he stole from someone.

"Junior Er, the man in question said that he can't teach you how to use the mirror, but if you return to him, then he can trade it back with a talisman guidebook," said Tuoba Danqing.

“What kind of talisman guidebook?” asked Li Huowang.

“He told me that the guidebook contains various chants and methods to draw different talismans. If you are able to master it completely, then you would be able to do many things related to fortune-telling and healing,” Tuoba Danqing chuckled slyly as he explained, “But I have a feeling that he’s lying. The book might be useful, but it’s probably not as good as he is making it out to be.”

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang took out the mirror. He had no idea what to do because he was inexperienced in these matters.

Thus, he looked at Tuoba Danqing. “Senior Tuoba, could you guide me about what I should do?”

Tuoba Danqing was someone who was experienced in dealing with the Jianghu, and so he sought out the man’s advice.

Hearing Li Huowang’s request, Tuoba Danqing picked up a piece of glistening fish and placed it in his mouth. “Hmm... I think you should agree to the exchange. Even though he didn’t tell me, it was clear to me that the mirror was something precious to him. If you don’t give it to him, then he might come and look for you himself. Plus, even though the mirror is good, it’s useless to you as a member of the Ao Jing Sect. As long as you have the resolution to harm yourself and use the Profound Records, you don’t even need it. On the other hand, there might be some unique talismans recorded in the guidebook that could cover the weaknesses of the Ao Jing Sect’s methods. Additionally, in these chaotic times, it’s always good to have an extra ally. Maybe the blind man could even help you out next time.”

Li Huowang carefully considered the advice and found that it was indeed quite helpful. “Thank you for your guidance, Senior Tuoba.”

“No need to be so courteous. If you want to thank me, then you can just let me in on some good stuff in the future,” said Tuoba as he raised his cup for a toast.

After that, both of them drank, the distance between them gradually shortening.

When they almost finished with their meal, Tuoba Danqing's drunk face suddenly turned serious. "Junior Er, now that the trivial matters have been discussed, we should talk about official matters. If you want to climb the ranks, then you need to work hard. Thankfully there's something you could do down toward the South."

Chapter 314 - Matters

As soon as Li Huowang heard Tuoba Danqing's words, he perked up. The whole reason he had even joined the Surveillance Bureau was to earn their trust and to find out more about Bei Feng. Since he was this close to getting the information that he needed, he was more than happy to play the part of a good subordinate. "Oh? Senior Tuoba? What is the mission this time?"

Li Huowang was handed a piece of paper. It recorded an incident that happened within one of the counties of the Liang Kingdom. As he read through the details of the bizarre case, Li Huowang frowned.

Is this... Related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

Just as this thought occurred to him, Hong Zhong stood up and spat at him. "Oi oi oi, who said that it's the Sitting Oblivion Dao behind it? Since when did it say that the Sitting Oblivion Dao was responsible for this incident? At this point, you might as well say that every single incident out there was caused by the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Heck, you might as well just say that the Sitting Oblivion Dao is the one responsible for the Natural Disasters that happen every ten years or so."

Li Huowang ignored him and quickly finished reading through the letter. After he kept it away, he affirmed Tuoba Danqing, "Don't worry. You can leave this to me. I have been prepared to do my best for the Surveillance Bureau ever since I decided to join you!"

Tuoba Danqing's eyes revealed a bizarre emotion upon seeing how Li Huowang agreed to the task so easily. "Junior Er, why did you agree to it so fast? Aren't you afraid that I will take some of your lifespan pills?"

"Of course not. I trust you. Plus, the reward is nothing compared to being able to serve the Surveillance Bureau,” said Li Huowang.

Hearing Li Huowang’s righteous words, Tuoba Danqing grabbed his cup and smiled eerily at him.

Bam!

He slammed the cup onto the table and said, “To be frank, we don’t care who the emperor is. We, who joined the Surveillance Bureau are all the same: we want to be able to feed ourselves and our families, as well as find allies. Junior Er, I really do look at you as a true brother, but I fear that the reason you joined the Surveillance Bureau is different from ours.”

The relaxed atmosphere turned cold in an instant.

“Stay calm. You agreed too fast, and so he’s suspecting you.” Hong Zhong tried to help by explaining the situation.

The sudden turn in the situation caused the drunk Li Huowang to snap out of his stupor and calm down. He needed to give the correct answer or he might lose his chance at gaining further access to the Surveillance Bureau!

Various thoughts flashed past his mind until he remembered something.

The Liar’s Scripture!

“Why did I join the Surveillance Bureau?” Li Huowang’s breathing became faster and his eyes were suddenly filled with hate. “That’s because I want to kill all the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!”

“They tricked me and the rest of us at the Cross Temple! They even killed everyone except for me. I hate them! I’ve heard that the Surveillance Bureau actively hunts down the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and that’s why I’ve joined! As long as they exist, I will never rest!” said Li Huowang as he smashed the wine cup in his palm.

His reasoning was fake, but his hatred was real.

When Tuoba Danqing saw how agitated Li Huowang was, he sighed. "Is that so? I've heard about what happened back in the kingdom of Si Qi, but to think that you were involved in it. Sorry, I've made you remember such an unfortunate incident. This is my fault, and so I will punish myself by drinking three more cups."

Tuoba Danqing emptied his cup of wine in one go.

After drinking all three cups, the drunken Tuoba Danqing consoled Li Huowang, "Don't worry. I will be sure to help you in your journey of revenge. Since you want to fight against them so much, then I will send any missions related to them toward you first."

Li Huowang's reasoning hadn't just been decided randomly. It also included his objective of finding out more information on Bei Feng.

After getting Tuoba Danqing's acknowledgement, Li Huowang leaned forward and said agitatedly, "Senior Tuoba, I've heard that there is confidential information about the Sitting Oblivion Dao within the Surveillance Bureau? Could I obtain it since I'm already a member of the Surveillance Bureau?"

Li Huowang needed that information. If he could obtain it today, then it would be the best possible scenario.

However, Tuoba Danqing sighed when he heard Li Huowang's request. "Aiya, Junior Er, even though I know that you have a grudge against the Sitting Oblivion Dao, I still can't give it to you. You can't just gain access to the Heavenly grade information while you are merely a Tenth Pawn. Even if I were to help you, you would at least have to climb and become the Seventh Banner."

"Does that mean that I can read it once I reach the Seventh Banner rank?" asked Li Huowang.

"Of course. The reason why they safeguard the information about the Sitting Oblivion Dao so seriously is because we were afraid that a bunch of lunatics would infiltrate us and change the information or burn it all down," explained Tuoba Danqing.

Hearing this, Li Huowang nodded. With this, he had found his next goal: to reach the Seventh Banner rank and obtain the information about Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Having identified his new goal, Li Huowang asked once again, “May I ask how you can rise up the ranks within the Surveillance Bureau?”

Tuoba Dangqing picked up a tender piece of chicken and smiled as he ate it. “I knew that you were going to ask this. I know that you want revenge, but you can’t rush it. All changes in the ranks are individually approved by Lord Jixiang’s master, Lord Qin Tianjian. Usually, they would record how many missions you’ve done and once they think that you’ve contributed enough they would promote you to the next rank. But this doesn’t mean those at the highest ranks are particularly strong. Sometimes those who are strong, but don’t contribute all that much to the Surveillance Bureau would be confined to the Tenth Pawn ranking. Initially, most people see their ranking increase in a short amount of time, but each promotion would be slower than the last. You did a good job the last time around and if you continue to do so, then you should be able to reach the rank of Ninth Troop in half a year. Even though it’s only one rank, your position would be vastly different, and the benefits you would get from the Surveillance Bureau would improve a lot, and so you shouldn’t underestimate it! Many people even join the Surveillance Bureau solely for the rewards.”

“Half a year?” Li Huowang couldn’t afford to wait for half a year. Who knew how long he had to wait until he obtained the rank of Seventh Banner? “Senior Tuoba, half a year is too long. Are there any methods to speed up the process? I don’t mind even if the reward is little. I can’t even sleep in peace knowing that the Sitting Oblivion Dao has not been eradicated!”

“Hmm...” Tuoba Dangqing thought about it. “Alright. I will make an exception just this once. I do have a problematic case. I should be the one going there, but if you can deal with it, then I will recommend you to Lord Jixiang. Then, you should be able to quickly rise to the rank of Ninth Troop.”

After saying that, Tuoba Danqing revealed a peculiar smile. “Once you return, I will show you someplace that will allow you to realize just how important status is.”

Seeing that his goals had been achieved, Li Huowang revealed a smile and toasted Tuoba Danqing. “Thank you, Senior Tuoba, for your help! I dedicate this toast to you!”

After that, they kept drinking and eating. Half an hour later, Tuoba Danqing drunkenly walked out of the room.

“Alright~ Remember to go to the place I told you about soon. Don’t waste any time. Also, the blind man is waiting at the City God Temple[1] in Yinling City. Go find him to return the mirror.”

1. A tutelary deity that was believed to protect cities. Also called God of the Moat and the Walls or God of the Boundary 🙌

Chapter 315 - City God Temple

Once Tuoba Danqing left, Li Huowang naturally left the restaurant as well; there was no reason for him to stay there all by himself.

At the same time, he needed to slowly sort out all the information that he had learned today.

Just then, Hong Zhong clapped, applauding him. "Not bad, not bad. You are indeed one of the Three Officials. To think that you managed to add a bit of the truth into your lies. Even if they went and investigated, they might not be able to discover it's a lie."

Hearing this, Li Huowang glared at him. Just as he was about to snap back at him, the waiter from before walked out of the restaurant.

The waiter bowed down toward Li Huowang, only to be ignored by him. Just as Li Huowang was about to walk away, the waiter called out to him, "Dear customer, quite a lot of the dishes are still untouched. Do you want to pack them up like last time?"

Li Huowang's face was sullen as he snapped back, "No need! I don't need them anymore!"

Li Huowang's sudden outburst left the waiter feeling taken aback.

But... but you wanted to pack all of it up the last time around. Why is it different today?

On the second day, Li Huowang sat in his carriage as he traveled across the wide street. Given that his destination was the City God Temple in one of the most prosperous cities of the kingdom, it was easy to find out where it was.

Thus, he soon found the City God Temple that was located at a busy crossroad.

Sitting within the horse carriage, Li Huowang saw the entire temple and its beauty. It was surrounded by lush trees and flowers. The temple wall was pale yellow and it had grayish-blue roof tiles. It was hard to imagine that such a beautiful and grand temple was not some large sect but just a City God Temple that could be found in any city.

“Amitabha, Amitabha.” Monk’s illusion prayed to the temple earnestly.

The temple was cloaked in the scent of incense and that there was a steady group of people entering it.

As Li Huowang stood at the side for a while, he saw that most of the people entering the temple to pray were the ladies that worked within the Exquisite Pagoda. Their faces were covered in the markings akin to that of a porcelain vase. The girls were all very earnest. All of them placed their palms together and raised them over their heads before lying down on the ground to pray. Several generations of them praying toward the City God every day had contributed to the dents on the stone slab of the temple that could be seen.

As he observed them, Li Huowang’s sharp sense of hearing allowed him to hear what they were praying for.

“Dear City God, please, I beg you. I wish for a man to buy me off and make me his wife.”

“Dear City God, please take pity on me. Let me reincarnate as a man in my next life!”

Li Huowang stood outside the temple and stared at the interior. Inside, he saw the three statues of the City God situated in the middle of the temple. Beside the three statues, there were two imposing statues, one with an Ox-head and the other with a Horse-face. It didn’t seem like the City God was a deity that would grant their wishes.

After a while, Li Huowang used the horse whip to guide the carriage toward a corner of the temple. There were several people setting up stalls there. All of them were either fortune tellers or people offering writing services.

Soon, Li Huowang found the man he had seen before, Blind Chen. Blind Chen was currently telling the fortune of a woman.

“Ai~ Your fortune is very bad~ It’s terrible even. Not only will your husband turn out to be useless in his career, but there’s nothing you will be able to do. You will either have to secretly get married to another man, or you will have to live off the charity of others.”

However, when the woman started scolding him, Blind Chen just shook his head and sat there silently as he waited for her to finish scolding him.

Once the woman left, Blind Chen looked toward Li Huowang and said, “Don’t look at me like that. I just tell others their fortune, not fix it for them.”

Even though Blind Chen was blind, Li Huowang felt like he was being watched.

“Hoho, if I’m right, then you must be the man who is here to return the mirror,” continued Blind Chen.

Li Huowang was anxious to leave, and so he didn’t talk much. He just took out the mirror and placed it on the stall.

Blind Chen reached out toward the mirror with his wrinkled hands. When he touched the mirror, he revealed a rare smile. “Yes, this is the mirror I lost. Oh, and what happened to the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao who pretended to be my granddaughter? Where is he?”

“He’s dead. I killed him,” replied Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Blind Chen laughed happily. “Hahaha~ Excellent! It’s good that he’s dead! How dare he bully me for being blind and trick me by pretending to be my granddaughter?! He got what he deserved!”

Hong Zhong’s illusion scoffed at him. “Hmph! Nothing but the yappings of the dog who lost to me.”

“Senior Chen, where is the reward that you promised to Tuoba Danqing? Please do not try to weasel your way out of it,” asked Li Huowang.

“Of course. I would never dare to play tricks on the people of the Surveillance Bureau,” said Blind Chen as he rummaged around inside his bamboo basket.

He soon procured a dark blue book from within and passed it to Li Huowang. “This used to be the technique that we would never show to outsiders. Unfortunately, after our Master went crazy, everyone else scattered and now, there is no one that would uphold the rules anymore.”

Li Huowang opened the book and saw that it was indeed a guidebook on how to draw various talismans. The book detailed everything, ranging from how to chant, draw, use, and what type of materials to use when crafting each talisman. There were various talismans too. There were talismans that could be used to exorcize evil beings, to heal others, for fortune telling, and even for blessing a new house to ensure a good life. The book of talismans was very useful. Not only could it be used in a wide range of situations, but the materials used to make the talismans were simple as well, requiring only some blood and yellow papers. It was just that Li Huowang didn’t know how effective the talismans were.

As he went through the book, Li Huowang did notice something bizarre with the talismans—they were different from the one Han Fu had drawn. The talismans in this book were drawn with curved lines, and within each talisman, there was a distorted face hidden within.

Just as Li Huowang was about to ask about it, Blind Chen, as if predicting what he was about to ask explained first, "I have not lied to you. The thing I gave you is extremely useful, but there are some taboos to it. First of all, all of the talismans can only be used three times a day. Secondly, you must never look at them when you draw them or use the talisman."

"And what happens if I do end up looking at them?" asked Li Huowang, curious.

"If you see your talisman?" Blind Chen chuckled and used his milky white eyes to stare at Li Huowang. "If you did, then the talisman would come to life and set its sight on you. After that, if you want to live, then you would have to blind yourself just like me."

Li Huowang contemplated the benefits and caveats before nodding. "It's not too bad."

After saying that, Li Huowang slapped the horse. He was ready to move out.

"Hm? Are you fine with it?" Blind Chen was stunned. He had not expected Li Huowang to be so casual with it. "Wait, don't go so fast. Since you helped me exact revenge, I am indebted to you. I will repay you the favor right now as I hate to be indebted to others. Sit down, and I will tell your fortune!"

"No need!" Li Huowang touched his bronze coin veil out of reflex.

But at that moment, Blind Chen suddenly pounced forward and touched Li Huowang's shadow on the ground.

"Hmm..." Blind Chen carefully touched Li Huowang's shadow while thinking of something.

On the other hand, Li Huowang frowned when he saw how bizarre Blind Chen was acting. When he saw that the man was not moving, he warily walked away with the carriage.

Just as he was almost out of the area, he suddenly heard Blind Chen shout at him from behind.

“The moon is both full and empty. Several remaining stars circle around the incomplete moon. A bright lantern is lit in front of the house, but the house is empty throughout spring and autumn.”

Chapter 316 - Talisman

The wheels of the horse carriage slowly rolled down the path. The weight of the Black Taisui and Li Huowang's belongings made the heavy carriage leave a trail on the muddy path.

Li Huowang carefully drove the carriage as he glanced at Bun who was walking beside the carriage. Then, he held Bun's neck and pulled it up onto the carriage.

Bonk bonk bonk bonk~

Bun's wagging tail was like a wooden stick that kept hitting the wooden carriage.

Seeing this, Li Huowang irritably pushed Bun and said, "Calm down!"

Then, he took out the letter that Tuoba Danqing had given him.

Just as before, there was an address written on it, but compared to last time, there was nothing else written on it about what had happened at the place. The only thing that was written on it was that two Yellow-ranked informants had died at the location, and so the person going there had to be extra cautious.

While Li Huowang didn't know how strong Yellow-ranked informants were, he knew that it was not a minor issue.

There was no way that Tuoba Danqing would be able to use this to help him get promoted to the next rank if this were a minor issue.

While he knew that it might be dangerous, Li Huowang wasn't afraid. He was already used to it after encountering so many deadly situations. After all, a man who had overcome the fear of death would be fearless.

After that, Li Huowang took out the talisman guidebook and read it once again. He read the first page which contained a brief introduction on talismans.

The introduction explained that there was either a Daoist by the surname He or someone called He Dao who discovered a method to use the power of the world through observing nature, either by listening to the calls of the bird or by looking at the patterns left behind by insect bites[1].

The method that was born through listening to the sound of bird calls and beast howls used sound as a medium. These were categorized as ‘Chants’. On the other hand, the method that was born through the observation of the insect’s bite marks and the constellations used drawings as a medium. These were categorized as ‘Talismans’.

However, the introduction only said that the methods were derived through observation. Thus, Li Huowang didn’t think that the power of the world would bite back at the user just by looking at it accidentally. Who knew what kind of power they’d borrowed from in this crazy world.

At the same time, he realized that everyone had their own logic in this crazy world, and that most of their viewpoints clashed with those of others.

However, Li Huowang didn’t care about which one was correct; be it the power of the world, The Three Pure ones, the Three Corpses, or the Five Realms of Buddhism. The only thing he cared about was which one could help him, even if it meant summoning the Jade Emperor to the mortal realm.

“A single talisman has to be made in one stroke. First, draw the character for four, then diagonally move toward the left before going down vertically, then draw the character for ‘ugly’ before writing the two characters for fire. After that, draw four circles with an inverse stroke to form the lotus...”

Blind Chen had warned him before that it was risky to use the talismans and it wasn’t easy either. Li Huowang had to chant while drawing the talisman. If he made a mistake in either the chant or the drawing, the entire talisman would become useless. Even more vexing was the fact that he couldn't confirm whether or not his talisman was drawn properly or not.

It would take some time for him to learn how to use the talismans in the book.

Li Huowang suddenly felt that compared to using the Profound Records, it was much harder to use the talismans. Even though the price was much more steep, it was far easier to use the Profound Records.

As he continued chanting, Li Huowang placed a piece of yellow talisman paper on the horse carriage and bit his finger. Then, he used his bloody finger to draw the talisman.

“...The essence of the Heavens and Earth, the essence of the sun and moon. Combine the essence of the Heavens and Earth. Combine the brightness of the Sun and Moon!”

Li Huowang finished the chant in his heart and placed the talisman onto the rump of the horse.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly heard a faint whispering sound.

However, before he could hear what it was, the black horse pulling the horse carriage suddenly neighed as the veins throughout its body bulged and it suddenly started running much faster.

The sudden gust of wind blew Li Huowang's veil upward, revealing his face to the outside world.

However, when Li Huowang heard the creaking of the axle, he suddenly felt nervous.

I hope the carriage doesn't fall apart.

After running for some time, Li Huowang took the talisman off the horse, causing the beast to return to normal. But in just that short amount of time, the horse carriage managed to travel several miles. Despite his low expectations, the talisman was surprisingly useful.

Meanwhile, the black horse was sweating profusely as it drank water by the mouthful from the river. As Li Huowang scrubbed the sweat off the horse, he saw that it was an oily red liquid.

Are there really no other side effects to using the talisman?

“Woof woof!”

At that moment, Bun suddenly snarled as it ran toward the main path.

When Li Huowang raised his head, he saw that it was a peddler. As he saw the peddler walking into the distance, Li Huowang quickly chased after him with his horse carriage. He was quite close to the destination and he needed more information on the town.

“Hey! Wait up!”

When the peddler saw the bronze coin sword on Li Huowang’s back and his red Daoist robes, he placed down his shoulder pole and rubbed the sweat on his face. Then, he stared warily at Li Huowang. “What do you need, Daoist?”

“Nothing much. I was just thinking that it would be safer to travel with others. No reason to lose our lives to the bandits,” replied Li Huowang.

“Haha, Sir Daoist is quite the jokester. I don’t know about the other places, but there are no bandits around here. Rather than bandits, we should be more wary about the beasts within the forest,” replied the peddler.

“Really? But I’ve heard that this area is not very safe?” said Li Huowang, throwing out the hook as he waited for the fish to bite.

“That’s just within the county, and has nothing to do with us. Besides, there’s the merchant guild within the county and they don’t really need peddlers like us.”

“Oh? Is that so? This is my first time here and I don’t know the place all that well,” said Li Huowang, trying to dredge up some more information.

However, faced with his questions, the peddler kept his mouth sharp; it was as if he was wary of something.

Seeing this, Li Huowang did not ask any further but instead looked at the peddler's wares as he asked, "What do you have for sale?"

Seeing that there was business to be done, the peddler instantly perked up. "I'm a food peddler, so I naturally sell food. I have a lot of types of pastes, orange dumplings, maltose sweets, and other such knick-knacks."

After buying half of the peddler's wares, Li Huowang once again raised his earlier queries. This time, the peddler finally answered after much hesitation.

The peddler looked toward the forest warily before whispering to Li Huowang. "Remember; you mustn't tell this to others. I've heard that the Cangshui County has ghosts."

"Ghosts?" Li Huowang was shocked. He had never expected someone to tell him something like this.

"Yeah. Do you remember the Ghost Festival that we celebrated recently in July? It's said that the King of Hell forgot to close the gates, and now the beings of Hell have escaped."

However, Li Huowang did not believe any of it. The peddler would have to be a God to know that the King of Hell forgot to close the gates to Hell. "What has happened to Cangshui County? Don't exaggerate anything and tell me only the truth."

1. Bite marks refer to the path certain insects make when feeding, such as termites where you can see the hollow paths in the wood they chewed through 🖐️

Chapter 317 - Fortune Telling

The peddler was embarrassed when Li Huowang did not believe him. "I've only heard all this from the village elder. He said that the ghosts wanted to be reborn, and so they stole many young babies that were less than a year old. Moreover, because they were stuck in Hell for so long without anything to entertain them, they are also targeting women."

"You mean that a lot of people have lost their babies and many women were raped within the Cangshui County?" asked Li Huowang.

"Yes! Wow, a Daoist sure is amazing. It only took you one word to explain everything that has happened," said the peddler.

Li Huowang frowned. If it was only babies being kidnapped and women getting raped, then the county could just send the guards instead of informing the Surveillance Bureau. There had to be something that the peddler didn't know.

After he finished talking to the peddler, Li Huowang urged his horse and the horse carriage continued moving.

Li Huowang managed to enter the city just before the gates closed. When the guards saw the identification token on Li Huowang's waist, they immediately called the town guards and had them escort him to the magistrate's office.

On the way to the magistrate's office, the sound of footsteps rang out incessantly. As Li Huowang saw several strong men running past his carriage while carrying a torch, he asked the guard that was escorting him, "Who are they?"

The guard clasped both of his hands together before answering,

“My Lord! These are the men the magistrate has chosen to patrol during the night. Everyone within Cangshui County is very nervous right now, and so we have imposed a curfew. We will capture anyone who’s loitering outside after curfew.”

Hearing this, Li Huowang silently nodded.

Meanwhile, Bun felt quite uneasy in the new environment; it kept pushing its head into Li Huowang’s body.

As they moved, Li Huowang scanned the streets but didn’t find anything unusual.

Soon, they arrived at the magistrate's office. The people inside had already been informed of Li Huowang’s arrival and were currently standing there, waiting to receive him near the two stone lions at the gate.

“We greet the Lord!” The magistrate bowed. He was wearing the robes of an official. Following his lead, his deputy, secretary, and the other officers bowed as well.

Li Huowang jumped down from the horse carriage and saw that the magistrate was around forty years old. He was shorter than the others, something that was made even more apparent when he was surrounded by the officers.

“Let’s cut to the chase and talk about the official matters,” said Li Huowang as he walked into the building. The others followed suit.

Inside the building, Li Huowang read parchment after parchment while everyone else looked at Li Huowang carefully. By the time Li Huowang finally placed down the parchments, the tea on the table was no longer hot.

“So you have lost nine babies and five women were raped?” asked Li Huowang.

The magistrate stepped forward. “My Lord, I think the number of women who were raped far exceeds that, but they did not report the matter to us out of shame.”

“Is that it? Is this all?” Li Huowang looked at all of him, his penetrating gaze staring into the magistrate’s eyes.

A single drop of sweat rolled down the magistrate’s forehead. After a while, he bowed toward Li Huowang before he turned around and ordered, “All of you, disperse from this room. Guard Zhou, tell your team to surround the entire office.”

With this, everyone left the room. Soon, only Li Huowang and the magistrate were left.

“My surname is Lou. Even though I was not born in Cangshui County, my hometown is nearby. As a magistrate, my heart hurts when I see my people in distress. Please save us all!” Magistrate Lou cried and knelt on the ground.

However, this was a bit overwhelming for Li Huowang; he and the magistrate did not have a superior-subordinate relationship. There was no need for the man to beg and kneel.

However, Li Huowang still wasn’t sure whether the magistrate was being sincere or just putting up a show.

“Let’s just stick to the case. Other than these cases, did anything else happen in Cangshui County?” asked Li Huowang.

“Yes! There were some thefts; however, I don’t think they were anything serious. Please look at this, my Lord!” Magistrate Lou took a map from the table and unfurled it in front of Li Huowang.

It was a map of the entire region. This region was called Jiang Nan. Beside the Jiang Nan region was the Zong Luo region. Yinling City and Cowheart Mountain were located within the Zong Luo region. The Liang Kingdom had a total of six regions, some larger than the others. Jiang Nan region was considered to be the smallest region.

“My Lord, look here,” said Magistrate Lou as he pointed at several small dots on the map. “The incidents weren’t contained within just the Cangshui County. The areas surrounding Cangshui County, including Ping Cheng, An Shan, Pan Shui, and fifteen other counties are all experiencing the same things!”

Li Huowang looked at the dots on the map and knew why Tuoba Danqing had been called for this mission even though the cases were mostly minor.

There were too many! Even sand could pile up into a mountain if there was enough of it.

Li Huowang looked at the map. “This is serious. To think that there are so many cases. How many babies went missing?”

“Fifty-seven, and the numbers are still rising. Thankfully, we are dealing with this rather seriously and the number of cases in our County are not as serious. In some of the other places, the criminals are using this chance to commit heinous crimes before blaming the whole thing on supernatural beings[1].”

“Why are they stealing babies no older than one year?” muttered Li Huowang. Thinking about all that he had experienced in this world, Li Huowang had a feeling that those babies did not survive.

“My Lord! Please save the people in my county!” Magistrate Lou knelt once more.

“There’s no need for that. Didn’t you say that the women were raped? Would you bring them in? I will investigate them,” said Li Huowang. He needed to know what was going on. Why did the culprits steal babies and rape women at the same time throughout the entire surrounding region?

Soon, a serious-looking girl was brought in front of Li Huowang; however, she couldn’t answer any of his questions.

She didn’t know who it was that raped her nor did she know when it happened. If it weren’t for her parents finding out that something was wrong, she wouldn’t have even found out about it or reported it.

Having reached a dead end, Li Huowang didn’t know what to do next. He wasn’t really an expert on such matters.

No, maybe I have one more method.

Staring at the girl who was leaving, Li Huowang thought about it and took out the guidebook on making talismans. He flipped through it and turned to Magistrate Lou. “Do you have a human bone? I need the bone to be wide.”

Blind Chen told him that there was a talisman that could be used to do fortune telling to guide him. He decided to try it out.

“A... human bone?” Even though the magistrate didn’t know what Li Huowang was doing, he still told the guards to go and get one.

By the time the sky brightened up, the human bone that Li Huowang needed was brought in front of him. It was a skull.

“My Lord, please rest assured that it’s a human bone. We dug it up from a wild grave,” said the guard as he passed the skull, eager to be praised.

Li Huowang took the skull, pulled out a piece of yellow talisman paper, bit his finger, and used his blood to swiftly draw the talisman.

“As busy as you are, I summon the Impermanence of Yin! Heed my orders, tell my fortune, and guide me from desolation!”

He then placed a bronze coin on the talisman before pressing it onto the skull. Then, a sudden cracking sound rang out as cracks appeared on the skull.

When it was done, Li Huowang examined the cracks on the skull and compared it to the patterns described in the book.

“Hmm... This pattern...”

1. This is referring to the unexplained cases of girls being raped. Some of the commoners likely raped the girls and blamed it on supernatural entities to escape blame. 🙏

Chapter 318 - Seamstress

“Hmm... This pattern...”

Li Huowang frowned as he looked at the cracks on the skull and compared them with the pattern marked in the book.

“The Heaven’s at the top. The wind is situated below the Heavens, but just above the strong women. A mountain beneath Heaven, asking to be kind but strict to despicable people...”

These were the three patterns that Li Huowang identified with the help of the book. But surprisingly, the book did not explain them, nor did it tell what to expect. The only instructions about it that were written told the reader to burn the talisman and swallow the ashes.

Staring at Magistrate Lou who was waiting for an answer beside him, Li Huowang took out his flint and burned the talisman.

The talisman burned in an eerie green fire. As he stared at the flames, Li Huowang raised his chin with unease. He could hear something whispering around him, but he could not make out what it was talking about.

The talisman continued to burn, but rather than scattering to ashes, it slowly contorted and shrunk for a while before turning into a piece of burned paper, looking quite similar to his burnt skin.

As he stared at the thing in his hands, he hesitated for a while before dunking the burnt paper into his tea and drinking it whole.

Then, Li Huowang waited. He waited, but nothing happened.

Soon, the rooster was crowing outside but Li Huowang and Magistrate Lou just continued to stare at each other silently.

Wait, is it working? Isn't it supposed to guide me? What's going on?

Li Huowang stared at the book and started doubting it.

Sensing that something was wrong, Magistrate Lou read the room and tried to break the uncomfortable silence, “My Lord, you’ve worked hard through the night. How about you go back and rest first?”

However, Li Huowang was too awake to rest. He frowned and continued flipping through the book.

Just then, a youthful girl walked into the room and tugged at the magistrate’s clothes. “Father, why are you still awake?”

Magistrate Lou was extremely kind to his daughter, to the point that he couldn’t bear to scold her. Thus, he tried his best to persuade her to leave the room. “Aiya, my cute little daughter. Go ahead and have breakfast with your mother first. I will come soon.”

“Hmm~ But I don’t want to! You said the same thing last night,” said the little girl, clearly showing just how close she was to her father.

Just then, a low shout startled the father and daughter duo. When Li Huowang approached them, Magistrate Lou paled and quickly hid his daughter behind his back. “My Lord, this is my daughter!”

However, Li Huowang pushed him away and approached the girl. Under her fearful eyes, Li Huowang tore off the cloth pouch hanging from her waist. When Li Huowang examined the patterns on the pouch, he had a revelation.

“Who made this?” asked Li Huowang. The patterns on the pouch were similar to a portion of the pattern on the skull!

The magistrate’s daughter, feeling frightened by the fierce man, turned toward her father. However, when she saw that her father did not try to help her, she started trembling. “This... th-is was given to me by my seamstress...”

“Seamstress? Bring her in!” said Li Huowang. Coincidences did not exist in this world. He had a feeling that the talisman might be working, and this was the guide that Li Huowang needed!

Soon, the guards brought the seamstress in question and presented her in front of Li Huowang. She looked to be slightly older than the daughter of the magistrate, and was equally dainty, as if a wind could blow her off the ground.

“Did you make this pouch?” Li Huowang questioned the seamstress.

“Yes...” The seamstress answered in a small voice, not daring to raise her head.

“Why are the birds embroidered onto the pouch?” asked Li Huowang.

“These are Mandarin Ducks...” replied the seamstress.

“I’m asking you why did you embroider them onto the pouch?!” Li Huowang’s angry shout startled everyone.

Scared by Li Huowang’s sudden outburst, the seamstress was on the verge of tears. “Mandarin Ducks... That’s how they are embroidered...”

Li Huowang stood up and approached the seamstress. His steps echoed loudly as he slowly unsheathed his sword. When he fully unsheathed the sword, the killing intent radiating from it suffocated everyone within the room. With this, Li Huowang looked even more menacing.

Now standing right in front of the seamstress, Li Huowang’s pressure almost made her crumble and go crazy.

“I don’t know! My grandmother taught me how to do it! The Mandarin Ducks have always been embroidered in this pattern since a long time ago!” The seamstress dropped to the ground and started crying.

However, the entire room was silent. Everyone was stunned by what they heard, regardless of whether they were the guard or the officers. All of them were staring at the seamstress.

Her voice had suddenly turned into a man’s voice!

One of the guards was the first to react and immediately ran over to the ‘seamstress’. Then, he touched the seamstress’s chest and was surprised. “My Lord! These are fake!”

Hearing this, Magistrate Lou's face paled and he immediately turned to look at his daughter.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang grabbed the ‘seamstress’ by the neck and raised him up into the air. “Magistrate Lou, it seems that we have managed to find the man responsible for the rape cases.”

“Lock him up in the prison! Interrogate him!” Magistrate Lou shouted in a fury. Both of his hands were trembling from anger.

Finally having found a clue, Li Huowang did not pass up on the chance to interrogate the culprit. He followed the guard into the prison while holding onto the culprit.

Soon, the culprit was crying out in pain within the prison.

“Talk! Where are your comrades? Where are they hiding? Why are you stealing the babies?!” asked the interrogator.

Li Huowang frowned when he saw the culprit’s skin bubbling from the hot red brand, as well as the whip immersed in the salty water.

“Alright, step down for now,” said Li Huowang as he stood up and approached the culprit. At this point, the culprit had already been beaten beyond recognition.

Li Huowang ignored the interrogator’s branding iron. Instead, he approached the culprit directly and removed his veil.

The rate at which Li Huowang recovered was very fast. However, while his face was already halfway healed, he still looked monstrous.

When the culprit, who had already grown tired from the torture, saw Li Huowang’s face, he felt a sudden surge of energy in his body. He quickly retreated, fearing that Li Huowang would eat him.

Ding ding ding~

The sound of metal clanking rang out as Li Huowang unfolded his bag of torture tools. “Talk.”

“I really don’t know! I did rape the girls, but I didn’t steal the babies!” The culprit’s pants were already wet, but he still didn’t say who stole the babies.

“Is that so?” Li Huowang picked up a small hacksaw and pressed the culprit’s head onto the wall as he started sawing.

Immediately, the culprit howled out in pain and despair, far exceeding the cries of pain he was letting out before.

An hour later, Li Huowang started chanting the Fiery Sutra to heal the culprit who was on the verge of death.

That’s strange. Does he really not know who did it?

Li Huowang was sure that the culprit was telling the truth after he interrogated him. There was no way the man wouldn’t have cracked under so much pain.

Unless... there were two people responsible for the cases? One who did the raping while the other stole babies? Maybe the two cases were happening at the same time and everyone just thought that it was all done by a single culprit?

Realizing that he might have lost his only lead, Li Huowang suddenly felt frustrated.

Li Huowang hadn’t felt this powerless in a long time. An enemy that refused to show itself was extremely irritating and hard to deal with. It was only now that he realized that the missions given out by the Surveillance Bureau were not as easy as he had thought.

Just then, Li Huowang heard his stomach rumbling. He hadn’t eaten for quite some time and was hungry.

Li Huowang took one more look at the mutilated man before walking out of the prison.

The interrogator saw Li Huowang was leaving but didn’t send him off. Instead, he kicked one of the prison guards beside him.

Left without a choice, the prison guard in question forced a smile as he escorted Li Huowang out of the prison. “My Lord, please have a safe trip and come visit us again if you have the time. My Lord's technique was quite exquisite!"

Chapter 319 - Fortune Telling Pattern

After exiting the prison, Li Huowang went to the backyard of the magistrate's office. There, he saw Bun who was drinking from the water trough along with the horses.

Catching a whiff of the familiar scent, Bun hurriedly approached Li Huowang. It was also hungry.

Li Huowang brought Bun out on the street. Because of the incidents with the babies being stolen, everyone within Cangshui County was still very anxious. Even so, there were still quite a few people doing business on the streets.

“Chili Oil Wontons?” Li Huowang saw some types of foods that he had never eaten, and then brought Bun to another stall. “Bitter lettuce noodles?”

The waiter served up two bowls of green noodles that were marked with black dots. The noodles were lightly coated in a layer of fragrant chili oil.

After seeing Bun eating them happily, Li Huowang finally started moving his chopsticks.

The noodles were quite peculiar. Even though they didn't have any peppercorns, eating them made his tongue go numb. He soon realized that the numbness was caused by the small hooks that were on the surface of the noodles. The noodles were made from bitter lettuce. However, its hooks and spines were surprisingly soft when he bit into them.

Just as Li Huowang was eating the noodles that were exclusive to the Liang Kingdom, two people walked into the stall. Both of them were whispering and laughing in a way that only other men would know what they were talking about.

“It’s true! You know what kind of person I am, right? How could I lie to you? Not only did the male ghosts escape from Hell, but even the female ones did too! Hehe~ The female ghosts were quite pretty too~ She had been enduring her lust for far too long and I had no choice but to help her. When I woke up the second day, I’d lost at least eight taels![\[1\]](#)”

Li Huowang frowned when he heard what they were talking about. The people here were very superstitious and often liked spreading rumors. All of them just believed rumors without verifying whether they were real or not. They didn’t even know whether what was happening was real.

Li Huowang continued eating his noodles while listening to the man continue talking about his ‘fortunate’ encounter.

Li Huowang quickly finished his noodles before recalling the talisman that he had used earlier. After a moment, he decided to try it again.

He once again burned the talisman and swallowed the ashes, but this time nothing happened.

Why is it so fickle? Do the talismans only work half the time? Did I draw it incorrectly?

Li Huowang read the book and tried to learn more about the talisman. This was only the second time he had used the talisman to guide him, and so he was still inexperienced with it.

“My Lord! The boss of the Wellness Hall is here to become an official!”

At that moment, one of the guards shouted, only to be quickly dragged away by Magistrate Lou. “Shh! Don’t interrupt the Lord’s work!”

I don’t think capturing the one stealing the babies will be all that hard.

Since the talismans weren’t working, he decided to do it the old-fashioned way, staking out.

Over the next couple of days, he staked out at numerous places, but nothing happened. It was as if the culprit knew that Li Huowang was here and had hidden himself away. For the next few days, none of the babies were stolen.

One day, Li Huowang was woken up from the sudden commotion. He opened the window, only to see the civilians running on the streets toward the East side of the town. Everyone was weirdly excited.

“What is happening?” Li Huowang quickly left the guest room and followed the people.

He followed them and soon realized where they were going. The people were all crowded at one of the crossroads. It was jam-packed with people! In the middle of the crossroad was the man who had disguised himself as the seamstress. At this moment, he was tied to a wooden pole.

“Start his execution!” Magistrate Lou threw the red sign onto the ground, causing everyone to burst into cheers.

When the man saw Li Huowang, Magistrate Lou stood up and vacated his seat for Li Huowang. “My Lord, you are here? It’s thanks to you that we were able to capture this vile man!”

“You are killing him now? I thought you would want to interrogate him further,” asked Li Huowang.

Magistrate Lou glared at the culprit with disgust and replied, “He’s too vile and wicked! How could we just execute him like that? We are going to torture him first before killing him!”

Just as they were talking, the executioner, who was wearing a red robe, walked up to the man. Then, he drank a cup of wine and started his work. Every time he sliced a piece of meat from the culprit, the crowd cheered.

“Why are those people giving the executioner coins?” Li Huowang pointed at some of the people in the corner.

“Those people are members of the victims’ families. They don’t want the culprit to get reincarnated, and so they want to buy some of the culprit’s flesh and bones. They will then feed that flesh to the dogs. If their grudge is big, then some of the people might even eat the flesh themselves. To be fair, this doesn’t really align with the laws of the Liang Kingdom, but whenever I think about how my daughter was about to be raped by him, I myself want to bite off a chunk of that man’s flesh! He’s too despicable!” explained Magistrate Lou.

The culprit was slowly disassembled, looking more and more horrifying. Even so, the crowd just got more and more excited. It was a surreal sight.

Every time the executioner cut off some of the culprit’s flesh and caused him to cry out in pain, everyone else cheered.

However, as more and more time passed, the culprit started glaring at everyone and cursed at them rather than crying out in pain. “Stop playing the victim! So what if I played with the girls? I’ve raped so many women but none of them were virgins! All of the women in this County are sluts! Useless! Prostitutes!”

When the crowd heard his remarks, all of them instantly became incensed, and if it wasn’t for the guards, they would’ve gone up and killed the man themselves.

“Hm? Hold up!” Li Huowang noticed something and immediately ran over.

When he approached the man, he was surprised to see that the blood that was flowing down the culprit’s body, as well as the wounds were quite similar to the pattern he saw when he used the talisman for fortune telling!

“Are you telling the truth?” questioned Li Huowang.

“I’m telling the truth! Hundreds of girls, but none of them were virgins! The women of Cangshui have all been raped by someone else!” said the culprit.

Everyone else might've thought that the man was just spouting lies, but Li Huowang did not. After all, the patterns shown by the fortune telling talisman were also appearing on the man's body.

"Virgins... Hymen..." Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and ran up to Magistrate Lou. "You had mentioned that other than the women being raped and the babies being stolen, there were also some cases of thefts?"

"Yes. Did my Lord discover something?" asked Magistrate Lou.

"Quick, show me the records of what was stolen! How much did they steal, and what did they steal? I need to know!" said Li Huowang.

When he saw how adamant Li Huowang was, Magistrate Lou immediately went and compiled the data.

While it was not easy to find stolen babies, it was quite easy to obtain the list of items that had been stolen. Soon, Li Huowang was presented with the list of stolen items.

"Dang Gui... Cinnabar..." Li Huowang read through the list and frowned.

He recalled the culprit saying that none of the women here were virgins, then he recalled the man at the noodle shop talking about the female ghosts, and finally the stolen babies.

Li Huowang picked up a brush and started writing down several words on the paper.

Red pills, nectar, baby flesh and bones...

By the time he finished writing the list, Li Huowang's eyes were wide with shock.

"This recipe... It's a pill recipe! Someone's refining pills!"

1. roughly 0.3kg, not a lot 🤔

Chapter 320 - Objective

Li Huowang once again confirmed the stolen ingredients with the list on the paper. While he didn't know what the effect of the pill was, as a disciple of Dan Yangzi, he was sure that this was a pill recipe.

Is there another Dan Yangzi?

Thinking back upon the happenings at the Zephyr Temple, Li Huowang's eyes were gloomy.

After seeing Li Huowang's reaction, Magistrate Lou carefully asked, "My Lord? Did you discover something? Do you know where the babies are?"

"No, at least not yet. But I do have a clue," said Li Huowang as he kept the paper. "I don't know what they are trying to refine, but some of the methods will always remain the same. There are certain ingredients needed to refine pills and they still lack some of them. To complete the refinement, they will have to steal some fifty other ingredients. Go and take an inventory of those ingredients and guard them well! The culprit will definitely come to steal them again!"

Regardless of whether or not it was another Dan Yangzi, Li Huowang had to first find the culprit. As long as he did that, the rest of it would be much easier to deal with.

"Alright! As long as we can help the people to find their babies again, I will listen to you! I will go and contact all of the herb shop owners," answered Magistrate Lou.

"Wait." However, Li Huowang stopped him. "You might alert the culprit if you do it like this. I will handle this. You will aid me in putting on a show."

"A show?"

That evening, Magistrate Lou brought several people with him and sent off Li Huowang with a grand parade. As he sent Li Huowang off, Magistrate Lou held onto Li Huowang's hands tightly and made quite a few oaths to repay Li Huowang.

On this day, the people learned that it was Li Huowang who had caught the culprit that had been raping women left and right. Soon, the civilians also crowded around the parade. Many of the people were filled with gratitude and kept trying to put various gifts into Li Huowang's carriage, but all of them were stopped by him.

After they were five Lis away, Li Huowang told Magistrate Lou and his men to return. Thus, Magistrate Lou and the others reluctantly turned back.

Now that the rapist had been caught, there were no longer any cases of women getting raped. Even though they hadn't found the missing babies, at the very least no more babies were being stolen either. Thus, the anxious people of Cangshui County soon calmed down.

Several days later, on an empty street in the night, a hunchbacked timekeeper was yawning as he beat his bamboo drum. "The weather is hot and everything's flammable~ Be careful with fire~"

At first, nothing happened. Finally, something changed during the third section of the night.

As the hunchbacked timekeeper continued beating the bamboo drum, his shadow stood up and its limbs became long and narrow. Then, it slowly moved forward in tandem with the timekeeper.

The shadow was somehow being held upward by something, and there was something in the middle of the shadow.

The hunchbacked timekeeper used the wooden stick to once again hit his bamboo drum and shouted, "The weather is hot and everything's flammable~ Be careful with fire~"

As the hunchbacked timekeeper approached one of the apothecaries, some of the ingredients that were wrapped in oilcloth phased out through the wall of the apothecary and disappeared into the timekeeper's shadow. At the same time, the shadow grew slightly larger.

Meanwhile, the hunchbacked timekeeper kept beating his drum, "The weather is hot and everything's flammable~ Be careful with fire~"

As more and more ingredients vanished into the shadow of the timekeeper, the shadow became more and more engorged. Soon, it no longer even looked humanoid.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang observed everything that was happening.

He had asked the Magistrate to put on a show, faking the entire send-off. Li Huowang wanted the culprit to lower their guard and think that Li Huowang had left.

With his power of invisibility, Li Huowang had quickly discovered the places with the ingredients needed for the pill recipe.

After that, Li Huowang had been staking out on a nightly basis before finally catching the culprit. After all, refining pills also depended on the date and Li Huowang knew the culprit could not afford to delay it any longer.

"Daoist, since we've found the culprit, why are we still waiting here? We need to capture them immediately and stop them from stealing any more babies!" said Monk, somehow more anxious than Li Huowang himself.

"Calm down. We won't be able to get to the bottom of this by just catching the thief. We need to let the thief go back to the main base so that we can capture all of them at once," said Li Huowang while maintaining his invisible state as he stalked the hunchbacked timekeeper and the monstrous shadow.

Time slowly passed. By the time it was the fourth section of the night, the engorged shadow had grown to the size of a small house as it moved like a giant.

At that moment, a baby in a bamboo basket phased out from a wall and vanished into the shadow, causing Monk to start jumping out of anxiety.

On the other hand, upon sensing that it had gotten almost everything, the shadow detached itself from the hunchbacked timekeeper and flew into the skies.

“Daoist! It’s running away! Chase it quickly!” shouted Monk, already on the verge of tears.

“Shut up!” Li Huowang ran onto the roof as he chased after the thing.

The shadow continued flying through the night sky as Li Huowang chased after it on the ground. Thankfully his sight was excellent or he would’ve long since lost the shadow in the night sky.

Chasing it, Li Huowang ran further and further away. Soon, he exited the Cangshui County and started running on a dirt path.

By this point, he was starting to pant from tiredness; on the other hand, the shadow monster was still flying further and further away.

Shit! I can’t let it get away!

Coming to a decision, Li Huowang quickly brought out some talisman paper and started drawing with his blood. Then, he stuck both the talismans on his knees. Instantly, all his veins on his face bulged up. Now looking quite gnarly, Li Huowang’s heart was quickly enveloped by an unpleasant heat.

But the price was worth it. His speed instantly increased drastically.

Thanks to his speed, Li Huowang managed to quickly catch up with the shadow monster.

As the sky slowly brightened and the first ray of sunlight appeared, the shadow burst with a pop. When the shadow burst open, all of the items that it had stolen fell into a large river.

When Li Huowang arrived at the riverbank, he saw several shadows moving the items that had fallen into the river. However, due to the river being murky, he couldn't see what they were. All he saw was the ingredients being transported to a hidden underwater cave nearby.

Li Huowang raised his head and saw that the cave was mostly submerged, leaving only the top part exposed to the air. "Is this their lair?"

The cave was situated at the base of a massive rocky mountain. The cave was like a massive mouth that swallowed the river.

After checking his location on the map, Li Huowang realized that the location he was at was at the center of where all the cases of missing babies in the numerous counties were reported.

"I don't know who they are, but they should be like Dan Yangzi if they are hiding in a remote place like this," muttered Li Huowang.

Having found the enemy's lair, Li Huowang should have been happy. However, all he could do was stare at the river and the water that was entering the cave.

"How do I get in?"

Chapter 321 - Water Son

Should I swim?

However, after giving it some thought, Li Huowang decided against it. After all, he couldn't use any of his techniques while underwater and thus would be quite helpless.

At the same time, as Li Huowang thought about his techniques, he realized that almost all of his techniques were incompatible to use underwater.

Should I go back and ask Magistrate Lou to send me a ship?

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about doing this, he suddenly heard the sound of an instrument from far away with his sharp hearing.

A Suona?

He hid in the bushes and looked toward the direction where the sound was coming from.

Soon, he saw a group of people parading while playing the instruments. The people playing the instruments were at the back while several people were carrying a wooden rowboat. Within the rowboat was an old lady. However, even though her hair was completely white and all of her teeth had fallen off, she still looked quite lively.

The old woman smiled as she looked at the joyous parade that everyone had made for her. The wooden boat was adorned with red and white cloths, making it look as if flowers had blossomed on the boat.

Li Huowang didn't know what the strange group of people was doing, and chose to continue observing.

The parade did not pass by Li Huowang but instead stopped by the riverside. Then, amidst the sounds of the drums and other instruments, they placed the wooden boat with the old woman onto the river and lightly pushed it toward the cave.

As all this happened, the people standing by the riverbank began to happily send the old woman off.

“Madam Liu, you led quite an amazing life. I don’t think I will have the same luck as you.”

“Yeah, Madam Liu, you are very lucky. Even though you don’t have any children, the Water Son can still help take care of you until you die.”

“Auntie Liu, please take care. I will drop by to visit you from time to time.”

As he heard all this and saw what was happening, Li Huowang felt chills run down his spine.

They might’ve made it sound nice by saying that they were sending her off, but it was clear that these people intended to take over Madam Liu’s assets.

There were no Water Sons. All they were trying to do was to send away an old person who didn’t have a family and then take away her assets.

As Li Huowang saw the wooden boat gradually moving toward the cave, he suddenly had a great idea. He once again turned himself invisible and quickly leaped onto the boat.

His sudden jump into the boat made it rock, but the old woman didn’t see anything when she looked back. She just tightened her grip on the cane in her hands as she bid her neighbors farewell.

Meanwhile, the invisible Li Huowang saw the cave getting closer and closer.

Water Sons? I want to see what you truly are!

As they got closer and closer to the cave, the sounds of musical instruments gradually faded away. Then, when the wooden boat entered the cave, everything turned silent. There were no other sounds except for the waves hitting on the wooden boat.

At the same time, there was very little light here, making the cave look dark and ominous.

Madam Liu was clearly spooked by the atmosphere but kept reassuring herself as she held onto her cane. “No, it’s fine. That sister of mine would never lie to me. The Water Son will come and fetch me. He will take care of me and I will finally be able to have a son.”

Li Huowang looked at the old woman’s frail back and felt sympathy for her. It was clear that she was just lying to herself.

Hu~

At that moment, a small light suddenly appeared on the surface of the water, shocking Li Huowang. He squinted and saw that it was a white candle.

“Is that you, Water Son? I have the surname Liu but my deceased husband’s surname was Hu. Will you take on his surname?” the old woman asked politely while turning toward the white candle; she wanted to show her good side without scaring the Water Son off.

But, the candle did not move. Instead, Li Huowang realized the boat was slowly floating toward the candle.

Li Huowang gripped the hilt of his sword and tensed up as he stared at the candle. He didn’t know who or what the Water Son was, but since they stole the babies and were probably using them to refine pills, they were definitely not kind beings.

As the boat slowly floated toward the candle, the white candle also floated backward. But after a while, the candle finally stopped.

At that moment, Li Huowang lurched forward and realized that the boat had reached the bank.

The riverbank was uneven, causing the old woman to fall to the ground.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang stepped over the old woman who had fallen onto the ground and slowly walked toward the candle. He approached carefully and finally saw the being that was holding the candle.

It was a humanoid being with various defects.

Its hair was frighteningly long and covered its hunched-back. Its nails were even longer than its fingers and curled into spirals. Its teeth were growing messily in its mouth while its face was uneven and with lots of bumps. Li Huowang also saw some of the creature's hair grow into its eye sockets. It was blind!

“Li Huowang, be careful. That is a Human Xiao[1],” Hong Zhong finally spoke after being quiet for a long time.

Hearing this, Li Huowang looked at him with a puzzled expression.

After a moment, Hong Zhong continued explaining, “When a human is stricken by bad luck and can’t die even though they are already very old, their white hair would eventually turn green, their teeth would grow long in their mouth, and they would no longer be able to speak human languages. Instead, they would only be able to converse in their language. From that point on, they are considered as evil beings that are half human and half ghost.”

Just then, the Human Xiao placed the candle on the tip of its finger and moved it lightly, using it to lure the old woman deeper into the cave.

Li Huowang wanted to chase it but suddenly stopped. He just stood there and saw the candle disappear before whispering to Hong Zhong. “Are you telling the truth or just spouting some random bullshit?”

Hearing this, Hong Zhong scoffed, “You think that I would lie for something so trivial? Just to toy with you? I’m still one of the three leaders, Hong Zhong. If I wanted to trick you, then I would’ve made it so you would die for sure! Fine, since you don’t believe me, I won’t explain anything else about Human Xiao to you.”

However, Li Huowang just stood there and stared at Hong

Zhong.

Seeing Li Huowang's reaction, Hong Zhong suddenly felt confused. "Is there something on my face? Why are you staring at me? Are you here just to sit around or to find out what's happening?"

Li Huowang frowned and shook his head. "I just thought that something was fishy. You are an illusion of mine, so why do you know things that I don't?"

After that, Li Huowang turned around and looked at the other illusions around him. "If you guys are not illusions, then what are you?"

This time, it was Hong Zhong's turn to look at Li Huowang, smiling mischievously as he did so. "That, I don't know. You have to ask yourself."

1. A type of evil being in China. Don't really have a counterpart in English history. The closest you can get is an undead I think? 🤔

Chapter 322 - Human Xiao

Li Huowang looked at Hong Zhong silently before looking at Monk, Peng Longteng, and Jin Shanzhao.

Ever since all of them had appeared, they had been constantly following him. Thus, he had thought that it had something to do with his identity as a Strayed One.

But when Hong Zhong told him about Human Xiao, he instantly knew that something was not right.

Maybe Tuoba Danqing knew more about this, but Li Huowang dared not to ask. He was afraid that Tuoba Danqing would find out his identity.

If they are not illusions, then what are they? Why are they following me constantly?

This was the first time that he had thought about it seriously.

He then recalled Jiang Yingzi who had appeared abruptly and then disappeared just as abruptly.

She appeared when I felt ashamed, but then she disappeared on her own when she felt ashamed instead. Maybe...

Li Huowang felt like he had a clue, but the answer was still very far from him. It was as if his thoughts on the matter were shrouded in a veil that would not dissipate. The more he thought about it, the less he knew.

Hong Zhong smiled wider when he saw Li Huowang thinking about it. "You don't know? Maybe I can help you a little. Do you know about the story of the spirits that serve the tiger? [\[1\]](#) Legends says that people killed by the tigers would become ghostly slaves in their stomach, luring others to also be eaten by the tigers. Maybe you are something like that and we are the enslaved souls?”

“Enslaved souls?” Li Huowang looked at Hong Zhong in disbelief before continuing in a serious tone, “If you guys really are my enslaved souls, then you’ve brought me nothing but trouble. You guys are useless! The only thing you do is to make others think that I’m going crazy when I’m talking to you!”

Hearing this, Hong Zhong smiled and laughed. “Hey, maybe you really are going crazy. I’ve always thought that you were abnormal.”

Li Huowang glared at Hong Zhong as if he wanted to bite Hong Zhong’s head off. His veins pulsed on his forehead.

“Hohoho~ You are glaring at me again? What can you do if I keep scolding you and calling you a crazy person? My little Huowang~” Hong Zhong arched backward, his skinless face rippling as the flesh wiggled, revealing an absurd smile.

With that taunt, Li Huowang suddenly felt his brain go numb. He immediately grabbed his sword and placed it against his own neck, the sharp edge piercing the skin. Then, he snarled, “Oh? Come on then! Let’s fucking die together!”

Hong Zhong panicked when he saw the blood spraying in the air, “Hey hey hey, what are you doing?!”

However, before Hong Zhong could say anything else, a massive halberd pierced through him and lifted him up before smashing him onto the ground.

It was Peng Longteng’s halberd. She was the one who swept her weapon filled with killing intent at Hong Zhong.

At the same time, Monk quickly ran over and tried to persuade Li Huowang. “You can’t die, Daoist! You still haven’t gotten rid of your status as a Strayed One. Didn’t you want to go back and find your family? You can’t give up.”

Just then, a tentacle wriggled out from within Li Huowang’s belly button and wrapped itself around his wrist tightly.

As more and more tentacles sprouted out to grab his arm, Li Huowang sat on the ground, panting.

Li Huowang didn't like this feeling. It felt like his internal organs were being moved around.

Seeing that Li Huowang had finally stopped, Monk ran over to Hong Zhong and scolded him, "Stop taunting him. The Daoist has nothing else to lose and would not hesitate to throw away his life. He's like a dry match that can light up instantly."

Hong Zhong glared at Li Huowang from afar and then scoffed before he sunk himself into the water, "What a crazy bastard."

Li Huowang cooled down after being stopped by the tentacles and Monk's persuasion. He removed the sword from his neck and the black tentacles quickly plugged the wound.

At that moment, Li Huowang realized that he was not who he was. Why did he become so irritable and why was he so easily taunted? Was that really him?

"Daoist, let's move quickly. They are using the babies to refine pills. Saving a person's life is much more noble than constructing numerous temples. You have to persevere in doing good deeds; after all, Buddha is watching. Maybe Buddha will come and help you if you save enough people," said Monk.

Monk's words made Li Huowang laugh out loud as he placed his sword back into its scabbard. Then, he stood up and started walking in the direction where the candle had gone.

"Monk, you are not my enslaved spirit. You were not killed by me, and I don't even know if you are still alive or dead yet," said Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Monk's illusion flickered lightly; however, this went unnoticed. At the same time, Monk's eyes opened wide as he muttered to himself, "I'm not dead? Then who am I?"

Li Huowang did not answer him as he navigated through the dark cave.

Li Huowang hadn't gone too far when another Human Xiao crawled over to where he was earlier. It licked Li Huowang's blood that was splattered on the ground before quickly receding into the darkness.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang remained invisible as he continued to look for the Human Xiao that had disappeared with the candle. Since he had found them, it was time to deal with them. Li Huowang was feeling quite pent up and needed a place to vent.

As he continued walking, Li Huowang heard a voice. The voice was chaotic, yet was rhythmic, as if it was chanting something.

Li Huowang followed the voice and saw something bone-chilling. A group of Human Xiao were sitting around and listening to another Human Xiao who was chanting something while wearing a tattered Daoist robe.

The Human Xiao with the Daoist robe had a black horse-tailed whisk stuck to the back of its neck. Based on how it was chanting something while reading from a paper, it was most likely the leader.

Even though the Human Xiao's four limbs were gangly, all of them still somehow managed to sit cross legged with their absurdly long toenails.

Li Huowang was surprised at the suspiciously familiar sight.

Is this a morning lecture? They are having a morning lecture?

The Human Xiaos were indeed having a morning lecture. Li Huowang remembered how he did the same back in Zephyr Temple. The same monsters and the same dreams to become Immortals.

When he realized the familiarity, Li Huowang wanted to puke. He suddenly felt extremely disgusted.

What kind of fucking monsters are cultivating to be Immortals?

Li Huowang gritted his teeth as he ran toward the leader.

"Wait, Daoist! We need to find the babies first! If the babies can't return home, then their mothers will be stricken with grief," called out Monk.

Li Huowang slowly came to a stop when he heard Monk's words. He hesitated for a bit before slowly walking back to the darkness.

However, just as Li Huowang was about to start searching for the babies, he saw another Human Xiao crawling swiftly on the ground as it approached the leader of the Human Xiaos and whispered something to it.

1. A folklore story where people killed by tigers would have their souls enslaved by it. The enslaved souls would then help the tiger to trick other victims. As an idiom, it means helping evil people do their bidding and luring victims 🐾

Chapter 323 - Method

Immediately, all of the Human Xiaos exploded into action. They quickly scattered at a blinding speed, disappearing in an instant.

What's going on? Did they find me?

Li Huowang felt his heartbeat suddenly quicken. The situation had changed much faster than he could have imagined.

As Li Huowang quickly weaved through the rooms to find the babies, he realized that not only did the things all of them do resemble the Zephyr Temple, but even the decorations and rooms here resembled it!

Li Huowang suddenly stood still while searching for the babies. In a dark environment like this, sound was the best method to determine directions. Thus, Li Huowang quickly removed the cotton from his ears.

Immediately, he was overwhelmed by the sound of the river, the crawling Human Xiaos, dripping water, and various other noises.

Amidst all the noise, he closed his eyes and did his best to discern the noises and their sources. Gradually, he managed to hear some words.

"Uncle?"

That noise...

As Li Huowang tried tracing the sources of the sounds, he suddenly heard crying noises.

I've found them!

He immediately ran towards the source of the voices. He ran through the caves, quickly going over uneven ground. In the end, he finally found a smaller cave with a light. The babies were inside there!

At this moment, there were several old people carefully using cinnabar to dot the foreheads of the babies. Even the old woman from before was here.

At this moment, she was holding a baby girl, but rather than joy, her face was filled with uneasiness.

There were still twenty to thirty babies that were alive, but he also saw several discarded baskets that were producing a rotting stench. He didn't want to see what was inside.

With Monk urging him, Li Huowang gradually revealed himself and whispered to the old people, "Don't worry. The caves are a bit chaotic now. Wait here and I will bring you out later."

Hearing his voice, the old people raised their heads and saw Li Huowang. Seeing him, some of their numb eyes gradually grew bright.

After a moment, one of them, who was around a hundred years old, slowly stood up with his cane and started shouting, "Water Sons! Water Sons! Someone has sneaked in here!"

His shout instantly caused a chain reaction and most of the other older people started shouting as well.

Seeing this, Li Huowang snarled and swept his sword at them, decapitating three of them in a single go.

But even if he killed all of them at this point, it would be useless. The Human Xiaos had heard their shouts.

In just a few moments, someone threw a handful of black glutinous rice at Li Huowang, black smoke trailing off them.

In that moment, Li Huowang shifted his body and the black glutinous rice phased right through his illusion before hitting an old woman instead. With a startled cry, her flesh started melting off and she soon became a smoldering corpse.

"Go!" shouted Li Huowang as he used his sword and shaved off all the freshly-grown nails on his left hand.

As he heard the Human Xiaos crying outside, he quickly hid his illusion underneath the ground and once again turned invisible.

However, just then, one of the old people stood up and warned the Human Xiaos, “My son! That man entered into the ground! He must know of a method to travel straight through it! Be careful!”

A strong killing intent instantly bloomed within Li Huowang’s heart. He had never hated someone so much. The old people here were even worse than the Human Xiaos.

One of the Human Xiaos had heard the old person’s warning and used its long fingernails to pick up two dried leaves. Then, it placed them on both of its eyes and wiped them. As it wailed, all of the other Human Xiao ran straight at Li Huowang, carrying black horse-tail whisks, Daoist bells, and cherry wood swords.

Seeing this, Li Huowang took out his bronze coin sword and started chanting. The sword instantly split apart and the various coins pierced through numerous Human Xiaos.

In an instant, the dark cave was lit up by metal sparks.

As Li Huowang was fighting against the Human Xiaos, one of them grabbed a purple talisman and placed it on an umbrella before trying to use it to stab Li Huowang from the back.

Li Huowang’s ears moved slightly and he quickly turned around. When he saw the Human Xiao attempting to backstab him, he opened his mouth. At that moment, a bunch of black tentacles burst forth and covered the Human Xiao’s face, ripping half of it apart.

At the same time, the red thread of the bronze coin sword also wrapped around several of the Human Xiao’s necks.

With this, he pulled the bronze coin sword and decapitated all of their heads.

With Li Huowang’s rampaging attack and self-mutilation, the number of Human Xiao’s decreased rapidly. None of them could fight against Li Huowang.

Seeing that they were losing, the Human Xiao soon changed tactics.

An incense burner made with an old man's head was placed on the ground. Three white candles were placed in front of it and the Human Xiao that was conducting the morning lecture stood up from the ground. Then, it took out several wriggling pills and placed them in its mouth. It then took a stance with its mangled legs and suddenly drew its cherry wood sword. There was a black talisman stabbed into the sword.

Then, the Daoist Human Xiao started chanting in a non-human language. Even though it wasn't accurate, the rhythm and tone were still there.

At this moment, a monster with no eyes, twisted limbs, and sharp teeth was chanting to use a technique. This was both surreal and scary.

But what was even scarier was that Li Huowang didn't know what technique it was using. All he knew was that he had to stop it.

Li Huowang quickly ran toward the Daoist Human Xiao while using his sword to cut at his own left hand. Without hesitation, he chopped off two of his fingers and immediately turned them into bone bullets that shot at the Daoist Human Xiao.

But, the bone bullets were blocked by two other Human Xiaos.

Meanwhile, the Daoist Human Xiao saw Li Huowang and quickly threw out two black flags, implanting them on both sides of Li Huowang. It then stabbed its smoking cherry wood sword into the ground.

Immediately, the black smoke drained into the ground and a ritual circle appeared with Li Huowang at the center. The circle was written in a curious language.

Chapter 324 - Monster

The Daoist Human Xiao saw Li Huowang and quickly threw out two black flags, implanting them on both sides of Li Huowang. It then stabbed its smoking cherry wood sword into the ground.

As the black smoke drained into the ground, a ritual circle appeared with Li Huowang at the center. The circle was written in a curious language.

As soon as he saw what was happening, Li Huowang knew that he needed to run. Thus, he instantly tried to escape from the circle.

When the Daoist Human Xiao saw what Li Huowang was doing, it instantly made a few seals with its hands. In response, the black flags beside Li Huowang shot upward and stabbed into his feet, pinning him onto the ground.

With this, Li Huowang felt as if his legs were welded to the ground. He could not escape no matter what he did. At the same time, he also realized that the black flags had also sealed away his power to shift his body.

Seeing that Li Huowang was trapped, the other Human Xiaos also unleashed their attacks. All of them threw various talismans, glutinous rice, and bronze coins toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang did his best to block the incoming attacks with his sword, but his body was soon covered in wounds caused by the hail of objects.

Forced to the brink, Li Huowang fished out his flint and snarled as he tried to light up his skin.

Since this mission had been entrusted to Tuoba Danqing, he knew that it wouldn't be so simple. Thus, it was only natural for Li Huowang to be fighting against these dangerous enemies. Even though it was extremely painful to sacrifice his skin to Ba-Hui, he had no intention of backing down. He had already prepared himself for the possibility of death during this mission.

When the Daoist Human Xiao saw that Li Huowang wanted to do something, it quickly took the black horse-tail whisk from its neck and performed a finger seal on it. Immediately, the soft fibers of the horsetail whisk turned hard and became like a halberd. Then, the Daoist Human Xiao threw it toward Li Huowang.

The Daoist Human Xiao once again started chanting, causing the blade to fly back to it, this time with Li Huowang's left arm.

When it saw that Li Huowang no longer had the flint, the Daoist Human Xiao grinned and leaped upward as it slashed its blade down toward Li Huowang's head. At the same time, several purple talismans were attached to the blade, causing it to start smoking. In an instant, the blade exuded an incredible aura that could oppress anything and everything.

Li Huowang didn't know if he could take it, but given the situation, he had no choice but to try. Thus, he raised his bronze coin sword. At the critical moment, Li Huowang remembered the fragmented words of the Black Taisui and muttered, "What are you talking about?"

Seeing the blade closing on him, Li Huowang roared and used both hands to hold his bronze coin sword. The pain and the adrenaline from being so close to death made him look like a maniac.

"Open!"

Li Huowang directly cut his body in half, instantly himself similar to Jin Shanzhao's illusion.

Immediately, black tentacles burst forth from below his torso along with his blood. The tentacles tensed up for a moment before jumping upward, allowing Li Huowang to avoid the Daoist Human Xiao's blade altogether.

The blade then swept past his lower body and crashed heavily into the ground.

Bam!

The entire cave shook as stalactites started to fall from the ceiling. At the same time, black smoke spread everywhere, causing everything it touched to start decaying.

Thankfully Li Huowang managed to avoid it or he would've died.

Meanwhile, the Daoist Human Xiao stood up from the ground and looked at its ruined horse-tail whisk. Then, it snarled at the enemy that had dodged its attack with such a bizarre method.

At this moment, Li Huowang's body was cut in half, but black tentacles had sprouted from underneath his torso. The black tentacles were lifting him up, as if he was some half-human and half-octopus monstrosity.

The Daoist Human Xiao saw that Li Huowang's body was practically torn in half, but his internal organs did not fall out. Only blood flowed down through the tentacles. As it stared at the half-man and half-octopus monster, the Daoist Human Xiao realized that it had met a formidable foe.

After a moment, the Daoist Human Xiao quickly took a cherry wood sword from one of its disciples and swung it around before pointing it toward the ground and picking up a black talisman with the tip.

On one side was the half-man, half-octopus Li Huowang holding a bronze coin sword that was sewn together with red threads.

On the other side was the Daoist Human Xiao with its twisted limbs and elongated fingernails holding onto a cherry wood sword with a black talisman on its tip.

As they watched all this unfold, the remaining old people that were still alive felt as if their souls were about to leave their bodies. “What... what is this...”

Li Huowang glared at the Daoist Human Xiao with his bloodshot eyes. All of the problems, from the stolen babies to the other Human Xiaos, all originated from the Daoist Human Xiao. As long as he got rid of it, all the problems here would be solved for good.

“Forward!”

Hearing the command, the Black Taisui immediately started moving and rushed straight toward the Daoist Human Xiao.

The Daoist Human Xiao was also not afraid and directly ran toward Li Huowang with its disciples.

In such a fight where death was just a hair’s breadth away, the Black Taisui dared not do anything on its own. After all, its life was tied to Li Huowang’s life. If Li Huowang died, then it would die as well.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang chanted and transformed his bronze coin sword into a long whip which he used to restrain the Daoist Human Xiao’s cherry wood sword.

Just as the bronze coin sword and the cherry wood sword came into contact with each other, a crackling sound rang out. It was as if both weapons were rejecting each other.

When he saw that the Daoist Human Xiao had its weapon neutralized, Li Huowang threw aside the bronze coin sword and used his steel sword to cut open his stomach, shaving off a massive piece of flesh and skin that had just regrown.

Then, he threw the piece of skin and flesh into the air. Instantly, it expanded and flew toward the group of Human Xiao like a net.

Meanwhile, the Daoist Human Xiao somehow seemed to know where Li Huowang’s weakness was. It roared out some orders and the other Human Xiaos immediately scattered. Then, all of them surrounded Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was fighting alone while the Daoist Human Xiao had numbers on its side. Thus, it was an excellent strategy; Li Huowang couldn't possibly fight so many of them at once.

At that moment, a sword with the motif of Taichi was suddenly stabbed toward Li Huowang. However, instead of dodging it, he crashed right into the sword.

The sharp sword stabbed straight into his brain and popped out from the back of his head.

But, there was no blood!

What the sword had stabbed was Li Huowang's illusion! His real body was invisible and was three meters away!

Chapter 325 - Gift

The direction of battle changed in an instant.

When Li Huowang saw the opening generated by most of the Human Xiaos missing their attacks, he instantly seized it.

He had realized that while the Daoist Human Xiao was strong, it was also similar to a regular Daoist. It, too, had to either chant or do something as a condition to use its powers. As long as Li Huowang could force it into a melee fight, the Daoist Human Xiao would not be able to find the time needed to use the techniques.

“Jump!”

As Li Huowang commanded, seven to eight tentacles curled and then forcefully launched him into the air, bringing him even closer to the Daoist Human Xiao.

Clang!

The Daoist Human Xiao’s cherry wood sword broke. The black-tassel sword that the Abbess had given him was extremely sharp, to the point that the Daoist Human Xiao’s weapon was not able to win against his own.

Seeing that it was starting to lose, the Daoist Human Xiao used the force from Li Huowang’s assault to retreat.

But how could Li Huowang allow it to escape? He kept chasing and attacking it left and right, forcing the Daoist Human Xiao to not have the time to use its special techniques.

Meanwhile, when they sensed that their Master was losing the battle, one of the Human Xiaos threw a white horse-tail whisk with a small black talisman on it toward the Daoist Human Xiao.

Seeing this, the Daoist Human Xiao quickly used its curled fingernails to grab the horse-tail whisk. Then, it used the horsetail whisk to whip at Li Huowang, using the white fiber to entangle his sword. It was using a gentle approach to deflect Li Huowang's strong attack. Even though Li Huowang's sword was sharp enough to cut through the fibers, it would still take a bit of time.

At this point, both of them were locked into a stalemate. If Li Huowang wanted to win, he needed to cut off all of the entangling fibers before the rest of the Human Xiao could chase him to where he was.

But, Li Huowang had another trick.

He smiled cruelly at the monster in front of him. "Since you used your disciples to surround me, don't blame me for using an underhanded tactic as well! Do it now!"

Following his command, several black tentacles moved and instantly grabbed numerous tools from within Li Huowang's satchel of torture tools. Then, the tentacles used those tools as they stabbed, mauled, sliced, crushed, and pulverized the Daoist Human Xiao's abdomen.

By the time the Daoist Human Xiao held its abdomen and fell to the ground, Li Huowang had managed to free his black-tassel sword from the white fibers and sliced it downward, instantly decapitating Daoist Human Xiao's head.

Then, Li Huowang turned around with blood staining his robes as he stared at the remaining Human Xiaos. Even though they were quite numerous, none of them attacked Li Huowang. They were all afraid.

"Go!"

However, Li Huowang was currently filled with murderous intent as he charged and roared, running straight toward the hundreds of Human Xiao with his black-tassel sword in hand.

Without a leader, the remaining Human Xiaos soon scattered. It was a complete massacre as they turned their backs toward Li Huowang and ran.

Four hours passed by and the entire cave was mostly purged.

While some of the Human Xiaos did manage to escape, they were not likely to pose any threats.

After finishing all this, the black tentacles skittered like a spider as they pulled Li Huowang toward his lower body.

By now, Li Huowang was extremely fatigued, and was holding through sheer willpower. Once he reached his lower body, he grabbed it and pulled upward, almost as if he was wearing pants.

As the two halves of his body were placed together, the wriggling tentacles once again entered his flesh as they started stitching and reconnecting his nerves, bone, flesh, and sinews.

At first, Li Huowang couldn't feel anything in his lower body. But soon, he was able to feel his toes, and pain started radiating from where the black flags were stabbed into his feet.

Now that the circle on the ground had disappeared, Li Huowang bent over and pulled out the black flag.

Then, he stood up and looked at the chaotic scene all around. The entire floor of the cave was covered in mud and blood. It was almost impossible to find a dry spot.

Now that all the enemies were either dead or chased away, Li Huowang suddenly started laughing. At the same time, he realized that recently, he loved laughing more and more. He used to rarely laugh in the past.

After a while, he stopped laughing and touched his abdomen. "Thank you. Also, it seems that I have been underestimating you. You are much more useful than I thought."

In response, Li Huowang heard some fragmented sentences in his ear. Compared to the last time, the Black Taisui was now able to use some simple words to converse, albeit in an incomplete manner. This was all thanks to Li Huowang teaching it over a long period of time.

After this battle, Li Huowang decided to invest more time and energy into the Black Taisui.

He didn't know why the Black Taisui in his stomach was much more intelligent than the one outside. He wasn't sure whether it was caused by the Black Taisui absorbing something from his body and that caused changes to appear within it.

Maybe the flesh and blood of a Strayed One can help elevate the Black Taisui's intelligence?

Li Huowang was thinking about the various possibilities as he looked at his tattered body. At this point, there was barely any flesh left on him. Even though it hurt, he had gradually gotten used to it.

"Careful. The Black Taisui is not as kind as you think. It's probably trying to take over your body by entering your stomach."

Hong Zhong's sudden words made Li Huowang frown. "Who cares! I would rather it do that! Who asked for your advice?"

"Why are you so stubborn? You can't even differentiate good advice from lies." Seeing his attitude, Hong Zhong got irritated and once again disappeared under the ground.

Li Huowang just scoffed as he took out the Fiery Sutra and started to heal himself.

Afterward, he slowly hobbled back to the cave where the babies were. His steps made him look like someone who was learning to walk for the first time.

When he returned, the old people within the caves were still there. There wasn't much they could do. Escape was not an option for any of them.

"Grab the babies, We are leaving this place," Li Huowang ordered in a cold tone.

At this point, the remaining old people did as they were told. None of them dared to say anything as they saw the blood that was still dripping down from Li Huowang's body.

The reason they all sought the Water Son, even if they knew that they were being lied to, was because they didn't want to die.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang counted the babies and saw that only thirty-one of them had survived. There should have been more of them, but some of them were killed in the battle just now.

After counting the number of babies, Li Huowang carried one of them with one arm as he led the old people to slowly follow him toward the entrance of the cave.

However, just as they were about to exit the cave, the headless Daoist Human Xiao once again started to move.

Seeing this, Li Huowang instantly placed down the baby in his arm and pulled out the bronze coin sword, its tip aimed at the headless Daoist Human Xiao.

When he saw that the Daoist Human Xiao was trying to retrieve something from its clothes, Li Huowang directly cut off the arm in a single slash.

The arm flew into the air and fell, releasing the pouch in its grasp. At the same time, several lifespan pills wrapped in black talismans scattered into the semi-coagulated blood pool.

“Lifespan pills?” Li Huowang was surprised as he inspected some of them with his sword.

What was it trying to do? Was it trying to beg for mercy using the lifespan pills?

The headless Daoist Human Xiao once again started to move. This time, it raised its other arm and pushed the lifespan pills toward Li Huowang.

After it did that, its body stopped moving completely.

Li Huowang counted up and found that there were a total of seventy-nine lifespan pills. If one were to eat all of them, then they could probably live long enough to turn into a Human Xiao.

Chapter 326 - Good News

As Li Huowang looked at the seventy-nine lifespan pills, he felt his heart pounding uncontrollably.

Why did it give these pills to me?

Maybe it wanted him to eat the pills, or maybe it was trying to explain how it became a Human Xiao.

But at this point, the Daoist Human Xiao was dead and so this question would remain unanswered. After all, the dead couldn't be revived.[\[1\]](#)

After hesitating for a moment, Li Huowang decided to cut the Daoist Human Xiao's body into eight pieces to prevent it from moving, just to be safe.

Then, he picked up the lifespan pills and placed them all into his gourd.

Once he was done with all this, he turned toward the frightened old people and shouted, "Move! Don't stop moving!"

While these old people did look miserable, when he thought about how they were in cahoots with the Human Xiaos, Li Huowang had no intention of being kind to them. In fact, he would've killed all of them if it wasn't for the fact that he couldn't carry so many babies out by himself.

They continued to move slowly before finally exiting the cave the babies were being held in.

After that, Li Huowang searched the entire cave system. He wanted to remove any and all possible threats.

If they are using babies to refine pills, then they must've had books, recipes, or some notes somewhere.

Li Huowang wouldn't be able to rest unless he destroyed those books, lest someone else find them and start learning from the same recipes once again.

Li Huowang searched the entire area and found something useful. It was a furnace the size of a watermelon that was placed beside a larger furnace.

There were several corpses of babies beside the furnaces. It was clear this was where the Human Xiaos refined their pills. But different from Dan Yangzi, they deboned the babies before refining the pills.

As he looked at the furnace, Li Huowang had an idea. He would finally be able to use the pill recipes he had learned from Dan Yangzi. With this, he would finally be able to replenish his stock of pills .

After searching for a while, Li Huowang then found several books written in a strange language.

Since Li Huowang could not decipher the language written by the Human Xiaos, he decided to directly burn all of them down without even trying to confirm if there were any recipes that were using babies written in them.

After that, he once again looked around, only to find a gray stone slab. Li Huowang was quite perplexed as he looked at the strange object.

“The sacred text? Why is it here? Where did it come from and why is it so proliferant?” Li Huowang grabbed the heavy stone slab as he thought about it.

“Did the Human Xiaos learn the recipe to refine pills using babies from reading the sacred text?” guessed Li Huowang.

He read through the text on the stone slab, and found that it was exactly the same as the one he had found back in Dan Yangzi’s chambers. The contents were still asking the readers to be kind to others.

“Do you know anything about this?” Li Huowang turned around and asked Hong Zhong who had been hiding himself.

Faced with the sudden question, Hong Zhong smiled mysteriously and shook his head. "Hoho, I don't know. I don't know anything."

Hearing his reply, Li Huowang directly threw away the sacred text into the underground river, instantly causing Hong Zhong to start panicking.

"Hey! What are you doing? It might be something valuable! Quickly, pick it up!" said Hong Zhong anxiously.

"Since you think it's a treasure, you can go and pick it up yourself," said Li Huowang as he picked up the crying baby and approached the boat he had used to come in here.

The boat was quite small, and he had to row against the current. Due to this, it took him several trips before he was finally able to get everyone to the river bank.

When Li Huowang brought the group of old people and the babies back to Cangshui County, the entire town exploded in a flurry of activities.

While Li Huowang did look quite monstrous due to his wounds, none of them paid any attention to him. All their attention was focused on the babies on the ground. Among them, the families who had lost their babies were at the forefront.

The families who found their babies all kneeled in front of Li Huowang and thanked him profusely, while those who didn't see their babies started crying loudly on the ground.

Meanwhile, Magistrate Lou and the other officials all bowed to Li Huowang out of respect. "Thank you! Thank you, my Lord! You are the biggest benefactor of Cangshui County."

"Don't get too happy yet. We still have things to discuss," said Li Huowang as he told the man about the old people and their actions.

"What? You mean they were helping the evil beings?" asked Magistrate Lou.

Magistrate Lou was shocked. He had originally thought that Li Huowang had rescued them from the evil beings.

“What is their punishment according to the laws of the Liang Kingdom?” asked Li Huowang as he looked at the old people who stood there silently.

“Dismemberment!” replied Magistrate Lou, his eyes cold.

“Oh? Is the punishment that harsh? Since they are already so old, wouldn’t it be better to just cut off their heads?” asked Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Magistrate Lou disagreed with him for the first time. “My Lord, we can’t do that. A person’s age and the crime they commit have no relation at all. If we spare them due to their age, won’t the babies who were killed be even angrier down on the Yellow Spring Road[2]?”

Li Huowang thought about it for a moment and agreed. “You are right. Then I will leave it to you. It’s time for me to go.”

However, Magistrate Lou held him back. “My Lord, why are you in such a rush? Please give us a chance to serve you before sending you off.”

When Li Huowang looked at his tattered and bloodstained clothes, he nodded. “Sure. I haven’t slept in two days. I will go and rest first. Help me prepare some clothes.”

Li Huowang fell asleep the moment he reached his inn. Even the pain he was experiencing was not enough to win against his fatigue.

He didn’t know how long he passed out before finally waking up from hunger. He rubbed his eyes and saw that it was still sunny outside. He just wasn’t sure what day it was.

“Daoist, you’ve been asleep for an entire day and night. Magistrate Lou came by to see you, but returned when he saw that you were still asleep,” said Monk.

Li Huowang looked at the smiling Monk. “You seem to be happy.”

“Of course! We did good deeds together, and it's very meritorious indeed! Shouldn't we be happy?” asked Monk.

“We should. We should,” replied Li Huowang lazily as he endured the pain and sat up. Then, he changed out of his disgusting clothes and wore some new ones.

Magistrate Lou had placed quite some thought into it and prepared a set of clothes that was identical to the ones that Li Huowang was originally wearing. He even dyed the Daoist robe in the same dark red shade.

In fact, there were five new sets of Daoist Robes.

“Hoho, Magistrate Lou sure is generous,” commented Li Huowang as he wore his clothes.

After wearing his clothes, Li Huowang left the inn through the back exit and went to the stables.

“Daoist, they wanted to treat you to a meal. Are you sure you don't want it?” asked Monk.

“No. It's a waste of time. Since the mission is over, we need to quickly head back to Yinling City now. It's a long journey.” To Li Huowang, completing the mission was his priority.

However, when he entered the stable, he was shocked to see what had happened to his horse carriage.

At this moment, his carriage had been thoroughly cleaned. There was not even a speck of mud on the wheels. Even his horse had been groomed, its mane looking neat and tidy.

At the same time, various types of preserved meats and food had been placed all around the carriage. Bun was seated in the middle of all the food while munching on a bone.

“Woof woof!”

Bun excitedly greeted its master and wagged its tail. Li Huowang hadn't seen Bun in a few days and somehow had a feeling that the dog had grown fat.

Meanwhile, Monk smiled again and said, “Daoist, look. This is what I meant when I said that good people often have good karma.”

Chapter 327 - Noodles

Clip-clop, clip-clop.

The rhythmic sound of the horses galloping accompanied the departure of Li Huowang's horse carriage from Cangshui County.

In the carriage, alongside the Black Taisui were numerous dry goods. As they traveled, Li Huowang took out a dried date and savored it slowly.

"Is it sweet?" asked Monk as he leaned in.

"Yes," replied Li Huowang as he chewed on a cluster of walnuts that he took out. Then he asked, "Do you think they are happy now?"

"Surely they are. If they weren't, would they have bought all these things for you?" replied Monk.

"It's good that they're happy. This world is too painful. If you can be happy then you should just cherish that happiness."

Li Huowang muttered to himself as he acknowledged his own struggles between the pain and suppressing his hallucinations. Yet, the feeling of helping others escape from situations similar to his own didn't seem all that bad either.

Hearing something stir beside him, Li Huowang turned his head and saw Bun wagging its tail. The dog used its paws to pull at the basket, and then buried its entire head in to busily munch on something.

Li Huowang used his fingers to grab the loose skin on Bun's neck and tossed it onto the nearby dirt road. "Get down and start running. If you keep eating like this every day, then you will end up like a grown pig ready for slaughter!"

Bun let out a low whimper, expressing its discontent. However, seeing that Li Huowang didn't care for its opinion, it quickly moved its paws and started running alongside the carriage.

The dirt road seemed to stretch on endlessly. Thus, Li Huowang released his grip on the reins, letting the horse move forward on its own.

Unlike cars, horse carriage did not need to be watched all the time. Horses were smart creatures, and they knew how to avoid danger and stop at crossroads.

With his hands now free, Li Huowang took out an enlightenment book from his pocket. As he touched his stomach, the Black Taisui inside immediately stirred. Then, a black tentacle emerged from his belly button before entwining itself around his finger.

He bowed his head and watched the tentacle, all the while contemplating something. After his past few experiences, his aversion toward the Black Taisui had diminished quite a bit. The fact that it intervened when he was on the verge of self-destruction and extended a helping hand in critical moments made having such a thing around quite beneficial. Of course, it would be even better if it wasn't constantly trying to take over his body.

When his thoughts reached this point, Li Huowang paused and removed the earplug from his right ear. With this, the clattering sounds amidst the piercing noise instantly became clear.

“Earlier, eat, hungry, I help you.”

“I know you helped me, so don't keep bringing it up all the time. Now, be quiet,” said Li Huowang.

Just as Li Huowang finished speaking, the Black Taisui's voice softened, “Okay... Hungry? Eat.”

“No eating. You should study and read. Your sentences are all so confusing. There is still lots for you to learn.”

After that, Li Huowang held the enlightenment book in his hands, and began to read it word by word. He didn't know how much of it the Black Taisui in his stomach could absorb. However, the smoother their conversation flowed, the better it would likely be for him.

As he continued reading, a new tentacle extended from inside Li Huowang's belly button. A pair of eyeballs were entwined at the tip of this tentacle. The pair of eyes twisted and turned, looking at everything around it. It observed slowly, yet with intense focus. It was clear that it was brimming with curiosity.

Sensing the gaze from the two eyeballs, Li Huowang paused and reached out to grab them. As he carefully examined them, he pointed at one of them and asked, "Hong Zhong, isn't this your eyeball? Why wasn't it digested by the Black Taisui?"

Hong Zhong, who hadn't made an appearance in a long time, rose from beneath the turning wheel. "This thing is quite a treasure. I went to great lengths to deceive someone and acquire it back then."

"Another treasure? This wasn't your original eyeball?" asked Li Huowang.

"Of course not. Why don't you guess where I got this thing from?" asked Hong Zhong with a proud smile.

Li Huowang cast a brief glance at Hong Zhong, dismissing the matter entirely. Then, he nonchalantly placed the eyeball back into the Black Taisui's tentacle and continued reading.

Unaffected by Hong Zhong's enticements, Li Huowang chose to not delve any further into the conversation. Through their ongoing interactions, it seemed that he had learned how to navigate through the intricacies of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's tactics.

As he continued teaching, time gradually passed, and it was soon mid-day. Along the roadside, he found a makeshift stall that offered a place for weary travelers to rest. At this moment, several wooden tables were occupied by people who were ravenously devouring bowls of noodles.

Li Huowang pondered for a moment, and then pulled the reins to bring the carriage to a halt. He then walked over to the stall with Bun by his side.

“Sir, what can I get you?” The stall owner, a man with a small mustache, asked with a hint of caution when he caught a whiff of the extremely strong scent of blood coming from Li Huowang.

“What is there to eat? Just bring me something,” asked Li Huowang. With readily available food, he had no need to use up his dry rations. Moreover, the taste of dry rations wouldn’t quite measure up, since they were made to have an extended shelf life.

“Why don’t you take a seat first and enjoy some herbal tea? I’ll get your order ready right away!” The mustached stall owner made his way to the stove, deciding to assist his pregnant wife in the bustling kitchen.

Hearing this, Li Huowang sat down and grabbed the teapot filled with herbal tea and poured some over for Bun, who was sticking out its tongue beside him. After he saw the dog drinking the drink without any reaction, Li Huowang poured a bowl of tea for himself.

Although this place wasn’t that far from Cangshui County, Li Huowang was still cautious. He could never be too careful, and he certainly didn’t want any unpleasant surprises.

Now that I have a furnace, the next step is to find some ingredients. The pharmacies in Yinling City should have them. If not, then I can just ask Tuoba Danqing.

Just as Li Huowang was pondering over these matters, he saw the mustached man approaching him with a bowl of noodles in hand.

“Sir, your noodles are ready.”

A steaming bowl was brought in front of Li Huowang, featuring a mixture of various animal parts, wild vegetables, and dried radishes. Combined together, these ingredients emitted a surprisingly delightful aroma.

After Bun had its share, Li Huowang too started devouring the meal. The stall served a blend of different types of wide noodles, giving the dish a hearty and satisfying chew.

With Li Huowang being the only customer, the stall owner didn't have much else to do. Thus, he supported his wife and sat down at a far corner. With his keen hearing, every detail of their conversation could be heard by Li Huowang quite clearly.

“Darling, you should take a break! Don't tire out our child.”

“Er Lang, don't just worry about me. There aren't many customers right now, and so you should also go take a break and grab a bite to eat.”

“Hehe, I'm not in a hurry. As long as I'm with our child, I don't feel the slightest bit hungry.”

The stall owner crouched down and carefully caressed his wife's belly and softly whispered, “My child, can you hear me? I'm your daddy. Come on, be good, say ‘daddy’.”

In response, the pregnant lady displayed playful annoyance and gently pinched the stall owner's arm. “What nonsense are you talking about? Which child can speak before being born? Sometimes you are so silly.”

“Don't interrupt me. I'm having a conversation with our child. The fortune teller said that chatting more with our kid now will set him up for a better future!”

With that, he crouched down, placed his ear against his wife's protruding belly, and spoke lovingly, “My child, can you hear me? I'm your daddy. Go ahead, say ‘daddy’.”

Just as the stall owner's words faded, a muffled voice, akin to distant thunder, echoed within Li Huowang's ears. “Daddy...”

Chapter 328 - Mid-Autumn

Whoosh!

Li Huowang was so frightened that he abruptly stood up, and then took a few steps back.

The sound of the stool being overturned immediately caught the attention of the stall owner, causing him to approach cautiously. “Dear customer, what’s the matter? Were the noodles not tasty or was the soup not to your liking? Shall I get you another bowl?”

However, Li Huowang just glanced at him with an ugly expression, and then at his pregnant wife. Then, without a single word, he threw down a piece of silver and boarded his carriage before hastily leaving.

“Sir, you’ve paid too much. A bowl of noodles doesn’t cost this much!” called out the stall owner.

However, the stall owner’s voice only seemed to make the carriage leave even faster.

On the speeding carriage, Li Huowang had a strange look on his face as he clutched his stomach.

What's going on? Did Black Taisui just repeat that phrase by copying what that man was saying, or does it really think that I'm its father?

Previously, he had always believed that the Black Taisui, like Dan Yangzi from before, existed solely to take over other people's bodies.

However, recent events seemed to indicate that it was not like that.

“Daddy?”

The voice rang out again, only to be met with Li Huowang’s immediate rebuttal. “Don’t call me Daddy!”

“Why?”

Black Taisui’s words momentarily left Li Huowang speechless. However, after some thought, he regained his composure.

Why couldn’t it call him that? This matter might not necessarily be bad for him.

The crowing of a rooster woke up Yang Xiaohai. He rubbed his eyes and looked around. He still found living alone in a room to be a bit challenging to adapt to.

In the first few days, he couldn’t sleep well without the smell of his Senior Cao Cao’s stinky feet.

Yang Xiaohai got up and started to stretch lazily before putting on his clothes.

At his age, as he grew day by day, and so the Daoist robes he wore before had obviously become too short for him to fit.

Faced with the cold morning wind, Yang Xiaohai, shrunk his neck downward and walked toward the kitchen.

Living in Cowheart Village was much better than staying outside. There was a well in the courtyard across from the kitchen, making it quite convenient for all of them to wash their clothes and dishes without having to fetch water early in the morning.

After heating up some water and putting the soaked rice on the stove, Yang Xiaohai started to cook porridge in a practiced fashion.

Although porridge was a simple dish, the way it was made mattered. If cooked slowly and carefully, then the rice oil would emerge from within and give the whole dish a unique flavor.

Yang Xiaohai opened the jar of pickled vegetables, and then picked some of them out with his chopsticks and began to cut them into strips on the cutting board.

The focused Yang Xiaohai was interrupted by a set of footsteps. He looked up and saw that it was the plump lady.

“Little fellow, you’re up so early again today,” said the plump woman as she held a new set of men’s clothes in her arms.

“Bring out the leftover tofu from last night, and have it with the porridge,” Yang Xiaohai told her. As said this, he couldn’t help but feel emotional; their days were now so good that they even had leftovers.

“Okay,” replied the woman as she obediently followed the instructions.

After the porridge and vegetables were prepared, the rest of them also came to the hall for their meal.

At this point, Li Huowang had been gone for a long time, and everyone here had already grown accustomed to it. Even so, all of them felt a little empty in their hearts; since they had nobody ordering them around, it was as though they had lost their backbone.

None of them bore a grudge against him for the hurtful words from before. After all, they had gone through life and death together, and their wills had grown stronger. Even if Li Huowang were to scold them for an entire night, they would just laugh and brush it off.

But they were not blind, and they all could tell that Li Huowang had left.

At the same time, Bai Lingmiao hadn’t revealed a single smile ever since his departure, and her approachable aura had also waned considerably. It seemed like she had become a block of ice that repelled people.

Chun Xiaoman sighed, then picked up a piece of vegetable with her chopsticks and placed it into Bai Lingmiao’s bowl. She had been accompanying her to sleep all this while, just in case she had any thoughts about trying to harm herself.

Bai Lingmiao picked up the piece of vegetable and gnawed on it.

“That, Miss Bai.”

Lu Zhuangyuan’s words caused Bai Lingmiao to look over as she blinked and asked, “Troupe Leader Lu, what’s the matter?”

“You see, we’ve already rested here for such a long time. I feel that the Lu Family Troupe can begin to work now. Since the farmers finished harvesting during autumn, they will now be preparing for winter, and would thus be free to watch our show.”

“Alright, but since it’s the Mid-Autumn Festival now, how about we leave after that?” suggested Bai Lingmiao.

Hearing this, Troupe Leader Lu nodded awkwardly, “That’s alright.”

Originally, he had wanted to use this opportunity to bring his family out so that they could be exempted from having to awkwardly continue living in this village. However, since the other party had already stated so, they could only follow.

It had already been so long, and he had already made his inquiries. He knew that this girl’s entire family had died, and that it wouldn’t be a pleasant Mid-Autumn festival for her.

“I’ll make the mooncakes!” Yang Xiaohai volunteered bravely. “Back then, that Baldy used to have us make mooncakes for every Mid-Autumn Festival. At that time, among the assistants, I was the one who made them the fastest and the best!”

Seeing Chun Xiaoman glance at him, Yang Xiaohai paused, and then quickly sat back down as he continued with his breakfast.

After the meal, Yang Xiaohai took out the mooncake mold. They could only get this thanks to the Bai Village having whatever they needed, otherwise it was not something that could be acquired so easily.

Meanwhile, Puppy pretended to peer out from the kitchen. “Xiaohai, do you need my help?”

“No, I can manage on my own.”

“Alright, then I’ll wait to eat it at night. In the meantime, I’ll bring Gao Zhijian to tile up the kiln,” said Puppy.

All of them hustled and bustled for the entire day. As night fell, the bright moon hung high in the sky. Pastries and snacks were bought from the traveling merchant, while mooncakes were stacked on the table.

Wine was definitely needed while appreciating the moon. Thus, a bottle of cellar wine was also brought out.

Bai Lingmiao was seated at the main seat as she raised her glass to toast the others. “A full moon, and a table full of people. May all things go well for us. I wish each and every one of you peace and prosperity!”

Everyone looked around and raised their glasses as they mumbled back unclearly.

After downing her wine, Bai Lingmiao’s eyes were a little red as she said, “Come, don’t just drink. Let’s have some mooncakes too. Junior Yang’s mooncakes look quite great. They must be very delicious!”

As she spoke, she picked up a piece of mooncake and started gnawing on it.

As she looked at their cautious expressions, Bai Lingmiao suddenly burst out laughing and said, “Look at how forgetful I am becoming. I didn’t even change the offerings in the ancestral hall for the Mid-Autumn Festival. Everyone, please enjoy the food. I’ll return shortly after changing them.”

Then, she picked up a stack of mooncakes before heading toward the Bai Family’s ancestral hall.

After she left, the rest were finally able to relax. Puppy even tugged at his sleeves and commented, “Ah, this is rather unbearable.”

“You guys eat first. I’ll go check on her,” said Chun Xiaoman as she followed after her.

However, Gao Zhijian held her hand and shook his head slightly, "Let... let her... be alone... for a while!"

Meanwhile, Bai Lingmiao placed the mooncakes before the ancestral tablets and said, "Everyone, please have the mooncakes. These mooncakes that were made by Junior Yang are pretty good."

All these ancestral tablets were new and placed neatly quite neatly. All of them belonged to the various members of the Bai Village, be it male, female, young, or old. The white characters that marked the black tablets formed a massive black wall that bore down on the last descendant of the Bai family with a sense of oppression.

Chapter 329 - One Family

“Dad, this is the lotus seed paste mooncake. I remember that you love lotus seed paste the most,” said Bai Lingmiao as she deliberately took a mooncake with a red seal atop, and tiptoed to place it before one specific ancestral tablet.

“Brother, you like red bean paste, right? We couldn’t find any in the village, so try this sesame one instead. It tastes pretty good too.”

After distributing some of the mooncakes, Bai Lingmiao once again lit three incense sticks. Then, she knelt on the ground and bowed toward the ancestral tablet before placing down the remaining mooncakes.

A faint scent of smoke drifted before the ancestral tablets as the scent of incense once again filled the Bai family’s ancestral hall.

After that Bai Lingmiao looked up at the black wall, seemingly lost in thought. After a long time, a faint smile appeared on her face. “Today is the Mid-Autumn Festival. Let me accompany you all for tonight.”

Then, she picked up a piece of mooncake from the plate and took two steps forward to sit on the steps of the ancestral hall. She gazed at the bright moon in the sky while nibbling on the mooncake.

As she was eating, a figure appeared beside her. Bai Lingmiao extended her hand, sending a piece of the mooncake inside the Second Deity’s veil. Then, she gently leaned her head to the left, resting on her red silk robe.

Just like that, two women with identical heads silently leaned against each other on the steps outside the Bai family ancestral hall, eating the same mooncake and appreciating the same round moon in the sky.

Suddenly, a fire lit up in the distance. Bai Lingmiao stood up and looked at the makeshift earthen kiln that was built with tiles and stones.

The kiln was very tall, much taller than the other buildings in Cowheart Village. Soon, the flames soared and enveloped the kiln like a giant bonfire.

Puppy was standing on a roof nearby, while making strange noises and taking various old clothes before throwing them into the fire.

Mid-Autumn Festival often meant lighting up the earthen kiln. Bai Lingmiao recalled that every year was the same, and that it was usually only done by the males in the village, and the girls didn't particularly like it.

As Bai Lingmiao watched the roaring flames in the distance, she was reminded of her troublesome younger brother. As the elder sister, she had been responsible for taking care of him, especially since her parents were always busy. Thus, she had personally watched as the infant in the cradle slowly grew into an active, young boy.

However, one day, everything suddenly came to a halt.

As her longing for her family reached its peak, she trembled and reached toward the drum hanging at her waist, and then began to beat it.

Dong dong dong~

The rhythmic drum beats slowly echoed in the quiet village.

Bai Lingmiao hesitated for a moment, but then, with a trembling voice, started to sing. At the same time, the tears she had been holding back all night finally began to flow.

She used her deeply sorrowful voice to sing a tragic tune from the Bei Family. Even the surroundings seemed to be trembling with her singing.

“Cold wind ah~ smoke and soul~ Wu wu...”

At that moment, as she resonated with the lyrics, she finally realized the profound emotions required for one to sing this tune. Previously, she had just been following along under the coercion of the Immortal families, but now, she suddenly felt a deeper sense of understanding and connection.

Only when enough of one's family members had died, would one be able understand the feelings needed to sing this song.

As she sang, she found that her emotions had affected the Immortal families. This feeling was rather unique. It could even be said that in regard to this piece of the Bei Family, Bai Lingmiao was even more well versed than Li Zhi from back then.

However, this was a price that she didn't want to pay.

The drumbeats continued, followed by the rhythmic and desolate chants.

“Smoke and souls~ Three realms above ground for the living, wu wu wu... three cities in the underworld for the smoke and souls ah~”

“They say the heavens cover the treasure, and the earth turns into a pond~ People are like fish in the muddy waters of the three realms~ Wu wu...”

“Muddling through one moment leads to another, muddling through two moments leads to one less...”

This time, the Second Deity just watched Bai Lingmiao from the side. As she sang the tune to summon souls, gusts of cold wind blew past the Bai family's ancestral hall. It blew past the Second Deity's red veil, and then finally extinguished the lantern before beginning to revolve around Bai Lingmiao.

As though she had sensed something, Bai Lingmiao almost could not continue on anymore. But she finally gritted her teeth and firmly continued to beat the drum hanging on her waist.

“Hearing the smoke and the souls shed tears of sorrow~ The heart seems to taste the bitter yellow lotus~ Unjust grievances with nowhere to appeal, there's nowhere to cry out for such justice..."

As the drum beats and the chanting continued, the cold winds slowly grew stronger, and the ancestral tablets inside the hall started to shake vigorously. The roof tiles also started to shake, making it look like the entire ancestral hall had come to life.

As the singing continued, a gust of wind gently blew past the hem of the Second Deity's skirt and into the blood-red veil.

At that moment, a sudden charred smell started emanating from the Second Deity as she shivered and raised both her hands before sluggishly leaning toward Bai Lingmiao. "Daughter.."

When she heard this voice, Bai Lingmiao's heart froze. Immediately, she reached out with both her hands and called out, "Mother!"

When she touched the Second Deity, Bai Lingmiao seemed to find her support again as she poured out everything that was accumulated in her heart. She closed her eyes and spoke for a long time, but received no response until she stopped.

When she finally opened her flushed-red eyes and looked toward the Second Deity's red veil, she only received a disappointing result; she realized that the moment she had stopped singing, her mother was already gone.

"Did my mother say anything before she left?" Bai Lingmiao asked gently.

The Second Deity stared at Bai Lingmiao through the red veil for a long time, and then finally said, "She... is not your mother."

"No, she is my mother! My father and grandfather also returned! They are all blaming me!" Bai Lingmiao denied loudly.

The Second Deity did not speak any further, and only spread her arms to embrace Bai Lingmiao. She lowered her body and picked Bai Lingmiao up as she gently swayed her.

Bai Lingmiao kept her eyes open as she swayed gently. She silently looked toward the roof of the ancestral hall, seemingly contemplating something.

By this point, the earthen kiln outside had already been extinguished. The two of them just continued silently sitting in the dark ancestral hall.

“If I leave, can you accompany Senior Li? He cannot have nobody around him,” Bai Lingmiao suddenly said.

However, the Second Deity only continued to hold onto her and did not react.

“Sorry, but I really can’t hold on anymore. I can’t do anything, and I can’t even avenge my family!” said Bai Lingmiao, tears streaming down her face. Then, she broke free of the Second Deity’s embrace and took out a rope that she had prepared earlier.

She walked to the center of the ancestral hall, then threw the rope toward the roof beams and started to tie a knot.

Seeing this, the Second Deity stood up as well, walking up to Bai Lingmiao as she held her slender legs to assist her in completing the following steps.

When the Second Deity gently let go and took a step back, the rope tightened with a creaking sound, followed by the uncontrollable sounds of a person wheezing.

However, the Second Deity just ignored those sounds, and silently returned to sit at the steps in front of the ancestral hall as she continued to gaze at the full moon in the sky.

Behind the red veil were Bai Lingmiao’s gently swaying white shoes. And behind those white shoes was a densely packed wall of pitch-black ancestral tablets for the deceased.

Chapter 330 - Taisui

Just as she was suffocating, Bai Lingmiao suddenly found herself floating above the ancestral hall's beams. When she looked down, she saw herself with her whitened eyes as well as the red-veiled Second Deity.

Is this what it's like to be dead?

Bai Lingmiao lowered her head to check her 'body', only to find that it was empty and devoid of any substance. Seeing this, she recalled something and felt a surge of joy.

My parents must not have gone too far. I can still catch up with them!

However, as she raised her head to look for her family, she noticed incomprehensible masses obscuring the entire night sky.

When she saw their ever-changing appearances, Bai Lingmiao was positive that they were the Immortal families. They appeared to be from the Bei family, because of her emotions that they had just absorbed.

"I'm already dead, so what more do you want from me?" asked Bai Lingmiao as she attempted to move right through them, only to be bounced back and end up face-to-face with her suspended body hanging from the rope.

As she looked at her current self, she noticed a drastic change. The originally pink eyes had been completely replaced by a red pair of long and menacing beast-like eyes. Even more peculiar was the fact that her own face also had several cracks, revealing several beast-like eyes staring right back at her.

At that moment, Bai Lingmiao saw herself raising her nail-covered hand and aggressively clutching at her own head as she opened her mouth to swallow herself whole. At the same time, flipping snake scales pierced through Bai Lingmiao's skin, effortlessly cutting through the tightly stretched rope.

Bai Lingmiao fell heavily to the ground. However, even before she could recover, an intense pain erupted from the depths of her brain, causing her to scream while holding her head. The pain was excruciating, completely unlike anything she had ever experienced before.

Immediately after that, a number "two" appeared in Bai Lingmiao's mind.

This was the number of tasks she had to do for the month. If she couldn't complete it, then she would have to figure out the consequences on her own. It could also be foreseen that this number would only gradually increase in the future.

Bai Lingmiao felt her bruised neck as she hopelessly looked up at the pitch-black beams above.

Ever since the day she became a Shaman, she knew that her life no longer belonged to her. Even death was not an option.

Her previous experiences had made her really pleased because she was able to help Senior Li. However, the Immortal families had finally exposed their true colors this time around.

Bai Lingmiao recalled what Li Zhi had said before he died.

It was too suffocating to be a Shaman, and he wouldn't even want to be reincarnated as one[1].

At this moment, she finally understood the meaning behind his words. As a Shaman, she was nothing but a slave to those Immortals, devoid of any freedom.

"Wu wu wu..." Bai Lingmiao covered her face with both hands as she crouched within the pitch-black ancestral hall and started sobbing uncontrollably. Her cries echoed continuously within the hall.

Upon hearing the sobbing, the Second Deity, who had been admiring the moon, appeared to recall something. With its three mouths beneath the red veil, it let out a deep sigh and retrieved a jade pendant from within its robe and started examining it closely.

“Daddy?”

“I’m not your Dad, I am your master.”

“Daddy?”

Li Huowang had been working quite hard to control his temper. He now deeply regretted going to that stall to eat noodles. How could he have imagined that trouble would arise simply from having a bowl of noodles?

Gaga, gaga!

The ducks in a nearby cage were making a racket, adding to his annoyance. He couldn’t understand why there were so many people heading to the Yinling City to sell goods today, causing the normally spacious road to feel so congested today.

“...Daddy?”

“Alright, shut up,” said Li Huowang as he stuffed two more wads of cotton into his ears, making sure that they were tightly sealed.

After sitting in the carriage for half the day, Li Huowang finally arrived at his destination. Once here, as soon as he presented his Surveillance Bureau badge, he was promptly granted passage into the city.

Finally back inside the bustling Yinling City, Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief. He drove the carriage toward the inn from before. After such a long journey, he had finally arrived.

When Li Huowang saw the makeshift earthen kiln at the crossroad, he felt puzzled and asked, “What is this?”

Monk quickly explained, “Daoist, today is the Mid-Autumn Festival. Don’t you know that building earthen kilns is a tradition for celebrating the Mid-Autumn Festival?”

Li Huowang shook his head as he flicked the reins. “We didn’t have this custom where I come from.”

“Then what customs do you practice?” asked Monk.

“Nothing much. We just eat mooncakes,” replied Li Huowang.

After Li Huowang settled into the inn, it gradually darkened outside. The curfew had been lifted in the bustling Yinling City. The brightly lit market had many children carrying pomelos and lanterns. All this had turned the entire Yinling City into a city that did not sleep.

Throughout all this, Li Huowang waited in the inn, hoping for Tuoba Danqing to come. However, after waiting for a long time, all he got was a messenger pigeon delivering a letter.

“Today is the Mid-Autumn Festival, and I need to return home to reunite with my wife and children. Let’s discuss matters in detail tomorrow evening.”

Seeing this note, Li Huowang felt a little disheartened. Did the Surveillance Bureau also celebrate festivals? This new piece of information allowed Li Huowang to gain an entirely new perspective of this enormous organization.

With nothing to do, he sat inside the room, a little confused. What should he do next?

“What else can we do? Let’s celebrate the festival. Besides welcoming the New Year, I love the Mid-Autumn Festival the most,” said Monk.

“Celebrate? With whom?” asked Li Huowang.

“With us,” Hong Zhong chimed in.

Hearing this, Li Huowang glanced at the four illusions in front of him. Then, he walked over to the window, and whistled toward the stable where Bun was guarding the carriage, causing it to bark happily as it rushed over while wagging its tongue.

Then, he summoned the waiter to book a feast from the kitchen before requesting for it to be delivered to their room.

Once the adequate amount of silver had been handed over, the table was filled with a variety of delicacies made with chicken, duck, fish, and meat. After Li Huowang watched Bun devour the food under the table, he too picked up his chopsticks and began to eat.

The chicken tasted quite good, but Li Huowang always felt that it lacked flavor. He picked up a ceramic pot filled with wine and poured a large mouthful directly into his mouth. Overwhelmed by the alcohol, he gradually became drunk. In a tipsy state, Li Huowang raised his wine cup. As he swayed, he toasted the full moon in the sky. "I would have much preferred the time when we were cooking noodles out in the wild. That had much more flavor compared to this."

"Daddy?"

"Yeah! Son!" Li Huowang kicked Bun with his foot. "The three of us are celebrating the Mid-Autumn Festival!"

Li Huowang fell asleep at some point. When he woke up again, he saw Bun crouching in front of him. It was snarling and growling as it faced the black tentacles that were emerging from within his body.

Seeing this, Li Huowang curved his fingers and flicked the tentacle, causing it to instantly retract back into his belly.

Can the Black Taisui come out on its own now?

This might be bad news, but Li Huowang didn't really care about it right now.

"Go down and watch the carriage." As Li Huowang pointed toward the door, Bun slinked away with its tail between its legs.

After Li Huowang sat up, he once again picked up his chopsticks as he started eating the now cold feast on the table.

After eating and drinking to his heart's content, Li Huowang sat by the window and took out a book, this time opting for a much more advanced one.

"...The sword is named Giant Que, the pearl is called Night Light. Exquisite fruits like plum and pear, rich vegetables like mustard and ginger. The sea is salty, the river is fresh, scales dive, feathers soar...”

As he continued to recite, Li Huowang felt a vague echo in his ears. At first, it was chaotic, but gradually, it started becoming clearer.

“...Singing and music are highly esteemed, humble rites distinguish between honor and inferiority. Harmony between the upper and lower, husband sings, and the wife follows...”

1. This happened back in C66, for anyone who wants a refresher.

Chapter 331 - Banquet Dinner

As Li Huowang sensed the outside sky gradually darkening, he slowly stopped his recitation. His mouth felt dry and his throat was parched.

As he recalled how the Black Taisui had helped him when dealing with the Human Xiao, he touched his stomach.

As he reflected on recent events, he slowly formulated a plan on how to interact with the Black Taisui.

Although it was continuously occupying his body, it didn't seem to harbor any ill intentions toward him. Since it meant no harm, there was no need for him to treat it as he did Dan Yangzi. After all, in the past, he had done everything in his power to get rid of Dan Yangzi. However, with Black Taisui, not only could he not get rid of it, he also couldn't live without it.

It resided within his body, and thus, a good relationship between them would bring only benefits to both of them and no harm. Perhaps, once they became more familiar with each other, he could persuade it to stop trying to encroach upon his body.

“Daddy?”

Li Huowang took a deep breath and touched his stomach again. “Listen, from now on, you'll be called Li Sui. Until we find a method to break free from the bewilderment and sense of doubt that a Strayed One suffers from, let's try to coexist peacefully. We're all in the same boat. As long as you help me, I won't ignore you. Let's work hard to achieve a relationship that is mutually beneficial for both of us.”

“Okay.”

Li Huowang was surprised to hear the Black Taisui's response. The fact that it agreed meant that the enlightenment books he had been reading to it previously weren't in vain; it could actually understand the things Li Huowang said.

Gu gu~

A familiar sound rang out, causing Li Huowang to instinctively look up at the beam. There was a pigeon perched there, observing him.

"Alright, behave yourself when it's time to eat later. I won't forget your portion," said Li Huowang as he stood up. Then he slung his two swords onto his back before walking toward the outside of the inn.

Back at the same familiar place as always, a booming voice rang out, "Hahaha. Brother Er Jiu, long time no see. I've missed you so much."

Tuoba Danqing walked in with his usual kind and round face. At the same time, a line of maids followed right behind him, all of them holding exquisite dishes and fine wines.

After several encounters, Li Huowang had figured out the routine. Thus, he sat down and accompanied the man in eating and drinking. At this point, he was unsure about whether this was just his personal quirk or a common trait among the members of the Surveillance Bureau. It almost seemed like he wouldn't talk if eating or drinking wasn't involved.

After several rounds of wine and dishes, the atmosphere was now more adequately set. Finally, Tuoba Danqing reached into his robe and pulled out a waist token before pushing it across the dining table. "Come, Brother Er, take a look at what this is? You did quite a good job this time. I'm afraid that I couldn't have done it any better even if I had gone there myself."

Li Huowang raised the waist token to take a look. As he looked at the characters for "Ninth Troop" on it, he suddenly felt extremely emotional. With this, he had taken yet another step closer to success.

“Enough with the token, what’s so interesting about it? Let’s eat, Brother Er. Now, what’s the story with this recent matter? Tell me about it,” asked Tuoba Danqing.

Since there was nothing to hide about this matter, Li Huowang just tucked away his waist token into his robe and slowly explained the whole situation to Tuoba Danqing.

After narrating the events, Li Huowang enquired about his earlier confusion, “Brother Tuoba, what was the deal with that Daoist Human Xiao? What’s the story behind him? Why was he so peculiar?”

“Oh, there’s nothing peculiar about it. That person had just lived for a long time. If he hadn’t attained the Dao and became an Immortal, then he would have naturally turned into an evil spirit. After all, the cycle of birth, aging, sickness, and death is the way of the universe. Trying to change fate and go against the order is not that simple,” explained Tuoba Danqing. “I’ve seen many such cases. These are usually cultivators who are too stubborn and obsessed, forcefully using lifespan pills to extend their lives, only to end up becoming Human Xiaos. However, I didn’t expect the commotion this time to be this big. Being a Human Xiao and raising another; that’s a first, even for me.”

“Using lifespan pills forcefully to increase longevity will eventually lead to one becoming a Human Xiao?” asked Li Huowang, feeling surprised. Wouldn’t this make lifespan pills useless?

“Not exactly. Normally, around the age of 120 is a critical point. The closer you get to 120, the weaker the effects of the lifespan pill get. Once past 120, you have to find a way to dispel your obsessions. If you can’t, then forcefully using the lifespan pills will only turn you into a Human Xiao. Each sect has their own methods for this, some good and some bad. But don't expect others to tell you all this so easily. They keep these things well hidden. There are also some methods that everyone knows about, but they are not easy to accomplish. For example, using the bewilderment of a Strayed One to dispel one's obsessions is the simplest and the best method," explained Tuoba Danqing.

Hearing this, Li Huowang's fingers bent ever so slightly without anyone noticing.

"But think about it, having a living Strayed One with you is dangerous. After all, you would have to be on guard against others trying to snatch it away. Thus, telling you this method is the same as not telling you anything, right?" Tuoba Danqing continued to talk, almost as if he was having a casual conversation with an old friend.

As they continued drinking, Tuoba Danqing suddenly remembered something and slapped his own forehead. "Oh, look at my forgetful mind. Brother Er, since you're now a Ninth Troop, why not go to the capital for a promotion? In the future, when you go to the Rites Department, you can use the lifespan pills you have earned to exchange for things inside the Bureau. There, not only is there an abundance of variety, there are also some items that you can't find in the markets outside. But remember, it must be the lifespan pills earned within the Bureau; those from the outside won't work."

"To the capital?" Li Huowang's mood tensed as soon as the headquarters of the Surveillance Bureau was mentioned. "No hurry. I haven't earned much yet. I'll go when I've earned some more."

"Hehehe, Brother Er is indeed different. Others would rush to the capital without question upon learning of this, but you always seem to avoid it. Hehehe," Tuoba Danqing tilted his wine cup toward his mouth, and then shifted his intoxicated gaze towards Li Huowang. Then, he moved his chair closer and asked, "Brother Er, since we're already so close, it wouldn't be too much to ask you something, right?"

"Brother Tuoba, feel free to ask," replied Li Huowang.

Tuoba Danqing chuckled for a moment and then pointed to the bronze coin veil on Li Huowang's face. "Why do you always wear this thing? Is there something hidden behind it?"

At that moment, Hong Zhong suddenly came to Li Huowang's side. "This old guy has been probing you ever since he arrived. Be careful."

As soon as Tuoba Danqing raised his question, the atmosphere became a little tense. Li Huowang understood that no matter how close their relationship was, everything would be over once his identity was exposed.

Seeing Li Huowang continue to remain silent, Tuoba Danqing patted his own cheeks. "Oh, I talked too much. I spoke too carelessly after drinking. Brother Er, don't be angry, don't be angry. I'll punish myself with three cups."

However, Li Huowang knew that the other party was withdrawing now just so that they could advance later. If he didn't resolve this today, then there would be more trouble later.

Various thoughts flashed through his mind as Li Huowang pressed his stomach and started retching. "No worries, Brother Tuoba, if you want to know, then I'll tell you. I have some things that tend to easily come out, and so I need to cover it up with something."

After a while, two black, sticky tentacles slowly extended from the sides of the veil. What was even more peculiar was that these two tentacles were entwined with a pair of double-pupiled eyeballs.

Tuoba Danqing's eyes twitched. "Alright, alright, quickly put it away."

Tuoba Danqing took a bite of food to suppress his shock, and then looked at Li Huowang with some trepidation. "Brother Er, I won't ask much about your cultivation methods. But aren't you afraid of going crazy with such messy cultivation techniques?"

However, Li Huowang just used two of his fingers to push the tentacles back into his mouth, suppressed the nausea and swallowed as he replied, "It's alright."

Chapter 332 - Human Cup

Within the exquisite guest room, Li Huowang dipped the duck meat in some sauce before munching on it in an attempt to suppress the disgusting feeling he had to just go through.

Even though he hated it, it was well worth it to reduce Tuoba Danqing's suspicion against him. At the very least, he now had an excuse as to why he had to wear the bronze coin veil at all times.

Judging by Tuoba Danqing's shocked expression, Li Huowang knew that he had made the right move. As knowledgeable as Tuoba Danqing was, he had definitely never seen someone who had tentacles with eyes in their mouth.

Meanwhile, Tuoba Danqing sipped on his wine to suppress his fear and shock. "Junior, I think you are treading on the path of Black Cultivation. Please excuse my rudeness in saying this, but if possible it is best if you don't cultivate such techniques, or you might find yourself getting consumed by the technique instead..."

Hearing this, Li Huowang reciprocated the man's toast. "Thank you for the advice. I have my own methods."

"It would be best if you do. But truthfully, I knew that you were destined for greatness from the moment when I first saw you," said Tuoba Danqing before proceeding to talk randomly, causing the atmosphere in the room to once again become lighthearted. Both of them kept drinking back and forth.

As he drank, Tuoba Danqing slowly got more and more excited. At the peak of his ecstasy, he suddenly looked at Li Huowang in a bizarre way and chuckled in a way that only men understood. "Junior, let me show you what those at the Ninth Troop can enjoy, but the Tenth Pawns can't."

After saying that, Tuoba Danqing clapped lightly. Immediately, four curvaceous women walked into the room.

Just as Li Huowang thought that they were going to sing for them, the four women removed their clothes and stood before them, stark naked.

Blue veins covered all four of their bodies, making them look like four delicate porcelain vases. All of them had the same hourglass body shape, something that made them look even more like vases.

However, different from vases, two of the women walked over to Li Huowang's side and cuddled against his body as they offered to feed him the dishes and pour the wine. Li Huowang realized that these vases were soft, warm, smooth, and very attractive.

As if he was trying to show Li Huowang what he knew, Tuoba Danqing made a gesture of drinking wine. Understanding the gesture, one of the women carefully drank the wine. However, instead of drinking it, she held it in her mouth as she straddled herself on Tuoba Danqing's lap and rolled her tongue into a funnel before slowly pouring the wine into Tuoba Danqing's mouth.

Tuoba Danqing drank the warm wine with pleasure and looked at Li Huowang. "Junior Er, do you know what this is? This is called the 'human cup'. What do you think? I bet you've never seen one of them in the kingdom of Si Qi before, right? Hahaha~"

Li Huowang looked at the two women beside him with uneasiness. "Senior Tuoba, I don't think we can discuss anything if they are here."

Tuoba Danqing was hugging one of the girls as he turned to Li Huowang with pride and said, "Don't worry. These were handpicked by me. They are deaf and can't speak. We can just talk normally and don't have to worry about them leaking anything since they can't hear. These girls were specially groomed for people like us."

As Tuoba Danqing spoke, he drank another mouthful of wine from the human cup.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly recalled Sun Baolu's beautiful mother who was made to lick other people's asses and felt disgusted. He had almost forgotten that the Liang Kingdom used people as tools.

"Come on, you've finally returned after quite some time; you should take some time to rest. Relax, these are being paid for by the Surveillance Bureau so we can just take it easy." Tuoba Danqing winked at Li Huowang.

Looking at the two pitiful girls hugging his sides, Li Huowang shook his head. "Senior Tuoba, thank you. But I'm just here to have a drink. I don't feel like doing anything else."

Tuoba Danqing was perplexed when he saw that Li Huowang wasn't attracted to the girls. "Oh? Are you perhaps the same as me? I've gotten bored of girls, and so I sometimes like to play with guys instead. Just wait a moment, I will ask the guys to come in instead."

Hearing this, Li Huowang's expression froze for a moment before he raised his voice a little, "Senior Tuoba, as long as my revenge is not achieved, I will not rest. I don't have time for matters like these."

When Tuoba Danqing realized that Li Huowang wasn't joking, he waved his hands, and the women instantly turned around and left.

Once they were gone, Tuoba Danqing drank his wine and sighed. "Junior Er Jiu, you are very righteous. There are not a lot of people who would go to such lengths for their Master and brothers. Everyone is just backstabbing everyone else in this world."

"They were not just my masters, but also my parents. It's the least I could do for them after they were all murdered," replied Li Huowang.

"Fine. Since that's the case, then you should just stay in Yinling City. I know that you want to take revenge as soon as possible and that will make it easier for me. If you stay here in Yinling City, then I can easily find you,” said Tuoba Danqing.

“Sure. Thank you Senior Tuoba! Here’s a toast for you!” said Li Huowang as he raised another toast.

When Li Huowang returned to his inn, he was covered in the scent of wine. He directly crashed into his bed with his eyes closed while slowly massaging his temples.

To him, drinking and talking with Tuoba Danqing was just as hard as fighting outside. After all, Li Huowang still didn’t know the extent of Tuoba Danqing’s knowledge and trust. He had to keep his guard up at all times to prevent his status from being exposed.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly remembered something and took out his identity token. He saw the words ‘Ninth Troop’ etched on it and smiled. He was one step closer to his goal.

Li Huowang knew that the higher his rank was, the more power he could use within the Surveillance Bureau.

Bei Feng, who had lived for 190 years, was definitely strong, but it wasn’t necessary for him to fight Bei Feng on his own.

When his thoughts reached this point, Li Huowang suddenly sat up and started mumbling, “Wait, since I have the Surveillance Bureau behind my back, I don’t have to fight at all. The Sitting Oblivion Dao and the Surveillance Bureau are each other’s arch nemesis. As long as I let them fight among themselves, I can just reap the rewards for myself.”

“Hehehe.”

Li Huowang turned around and saw that it was Hong Zhong chuckling to himself.

“You are so stupid. You can’t even lie, so how are you going to pit them together? The Four Joys and Three Officials are incredible tricksters. Don’t be surprised when you find out that they’ve trapped you before you could even execute your plan,” said Hong Zhong.

Li Huowang didn't ignore him this time. "Didn't you say that I was the true Hong Zhong? I believe it now. Since I'm at the same rank as them, then why can't I pitch them to fight against the Surveillance Bureau?"

Hearing his words, Hong Zhong finally started getting excited. "Yeah! You are right! This might all be Hong Zhong's plan! You suppressed your own memories and sneaked into the Surveillance Bureau before causing some damage."

"Yeah! That's right! That's what I thought too!" Li Huowang stood up, looking just as excited as Hong Zhong.

Suddenly, both of them started laughing. Their laughter got louder and louder before stopping completely as both of them glared at each other in a taunting way.

Chapter 333 - Meeting Someone Familiar

After a while, Li Huowang rolled to the edge of the bed and closed his eyes.

Meanwhile Hong Zhong was smiling while thinking about something when Monk suddenly approached him. “What other tricks are you planning to do? Don’t harm the Daoist. He’s a good person.”

“A good person? Hehe, a good person indeed.”

That night, Li Huowang slept quite soundly. He wasn’t sure if it was because he drank a lot of wine, but he only woke up late in the morning the next day.

After waking up, Li Huowang yawned and washed up.

Since Tuoba Danqing had told him to stay here, he knew that he would temporarily be staying in Yinling City.

Plus, he had nowhere else to go.

As to how long he would have to stay, it all depended on Tuoba Danqing. However, based on their conversation yesterday, Li Huowang was sure that he wouldn’t need to wait all that long.

“Crepes~ Delicious crepes~”

“Sweet~ Sweet sweet Tanghulu~”[\[1\]](#)

“Scissors~ Knives~ I grind them all~”[\[2\]](#)

“General Jiang was eight feet tall and four feet wide! He stood in front of the enemy camp and shouted with all his might: Ai~ Hei!! The thousands of soldiers from the Qi Kingdom were instantly horrified!”

As Li Huowang strolled around, various sounds entered his ears.

“How much for a crepe?” asked Li Huowang.

“A single coin. Look at how big our crepes are. They are cheap yet filling~”

Li Huowang bought four of them, and walked as he ate. He didn’t walk very fast. The reason he was taking a stroll through the city was to let Li Sui learn how to talk by listening to the other people.

Li Sui had heard someone saying ‘daddy’ just once and could already repeat it. Not only was it capable of speech, it could also mimic the voices of others.

Thus, Li Huowang wanted to test and see if Li Sui could speed up its learning process if there were more people talking around him. And based on the numerous fragmented words that Li Sui was parroting off, Li Huowang knew that he had made the right decision.

Unfortunately, with this approach, he could not choose what Li Sui would learn. It had even learned how to cuss after hearing some women arguing on the streets, causing Li Huowang to frown and quickly leave the area.

After a while, he stood in the middle of the street and took in the prosperous city. The Liang Kingdom was indeed very advanced and prosperous. They had everything they needed.

But at the same time, it was revolting to learn that the people with power would use something like a human cup.

Still, it was because they were so prosperous that they could afford to do something like that.

Just as Li Huowang was reflecting on the city, he saw something that caused him to frown. He quickly ran toward it.

As he ran, he quickly started picking up speed and even used his powers to shift himself as he weaved through the crowds.

After he got through the crowd, Li Huowang patted someone’s shoulder. Before this, the man was staring at someone selling food.

When the man turned around and saw Li Huowang, he instantly became excited and shouted loudly, “Master!”

Lu Xiucan was so overjoyed that he almost hugged Li Huowang.

“Stop. I’m asking you a question. Why are you here? Where is Troupe Leader Lu?” questioned Li Huowang.

Hearing his father’s name, Lu Xiucan scoffed. “I’m sick of him! Shit. If it wasn’t because of me needing—”

However, Li Huowang’s cold stare instantly made Lu Xiucan shut up.

After a moment, Lu Xiucan continued, “Master, I’m someone with special powers now! Why should I continue performing with him? I want to experience the world!”

Li Huowang looked around before pulling Lu Xiucan to sit at a food stall.

“Experience the world? Where are your spare clothes? Your travel money? Your weapon? You just came out from the village with nothing?” asked Li Huowang.

Faced with these questions, Lu Xiucan gritted his teeth while seething with anger. “I did! I bought everything, but someone stole it from me yesterday! I will tear them apart if I catch them!”

“Fine, fine.” Li Huowang was annoyed. Lu Xiucan reminded him of a poodle. Small and weak, yet extremely arrogant.

However, even though the black -tassel sword changed his character, Lu Xiucan was still just a seventeen-year-old youth.

“Your travel money got stolen? You must be starving now. Boss, give us two bowls of whatever you are selling,” said Li Huowang.

Lu Xiucan was so hungry that as soon as the seller brought out the dried shrimps covered in sesame seeds, he grabbed it with both hands.

As Li Huowang saw Lu Xiucan burning his mouth, he frowned and lowered his voice as he asked, “How’s the village after I left?”

“Ha~ Hah~ Hah~ It’s still the same,” Lu Xiucan gasped for air and swallowed the food in his mouth before continuing, “Everyone is still fine. My useless father bought several cows to prepare the fields for spring next year. He wanted to utilize all the farmland that was left behind. He also said that he didn’t have enough people and was trying to find some temporary laborers.”

“What about Miaomiao?”

“Senior Bai is still fine. She still eats and sleeps as normal, but she seems to always lack focus.”

Li Huowang sighed, his elbows on his knees as he clasped his own face and muttered, “As long as she’s fine.”

Lu Xiucan had finished eating half of the bowl in no time. Once his hunger had been staved off, his spirit returned as he requested, “Master, let me follow you!”

However, Li Huowang shook his head. “No, once you finish your meal, I will give you some money for you to return to Cowheart Mountain. Do not go anywhere else. Go straight back home.”

Li Huowang could not afford to have someone dragging him down right now, especially since he was not even related to Lu Xiucan. He was already being generous by giving him travel money.

“No! I will not go back! If I do, then my brother will use his fists to threaten me to work in the fields!” refused Lu Xiucan.

Hearing this, Li Huowang grabbed Lu Xiucan’s shirt collar and warned him sternly. “Only your father will tolerate you, and I’m not your father! I have enough to worry about on my plate and I don’t have time for this! If you say one more stupid thing, then I will break your legs and leave you out on the streets!”

Lu Xiucan’s lips quivered, but he dared not say anything when he saw just how serious Li Huowang was.

“Also, when you go back, don’t tell anyone that you saw me.” Li Huowang took out a piece of silver the size of his thumb and placed it in front of Lu Xiucan. Then, he turned and left.

As Lu Xiucan saw Li Huowang leaving him behind, he felt extremely unreconciled. Just as Li Huowang was about to disappear into the crowd, Lu Xiucan shouted from behind, “You were the one who taught me those powers! But you only taught me how to use the sword, and didn’t even give me the sword! What kind of master are you?! You are incorrigible!”

When Lu Xiucan saw Li Huowang turn to look back at him, he quickly placed the silver in his clothes and prepared to run when.

However, before he could leave, Li Huowang waved his hands and five black coins shot out, nailing themselves into the wooden table in front of Lu Xiucan. The coins were taken off the bronze coin sword. Even though there were only five, Lu Xiucan should be able to use them with the method he was trained in.

“We are even now! Don’t call me master anymore!” said Li Huowang.

After meeting Lu Xiucan, Li Huowang lost all his interest in strolling through the city. He directly returned back to the inn.

“Miaomiao?” At that moment, the Black Taisui’s voice rang out in his ear.

“Since Li Huowang is your father, Miaomiao is your mother.” Hong Zhong chuckled as he walked beside Li Huowang.

“Mother?”

Li Huowang was stunned.

Li Sui can hear the illusions?!

Chapter 334 - Ji Xiang

Dak dak dak~

The sound of horse hoofs rang out non stop. Due to the rain, there weren't a lot of people on the streets. Thus, the horses could run faster as well.

The veil of one of the riders flew in the wind, revealing Li Huowang's resolute gaze. He held the reins in one hand as he took out a letter from inside his robes. It was a letter from Tuoba Danqing. It didn't say much.

"Ji Xiang summons. Come Immediately. Yinling Prison."

By now, Li Huowang had a good grasp of Tuoba Danqing's personality. With his character, if he didn't inform Li Huowang of something over food and wine, then it meant that the mission was critical.

Li Huowang didn't know if this was a blessing or a curse. Thus, the best he could do was prepare for the worst-case scenario.

Thankfully he was all alone now, and so there was nothing for him to be afraid of.

Soon, Li Huowang reached his destination and jumped down from the horse. He looked up and observed the eerie building made from bricks. The guards guarding the door were all exuding a murderous aura, a clear sign that this was the place where they kept some of the more heinous criminals.

Li Huowang also had a faint feeling that the guards possessed a military background too.

Just as Li Huowang dismounted his horse, he felt a slight pricking sensation from his organs, a sign that someone was aiming hidden weapons at him from the shadows.

He quickly displayed his identity token and walked through the main gates. The gates of the prison were being guarded by two stone lions.

Just as Li Huowang walked in, he saw Tuoba Danqing sitting on a bench as he waved at him. “Junior Er, come here! Quick!”

When Li Huowang walked over, he saw someone familiar. It was Hong Da, the Creditor.

Without waiting for Li Huowang to greet him, Tuoba Danqing happily pulled Li Huowang and forced him to sit with him on the bench. “Junior Er, as you can see, I do care about your circumstances quite a lot. See, I notified you immediately the moment that a good mission came up.”

“Oh? Is this a good mission?” asked Li Huowang as he sniffed the cold and rotten air of his surroundings. He looked around the cells and wasn’t sure whether any of the prisoners were dead or alive. This wasn’t really a good indication.

On the other hand, Tuoba Danqing slapped his legs and smiled happily. “Of course, it’s a good mission! After all, we will be fighting against the Sitting Oblivion Dao! Since you have a grudge against them, I’ve nominated you to come with us so that you can have your revenge. See how well I am treating you?”

Li Huowang was surprised. “Please tell me the details about the mission.”

“Don’t worry. Once Ji Xiang comes, he will tell you about everything. We don’t know much about it yet,” Hong Da replied instead of Tuoba Danqing as he calmly sipped on his tea.

“Senior Hong, long time no see. It was only thanks to your referral that I could join the Surveillance Bureau,” Li Huowang greeted Hong Da while secretly estimating the scale of the mission.

If Ji Xiang has to come here personally from the capital, then the mission this time might be quite dangerous...

Li Huowang knew next to nothing about Ji Xiang. All he knew was that he was Tuoba Danqing’s superior. But since Ji Xiang was someone who could work at the headquarters, he should be quite powerful.

“No need to thank me. You were the one who chose the path. Just don’t blame me for letting you join the nest of thieves if something were to happen next time around,” replied Hong Da.

“Ai~ Hong Da, you can’t say that. How could you compare the Bureau to a nest of thieves? You receive so many lifespan pills after every mission and they even compensate you for food and clothes. Plus, the bureau also gives out lots of mooncakes during the Mid-autumn festival. They even pay the money when you go to a gambling den. How could you insult the bureau in front of a newcomer when we are treating you so well?” questioned Tuoba Danqing.

“Fine, fine. You are the loyal worker while I’m the traitorous one.” Hong Da was annoyed by Tuoba Danqing. He rolled his eyes before turning around.

Tuoba Danqing was just about to launch into another tirade when Li Huowang stopped him. “Senior Tuoba, why are we talking about the mission in a prison today?”

“Junior Er, do you see that over there? Yes, the second-to-last cage. We will be escorting the prisoner locked inside there today,” replied Tuoba Danqing.

Just as Li Huowang was about to stand up and take a closer look, a shrill male voice came from behind him.

“Danqing, it seems that everyone is here. Looks like I’m the one who is late today.”

Hmm? An eunuch?

Li Huowang turned around and saw a plump middle-aged man wearing official clothes.

Li Huowang saw the man had white makeup covering his face, was wearing official clothes, and had a repulsive smile. If he hadn’t walked in, Li Huowang would’ve thought the man was a zombie he had seen in movies.

The man stood there while holding onto a golden abacus, smiling as he looked at everyone. He was Ji Xiang.

Li Huowang got nervous and was worried his disguise would be useless. He only sighed in relief when he saw Ji Xiang did not react to him.

On the other hand, Tuoba Danqing became even friendlier when he saw Ji Xiang. He bowed and became very polite as he quickly greeted the man. “Aiya aiya~ Lord Ji Xiang. How could you say that? You are not late. It’s just that we were there too early.”

Tuoba Danqing held the fat eunuch’s hand while wearing a jade ring before letting him sit down on the table. Instantly, a sharp fragrance burst out from within Ji Xiang, instantly causing Li Huowang to frown. Li Huowang’s nose was too sensitive and he managed to determine that the fragrance was weird, because it had the scent of pee as well.

“Lord Ji Xiang, you already know Hong Da. Let me introduce you to the other person. He is Er Jiu. His powers as a member of the Ao Jing Sect are quite amazing. Even a Human Xiao on the Black level was not his opponent. He will definitely be of help to us!” introduced Tuoba Danqing.

Hearing this, Ji Xiang looked at Li Huowang, his eyes twinkling suspiciously.

Feeling uncomfortable, Li Huowang quickly greeted the man, “I greet Lord Ji Xiang.”

“So you are Er Jiu? I remember you. Liu Zongyuan told me about you before. You come from the Ao Jing Sect but it seems your temper is very bad. Last time you burned down all the members of the White Lotus Sect that was supposed to be sent to the capital. If it wasn’t because of Liu Zongyuan saying that he didn’t mind it, and the fact that you were Danqing’s subordinate, the Bureau might have actually wanted to summon you and demand an explanation,” said Ji Xiang as sized up Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Tuoba Danqing did his best to smooth the atmosphere. “Haha, my junior over here is indeed slightly temperamental. The only person I could think of who’s both strong and likable within the bureau is you, Lord Ji Xiang.”

Hearing this, Ji Xiang smiled till his eyes were wrinkled. “Hehehe~ Danqing, I really love hanging out with you. Your words soothe me so much~”

Just at that moment, Hong Da interrupted both of them who were complimenting each other, “Ji Xiang, can you explain to us about the mission first before we have to continue listening to you guys talking crap?”

Immediately, both of them stopped and turned serious. Just as Li Huowang thought Ji Xiang was about to teach Hong Da a lesson, the man instead pointed his finger toward the cage.

“Danqing~ Bring Master Xin Chi^[1] over here. We will explain the mission after that,” said Ji Xiang.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang, a newcomer to the Surveillance Bureau, silently observed everything that was happening.

It seems that the hierarchy was not as serious as I thought.

1. Master here doesn’t refer to his superior but a title for a Buddhist monk, as in Zen Master 🙏

Chapter 335 - Buddha's Skeleton Temple

Soon, a creaking sound rang out as a man with a massive frame walked out from the shadow of a cell.

Li Huowang raised his head and saw that it was a monk. The monk was skinny and expressionless, his body unusually tall. In fact, he was as tall as the headless Peng Longteng's illusion. The monk's hands and feet were shackled, but he didn't seem to mind. He just placed both his hands together and sat on the ground without any intention of trying to release the shackles placed on him.

"Alright~ Now that everyone's here, let me explain about what we are going to do," said Ji Xiang.

Hearing this, all of them immediately turned serious. At the same time, the prison guards surrounding them turned around and left.

Ji Xiang coughed before continuing in a slow voice, "This time we have to go to the Buddha's Skeleton Temple. We have received news that Fa Cai from the Sitting Oblivion Dao is planning to do something, but we still have no idea what exactly."

Fa Cai, one of the Three Officials!

Hearing the unexpected name, Li Huowang clenched his fist.

It's no wonder that Ji Xiang, someone that's stationed in the capital, would come all the way here. This is indeed an important mission.

I wonder if I can obtain information about Bei Feng from Fa Cai?

While Li Huowang was thinking about his chances of obtaining information, Ji Xiang continued with his explanation, "Since it's Fa Cai from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, the mission is naturally going to be difficult. This is why we have to invite Master Xin Chi to help us.”

Hearing this, the three of them looked at the monk at the same time. In response, the monk also looked back at them silently.

“Master Xin Chi has taken an oath of silence. Since Fa Cai’s tricks would be useless on Xin Chi, once you reach Buddha’s Skeleton Temple, you must remember that whatever he says is the truth. Secondly, once there, you must never leave each other’s sights. Even if it’s just for a moment, it’s possible for a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao to exchange their identity with you. Thirdly, Fa Cai is a devious foe. I fought her once ten years ago and here’s my advice: Don’t believe her, but don’t always do the opposite of what she tells you either. Basically, you can’t ignore her words completely,” explained Ji Xiang.

“Huh? We can’t ignore her completely?” Tuoba Danqing’s eyes were wide with shock as he pulled back theatrically.

“Yes. Sometimes you might end up falling for her trap even by ignoring everything she says. The best method when dealing with her is to treat a third of her words as true, a third of her words as false, and a third for yourself to decide instinctively,” said Ji Xiang.

“Aiya, what a devious foe. To think that you have been fighting her for ten years. I guess we will be almost useless later,” said Tuoba Danqing.

“You think she’s difficult to fight against, right? Hoho~ The best method is to kill her before she even opens her mouth. Er Jiu, amongst us three, you are the most ruthless. When Master Xin Chi tells you to kill, kill immediately,” said Ji Xiang.

“I understand, Lord Ji Xiang. But... I thought that Master Xin Chi had taken an oath of silence. How will he tell me?” Li Huowang thought about this problem. The monk could not speak. How would the monk tell the others even if he did manage to not get tricked by Fa Cai?

Just as Li Huowang had asked this question, a foreign voice sounded in his brain, "Amitabha, I know telepathy. You need not worry."

Finding out about the monk's telepathy suddenly reminded Li Huowang of the nuns from the Benevolent Nunnery. Since he was similar to them, Li Huowang immediately took a liking to the monk.

"Alright, we can discuss the rest as we travel."

With this, all of them stood up and walked out of the prison. There were already four carriages waiting for them.

None of them asked what Fa Cai looked like. Since she was someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, she could look however she wanted.

The stations within the Liang Kingdom were very complete. All Ji Xiang had to do was to show his identity plate and they could exchange their carriages at every station.

This was far beyond the speed that Li Huowang could achieve with just walking. In just two days, they arrived at Langzhong City where the Buddha's Skeleton Temple was located.

It was nighttime when Li Huowang hopped down from the carriage. He hadn't even stretched his sore limbs when he saw a temple that dwarfed the other buildings in the distance.

"Remember what I've said. Let's go," Ji Xiang reminded them once more before heading toward the temple.

As they closed in on the temple, everyone grew more serious. At the same time, Ji Xiang also started using his golden abacus, clicking away at it.

Even though it was already night, the temple was still open. Devotees could be seen walking in and out with incense.

The temple is as popular as the Righteous Monastery it seems.

The moment they walked into the temple, Li Huowang's heart became serious. There were people everywhere, but Li Huowang knew that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had infiltrated this place. Thus, except for the three people beside him, he could not trust anyone else.

Since all of them knew this, they all held onto their weapons. Ji Xiang was still using his golden abacus, the clacking sound muting the ambient sound around them considerably.

As they entered, their curious garments attracted a lot of attention from the devotees. However, the four of them just ignored the crowd.

“Come, follow me. Let’s enter the front palace first,” said Ji Xiang as he led the three of them.

There were no statues of Bodhisattvas or Buddhas in the front palace. Instead, sitting in the middle of the palace was a mummy. Its body was blood-red in color and its face was distorted, and yet the devotees were all praying to it.

“Is that the doing of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Are they letting the devotees worship that corpse?” Li Huowang asked as he held onto the black-tassel sword.

“No, that is the Flesh Bodhisattva. It’s a living Bodhisattva that the Buddha’s Skeleton Temple worships,” Xin Chi explained.

A Flesh Bodhisattva?

Li Huowang inspected the horrifying corpse. At that moment, he suddenly realized why the temple was called the Buddha’s Skeleton Temple.

Just then, Xin Chi’s voice exploded in his mind, “Benefactor, move now! Three steps to your left, the devotee who’s kneeling and praying. Kill!”

Li Huowang’s right arm moved faster than he could think as he slashed at the devotee, his sword that was cloaked in a murderous aura cutting straight through the devotee like a piece of paper.

Blood sprayed everywhere as the devotee was cut in half, his organs falling apart. The man shouted briefly before he stopped moving.

Seeing this scene, the surrounding devotees ran in fear.

At that moment, Xin Chi walked over even with his wooden shackles still on. He clasped his hands and prayed in front of the corpse before using two fingers to inspect the face of the dead man.

“Master, how is it? Was it Fa Cai or someone else from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?” asked Li Huowang as he kneeled on one knee and inspected the corpse. He thought to himself that Fa Cai would never get killed like this so easily.

“Amitabha, I was mistaken. Benefactor Er, let’s continue.” Xin Chi threw the head of the corpse away before standing up.

Chapter 336 - Abacus

Standing within the Buddha's Skeleton Temple, Li Huowang took deep breaths as he did his best to suppress the urge to kill Xin Chi. He had never hated someone this badly. He had listened to Xin Chi and thought that he killed someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but to think that the man had claimed to be mistaken?

He knew that the Surveillance Bureau didn't care about the lives of the innocents when fulfilling their duties. But Li Huowang had never thought that he would end up being the one to do something like that! Because of Xin Chi, he had killed an innocent man!

At the same time, compared to Li Huowang, Monk's illusion was even angrier, to the point that he was jumping around and crying at the same time. "How could he do that? He doesn't have the qualifications to be a monk! He just killed someone!"

As he spoke, Monk's illusion ran over to punch and kick Xin Chi; but as an illusion, he just phased through the man's body.

"You have no qualifications to shave your head! You don't do any good deeds and only do malicious ones! You are not a monk!" shouted Monk.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang just stood up and followed after them; however, his gaze as he looked at Xin Chi was quite different now. Whatever little respect and good feeling he had for the man had now been turned into disgust and anger.

He had originally been suspicious of why Xin Chi had been locked within Yinling Prison. However, now he knew that it was too light of a sentence for the man.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang understood that now was not the time to raise the issue. If he didn't cooperate now, then they could easily get ambushed by the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Thus, Li Huowang would rather let the issue go for now. However, this didn't mean that he couldn't hate the monk right now.

"How is it, Xin Chi? Was that man someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?" asked Hong Da.

"No, I was mistaken." Xin Chi's voice appeared in everyone's mind.

Hearing this, Tuoba Danqing scoffed at him. "Master Xin Chi, weren't you rumored to have learned the Six Paths of Buddhism? How could you discern the wrong person? Don't forget that Lord Ji Xiang is quite busy, and that we can't delay him."

Even though he said that, Ji Xiang ignored them, which was something rare. Instead, the man was frowning as he surveyed the entire palace, all the while his fat fingers never stopping their work on the abacus.

Li Huowang noticed that something was off and quickly calmed himself down as he observed the eunuch in front of him.

Can that abacus find the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Then why do we need Xin Chi?

At that moment, Ji Xiang's fingers suddenly stopped. "Let's go to the main palace."

Hearing this, everyone shut up and quickly followed after him.

Soon, they arrived at the main palace. The main palace was honoring relics^[1].

Once here, Ji Xiang quickly used his abacus as the sound of clicking got faster and faster. However, he soon stopped and once again told them to move. "No, it's not here. Let's go to the next palace."

Everyone silently followed him to the next palace.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang was curious as to why Ji Xiang was doing this.

Isn't he afraid that he might end up missing someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

Just as they were about to walk out of the palace, a group of monks approached them. An old monk led them as the others surrounded Li Huowang's group while holding Bo Staves.

"Who are you? Why are you breaking the rule of no killing inside our temple?" shouted one of the monks beside the old monk.

In response, Li Huowang held onto his sword and asked, "Who are you?"

"Are you blind? We are the monks of the Buddha's Skeleton Temple."

Hearing his words, the three of them turned to look at the tall Xin Chi. Only he could determine who among them was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

It was only when he nodded that all of them sighed in relief.

After that, Tuoba Danqing stepped forward and showed off his identity plate and said, "We are from the Surveillance Bureau. Return back to your rooms and don't come out!"

The monks who heard his words all frowned. All of them looked at the old monk.

In return, the old monk clasped his hands and asked, "Amitabha, may I know why are you here in my temple? Nothing has happened in the temple for the past few days and everything is calm."

"Of course, you would think that the temple is calm. But you have no idea that underneath the calmness, a lot of people have infiltrated into the temple. Go back to your rooms and don't come out!"

This time, the monks heeded his warning and dispersed.

Just as Ji Xiang was about to bring them to the next location, Li Huowang stopped them and asked, "Wait, don't you think that something is wrong? Everything is too normal here. The Sitting Oblivion Dao is a group of people that loves to trick others for fun, to the point that they would even risk their lives. Things would never be this peaceful if they came here.”

“Don’t deduce this on your own. The informants of the Surveillance Bureau are much smarter than you. If they have detected that the Sitting Oblivion Dao is here, then they are definitely here,” said Hong Da.

However, Li Huowang shook his head. “No, I’m not saying that the Sitting Oblivion Dao isn’t here. All I’m saying is that maybe there’s another reason behind why the Sitting Oblivion Dao infiltrated this place rather than just doing their regular petty tricks.”

Li Huowang thought that Ji Xiang would contemplate on his words, but the man merely frowned and said, “Just do your job.”

Then, he turned to exit the palace.

What’s going on?

With this, Li Huowang was even more bewildered. It was as if Ji Xiang knew what the Sitting Oblivion Dao was doing.

As he followed them, Li Huowang knew that something was wrong as he followed them.

That eunuch must be holding something back from us.

At this point, Li Huowang thought that the whole mission was fishy even though he hadn’t even seen the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s shadows.

As Li Huowang’s boots stepped onto the clean marble floor, his footsteps echoed loudly. This time, rather than observing the devotees and the monks, he concentrated on Ji Xiang instead.

After much observation, Li Huowang saw what was wrong.

If Ji Xiang had been fighting against the Sitting Oblivion Dao, then he should’ve been paying attention to the people around them. Rather than that, he was instead concentrating on the pillars of the temple. At the same time, his abacus never stopped; it was as if he was looking for something.

Is he looking for something specific?

Li Huowang didn't dare ask the question because he didn't know Ji Xiang's true power.

Hearing the command, Li Huowang unsheathed his sword halfway before seeing that it was a woman praying diligently on the prayer mat. Thus, he sheathed his sword back.

1. pearl or crystal-like bead-shaped objects that are apparently found among the cremated ashes of Buddhist spiritual masters. Believed to embody the spiritual knowledge, teachings, realizations or living essence of spiritual masters. 🙌

Chapter 337 - Collapse

“Master Xin Chi, are you sure you are right this time?”

While the Surveillance Bureau would not hesitate to kill innocents for the sake of their missions, Li Huowang still couldn't stomach the fact that he had to kill innocents for no reason.

When Li Huowang asked that question, the woman's body shrank until only her clothes were left.

“Er Jiu! Why did you not listen to me?”

Li Huowang scoffed when he saw Xin Chi becoming angry, his eyes wide like an Arhat. Then, he walked over to where the clothes were and stabbed his sword into the cushion. A puppy-like cry was heard as blood flowed from the cushion.

The girl had not run away. Instead, she had shrunk and flattened herself to hide in the cushion.

“Master Xin Chi, if you were this accurate all the time, then I wouldn't have to hesitate at all.”

Li Huowang did not want to become a weapon for others who killed innocent people, especially if he was being ordered by someone disgusting.

Sensing that the two of them were about to erupt into open hostilities, Ji Xiang stepped in. “Enough! I'm not dead yet. You had better be good! Don't forget why I called you here!”

Even though Ji Xiang was still smiling, both Li Huowang and Xin Chi knew that Ji Xiang was not someone to be trifled with. Thus, both of them chose to remain silent after that warning.

Time slowly passed and they circled around the entire temple. Except for that member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao that Li Huowang had killed, they found no one else even after an entire hour.

Thus, there were only two possibilities: either the Sitting Oblivion Dao had run away, or they were hiding themselves.

Still, even though they hadn't had any results in so long, Ji Xiang was not the slightest bit anxious, and was even getting more and more excited.

This only further reinforced Li Huowang's idea that there was another reason behind why Ji Xiang had come to Buddha's Skeleton Temple.

When they once again entered the palace with the dried corpse, Ji Xiang's face suddenly lit up with joy. At the same time, his fingers on the abacus started moving so fast that they left behind after-images. Sparks flew from the golden abacus.

"Come quick!" called out Ji Xiang as he stepped on the marble floor in a complicated pattern. After he circled the place three times, one of the Bodhisattva motifs on a pillar started moving on its own.

At this point, Li Huowang was sure.

I knew it! Ji Xiang is here to find something! Clearing out the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao was nothing more than a ruse!

The motif on the pillar quickly shriveled up, turning into a dried up corpse in no time. The corpse then used both its hands to open up its torso before jamming its fingers into its ribs.

However, Ji Xiang's face went blank from surprise as he stared at the dried corpse on the pillar.

There was nothing within its abdomen.

"Where's the Muddled One? Did someone take it before me? That can't be. Only I can access it," muttered Ji Xiang.

Muddled One?

Li Huowang, who was a Strayed One, was extra sensitive to terms that were similar to it.

Is a Muddled One another type of human treasure, just like a Strayed One? If the Strayed Ones are burdened by their sense of confusion and bewilderment, then what are the Muddled Ones? What kind of curse do they have to bear?

However, before he could even ask Tuoba Danqing about it, the sound of wood creaking and groaning came from the ceiling above, causing all of them to look up at the same time.

Before any of them could react, Hong Da shouted at them, “Run! It’s going to collapse!”

The moment he said this, the entire palace rumbled as the roof crashed downward, the tiles crushing everything underneath it. Dust blew up everywhere and covered the entire area.

It hurts.

Li Huowang felt pain all over his body. Everything was dusty and he couldn’t see anything. He tried to move but felt that something was crushing his body. He realized that he was stuck under a pile of debris.

Just as he was thinking about how to escape this situation, the sound of roof tiles being moved away rang out. Soon, the dust cleared up a bit and Li Huowang saw a man with a strong body appear in front of him.

Li Huowang finally managed to escape when the man lifted the debris weighing hundreds of kilos from atop Li Huowang’s body.

Li Huowang stood up and shook off the dust on his body as he thanked the man, “Thank you, Senior Tuoba.”

Tuoba Danqing’s face was dusty as he placed the debris back down. “No need to thank me. We are brothers who have shared a glass of wine together. How could I not rescue you? But, are you alright? Where are the others? The Sitting Oblivion Dao must’ve caused the roof of the temple to collapse.”

As Tuoba Danqing spoke, he patted off the dust on his body.

Hearing his words, Li Huowang nodded. “It must’ve been them.”

At the same time, Li Huowang carefully inched away from Tuoba Danqing, leaving a gap between the two of them while ensuring to never let the man out of his sight.

While the two of them were talking, someone else walked out from the dust cloud. It was Xin Chi with his tall frame.

As soon as he saw Li Huowang and Tuoba Danqing, Xin Chi's face became serious. Then, he pointed with his massive finger at Li Huowang. At the same time, Tuoba Danqing heard something in his mind and instantly retreated away from Li Huowang.

As the three of them stood apart from each other, Xin Chi and Tuoba Danqing stared at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang immediately realized what was going on. Xin Chi had told Tuoba Danqing something. Thus, Li Huowang immediately shouted at Tuoba Danqing before any of them could act, "Senior Tuoba, you can suspect that I'm from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but why aren't you suspecting that Xin Chi might be the fake one?"

"Stop lying. The Sitting Oblivion Dao doesn't know his telepathy." At this moment, Tuoba Danqing's usual friendly gaze was beyond cold.

"They don't know his telepathy? They can steal any power easily!" said Li Huowang as he unsheathed his sword.

"We knew that you would say this, but Lord Ji Xiang told us before that even if it was Fa Cai herself, she too would need to spend at least six hours to learn Xin Chi's telepathy. Thus, he is real and you are fake," concluded Tuoba Danqing.

Faced with their accusations, Li Huowang got angrier and angrier.

"He's visibly fake!" shouted Li Huowang as he pointed at Xin Chi.

However, at that moment, a familiar voice rang out inside his mind. It was Xin Chi's telepathy. "No, I am real. I also know that you are real, but right now, my voice is the truth. If I say that you are fake, then you are fake."

“What?!” Li Huowang’s eyes were wide with shock. He could not believe what Xin Chi was saying! He had thought of many possibilities before this, but he had never thought about his own allies betraying him.

“Are you crazy? You are accusing me and betraying us just because of that incident from earlier? Just because I challenged your authority?” questioned Li Huowang.

Xin Chi smiled for a brief moment before once again becoming serious. “That’s right. I’m a petty person.”

Having said that, he and Tuoba Danqing started running toward Li Huowang.

“You crazy fucker!” Li Huowang roared as he directly slashed toward Xin Chi.

However, as he got closer, something metallic flew out from the dust cloud, aiming for Li Huowang’s neck!

It was a rusted short blade, and the one behind it was Hong Da. At that moment, Li Huowang was surrounded by three people.

What is happening? Did they find out my identity? Is this a trap for me?!

Chapter 338 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Jiang!

The sound of metal clashing rang out as Li Huowang's black-tassel sword blocked Hong Da's rusted blade.

The rusted blade cracked and shattered, but a shrapnel still magically flew toward Li Huowang's face.

However, faced with this deadly attack, Li Huowang had no intention of guarding against it. He twisted his sword, choosing to cut off Hong Da's head at the expense of getting injured himself.

But at that moment, a strong wind came from Li Huowang's side. It was Xin Chi. He raised his right leg and stepped on Li Huowang.

At that moment, a dark shadow twisted out from within Li Huowang's Daoist robe and grabbed the bronze coin sword before stabbing it at Xin Chi's feet.

It was one of Li Sui's tentacles. He was helping Li Huowang take care of the surprise attacks.

Li Sui and Li Huowang worked in tandem, allowing them to fight against two people at the same time. However, given that there were three opponents, they were just not enough.

A dull explosion rang out as Li Huowang spat out blood and flew into the debris, sending out a plume of dust. At this point, Li Huowang's face was stabbed full of shrapnel.

Even though he felt like his organs had rearranged themselves, Li Huowang stood up. When he did, he saw that he was surrounded once more.

Suddenly, Tuoba Danqing, who had attacked him just now, warned everyone. "Don't attack his back. It seems that he has armor there. His body was tough."

Li Huowang swallowed his blood and roared at Tuoba Danqing, "Senior Tuoba, you saw the tentacles on my body just now! Ask yourself, can the Sitting Oblivion Dao copy my techniques?!"

Tuoba Danqing glanced at the black tentacle that was holding the bronze coin sword, his eyes filled with a hint of hesitation. But in the end, he decided to not believe Li Huowang. "Hong Da, lend me a blade."

Hearing this, Hong Da opened his clothes and chose the longest blade from his collection.

At this point, it was clear that they did not trust Li Huowang, and so there was no point in trying to talk any further.

"No need to explain it to them! Kill them all! Kill! Kill! Kill!" At that moment, a domineering woman's voice exploded in Li Huowang's mind.

At the same time, a surge of anger flooded into his mind as Li Huowang stood his ground, ready to fight against Tuoba Danqing.

If he wanted to survive, he needed to break through their formation, and Tuoba Danqing, without his weapon, was clearly the weakest link!

Xin Chi wanted to help Tuoba Danqing by fighting against Li Huowang first, but Li Huowang was one step faster than him. Li Huowang directly cut open his mouth, removing half of his teeth in the process. Then, from his open cheek, everyone saw Li Huowang's exposed mouth and the bloody wound.

Li Huowang took a deep breath before spitting out, sending his bloodied teeth flying out of the wound as they shot toward Xin Chi.

After making Xin Chi retreat, Li Huowang raised his black-tassel sword and charged at Tuoba Danqing. At the same time, Li Sui raised the bronze coin sword as well.

As he saw the sword stabbing toward him, Tuoba Danqing quickly used his arms to block, causing his sleeves to be torn open by the sword and reveal a pair of wristbands made from red-colored walnuts.

As Li Huowang's sword stabbed into the walnuts, the sound of metal grinding rang out.

Unexpectedly, the wristbands made of red-colored walnuts managed to block Li Huowang's sword, its edges wedged between them. It was most definitely an artifact!

At that moment, the walnuts shivered as if there was something hiding within them. At the same time, several venomous gazes trained on Li Huowang's head.

"Don't get close to him! He's raising several Gus! [\[1\]](#)" At that moment, Hong Zhong, who had originally been invisible for some time, suddenly appeared and warned Li Huowang of the danger.

At the critical moment, Li Huowang suddenly shouted at Li Sui. "Li Sui, now!"

Immediately the black tentacle holding the bronze coin sword stabbed toward Tuoba Danqing's chest.

Ding!

However, the bronze coin sword stopped right at Tuoba Danqing's chest, unable to pierce any further.

As Tuoba Danqing's shirt was torn off, a golden longevity lock was revealed on his chest [\[2\]](#).

At that moment, Li Huowang's sharp hearing also picked up Xin Chi's footsteps that were approaching him from behind at the same time.

"Haha, how's this, Sitting Oblivion Dao? Didn't expect this right?" gloated Tuoba Danqing.

As he stared at the man's gloating face, Li Huowang suddenly opened his mouth and spat the two teeth that he had intentionally kept hidden in his mouth.

The teeth exploded, smashing half of Tuoba Danqing's face in.

“AAAAAA!”

Li Huowang kicked Tuoba Danqing’s chest, finally allowing him to escape their formation.

However, just as he sighed in relief and was about to escape the collapsed temple, he ran into a familiar face.

It was another Li Huowang.

Looking at each other’s faces, both Li Huowangs looked surprised.

“Er Jiu! Kill him! That’s a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!” At that moment, Xin Chi’s voice rang out in the fake Li Huowang’s mind.

Hearing that, the fake Li Huowang revealed an expression of disgust and unsheathed the bronze coin sword on his back before running toward the real Li Huowang. “Sitting Oblivion Dao! You dare disguise yourself as me! Die!”

With this, Li Huowang was once again trapped and surrounded.

At that moment, Xin Chi ran up to the real Li Huowang before using his massive legs to step on him.

Surprisingly, the real Li Huowang just phased through his legs.

Xin Chi was caught unaware as he watched Li Huowang sink into the ground.

However, that had just been an illusion. The real Li Huowang had long since turned invisible and hidden himself away.

After escaping the encirclement, Li Huowang was currently hiding atop one of the roofs as he looked at the four people standing on the ground.

“Damn! That fellow from the Sitting Oblivion Dao knows how to travel through the ground!” said the fake Li Huowang in frustration.

Just then, XIn Chi approached the fake Li Huowang carefully and then used his telepathy to warn the other two. “Careful, this man is a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

However, without waiting for the two of them to react, the fake Li Huowang showed off a surprised expression, his eyes growing wide. “Master Xin Chi, what is the meaning of this? If I’m from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, then doesn’t that mean that the person from just now had been real? Since he had been real, then why were you framing him? Do you want to kill both the fake and the real Li Huowang? Just because I challenged your authority once? Are you that petty? Can you really tell the real person apart from a fake or were you perhaps mistaken once again?”

As he spoke, the fake Li Huowang retreated away from Xin Chi.

At this point, even Tuoba Danqing and Hong Da stopped as they looked at Xin Chi.

On the other hand, not knowing how to explain the situation, Xin Chi started panicking.

Meanwhile, as Li Huowang looked at the situation down below, he started chuckling. He had never thought that his enemy, the Sitting Oblivion Dao, would end up helping him like this.

1. A Gu is a venom-based poison associated with cultures of south China, particularly Nanyue. The traditional preparation of gu poison involves sealing several venomous creatures (e.g., centipede, snake, scorpion) inside a closed container, where they devoured one another and allegedly concentrated their toxins into a single survivor, whose body would be fed upon by larvae until consumed. The last surviving larva held the complex poison. 📖

2. A pendant in the shape of a lock. The lock shape itself symbolizes an actual security lock, embodying the parents' wish for its wearer to be "locked" to the earth or "locked to life", to ward away death. 📖

Chapter 339 - Fa Cai

Faced with the accusations of the member of Sitting Oblivion Dao, Xin Chi wanted to explain himself. However, Li Huowang was not capable of hearing what he was talking about.

At this point, Xin Chi's own actions were impeding himself. He had never thought that the Sitting Oblivion Dao would copy Li Huowang's identity to try and trick them.

However, compared to seeing who would end up getting the short end of the stick here, Li Huowang was much more concerned about what he should do next.

After some deliberation, he decided on his course of action.

This mission is too dangerous. Both my allies and enemies are targeting me. Rather than going in with them, I would much rather act alone. Then once they fight, I will get to reap the rewards when the time is right. I can't trust anyone here! I can only trust myself. At least, I won't lie to myself.

He gave the four people down below one final look before scaling down from the roof while still being invisible.

He saw that the four of them weren't fighting anymore, and were instead walking together. Seeing this, he realized that Xin Chi must've chosen to remain silent and admit that the fake Li Huowang was the real one to uphold his reputation.

However, Xin Chi was still cautious, ready to fight against the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao at any moment.

The four of them seemed to be searching for something.

Li Huowang knew what they were looking for. They were searching for Ji Xiang. Ever since the temple palace collapsed, the golden abacus-wielding Ji Xiang was missing. Li Huowang hurried his steps to follow them.

But before he could do that, a hand suddenly patted his shoulder.

Instantly, Li Huowang started sweating profusely. He was invisible at the moment, and yet someone had still managed to spot him!

He turned around with his sword unsheathed, only to see that there was a scholar standing behind him.

Hua~

The scholar opened his fan, and Li Huowang saw that there were four words written on it: Everyone has their values.

“You must be Er Jiu. I am curious as to why out of your five elements, you only seem to have fire and metal. Where are the other three?” asked the scholar.

However, Li Huowang just stared at the stranger, his guard up as he prepared himself to deal with any strange movements.

In this bizarre place, that stranger could be anyone. But it was highly likely that the other party was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, or someone worse.

Thus, Li Huowang was ready to act the moment he detected any hostility or attacks.

“Your face... Doesn’t it hurt to have those shrapnel blades embedded into your face? Those blades belong to the blade of the Creditor. If you borrow a weapon from him, then he will seek your luck and fate in payment.” As the scholar spoke, he waved his fan and the rusted shrapnel blades were instantly removed from Li Huowang’s face. Then, with another wave of his fan, the wound on Li Huowang’s face mended itself.

Seeing the scholar’s movements, Li Huowang instantly grabbed his flint and placed it against his own skin.

“Who are you?” Li Huowang stated each word clearly.

Looking at Li Huowang’s wariness, the scholar sighed and thought about it. After some time, he simply answered, “Never mind. I still have some matters to attend to, and so I will leave now. Since you've joined the Surveillance Bureau, then you should live a good life. Sometimes ignorance is bliss."

Then, the scholar knelt down and took out a black spindle and placed it on the ground. "I will leave you with something. This works much better than your coin veil."

After placing it down, the scholar didn't do anything else and just nodded at Li Huowang before turning to the temple. "We will meet again in the future, Er Jiu. My name is Zhuge Yuan. If you have problems that you can't solve, then come and find me at the Xing Island of the Western Seas. My powers are limited, but I will help you out as much as I can."

With those words, the scholar left. However, Li Huowang did not move for a long time. As he thought about the scholar's actions, he soon realized that it was the rare act of kindness exhibited in this world.

It was something that he had only ever experienced in his hallucinations so far.

Back then, even Abbess Jingxin never showed any kindness, choosing to keep it buried deep in her heart. While she still helped him, she was unfriendly on the outside.

On the other hand, the scholar from just now had shown genuine kindness.

However, after some time, Li Huowang shook his head and braced himself.

No! That scholar is definitely fishy! I cannot let him rope me in. I've already fallen for these tricks enough and I must not fall for them once again.

With these thoughts, Li Huowang took one final look at the black spindle on the ground before walking toward the side palace.

This mission and the people he had met today made Li Huowang feel restless. He wasn't sure why, but he had a feeling that he was somehow looking at everything through a veil. He could not see through any of it.

When he walked into the side palace, he was stunned.

The original group of four people had now turned into six. At this point, there was one more Xin Chi and one more Hong Da.

As Li Huowang saw them fighting, he chuckled. "Interesting."

Then, he patted the dust off his shoulder, rearranged his robes, and kept his sword before entering the side palace. This time, he was not invisible.

When the real Li Huowang stepped in, the fake Li Huowang inside directly palmed his head. "Oh shit, here comes another one!"

"This is the real Er Jiu."

"No, he is fake. He's from the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

Both Xin Chis also used telepathy at the same time and gave two completely different answers.

Li Huowang looked at the two Xin Chis and contemplated. At this point, even he couldn't differentiate between which was the fake one and which was the one who framed him.

The palace soon grew rowdy with their arguing voices. Since the extra Xin Chi had appeared, they no longer had any methods that could be used to reliably tell who was real and who was fake.

There were numerous times when they wanted to start fighting, but stopped when the others held them back. Thus, no one fought for a long time.

However, Li Huowang did not care about any of this. He did not need to know who was real and who was fake. He was just here to watch the show.

All he needed to do was to wait for them to fight and for one of them to emerge as the victor. He would act after that.

At that moment, Li Huowang smiled as he looked at the chaos in front of him. Now, he could somewhat understand the Sitting Oblivion Dao's thought process.

As long as it did not involve him, any crisis would be interesting in his eyes.

“Enough!” A shrill voice suddenly rang out, causing everyone to stop fighting as they looked toward the entrance.

It was Ji Xiang who was holding a half-shrunken head.

At this moment, Ji Xiang’s sparse eyebrows were trembling from anger. It was the first time he looked this angry. He approached all of them and looked at the two Li Huowangs, the two Hong Das, and the two Xin Chis. Then, he raised his hand and showed all of them the head. “Stop playing now! This is Fa Cai’s head! Fa Cai died a long time ago!”

As soon as they heard this, everyone felt a chill in their gut. Fa Cai, one of the Three Officials of the Sitting Oblivion Dao was dead just like that? Then how strong was the killer?

Chapter 340 - Zhuge Yuan

Fa Cai from the Sitting Oblivion Dao was killed by someone else.

Wait, could it be?

Li Huowang suddenly recalled Zhuge Yuan.

How is that possible?

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao wasn’t the only one who came here looking to find the Muddled One! Tell me right now who took the Muddled One?” shouted Ji Xiang, his aura vastly different from before. At the same time, his eyes were bulging to the point of almost popping off from their sockets and the white makeup on his face cracked.

He glared at the three sets of people in front of him.

But the palace continued to remain silent. No one answered him.

“Fine! Everyone, return to the capital! Once we are there, I’m sure you will spit out the answers!” Ji Xiang threw the head and left.

At this point, no one dared to go against him for fear that they would be branded as someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. All of them followed him quietly.

Since the carriage was not large enough to fit everyone, some of them sat on horses as they started returning to the capital with Ji Xiang.

As he sat on the horse, Li Huowang was feeling quite anxious. He only had the bronze coin veil and wasn’t sure whether that would be enough to hide his identity as a Strayed One.

But it was clear that some of them were even more anxious than Li Huowang.

Suddenly, one of the Li Huowangs jumped down from the horse and ran into a forest. The moment he did, the fake Hong Da and the fake Xin Chi also ran into the forest at the same time.

In the next instant, the roof of the carriage exploded as Ji Xiang held onto his golden abacus and chased after one of the members from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

“Go and capture the other two! I want them alive!”

With this order, all of them scattered, each chasing after one of the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

Xin Chi ran into the forest as fast as he could. His body was big so he could not move as nimbly as he wanted in the forest. He was also the slowest.

At that moment, he suddenly heard something and he tilted his head, barely dodging a blade.

But his body suddenly shuddered and he found himself being lifted off the ground. As he endured the intense pain, he saw that it was an arm covered in bone spikes piercing out from the ground and into his abdomen.

“What is this—” He opened his mouth, but realized too late that he had spoken!

At the same time, a whip made from bronze coins being tied together by a red thread wrapped around his neck.

Amidst all this, someone shouted in his ear, “You think you are petty? I’m equally petty, motherfucker!”

The bronze coin whip dug into Xin Chi’s neck as Li Huowang continued to strangle him tightly.

Struggling, Xin Chi opened his mouth and coughed out blood. He tried to reach behind him to catch Li Huowang. But even if his hands became bloody, there was nothing he could do.

After that, Li Huowang used all of his strength, even resorting to biting into his bronze coin whip as he tightened his stranglehold.

At the same time, numerous tentacles burst forth from Li Huowang's body and entangled Xin Chi's limbs.

Xin Chi continued to struggle fiercely until he suddenly stopped. Then, he collapsed onto the ground with a forceful impact. He was dead.

Just as Li Huowang was retrieving his bronze coin sword, he saw Hong Da appearing from the side as he stared at Li Huowang his black tentacles cautiously.

After a moment, Li Huowang blinked and pointed at Xin Chi's body. "He's from the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

Hearing this, Hong Da looked down at the corpse and saw that its face was indeed distorting into that of a mahjong tile and slowly nodded. "But Lord Ji Xiang said that we needed to capture them alive. Why did you kill him? What should we do now?"

"I couldn't hold back in time. Sorry," replied Li Huowang as he shook his gourd and waved it at Hong Da. Instantly, its jaws opened and it spat out several lifespan pills toward the man.

Hong Da's large sleeve was like a bag that captured all of the lifespan pills. Then, he nodded with satisfaction. "It's normal for youngsters to not be able to hold back. We still have two more people, and so Ji Xiang will not blame you."

Hearing this, Li Huowang nodded and smiled, his black tentacles slowly retreating back into his body.

"Come, let's go catch the other one," said Hong Da as he turned and left.

Li Huowang was now slightly more knowledgeable about the Surveillance Bureau and the dynamics between their members.

The Surveillance Bureau was just a place for all of them to earn money, and they were not colleagues. At best they were acquaintances. It all depended on the benefits you could provide them. Depending on how much you gave them, they could either sabotage or help you in a mission.

When Li Huowang and Hong Da brought the other person back, they saw Tuoba Danqing and Ji Xiang were already back in the carriage.

However, at this moment, there was blood everywhere. In the middle of the pool of blood was a human face, a skeleton, and some discarded flesh.

Looking at Tuoba Danqing holding onto his mouth, it was clear that the victim had been tortured to this point.

Meanwhile, Ji Xiang was pacing back and forth as he muttered something.

“Senior Tuoba? What’s wrong?” asked Li Huowang as he approached Tuoba Danqing.

“Lord Ji Xiang managed to force the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao to confess. He had only said one name, Zhuge Yuan, before he was suddenly transformed into his current state. I don’t even know who that is,” explained Tuoba Danqing.

Zhuge Yuan? He was the one who killed Fa Cai?!

Li Huowang’s pupils shrank. He remembered the few words that Zhuge Yuan had told him.

First the Surveillance Bureau, then the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and now Zhuge Yuan. Since neither the Sitting Oblivion Dao nor the Surveillance Bureau managed to get their hands on the Muddled One, Zhuge Yuan must’ve obtained it. Just who is he?

At that moment, Ji Xiang suddenly stopped and looked at the remaining three people. “Let me ask you this. While we were at the Buddha’s Skeleton Temple, did any of you feel anything strange? Maybe someone did something suspicious yet reasonable at the same time?”

Li Huowang recalled his experiences and frowned. What was Ji Xiang talking about?

“Lord Ji Xiang, what is happening? Who’s Zhuge Yuan?” asked Li Huowang. He didn’t know why, but he felt like he was being sucked into even greater danger.

Ji Xiang didn't reply and just continued mumbling, "I should've known that it was Zhuge Yuan's power. It must be him. The world must be changing quite rapidly if even he is coming here to steal the Muddled One."

After pacing back and forth for a while, Ji Xiang grabbed a horse and left quickly without telling them anything else.

"Lord Ji Xiang, Lord Ji Xiang!" Tuoba Danqing shouted but to no avail. He turned to look at Li Huowang and Hong Da. "Go back. Sigh, it seems that something has happened and I fear that we won't be able to get any rewards."

When Tuoba Danqing left, Hong Da looked at Li Huowang and asked. "Let's go together?"

"Thank you, but I prefer traveling alone," replied Li Huowang.

Hearing this, Hong Da nodded and left on horseback.

On the other hand, after Li Huowang ensured that there was no one else around, he walked back to the Buddha's Skeleton Temple.

Chapter 341 - Spindle

The sounds of crying could be heard throughout the Buddha's Skeleton Temple. The monks and the devotees were busy carrying out the injured from within the collapsed palace.

At the same time, many of them were also busy cleaning up the debris as they tried to save the Flesh Bodhisattva from underneath the rubble.

Amidst all the chaos, no one noticed the black spindle that had rolled to a corner of the wall.

At that moment, two bloody pikes picked up the black spindle like a chopstick.

As he looked at the item that Zhuge Yuan had given him, Li Huowang frowned.

The spindle was made from a yellow bone. The bone was slimmer in the middle and thicker on both its ends. The marking on it showed that it was an old item. There were black threads wrapped around the bone, turning it into a spindle. The threads were extremely black and fine.

What is this? Are there any side effects to it?

Li Huowang wasn't sure what to do with it.

As he thought about it, he remembered the kindness that Zhuge Yuan had shown to him. If Zhuge Yuan really was the one who had killed Fa Cai, then his strength would definitely be above Li Huowang. Thus, if Zhuge Yuan wanted to kill Li Huowang, there would be nothing the latter could do.

Li Huowang used the pikes and examined the spindle while sitting on the stairway. He slowly tried to rationalize everything that had happened.

Zhuce Yuan... Zhuce Yuan ...

Firstly, based on how that damned eunuch reacted to that name when he heard it, I can confirm that Zhuge Yuan belongs to another faction. Zhuge Yuan's faction should also be much stronger than sects like the Righteous Monastery or the Benevolent Nunnery. Secondly, the mission this time, to obtain the Muddled One, was leaked to the Sitting Oblivion Dao and Zhuge Yuan. What happened was that Zhuge Yuan ended up killing Fa Cai and avoided Ji Xiang before obtaining the Muddled One, thus becoming the winner this time.

After having been here for some time, Li Huowang was well aware of the Surveillance Bureau's strength. If even they were cautious of Zhuge Yuan, then that would mean that the latter was much more powerful than he had originally thought.

There was also the issue with Zhuge Yuan's power. Even though he looked like a scholar, he had still managed to defeat Fa Cai.

Li Huowang recalled what Ji Xiang had asked them before.

Let me ask you this. While at the Buddha's Skeleton Temple, did any of you feel anything strange? Maybe someone did something suspicious yet reasonable at the same time?

This was what Ji Xiang had said. However, Li Huowang didn't know what he meant. What did he mean when he said suspicious yet reasonable? Why was it related to Zhuge Yuan and why was Ji Xiang so shocked?

Li Huowang closed his eyes and carefully remembered everything that had happened within the Buddha's Skeleton Temple. The only thing that happened back then that was suspicious yet reasonable at the same time was Xin Chi suddenly framing him as someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Xin Chi might be petty but it was definitely strange that he would try to frame Li Huowang at a time when they could be attacked by the Sitting Oblivion Dao at any time.

Also, when that member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao masquerading as me appeared, he could've just said that it was yet another member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. But he didn't. Instead, he became somewhat conflicted and then chose to remain silent.

As Li Huowang carefully analyzed the situation, he found more and more suspicious issues.

Is that Zhuge Yuan's power? Can he control someone's actions without them knowing? Is this a technique or mind control?

Li Huowang began thinking about the various possibilities.

Wait, if he is capable of controlling others, why didn't he use it on me?

If Zhuge Yuan had this kind of power, then there was no reason for him to talk to Li Huowang in order to obtain his goals. He could just control Li Huowang and do whatever he wanted.

Unless...

Li Huowang's pupils suddenly shrank and his heart started beating faster.

Unless he doesn't have any goals at all?

Li Huowang lowered his head and looked at the spindle.

Then why did he give me this? Was it out of kindness? Did he pity me? Impossible! That doesn't make sense! There's no way that there are people like that out there! I don't believe it! He must have an ulterior motive!

At that moment, Monk's illusion approached him and said, "Daoist, you can't say that. I became a monk because I wanted to do good deeds, and Abbess Jingxin was also a good person."

Hearing this, Li Huowang just stood there. He kept thinking and thinking, but there was no satisfactory answer.

After a while, he shook his head and sighed deeply. He had become so used to wickedness that kindness seemed much more foreign and scary to him. He would rather Zhuge Yuan just attack him. At the very least, that way he wouldn't have to think so much.

"Amitabha, benefactor, I'm sorry to disturb you."

Hearing the sudden voice, Li Huowang raised his head and saw that it was the old monk of the Buddha's Skeleton Temple. He was standing there with a kind look on his face.

"Benefactor, I know we mustn't lose sight of the bigger picture, and I know that the Surveillance Bureau has a great goal, but, if possible, please stop killing. Because of you, five of our monks have returned to Nirvana today," pleaded the old monk, kneeling in front of Li Huowang with his hands clasped together.

Looking at the nine scars on the old monk's head, Li Huowang just stood up and walked out of the temple.

Another kind person? Maybe, but I don't trust him.

Once out of the temple, Li Huowang had decided on his new goals.

Rather than waiting here and thinking, I would just prefer to ask Ji Xiang and see if my questions can be answered. That eunuch surely knew who Zhuge Yuan was! Once I know who Zhuge Yuan is, I can think about what to do with the spindle.

Having made his decision, Li Huowang lowered his head and placed the spindle in his bag of torture tools before hopping onto his horse.

The horse started galloping across the muddy road, never stopping once.

As he moved, the cold rain splashed onto the horse's back and on Li Huowang's face.

Li Huowang looked up at the dark skies as he continued to travel on the muddy road.

Back when he came here, they were in a horse carriage where he could hide from the weather; however, while traveling to the temple the skies had been perfectly clear. On the other hand, now that he was returning on horseback, the rain didn't seem like it would ever stop.

Even though it was already late at night, it was still raining. Li Huowang knew that he shouldn't be riding the horse, but he knew that if he stopped then he would be thoroughly soaked. He needed to find a place to take shelter from the rain.

Just then, Li Huowang saw a flag that had 'station' written on it, causing his eyes to light up as he urged the horse to run faster. The flag was flowing wildly in the rain.

The stations were places provided by the Liang Kingdom where messengers and officials could rest, eat, and exchange horses.

Just as the person in charge of the station yawned and lazily walked out with a lantern, Li Huowang shoved his identity plate into the person's face.

Immediately, the half-asleep station master was freed of his drowsiness.

Soon after, the stable boy was awake. He came and took Li Huowang's horse and started treating it carefully.

The chef was also woken up, tasked with cooking the best of meals before serving them to Li Huowang in his room.

Chapter 342 - Huanhuan

“Hehe. Sir, if there’s anything else you need, please just let us know.”

The station master’s flattering smile reminded Li Huowang of his own superior.

“Go to sleep. And don’t come near my room if there’s nothing,” instructed Li Huowang.

“Alright, have a good rest~ I will go back now. If you need anything, just call out for Old Wu, and I’ll arrive as soon as I can,” said the station master as he turned back.

The door shut with a creak. Then, Li Huowang fastened the door and took out the soaked rations from his bag, and began to gnaw on them.

Without Bun around, he was even more wary and dared not eat random food from outside, even if it was at a relay station of the Liang Kingdom.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly stopped eating and looked at the scabs on the back of his hand. There seemed to be something moving there.

When he examined it carefully under the candlelight, he found a fine, black tentacle there. It resembled an earthworm, and was continuously wriggling around inside his blood vessels. Li Sui’s tentacles had followed along his blood vessels and reached his hand, which was something unprecedented.

“I called it, didn’t I? See, the omen has appeared. This is just the beginning. The Black Taisui will gradually occupy all the meridians in your body. At that point, you will be dead meat. Even the Immortals won’t be able to save you then. Do as I say, and quickly get rid of the Black Taisui!” said Hong Zhong.

However, Li Huowang just continued to chew on the flatbread in his mouth while eyeing Hong Zhong coldly.

“Daddy?” Li Sui’s voice rang out again, this time with a hint of grievance and hesitation.

Li Huowang withdrew his gaze, and then placed the remainder of his rations back into his pocket. Then, he directly blew out the candle. At this point, he was too lazy to even take a bath, and just directly decided to lie down. He was exhausted. The moment the back of his head hit the pillow, he had already entered dreamland.

Li Huowang woke up to the pitter-patter sound of rain outside his window. He had finally had a good sleep after a long time.

Still in a daze, he was suddenly hit by a strong bout of queasiness.

What’s going on?

Li Huowang walked over to retrieve his water gourd and hydrate himself.

But as soon as he opened his mouth, before the water had even poured in, several tentacles burrowed out from within his throat.

“What are you doing? Get back in!”

However, as he spoke, more and more tentacles started to emerge.

“Li Sui! What are you doing?!” Li Huowang bellowed in his mind.

“Daddy, you... won’t die!”

As Li Huowang bent over to vomit, the wriggling tentacles that came together to form Li Sui were soon vomited out, covered in mucus. Then, the mass of tentacles quickly crawled its way underneath the bed.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang swallowed a mouthful of saliva mixed with blood, and then glared at Hong Zhong with annoyance. “Will you die if you don’t speak?”

He turned back and walked toward his bed. But before he could even reach it, he clutched his head in agony as the surroundings around him started changing rapidly. When he finally came to, he found that he was no longer standing, but lying on the cold, muddy ground.

Li Huowang looked around dumbfoundedly. He was still in the area under the bridge, but now, he was much dirtier than before.

Back again...

Li Huowang sighed helplessly. He turned around to lie flat on the ground, and watched the spiders spinning their webs at the bottom of the bridge.

The only fortunate thing was that his mother and Yang Na were no longer around. Thus, he did not need to carefully mull over what was real or what was fake. He just had to quietly wait for time to pass.

Li Sui is beginning to recognise words faster and faster now. Now, it can even understand what Hong Zhong is saying. But I have to teach it that not everything some people say is definitely true.

Covered in his tattered clothes, Li Huowang thought to himself as he continued lying on the ground underneath the bridge.

At that moment, footsteps rang out from the entrance along with a voice. He remembered that it was Huanhuan's voice.

Li Huowang turned around to look and saw the cute little girl carrying her red bag while holding out a few shumais. She was just standing there uneasily. At this point, she seemed slightly taller than before, and her clothes had also been changed. The only thing that did not change was the cherry-colored hairpin on her head.

"Huanhuan, there's no need to bring me food. I won't starve to death. Actually, it might even be better if I do starve to death," said Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's words caused Huanhuan's eyes to widen. "Uncle, you can recognise me! You haven't recognised me in a while."

Hearing this, he chuckled silently, then stood up and walked toward her. This time, she did not move away as usual, and just stood there uneasily as she looked up at Li Huowang.

Then, Li Huowang took the five shumais from her hands and stuffed them into his mouth as he said, “Back at the kindergarten, I’m sorry about what happened. You know too that I have a mental illness. Sometimes, I cannot differentiate things very well.”

Huanhuan smiled sweetly as she watched him eat, then shook her head, her two ponytails swinging from side to side. “It’s alright, I know that you are not intentionally trying to harm me.”

Li Huowang raised his hand to pat her head, but decided against it when he saw just how filthy his palm was.

“Thank you for your shumais. Remember, don’t bring food for me in future. I might end up harming you when I am mad,” said Li Huowang before pausing abruptly. Why was he spouting such nonsense in this obvious hallucination?

“Mm, I got it! Goodbye Uncle! I’ll head home first!” Huanhuan gave Li Huowang a big hug, and then turned to leave.

Li Huowang walked to the edge of the area under the bridge. Standing in the shadows, he watched the petite figure dashing off in the sunlight. There was a sense of warmth in his eyes.

Back there, he would treat every act of kindness with extreme wariness. Conversely in this hallucination, kindness was everywhere. If he could choose, then he would much rather this side be the real one.

Just as he was going to turn around and head back to the area under the bridge, a fatty emerged from a corner in the distance. He was smoking and was wearing a large golden chain on his neck. This made Li Huowang’s expression freeze.

The fatty occasionally stole shifty glances toward this direction, which made the warmth in Li Huowang’s expression slowly turn into chilliness.

What’s he trying to do to Huanhuan?

Li Huowang immediately thought of a movie scene, which made his skin twitch. Even if this was just his hallucination, he would not let such disgusting events unfold.

He looked around and picked up a cobblestone that was within reach from the riverside, and then started moving toward the fatty.

By the time the fatty turned to see Li Huowang, he had already been hit on his head.

Immediately, the fatty's head started bleeding, causing him intense pain. By the time he realized what was going on, Li Huowang had already dragged him to the area under the bridge. When he looked down, he saw that a piece of shattered glass had pierced through his left palm, causing him to start screaming in pain.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly punched the fatty's chest, causing the fatty's cries to stop abruptly and lose his breath. "What are you screaming for? I haven't even started yet."

When the fatty finally regained his composure, Li Huowang looked at him coldly and asked, "Speak. What were you trying to do with the little girl?"

The fatty looked extremely wronged as tears almost fell from his eyes. "Why would I be watching the little girl? I have been keeping an eye at you!"

Chapter 343 - Da Long

The other party's words caught Li Huowang completely off guard. He stared at the fatty with the big, gold chain in disbelief. "Keeping an eye on me? What for?"

Looking fearfully at the blood-stained piece of broken glass, the fatty stammered, "I... I don't know. My distant cousin just asked me to keep an eye on you. He said that he'd pay me 2,500 a month. I thought it was crazy to watch a lunatic. But with 2,500 a month, and no boss to bother me, and the fact that I could play games, it was better than working in an electronics factory. So, I took up his offer."

Li Huowang reached out to pull the gold chain, but felt that something was wrong. The gold felt much heavier in his hands than it should, and was likely fake. As he thought about it, he suddenly felt that the fatty was probably telling the truth, and he was just sent here to keep an eye on him.

The fatty had an ingratiating smile on his face as he spoke, "I bought this thing from a stall for 30 bucks. I don't have money required to buy a real gold chain. That bastard Wang Zhilong hasn't paid me for two months."

Hearing this, Li Huowang's gaze suddenly became vacant.

What has been happening in this hallucination? Who is the person that sent people to keep an eye on me?

However, as his thoughts reached this point, Li Huowang's breathing quickened as he forcefully shook his head.

No! All this doesn't matter since it's just a hallucination. There's no logic here, and I don't need to care or understand what happens here.

"Li Sui!" Li Huowang turned around and shouted toward his surroundings, "Li Sui! Have you had enough fun? If you still recognize me as your daddy, then come back now!”

Since he had already given up on it, there was nothing left to care about. He did not want to continue staying in this hallucination. He still had many matters left to deal with on the other side!

Meanwhile, when the bound fatty saw Li Huowang’s bizarre actions, he was so frightened that he was about to wet his pants. After observing him for such a long period of time, he knew that this person was not just faking it. This person was a genuine lunatic. Moreover, from what he knew, this madman had even chopped at someone before.

The fatty struggled as he tried to retreat backward while shouting, “That’s none of my business! I’m just doing my work! It was that kid Da Long who asked me to inform him immediately if you created any objects to appear out of the blue! If you are looking for trouble, then go look for him instead!”

As he heard this, Li Huowang’s eyes shrank. He turned to look at him. “What did you say?!”

Li Huowang quickly walked across and picked him up from the ground, then stared at his fat face and asked, “What’s going on? Who is this Da Long? Why does he know that I can create things out of the blue?”

Everything that had just been extremely absurd until just a moment ago now started to have some logic in it. At the same time, this inexplicable logic made him start to feel a little nervous.

“I only know so much. His contact is on my phone. You can call him, and I’ll lure him over for you!” said the fatty.

Hearing this, Li Huowang took out the fatty’s phone and unlocked it via face verification. Then, he opened the contact list, and dialed the person named Da Long.

“Hey~ Brother Long! Come quickly! The lunatic has conjured something out of thin air, just like magic! Yes, yes! There’s gold too!” The fatty spoke to the person on the phone, his voice filled with conviction. Then, he looked toward Li Huowang with an ingratiating expression.

“Bro, he said that he would arrive in just a moment. I’ve already helped you trick him over, so can you let me go now?” asked the fatty.

Li Huowang tossed the fatty’s phone into the fast-flowing river, and then took off his socks, rolled them into a ball, and stuffed them into his mouth.

The so-called Da Long was not far away, as Li Huowang soon heard the screeching brakes from the outside.

When three men rushed under the bridge and saw the fatty tied up, the man with a crew cut and muscular face revealed a look of surprise. After they rushed over and released him, Wang Zhilong grabbed him and asked, “Where’s Li Huowang?”

However, before the fatty could answer, a dark shadow emerged from the river beside them. The shadow held a cobblestone and smashed it directly onto the man’s head.

The man hastily dodged, but the stone still managed to hit his collarbone, causing the area to visibly swell up.

That was just the beginning. These people were completely unprepared when they were faced with Li Huowang’s sudden ambush. The four-against-one situation unexpectedly resulted in their retreat.

“Damn it! I’ll fight you!” A short man steeled his heart, and then pulled out a dagger as he stabbed Li Huowang in the arm. However, he became a little flustered after hitting his target and subconsciously released the dagger while taking a step back.

The next moment, Li Huowang grabbed the handle of the dagger and pulled it out. Then, without hesitation, he stabbed it into the man’s arm. Miserable cries soon rang out from the area under the bridge.

With lightning speed, Li Huowang pulled out the dagger and stabbed it onto another person's thigh.

As he saw this horrifying scene, Wang Zhilong obviously started panicking. He hadn't expected the other party to be so terrifying. At this point, he wanted to run. However, faced with the armed Li Huowang, it was too late. A kick on the back caused him to fall and taste mud.

Soon, the four men were tied up like pigs waiting to be slaughtered. Their limbs were bound by their own shoelaces and belts, as they lay on the ground.

Then, Li Huowang dragged Wang Zhilong by the hair and brought him to the riverbank before pressing him directly into the muddy water. He held him down until the man started struggling violently, and then lifted him up forcefully. This went on for a few times until Wang Zhilong was gasping for air.

Finally, Li Huowang lifted him up again and asked, "How do you know that I can conjure up things?"

Wang Zhilong was somewhat dazed, and he spoke weakly and intermittently, "I... I overheard it."

"And what else did you do?" Li Huowang released his hand, causing Wang Zhilong's face to be a few centimeters away from the water.

The fear of suffocation caused the man to start speaking rapidly while sputtering, "I heard that you have a special ability to conjure gold out of thin air! And so, I had some bad ideas to find some connections and use them to sneak you out of the hospital so that I could use you to conjure some gold for myself!"

They didn't abandon me?

A strong surge of happiness flushed Li Huowang's heart.

They didn't abandon me!

He had always told himself that he didn't care. But only after hearing how this person had sneaked him out of the hospital did Li Huowang realize just how much he cared.

Meanwhile, Wang Zhilong saw Li Huowang's emotions stabilize, and hastily pleaded, "Please spare me! I had a wrong idea and thought of this crooked path! I am wrong, I am wrong!"

Hearing his pleas, Li Huowang looked down at him, the intense emotions in his heart quickly vanishing. At the same time, a strong sense of doubt started growing.

"You're lying! If you wanted to control me to conjure gold, then why didn't you kidnap me? Instead, you left me out in the open so casually. This is fake! It's a hallucination!" shouted Li Huowang.

Wang Zhilong wailed in despair, "I wanted to capture you, but the problem was that I couldn't tie you up! The rope was clearly bound on your hands, yet it loosened the next moment. The door was clearly shut, yet you managed to appear outside! If you hadn't shown this special ability, then I would have just thought that you were some ordinary lunatic and would have given up long ago!"

Chapter 344 - Li Sui

Li Huowang's eyes shrank.

This ability... Is it my shifting ability? I have such an ability in my hallucination as well?

Meanwhile, Wang Zhilong burst into tears as he continued to complain in a sullen voice, "I didn't even get a single dollar. Do you know how much I've invested for this exchange? Tens of thousands! And how many strings I had to pull for the officials to not take you away! This could only be done with the help of dozens of credit cards used by us few! Please, I'm begging you! Conjure up a few gold pieces. We're all at the end of our wits about how to deal with all the debt!"

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly released his grip and looked around with some confusion.

What's going on? Why does it seem like this world suddenly became more realistic?

He looked down at the bleeding wound on his body, then raised the dagger in his right hand and stabbed it towards his left hand.

This pain... Why does it feel so real?

Even if there's only a miniscule chance that it's real, doesn't this mean that Yang Na and my mom... They didn't abandon me! And they might even be looking for me right now!

Li Huowang's heart started racing as he quickly dashed outside. But right as he was about to get out into the sunlight, his footsteps gradually slowed down.

But in my current state, so what if they find me? Other than letting them continue with their suffering, and for me to continue to be thrust into bewilderment? I can't keep being a burden to them.

Dispirited, Li Huowang turned back as he walked back to the area under the bridge with heavy steps.

This is fake. Since I've ascertained this side to be fake, then there's nothing else to hesitate about.

He released Wang Zhilong's restraints and freed him, then lay on the ground and stared vacantly toward the ceiling.

Finally freed from his restraints, Wang Zhilong did not try to release his comrades, and instead looked back at Li Huowang, his gaze hesitant.

"Brother Li, since you're conscious now, tell me. Do you really have any special abilities?" asked Wang Zhilong.

However, Li Huowang completely disregarded everything around him. He was trying to think of how he could persuade Li Sui to go back into his tummy.

"Through the surveillance cameras, I saw that gold box that you gifted your mom! It was full of precious stones! Any one of them could buy you a house! That should be true, right? Otherwise, how could they have the money to issue missing person notices all over the internet and the streets?" continued Wang Zhilong.

"Scram..."

"Ah, Brother Li, don't be like that. If you really don't want to go back, then give me some gold. In return, I'll tell your mom that you're dead so that she can finally give up hope completely," offered Wang Zhilong.

Hearing those words, Li Huowang once again focused on Wang Zhilong's greedy face as killing intent surfaced within his eyes. "You want gold, right?! I'll give you some!"

As he spoke, Li Huowang took out the fatty's gold chain from his pocket and wrapped it around Wang Zhilong's neck. Then, he kicked the man's calves and pulled up. In an instant, his eyes began to turn white.

Wang Zhilong struggled for his life as tried to reach toward Li Huowang's face. But even as the back of Li Huowang's hands was scratched up and bloodied, he did not release his grip at all.

As time passed, Wang Zhilong's struggles only grew more intense. Gradually, his facial color turned from red to purple and then to black.

As he saw all this, Li Huowang's bloodshot pupils suddenly shrank. He found that this scene was extremely similar to when he previously killed Xin Chi.

A surge of fear caused Li Huowang to release his hands. He started trembling as he looked down at his hands.

Since when did he become like this? Killing people without even blinking?

Li Huowang turned around to look at his reflection on the river surface. The beggar in tattered clothes looking back at him was a complete stranger to him.

The ordinary high school life he had led was just a few years ago at this point. But to the current him, it was as distant as his previous life.

His past memories had already started to become hazy, as the bizarre and crazy events that had happened started replacing them in his mind.

Li Huowang had finally found the reason.

After experiencing various events, he was gradually assimilated by the other side. At some point, he had started becoming indifferent to human life, just like those from the Surveillance Bureau, and filled with resentment.

Even worse, he was slowly turning into another Dan Yangzi.

No, this is not me, this is not Li Huowang.

He turned around and walked back before sprawling beside Wang Zhilong, who was clutching his neck, and then reached out to support him. Then, he emotionally pleaded, "I beg you, stop provoking me! I'm a lunatic! I really don't want to kill anyone!"

Wang Zhilong had just been on the brink of death, and dared not say anything. He just abandoned his three other companions and sprinted out from under the bridge.

The recent events had truly scared him. He could sense that the other party had really wanted to kill him.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang sighed deeply. He approached the other three and untied their restraints. Then, he ignored their hasty retreat, as well as the bleeding wounds on his body. He knelt on the ground and closed his eyes.

This is fake, this is fake...

After some time, Li Huowang felt his surroundings go dim.

He looked around, and unsurprisingly found the entire room in chaos, as though a strong wind had blown through.

Finally back...

Now that he was finally back in this crazy world, Li Huowang felt an inexplicable sense of security.

He walked back to the collapsed bed, knelt down, and reached under his bed. Then, he used the gentlest tone possible and called out, "Li Sui, don't be afraid, that person is a liar. Whatever he says is false. You won't hurt me by staying in my tummy."

After a short while, a hesitant black tentacle emerged from the darkness under the bed and entwined itself around Li Huowang's hand, "Hmm.."

With a gentle pull from Li Huowang, Li Sui was completely dragged out. Li Huowang embraced him, soothing the various long and short tentacles. "Li Sui, be good, and come in. Daddy really cannot do without you now."

Hearing this, two tentacles that were entangled with a pair of double-pupiled eyeballs looked at Li Huowang affectionately.

"Ugh... ugh!"

Amidst the pangs of nausea, Li Sui once again entered Li Huowang's throat.

With a strange sensation, Li Sui's tentacles filled the veins throughout Li Huowang's entire body.

At the same time, Li Huowang rubbed his belly and breathed out a sigh of relief. As long as Li Sui was with him, he didn't need to go to the other side anymore.

Afterwards, Li Huowang walked to the window and looked outside. The sky was still gloomy, but it seemed to be getting brighter.

After a night of turmoil, Li Huowang had no intention of sleeping anymore. He picked up his luggage and headed downstairs toward the stable.

However, as soon as he entered the lobby, Li Huowang saw the pitiful Old Wu, who was with the cook and the stableman, all of them bandaging each other.

When he saw that Old Wu's injuries were in similar positions to Wang Zhilong's, Li Huowang immediately understood what was going on.

"When did you get close to my room? Didn't I tell you not to come near my room if there wasn't anything?"

Hearing this, Old Wu forced out a bitter smile, and quickly knelt on the ground. "I heard a commotion and was afraid that something had happened to you, so... I deserve to die! I deserve to die! My blood has stained your hands. I should pay you back for dirtying them."

Li Huowang yanked at his clothes and straightened the man up, "Stand still!"

Then, he began to chant as the white wax of the Fiery Scripture quickly melted and became a fiery centipede that leapt onto Old Wu's wounds.

"Ahh!" Old Wu's cries reverberated in the lobby.

"Stop shouting! It's treating you!"

By the time their throats were hoarse from shouting, the injuries on each person had been replaced by a slight burn mark.

Then, Li Huowang took out two silver ingots from his pocket and placed them on the table. "This is compensation for your furniture."

"This... I cannot accept it," Old Wu was about to decline, but Li Huowang stuffed the silver directly into his arms.

"If I tell you to take it, then you take it. I don't want to be assimilated by this damn place!"

Chapter 345 - Bai Lingmiao

“Dong dong dong~! Dong dong dong~! Summon the gods~”

A rhythmic drumbeat sounded from a simple-looking house, followed by a chant.

“Small drum whip of one foot three, that colorful ribbon tied on it! Dong dong dong~”

“Go down and make a bend, go up and point a finger! Dong dong dong~”

“Hit it once, bounce three times. Hit it thrice, make it nine! Dong dong dong~”

“The whip sounds with every beat, the drum sounds and the gods are pleased! Dong dong dong~”

Two red-veiled ladies were standing in the house, surrounding an ashen-faced child while beating their drums continuously.

Beside the child’s pillow was a mound of soil. Three incense sticks were placed in it, and the incense smoke wavered continuously, forming fuzzy characters.

However, just before the characters were about to solidify, a strong gust of wind blew open the tightly closed window, dispersing the strands of smoke.

In an instant, the tempo of the drum beats increased, the turn suddenly becoming urgent and fast.

At the same time, the Second Deity swirled her slender and black nails in the air, causing the dispersing white smoke to turn into substantial white threads that entwined around her hand. The sharp fingers followed the guidance of the white threads and ruthlessly pierced a point three inches below the child’s thumb.

With a swift downward motion, the child's tender palm was cut open, revealing clusters of yellowish things that resembled fish wriggling inside as though it was trying to emerge.

At that moment, a pair of black scissors, tied to a red string, was plunged in, causing the hole to become even larger.

“Waa waa waa~!”

The child who had seemed lifeless until just a moment ago, now suddenly sat up and started crying for his father. He did not notice that the objects emerging from his palm were turning into a puddle of yellow water that joined his tears in soaking the cool mat on his bed.

“My son~!” A shriveled and short man stepped in from outside, and exclaimed loudly when he saw that his almost-dead son had now been awakened.

He rushed over and quickly embraced the sweating and crying child. Then, he then quickly turned to the red-veiled Bai Lingmiao who was standing by side and bowed to express his gratitude.

On the other hand, Bai Lingmiao's expression was pale and agonized. She just shook her head and turned to leave.

“Fairy, hold on, I haven't paid you.” The man hastily rummaged through his belongings and picked out fifty pieces of copper coins from the bottom of a drawer. They were good coins that did not have any worn edges. He grabbed them and presented them to Bai Lingmiao with both hands.

Bai Lingmiao glanced at the patches on the man's clothes, then at his straw sandals, and then again at the shabby walls of this house. In the end, she shook her head to decline the payment. “It's alright, Uncle. Leave it for the child and buy some food for him. He's too skinny.”

“No, Fairy, you must take the money. My Zhou family only has this one offspring left. If not for you saving his life, then there would have been no one left to take care of me in old age!” said the shriveled man.

After several refusals, Bai Lingmiao was finally forced to accept the fifty coins.

When she came out of the house, the one-armed Chun Xiaoman, who was practicing swordplay beside the carriage, quickly sheathed her sword and approached her. "Miaomiao, how's it going? Are you done?"

When she saw Bai Lingmiao nod, Xiaoman smiled slightly and then pulled her toward the carriage. Once they were seated, the mud-covered wheels began to roll back toward Cowheart Mountain.

"Thank you, Sister Xiaoman, for accompanying me here," said Bai Lingmiao.

Chun Xiaoman replied, "Aren't we good sisters? There's no need to be so courteous. I can help out too if we happen to meet any bandits along the way."

As she spoke, Chun Xiaoman peeled open a corner of the curtain, and then glanced at Bai Lingmiao inside the carriage before sighing softly.

Of course, she had just made up those words. Bai Lingmiao did not need her protection. However, when she saw the black scar that had not yet faded from her pale neck, Xiaoman couldn't help but worry.

Logically, no matter what happens, things would generally improve with the passage of time. This was the same when her own parents sold her off. She was not as hurt about it now as she was back then.

But this sister of hers wasn't the same. Senior Li had already been gone for such a long time, and yet she still remained so dejected. Ever since that time, she had not smiled, and the gaze in her eyes was vacant, as though she had lost something.

The carriage continued to hurry along, and only stopped when it was deep in the night. While they had not yet reached Cowheart

Village, there were no villages nearby, and so they had to spend a night in the wilderness on the way back.

They ate some of their dried rations, and then lay in the carriage to rest.

In her half-asleep state, Chun Xiaoman suddenly felt rather uneasy, and reached out a hand to touch the face of the lady beside her.

When she felt that her eyes were actually opened, Xioaman sighed, "Miaomiao, you can't go on like this. I know you're very sad, but it's been a long time. You have to move on. People who have passed away cannot come back to life. Even if you keep tormenting yourself like this, they won't come back to life."

Seeing that she didn't get a response from the other side, Chun Xiaoman changed her angle. "Since we're sisters who speak from our hearts, I'll be straightforward. I know Senior Li saved us, but looking at things holistically, he isn't that great. At the same time, without even mentioning the other things, considering your current condition, as long as you offer yourself for marriage, many people would want to marry into the Bai family. You can ask for anyone that is as fat or as thin as you want. Which one of them wouldn't be better than Li Huowang? In fact, separating from you is a much bigger loss for him than for you. With his crazed state, he's destined to be an old bachelor. No other woman would want him."

Though Chun Xiaoman knew that Senior Li was not as bad as she had just described, this criticism would be worth it if it could help lift her sister's spirits. Besides, scolding him here wouldn't hurt him anyway.

Bai Lingmiao curled her body up like a baby, and nestled into Xiaoman's arm. "Don't say anymore, Sister Xiaoman..."

"You don't need that stinky man! You and me can be comb sisters[1]! No matter what, you must pull yourself together! What you're doing now is the same as giving up on yourself!" Chun Xiaoman was getting emotional as she started to shake Bai Lingmiao by the shoulders. But then, she started to hear sobbing, which immediately caused her heart to soften.

“Alright, I won’t say anymore. Stop crying and get some rest,” Chun Xiaoman held Bai Lingmiao in her arm and ran her hand through her waist-length hair.

A night of silence passed.

The next day, the two acted as though nothing had happened the night before, and just continued on their journey. With the two strong horses pulling them, they arrived at the village entrance in the afternoon.

“Uncle Lu, going to put up a play?” Chun Xiaoman greeted the oncoming carriage.

Lu Zhuangyuan chuckled and nodded as he took a puff from his tobacco pipe. “I’m going to the south to see if there are any villages. This Liang Kingdom sure is wealthy. One trip can cover several years of my expenses.”

“Why are there so few of you? Your younger son isn’t back yet?” asked Xiaoman.

1. Comb Sisters, also known as Self-comb Women, are a group of women who set up their own hairstyle in a way that resembles that of married women. This is seen as a demonstration of their determination to remain single for the rest of their lives. 🤔

Chapter 346 - Heavenly Mater

Hearing Chun Xiaoman bring up Lu Xiucan, Lu Zhuangyuan could no longer continue puffing his pipe. He looked very indignant.

“Don't even mention that trouble-maker! He actually dared to steal money! If you meet him on the road, then remember to bring him back for me. We'll see if I can break his legs then!” spat out Lu Zhuangyuan.

As the two carriages passed each other, Chun Xiaoman continued toward the village.

Once they arrived at the Bai family's courtyard, Bai Lingmiao got down and walked toward the ancestral hall. “Sister Xiaoman, go and take a rest. I'll go and light some incense in the ancestral hall.”

Hearing this, Chun Xiaoman anxiously looked around, and then said to the passing Puppy, “Take this carriage to the stable.”

“Why should I? Is 'stableman' written on my face? My wife is pregnant! I need to go and cook egg soup for her!” said Puppy.

However, Chun Xiaoman completely ignored his protest and directly handed him the reins before rushing toward the Bai family ancestral hall.

Chun Xiaoman's breathing slowed down considerably when she stepped through the entrance and saw the rows of black ancestral tablets. She looked around at this unfamiliar place with both curiosity and fear.

Aside from Bai Lingmiao, the others would rarely come near this area. There were even rumors circulating that this was an eerie place.

Chun Xiaoman breathed a sigh of relief when she saw that Bai Lingmiao was just kneeling in front of the ancestral tablets.

There wasn't much else to see here; the hall was rather empty. Aside from the few objects placed against the wall, there wasn't even a chair to sit on.

She glanced again at Bai Lingmiao, who was whispering something, and then her gaze swept over the objects placed on those tables. As someone from a humble family, Chun Xiaoman couldn't understand the significance of these peculiar decorations.

There were stones placed on strange plates, and some bright-colored ceramics. Why were these things placed inside the house?

After inspecting everything, a palm-sized bronze ornament caught Xiaoman's attention. It depicted three monkeys squatting side by side. One covered its ears, another covered its eyes, and the last covered its mouth.

What does this trio of monkeys represent? Why do wealthy people like to have things that are so difficult to understand? But these monkeys are quite interesting. They are rather delicately made.

Chun Xiaoman walked over and wanted to pick them up for a closer look. But just as she touched it, she found that they wouldn't budge.

Huh? What's going on? Is it stuck by its base?

Just as she tried to move it left and right a couple of times, the monkeys suddenly shifted to the left.

At the same time, a rumbling sound rang out, and a large piece of the wall, holding the ancestral tablets, beside her collapsed. A chilly black hole was revealed before them.

"Dad!"

Bai Lingmiao rushed in emotionally, picking up the fallen ancestral tablets tenderly. However, she soon paused, and then looked toward the black hole, astonished just like Chun Xiaoman.

As she stared at the entrance, Bai Lingmiao felt like something inside was attracting her. Soon, she started walking toward the entrance, almost as though she was in a trance.

However, at that moment, a figure walked past her, stepping into the black hole before her. "Wait here. I'll go in and take a look first."

Not long after, Chun Xiaoman emerged from the hole. "There are a lot of words written on the walls inside. Go and get Gao Zhijian!"

In a short while, Gao Zhijian walked into the Bai family ancestral hall. He was in a fully-armed state—dressed in half-armor with a stone slab on his chest and wielding a heavy wolf-toothed club.

"There's no need for all this. Since it's the Bai family's ancestral hall, there shouldn't be any danger inside."

"Just in case!" Gao Zhijian stood before the two and stepped in first.

The dark room was spacious, and the words on the wall stumped Gao Zhijian temporarily.

"Mud originates from chaos! White lotus emerges, ushering in a flourishing era!"

As he read, he looked toward the top, where some white flags imprinted with lotuses were hung.

"Isn't this the Bai family ancestral hall? Why would there be such things in this secret room?" Gao Zhijian was puzzled. Although he didn't know what these things were, he had a feeling that something was amiss.

"Don't stand in the middle of the path. Continue walking forward."

Hearing this, Gao Zhijian gripped his weapon tightly as he slowly walked onward. Based on the fact that they were going down a flight of stairs, it could be seen that they were descending.

The secret room was quite large, and the phrases that appeared on the walls from time to time deepened Gao Zhijian's sense of unease.

"White lotus descends! The people rise!"

"Heavenly Mater! Hometown of true void!"

Whenever Chun Xiaoman asked about what was written on the walls, he just shook his head in response.

After circling for a few times, the stairs finally stopped, and a pitch-black expanse appeared in front of them. The green glow of their glowing stones could only illuminate a small part of their surroundings.

"Stick... to the walls! Be... be... be careful!"

Gao Zhijian led the way while leaning against the walls. As he felt around, he found a book, then began reading it in the light from the glowing stones.

The words did not seem contemporary, but he could understand them. However, the content was much more difficult for him to grasp.

"Gao Zhijian, what do you see? Don't just read silently, say something! You're killing me with suspense!"

Prompted by his companion's urging, Gao Zhijian stammered as he translated the content into understandable words.

"The Heavenly Mater is an ancient Buddha who transcends birth and death! She can save us from the worldly realm and return us to the true void, avoiding all calamities!"

"In the beginning, everything was supposed to be the Heavenly Mater! Every inch of the earth and sky was originally the true void."

"We were born, grew, and aged under the care of the Heavenly Mater, until someone betrayed her! It was someone amongst the most trusted Tian Huang nobles!"

"When those armies of unspeakable origin grew out of the Heavenly Mater's dantian, a group of Tian Huang nobles betrayed her.”

“They conspired with the unspeakable armies to betray the Heavenly Mater! They killed the Tian Huang nobles who refused to defect and stripped the Heavenly Mater of everything!”

“They threw away what they didn’t want and swallowed what they needed. In the end, they shamelessly stood in the position where the Heavenly Mater should have been!”

“These treacherous rebels feared that their shame would be discovered, and so they modified the history books, altering everything in people’s hearts.”

“But we didn’t. Our history books will always belong to the Heavenly Mater. We will always remember, waiting for the moment when the Heavenly Mater returns!”

“The Heavenly Mater is neither born nor dies; while she has been deprived of everything, it also means that she can no longer lose anything.”

“When a person is covered in wounds, they will never have new wounds. When an existence has been stripped of everything, it will no longer be possible to deprive it of anything!”

“The Heavenly Mater is always trying, whether it’s day or night, whether it’s a man or a woman, whether it’s yin or yang.”

“Those unfaithful rebels are watching. They are afraid, and they are constantly obstructing the return of the Heavenly Mater, who is with us.”

“They can always send their lackeys to stop us, but it doesn’t matter. As long as we succeed even once, the Heavenly Mater will return on the six ceramic horses, and openly occupy the spot that is hers!”

“I will wait, no matter how long it takes. As the only surviving Tian Huang noble, even if I am killed, my son crawling out of my body will continue waiting. When my son dies, he will be replaced by my grandson. Generation after generation, we will wait forever!!

Heavenly Mater, hometown of the true void!”

Chapter 347 - White Lotus Sect

“Gao Zhijian, what are you talking about? Could it be that you read it wrongly?” Chun Xiaoman looked suspiciously at the brown book in his hands. The content spoken by him was messy and confusing. She couldn’t understand what was being said. What did it mean by no birth and no death? What were the things emerging from the dantian?

How could the son crawl out from the person’s own corpse? Was that still a human being?

A strange thought emerged in Xiaoman’s mind, “Could the person who wrote this book be just as crazy as Senior Li?”

Gao Zhijian sensed her doubts, and put his hands back into his pockets as he silently continued forward while sticking to the walls. “Hmph...”

Chun Xiaoman was about to pull Bai Lingmiao and follow along, but found that her hand was surprisingly icy to the touch.

“What’s wrong, Miaomiao?” asked Xiaoman.

Bai Lingmiao’s expression was pale, but she shook her head in response before following Gao Zhijian in the distance.

As they walked, they came across yet another book. This seemed to be a place where books were stored. However, the content of this book was even more obscure and difficult to understand than the previous one.

“Miaomiao, why does your ancestral hall have these strange books?” Chun Xiaoman asked the only living member of the Bai family.

This place didn’t really seem dangerous, but everything, right from the white lotus flags to the contents of the previous book, all felt weird.

Who would create such a large space beneath the Bai family ancestral hall and place such messy objects within? Weren't they afraid of disturbing the ancestors in the ancestral hall above, and receiving their scolding in their dreams?

Bai Lingmiao paused, as though trying to recall something. "I... I don't know. I'm a woman, and so they never let me enter during any of the ancestral rituals."

Just then, Gao Zhijian stopped again. His tall figure stood stiffly, preventing the two behind from seeing what was ahead.

"Horse," Gao Zhijian said, without his usual stutter.

Bai Lingmiao suddenly let go of Chun Xiaoman's hand and walked in front of Gao Zhijian. She looked up and saw a ceramic horse head that was even larger than her own body.

The horse head was extremely lifelike. Its two eyes were staring straight ahead, placing immense pressure on the hearts of anyone standing before it.

After a moment, Bai Lingmiao walked under the horse before touching its smooth and hard body with her hands. A trace of confusion appeared in her eyes; this feeling was very familiar to her.

"This ceramic horse is really big. It must have taken a really large kiln to fire it," Puppy exclaimed.

"Eh?!" Chun Xiaoman was surprised to see Puppy suddenly appear out of the blue, "When did you come?"

"Why can't I come? I saw the few of you running over here, so I thought that you were hiding the spoils from me," Puppy said as he examined the ceramic horse before them. "Junior Bai, was your Bai family involved in the ceramics business? Selling such a large horse would probably fetch at least twenty to thirty taels of silver."

He turned around as he spoke, colliding with a person in the darkness startling himself. However, when he saw that the figure had no head and limbs, and was just made of ceramic, he cursed silently and kicked it.

“This place... I’ve been here before.”

Bai Lingmiao’s voice attracted their attention.

Staring at the tall horse head, she tried her best to recall the vague memories. “My grandfather brought me here when I was very, very young. That day, I was crying and wanted to ride a horse, but he said that riding a real horse was too dangerous. So he brought me here and let me ride this ceramic horse. That day... I had a lot of fun.”

As she spoke, her brows furrowed, “I seem to remember... This horse flew and took me into a painting. It was quite lively there. There were so many adults and children that played with me! Yes! There’s a painting here!”

Bai Lingmiao quickly turned and dashed toward a corner in the dark. The others were shocked as they hurried to keep up with her.

After a few steps, they saw Bai Lingmiao stop before a wall. There was a painting on the wall, full of pure white lotuses on an ink-black water surface. It was not full of the many people that she had mentioned.

“This... what is this place?” Bai Lingmiao seemed to recall Senior Li telling her previously that her Bai family had done some wrong things. However, she had been completely overwhelmed by the despair of losing her entire family, and had not paid attention to these things.

“No, it’s impossible... My grandfather... My father and mother...” Bai Lingmiao thought of the perfect image of her family members in her heart, while a trace of hesitation appeared on her face.

“Look, the small lotus flower on the wall is actually an oil lamp,” said Puppy as he took out a small tinderbox and went to light it.

As each white lotus lamp was gradually lit up, everything around them began to brighten. The entire expansive underground hall was gradually revealed to them.

The first thing that caught their attention was a large painting at the forefront of the hall. It was huge, and there was a censer for burning incense placed before it. This indicated the importance of the painting to the original owner.

The painting depicted six lifelike black horses galloping, carrying a blooming white lotus flower on top. There was surprisingly nothing else on the lotus flower.

The base color of the painting was a bright yellow. However, on this lotus, there was a twisted area that strangely lacked even the base color. It directly exposed the uneven adobe wall, making it appear even more abrupt.

After viewing this painting with an unclear meaning, they turned to look around at the entire hall.

The hall was rectangular, and was about six meters tall. It seemed to be interconnected, with many exits that led to other unknown places.

It almost seemed like there was another underground village beneath the entire Cowheart Village.

Various exquisite patterns were drawn on the top portion of the walls. However, most of them featured white lotus flowers against a black background.

In the center of the hall were three giant ceramic black horses, as well as hundreds of unfinished ceramic figures.

As he saw all this, Puppy's jaw dropped in amazement, "Tsk tsk, is this the majestic style of the emperor?"

Seeing that there was no danger around, Gao Zhijian put down his wolf-toothed club and scratched his head in confusion, as he turned to look toward Bai Lingmiao.

“Miaomiao? What’s the matter? Your expression isn’t looking great. Are you feeling uncomfortable? Should we head up first?” Chun Xiaoman supported Bai Lingmiao and asked gently.

However, Bai Lingmiao just shook her head and gently pushed away Xiaoman. She had a complex expression on her face as she searched for the vague memories in her mind.

As she pondered, she saw a blurry childlike figure appear amongst the ceramic figures.

The child wore a tiger head hat, had tiger head shoes, and was wrapped in a cotton padded jacket. Her wide pink eyes made her look very adorable.

“Grand... Ah grand~!”

The child stumbled forward and tripped, but fell into the arms of a smiling old man.

“Ah~ Good girl~ Do you like Grandpa?”

Chapter 348 - Tombstone

Bai Lingmiao recalled everything as she looked at the fuzzy phantom images. That child was her from her younger days, and this was an event that had happened before, a long time ago.

Bai Lingmiao watched as her grandfather lifted her up, carried her on his neck before starting to run and jump among the ceramic figures, shouting and amusing her.

She silently followed them, gradually recalling everything that happened in this place.

“Wa, wa~ Waa waa~”

Bai Lingmiao watched her childhood self cry, sitting in the corner with her open-crotch pants. She was covered in mud.

“What’s wrong, little one? Who bullied you?” An elderly woman with white hair hurried over as she comforted and lifted Bai Lingmiao up.

“Waa waa wa~ Waa waa” Bai Lingmiao was nestled in the arms of the old woman as she pointed her fat fingers toward the wall. With only three teeth in her mouth, she babbled some words that only she could understand.

“Oh~ Did it scare our little one? Don’t cry. Look, Grandma will fight for you!”

The old lady led Bai Lingmiao to the wall, then stamped her foot, “Ah! Who scared our obedient little girl? Bad thing, I’ll stomp you to death!”

When Bai Lingmiao saw her childhood self stop crying with her grandmother’s comforting, another scene appeared in her mind. At the same time, her expression suddenly changed. “I recall now.”

“Recall what?”

“I recall what scared me back then!” said Bai Lingmiao as she rushed over, dispersing the phantom image of her younger self and her grandmother.

She came to the wall, raised her sharp black nails and dug into the solid rammed earth.

“Miaomiao! What are you doing?” Chun Xiaoman walked over, looking at her good friend with worry.

However, when she didn’t get a response even after asking several times, Chun Xiaoman also decisively pulled out her sword and stabbed it into the earth, digging it together with her.

Seeing this, Gao Zhijian also rushed over. He removed a piece of armor from his body and started using it to dig out the soil.

“Is there a treasure buried in the soil?” Puppy also rushed over and started helping excitedly.

However, this didn’t last long before Puppy’s horrified cry caused everyone to stop.

Bai Lingmiao reached out with her trembling hands. There was a woman buried in the soil, her eyes closed tightly. Her eyeballs were shriveled up and even sewn with threads. Her face was ashen, and seemed exceptionally terrifying.

At that moment, a large hand reached over and blocked Bai Lingmiao’s hands. “This... this... this is a... human... human pillar...”

However, before Gao Zhijian could even finish, Bai Lingmiao once again started digging. Slowly, more and more dead bodies were dug out from the mud. They were all tightly packed together, just like bricks stacked against each other.

It was not just adults; there were people of all ages buried in the soil.

After digging for a while, Bai Lingmiao stopped. She could see that these people were not just randomly buried here; they were all positioned right at the perimeter of the entire hall. At the same time, the back of each person’s hands had a white lotus flower painted on it. This was obviously deliberately designed.

“They used people to build the foundation. Just how many dead people are buried in this large underground area? Just what kind of people can be so heartless?” Puppy exclaimed in shock. However, he immediately felt that he had said something wrong, and covered his mouth as he looked toward Bai Lingmiao’s direction.

This was the Bai family’s ancestral hall. Even if he only used his butt to think, he could know who had buried so many dead people here.

Bai Lingmiao tried hard to hold back, but how could she endure such a thing? She soon started crying just as loudly as younger self with the tiger head hat. However, this time, she didn’t have a grandmother to comfort her.

All the beautiful memories of her hometown in Bai Lingmiao’s heart collapsed at this moment. What was even more tragic was that she didn’t even have anyone left to question or blame.

They had all been burned to ashes by Li Huowang. Not a single one remained.

“Why is this happening?! Dad! Mom!! Why did you kill so many people?! Why did you become villains?! Don’t you know that these people could also have been someone else’s parents? Or grandparents? Do you know how painful it is to lose your loved ones?”

Seeing Bai Lingmiao on the verge of collapse, Chun Xiaoman quickly embraced her and comforted her softly, “It’s okay. It’s not your fault. It’s not your fault...”

Gradually, Bai Lingmiao’s cries stopped. She had cried enough, and she understood that crying wouldn’t change anything.

She wiped away her suppressed tears and nudged her way out of Xiaoman’s embrace. “No... This is my fault. This is our Bai family’s fault! Since it’s our fault, then as a member of the Bai Family, I must take responsibility!”

After that, the stiff corpses were dragged out from the dark room and laid out on a cart, to be taken buried on Cowheart Mountain.

The bodies were extremely rigid, as though filled with lead. Bai Lingmiao couldn't even give them a decent burial.

Each time a body was buried, a tombstone was erected. Then, Bai Lingmiao would kowtow and offer incense as a gesture of apology. She knew that perhaps this was useless, but this was the only thing left that she could do.

There were many dead bodies in that dark room, and they worked for a long time, even working until after the Lu Family Troupe returned from their performance.

After finishing, Bai Lingmiao looked extremely haggard, and her face was completely drained.

After kowtowing three times before the final tombstone, she looked up with her bloodshot eyes. With her cracked lips, she asked Chun Xiaoman beside her, “Sister Xiaoman, if they could do such evil things, then why did they teach me to be kind? If I just became as evil as them, then I wouldn't be so upset...”

This question stumped Chun Xiaoman.

Lu Zhuangyuan, who was beside them, was helping to shovel the soil as well. He wiped off his sweat and sighed. “Girl, as a father myself, I can guess what your parents were thinking about. Actually, they knew that such things would bring about much retribution, and so they didn't want you to get involved. Besides, you were just a young child. Once the daughter is married off, it's like water thrown out. As long as they kept it from you until you were older and found a good family for you to marry into, then whatever happens in the family wouldn't have much to do with you. In the end, they were doing this for your own good.”

“For my own good?” Bai Lingmiao wanted to say, yet the words stuck in her throat.

Chun Xiaoman sighed, embracing her as she tried to console her. In such a situation, whatever she said as an outsider would be futile.

“Sister Xiaoman...”

“Yes?” Chun Xiaoman turned her head, lightly brushing against Bai Lingmiao’s white hair.

“Even if my family was so evil, I still can’t forgive Senior Li for killing them...”

Chapter 349 - Arrival

Puppy carried a hoe as he walked briskly down the mountain. Though they had just buried many bodies, he was not acquainted with any of them, and thus it didn't affect his joyful mood at all.

Now, he had a house and his own fields. More importantly, his wife was about to give birth. Everything he had dreamt of previously was now going to materialize.

"Ah, I, Cao Cao, am truly a genius. Every step I took was right. If I was not so smart, how could I have a share of these things!"

If the journey back wasn't so long, he really would have wanted to return with glory to his hometown and announce all his accomplishments to everyone.

He glanced at the people behind him, then quickened his pace to increase the distance between them. Then, he carefully took out a book from his pocket.

Just as he happily touched the words he could not understand in the book, a hand covered in black fur reached over and snatched it away.

"Hey! What's wrong with you!" Puppy anxiously tried to snatch it back, but was stopped by a stern glare from Chun Xiaoman.

Puppy withdrew his hand indignantly and said, "In the tigerless mountains, monkeys become kings. Look at you. If I didn't know any better, then I would have thought that you were the one that rescued us from Zephyr Temple."

"Where did this book come from?" asked Xiaoman.

"I... I bought it from a street vendor, to teach my son how to read!" replied Puppy.

"Stop lying. We've only met street vendors twice so far, and neither of them was selling books!" said Xiaoman as she flipped through the book and looked at those incomprehensible words.

With the help of Gao Zhijian translating, Chun Xiaoman learnt what this book was called—Verses of Hard Work and Enlightenment. Even if she couldn't read, she could tell that there was something amiss with the title; it was as though it was some sort of cultivation technique.

"Spit it out, where did this thing come from! I saw that you have been acting sneakily for a while now," asked Xiaoman.

Feeling that things were not quite right, Gao Zhijian frowned and took a step forward with his shovel.

"What's wrong? Am I breaking the law? Why do so many people need to get involved in this? I picked this book up!" Puppy raised his hand in annoyance and finally snatched the book back from Xiaoman's hands.

"Picked up? Can you just pick such a book randomly?" asked Xiaoman.

"Of course!" said Puppy before continuing in a softer voice, "But it was from the cellar under the Bai family ancestral hall..."

"You—!" Xiaoman was about to speak, but Puppy immediately shushed her nervously.

He stole a glance at the dispirited Bai Lingmiao, and then leaned toward Xiaoman and said, "Sis, think about it. Do you think the Bai family did so much and built all that for fun? Think again, Senior Li came back in such a state. We all know his incredible skills. Could the Bai family have forced him into such a state if they didn't have skills of their own? They must have some methods! Regardless of what they used before, since they're all dead, their things all belong to us now!"

Hearing all this, Chun Xiaoman's expression turned cold. "What's the point of learning those things? Are you going to learn to use living people as a foundation? If you dare to learn that, then don't blame me for not being cordial!"

“Hey! You’re so inflexible. Let’s only learn things that won’t harm our conscience. We can just ignore those techniques that involve killing people,” retorted Puppy. “Let me tell you, there are many things in the house! There are still many more books, and there must be more techniques as well! Once we learn those easier things that don’t involve killing, who would dare to bully us then?”

Xiaoman looked down at the sword on her waist, as a trace of hesitation appeared on her face.

Now that Senior Li was gone, could she really protect all of them with this longsword if they were faced with a crisis?

After a moment, she reached out and snatched the book back from Puppy’s hands, then examined it carefully. “Don’t tell Miaomiao for now. Her condition is not too good. Let’s look at this from all angles before we make a decision.”

“Alright, we’ll listen to you. This time’s gain is enough for the three of us to share in.” Puppy readily agreed.

Meanwhile, back in Yinling City, the dusty Li Huowang dismounted from the horse before tying it in the inn’s stable. He was somewhat surprised to not see Bun shaking its head over there.

He circled his own carriage a few times before spotting the dog standing with its claws on the manger, stealing the horses’ feed.

“So fat and still eating?” Li Huowang lifted it up, “Come here. I brought you here to watch the carriage, and not to eat more.”

“Woof woof!”

Bun was rather excited after not having seen its owner for some time. It shook its head and wagged its tail, twisting its body like a maggot.

Just as Bun was about to lick Li Huowang’s boots, it was pressed down by Li Huowang.

“What’s going on? Are you injured? Who did this?” Li Huowang looked at the notch on Bun’s ear and frowned slightly.

Bun obviously did not know what Li Huowang was talking about, and just wagged its tail as it tried to burrow into Li Huowang's arms.

"Come here!" Li Huowang grabbed the nape of its neck and lifted it, then headed toward the lobby.

"Innkeeper, didn't I give you enough silver? Why can't you even look after a dog?" asked Li Huowang.

The fat innkeeper looked helpless. "Ah, dear guest, this is not my fault. Your dog ran out by itself."

"You know too that this is a female dog. It ran to the street and fought with another female dog for attention from a male dog. In the end, it lost the fight and was bitten like this by the other dog," explained the innkeeper.

Bun didn't know what the two people were talking about, and just looked innocently at Li Huowang as it sat on the ground.

This made Li Huowang rather speechless. He didn't even know how to get angry. "Where's the dog that bit it?"

"That female dog ran away. After mating, those wild dogs usually run away," said the innkeeper.

Feeling helpless, Li Huowang patted Bun's head, and then headed back upstairs to the guest rooms.

In his haste to travel, they had only been eating and sleeping when he could. Thus, Li Huowang was exhausted, and slept for an entire day and night.

After waking up, he called up the kitchen to order some dishes. After washing up, Li Huowang began to eat heartily.

While eating, he started pondering on what excuse he should use to ask Ji Xiang about information on Zhuge Yuan without directly approaching and asking more.

I should contact Tuoba Danqing first, and confirm the situation with Ji Xiang. With how he looked the last time, the consequences for the failure of this task should be quite severe.

Just as Li Huowang was thinking to himself, the cooing sound of the pigeon rang from the rafters.

Chapter 350 - Storyteller

Li Huowang looked up and saw a black pigeon perched up high, looking down at him. This was the messenger pigeon that Tuoba Danqing had sent for him.

When he removed the letter from the pigeon's leg and read its contents, he immediately forgot about his meal and turned to head out of the door.

Li Huowang hadn't expected that Ji Xiang was still in Yinling City! Not only that, he had specifically requested to see Li Huowang by name. This was his opportunity.

What surprised Li Huowang was that the appointed meeting place was not any grand location, but a simple study. It seemed that he had a rather different style from the way Tuoba Danqing did things.

Upon entering, his attention was immediately drawn to a withered tongue. The human tongue was somewhat shriveled, and it was nailed to a decaying piece of wood. At the sight of this, Li Huowang instantly remembered how Tuoba Danqing boasted that this artifact was made with a Strayed One's tongue[\[1\]](#).

After taking a slow and deep breath, Li Huowang respectfully bowed to the pale-faced old eunuch before him, who was busy with an abacus. "Greetings, Lord Ji Xiang."

"Hehehe~ This isn't the palace, we're all family here. Please, have a seat," said Ji Xiang.

Li Huowang followed Ji Xiang's finger and noticed that tea had already been poured for him on the table.

However, rather than sitting down, Li Huowang directly asked, "Lord Ji Xiang, do you have any important instructions for me?"

He remembered how the eunuch had left in a panicked hurry before this. However, he was now sitting comfortably, suggesting that some things must have happened in the meantime.

“Hehehe~ No rush. I heard that you’re quite capable?” commented Ji Xiang as he eyed Li Huowang.

Faced with the old eunuch’s scrutiny, Li Huowang suddenly felt uneasy.

“Hong Da said that when the three of them faced off with you, you even managed to escape? Seems like being a mere Ninth Troop is a waste of your talents,” continued Ji Xiang.

However, Li Huowang did not feel like the other party was praising him, and he felt tense instead. “Lord Ji Xiang, please get to the point.”

“Alright, it’s refreshing to have someone so straightforward. I reckon that you’ve already guessed what we were trying to do previously?” asked Ji Xiang.

Seeing him remain silent, Ji Xiang continued, “That’s right, our task was to retrieve the hidden Muddled One in the Buddha’s Skeleton Temple. But the mission failed! What do you say we should do now? Returning directly and accepting punishment is not an option. So, we need to make up for it!”

At that moment, Ji Xiang suddenly stood up. “Let me be frank with you. This matter is not trivial. We cannot afford to fail again!”

He placed his finger on the mahogany table and forcefully drew a line. “If we are unable to complete this task, then all the blame will fall on us!”

Having listened to so much, Li Huowang finally understood what he was trying to say. “Lord Ji Xiang, are you saying... that we should find another Muddled One as a replacement?”

“Smart! This is the type of talent that we need in our Surveillance Bureau!” Ji Xiang’s round face broke into a smile. “Since they want a Muddled One, we’ll provide them with a Muddled One. It doesn’t matter where the Muddled One comes from. It's just that back then, the one in Buddha's Skeleton Temple was dead, and so now we need to capture a live one."

Li Huowang's heartbeat quickened.

A live Muddled One? Is that similar to an existence like myself, a live Strayed One?

For some reason, even though he didn't even know the other party's name, Li Huowang began to feel a sense of sympathy for that Muddled One.

While Li Huowang was still contemplating, Ji Xiang's words hit him like a bomb. "We also understand that this is not a proper task for those within the Bureau. There is no reward, and it's dangerous to deal with a live Muddled One. If you're unwilling to, then we will understand. Danqing said that you've always wanted to read the records in our Four Repositories that are related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Isn't that right? As long as you can handle this matter smoothly, I will personally go there and memorize all of it for you, even at the risk of my own dismissal!"

Hearing this, Li Huowang's breathing turned heavier. On one side was a Muddled One that he had never met, and on the other was information that might allow him to break free of the status of a Strayed One. The choice was easy.

Li Huowang once again bowed to Ji Xiang. "Yes, Lord Ji Xiang!"

Seeing Li Huowang agree, Ji Xiang once again laughed like a flower blooming. He could only tempt him at this point. If he had refused, then there was nothing else he could have done. After all, this young man was said to have a bad temper. If threatened, it might even backfire on him. Fortunately, he had agreed, and this gave him a lot more confidence now.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang's heart quivered slightly as he looked at the eunuch before him and asked, "Lord Ji Xiang, back in the Buddha's Skeleton Temple, the Muddled One was intercepted by someone. Then this time, won't that person come again? What was that person's origin for them to even dare to intercept things from our Surveillance Bureau?"

However, Ji Xiang's face remained indifferent as he said, "A Muddled One isn't much, and one is enough. Zhuge Yuan will not dare snatch it again. If one live and one dead Muddled Ones are merged together, that might be too much for him to handle. Also, don't worry. The Sitting Oblivion Dao has lost Fa Cai this time. Before a new Fa Cai has been appointed, they will definitely not dare to make a scene. So this time, there's nothing else to worry about other than the live Muddled One."

Ji Xiang chuckled as he patted Li Huowang's shoulder.

However, that only made Li Huowang frown slightly. After all that talk, Ji Xiang had simply disregarded his inquiry. He still could not determine whether Zhuge Yuan was good or bad.

"Lord Ji Xiang, can you tell me more about the background of Zhuge Yuan? I'm afraid of encountering such a strange person again in future. Please enlighten me." Li Huowang looked up at Ji Xiang, his eyes filled with determination.

Since the other party had specifically requested for him, he may not have a better opportunity to ask about this in future.

At the same time, since Li Huowang had asked the question like that, Ji Xiang could not pretend to not have heard it.

After a moment, Ji Xiang sighed. "It's inauspicious to bring up this person. But since you insist, let me tell you. Do you know his nickname? Others often call him the Storyteller."

Ji Xiang slowly sat down and used his hand to pinch his jade ring. "He is a very strange character. Despite dressing like a scholar, he never takes the imperial examinations. Instead, he likes to go to busy places and tell stories. Also, his stories don't involve romance or military accomplishments. He only speaks about historical records."

“Historical records?” Li Huowang was puzzled.

“Yes, historical records. Moreover, he fabricates his own records. He claims that 900 years ago, there was no internal strife in the Qi Kingdom, and that the Qi Emperor unified the world. Today, as a new emperor ascends the throne, proclaiming the era of intelligence, auspicious signs appear from the heavens, and birds flock to the young ruler, while the palace is illuminated with a red radiance. However, it’s pure nonsense. If Qi Kingdom did not fall into chaos, then where did the present Liang Kingdom come from? Where did the kingdom of Si Qi come from?”

1. C297. It mentions that the artifact is made of a Strayed One’s Wealth Attraction, which Tuoba Danqing mentions is a person’s tongue. 🤔

Chapter 351 - Gather

Faced with Ji Xiang's endless chatter, Li Huowang did not speak and just continued to listen. If this person only spoke about fabricated historical records, then it wouldn't have been enough to scare Ji Xiang so much. There must be some other reasons.

"This person is easy to recognize. He has a fan with the words 'Everyone has their values' written on it. If you encounter him, remember to stay far away. He's not a good person."

Li Huowang thought for a moment and probed, "Lord Ji Xiang, when we came out from the Buddha's Skeleton Temple that day, did you ask me that question because Zhuge Yuan's abilities are strange?"

"Yes," Ji Xiang nodded. "This person can somehow change fate."

"Change fate?"

"Not change a person's fate, but change destiny itself. He has an old almanac. Whatever he says is auspicious will definitely happen. If he says otherwise, then it will definitely bring bad luck."

"Words creating reality?" Li Huowang was stunned. Although he had seen a lot on his journey so far, this kind of supernatural ability was still a first for him.

If this person had goodwill towards him, that would give him great support. But if he harbored ill intentions...

After some contemplation, Li Huowang asked again, "Lord Ji Xiang, does this person use his abilities more for good or for evil?"

"How would I know? I only know that whenever he appears, something bad is bound to happen. He is like a jinx," replied Ji Xiang as he picked up a cup of tea and took a sip. Then, he continued, "Alright, I've told you enough. It's already a rare exception. Do your job well, and if you succeed this time, then I'll put in a good word for you when I return to the Bureau."

"Thank you, Lord Ji Xiang." Li Huowang turned to leave.

His expression remained serious as he looked at the wrapped spindle. Although he had learnt some information about Zhuge Yuan from Ji Xiang, he still did not know if Zhuge Yuan's goodwill toward him was genuine or not.

If it was, that didn't make sense. But if it was false... that made even less sense! What was his objective?

Asking directly like this won't work. I must think of a way from this spindle, and I need to figure out what this thing is first.

But for now, I should set this matter aside and help Ji Xiang find a Muddled One. It's the most crucial step to get information regarding Bei Feng.

Shortly after Li Huowang left the simple study, an elderly woman with graying hair walked out from behind a folding screen. Although her face was covered with wrinkles, one could tell that she was quite beautiful in her youth.

The elderly woman asked Ji Xiang with a concerned expression, "Lord, is this person reliable?"

"Ah, I can't be sure either. He came from a faraway place to Great Liang, so who knows where he originated from. In any case, whether or not he's reliable, we have to use him. We cannot let those in the capital know, or it'll mess everything up!" said Ji Xiang.

Still sporting the same worried expression, the woman walked over to Ji Xiang's side, and held Ji Xiang's bejeweled hand. "Ah, Lord, if it doesn't work out, can't we just resign? We live in constant fear every day. What's the point of living a few more decades like this?"

"That's easier said than done. How could it possibly be so simple?" Ji Xiang had an agonized look on his face. He took out a red handkerchief from his left sleeve and wiped the sweat off his forehead. "This matter involves many high-ranking figures. It's a task from the Imperial Preceptor, and might even have the emperor's intentions behind it. If we small fry get entangled in such a big matter, the best we can hope for is to escape with our lives."

The elderly woman gently embraced Ji Xiang, her voice filled with a hint of pleading as she said, "Brother, when we're done with this, let's go back to Liu Pan, and grow old under the mulberry tree where we used to play when we were young. When we left the village, you said that you wanted me to enjoy life. But no matter where we are, I'm the happiest as long as I'm with you."

Ji Xiang patted the old woman with his red handkerchief, but didn't say anything.

Feeling anxious, he notified all of them to gather at Yinling City gates the next day at the fifth section of the night.

It was still too dark, but Li Huowang had already gotten up. He first came to the stable and pulled apart the curtains. After that, he cut off a piece of meat from the tentacles of the beast squirming inside, and then wrapped it up for the journey ahead. Next, he threw some dried meat into the carriage before starting to nail up a wooden plank.

He did not know how long he would be gone this time. Thus, it was better to nail up everything to prevent any mishaps.

Before long, under Li Huowang's hammering, this carriage had become a large coffin.

After finishing all this, he placed his belongings onto the horse, mounted it, and rode toward the city gates.

"Woof woof!" Unexpectedly, Bun followed after him.

"Go and watch the carriage! When I return, if I hear you've been out fighting other dogs, I'm going to stew you in a pot!" said Li Huowang before leaving.

It was dawn. Aside from a few vendors setting up their stalls, there were not many people on the streets. Thus, Li Huowang reached the city gates quite quickly.

Hong Da and Tuoba Danqing also appeared as expected, but there were two new faces that he hadn't anticipated.

Including Ji Xiang and himself, there were a total of six people. This was enough to show the other party's determination.

From the two newcomers, one was a Moongate kid with the surname Liu, and the other was a Shaman.

Li Huowang carefully observed the drum hanging on his waist, and was rather certain that this was a Shaman's drum. It was identical to the one that he had previously seen on Li Zhi's waist.

However, compared to the beggar-like Li Zhi, this man was obviously very different. He wore a black fur coat, and he seemed quite fierce with two diagonal black knife scars across his face. It seemed that a machete would fit him better than the drum on his waist.

He greeted those who he knew, then turned to the man with the scarred face and asked, "Are you a Shaman? Where's your Second Deity?"

The scar face crossed his arms and glared at him. "Who the hell are you? Why are you prying into my business?"

At that moment, the kid from Moongate, Liu Zongyuan, saw that Li Huowang had unsheathed his sword by half an inch and quickly stepped forward to block Li Huowang, trying to mediate. "Ah ah. Brother Er, there's no need for this. Consider it as giving me some face, alright?"

Li Huowang looked at Liu Zongyuan before turning to them, and then pressed down slightly, the killing intent immediately vanishing.

"Come, let's go over there. Don't make things difficult for Ji Xiang," said Liu Zongyuan.

Li Huowang may not give face to others, but since it was Liu

Zongyuan who had helped him once, Li Huowang decided not to confront this person.

He glanced at the wooden mask on Liu Zongyuan's face, and then asked, "Brother Liu, how have you been lately?"

"Still the same. Let's help Ji Xiang through this difficult time first. If he's not doing well, then we won't either," said Liu Zongyuan.

This was true. They were like grasshoppers strung together with a string. If Ji Xiang fell, whatever he promised would also go up in smoke.

"What's the background of that person? Why does Ji Xiang want to find a Shaman as a companion? From what I know, they aren't usually very capable," asked Li Huowang.

"Ah, your words are rather subjective. There are talented people in every profession, and the Shamans are no exception," said Liu Zongyuan.

Chapter 352 - Spouse

The strong horses pulled the large carriage as they quickly ran down the road. But the carriage man was still unsatisfied with the speed and kept whipping the horses to go faster.

Li Huowang was resting his arm as he stared outside the window and saw the lush green forest.

This place is near Cowheart Mountain. I wonder how they are all doing. Since Bai Lingmiao still has the Second Deity and Gao Zhijian is also there, normal bandits shouldn't be able to defeat them.

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly felt a pair of eyes looking at him from within the forest. However, when he turned his head, he didn't see anything.

"Cough~ We are reaching our destination soon, and so let me explain to you the details of the mission."

Ji Xiang's voice pulled Li Huowang's attention back as he turned to look at the old eunuch. Ji Xiang was holding onto the wish wood.

"I've called all of you over since this will be a difficult mission. I also know that many of you have probably already guessed what's going on. We are here to capture a Muddled One, dead or alive."

No one said anything as Ji Xiang continued explaining.

"I'm not sure if you've heard of the powers of a Muddled One, but since we have time I will explain it again for everyone." Ji Xiang looked at Li Huowang purposefully. "The Muddled One is similar to the Strayed One and the Twisted One. All of them are people with certain qualities in their body. As the name suggests, the Muddled Ones are afflicted with a sense of unclearness. Not only are their inner selves unclear, but they could also muddle everything around them with their karmic obstacle."

At that moment, Ji Xiang's explanation was suddenly interrupted by someone, causing Li Huowang to feel displeased, and as expected it was the Shaman.

"Feng Erniu, no need to tell what everyone already knows. Just let us know what to do later on. Also, let me get this clear first. No matter what happens, the debt I owe you will be cleared after this."

Ji Xiang scoffed unhappily when he heard someone calling out his true name, but he didn't dare offend that man and swallowed his anger. "Shen Tugang, at least give me some face. There's no need to rush since we have some time. You can rest first while I continue explaining."

Hearing this, the Shaman hugged his chest and closed his eyes.

On the other hand, Ji Xiang continued with his explanation. "I will try to make my explanation short then. The Muddled One and the Strayed One are opposites. If a Strayed One is likened to a star in the dark sky that everyone can see from afar, then a Muddled One can be likened to a black cloth hidden in the night. Normal people could never hope to find them."

Li Huowang grumbled when he heard that.

If I was a Muddled One rather than a Strayed One then I wouldn't have to suffer so much.

Ji Xiang continued his explanation. "Also, the Muddled Ones can use their karmic obstacles to hide themselves as well as other items, both dead and alive. As an example, if you fight against a Muddled One, you might suddenly forget where your weapons are, and then suddenly find out that you've lost the Muddled One."

Li Huowang slowly noted down everything that he heard and remembered his own situation. At the same time, a question popped into his mind.

That sounds dangerous. Can a Muddled One control their techniques as they wish?

"But be careful! Don't think that this is the extent of their abilities otherwise I never would've asked all of you to come here. Out of the three of them, the Muddled One and the Strayed One are the toughest to fight against. Do not look into a Muddled One's eyes or else your soul would be immediately tarnished by their karmic obstacle, and then you would be hidden by them. Once you are hidden by them, no one else can find you again, forever! Another thing to note is that some of them who grow old enough can use different techniques and you need to adapt on the fly. Still, since their powers mostly revolve around using their karmic obstacle, their techniques should be similar," continued Ji Xiang.

Everyone was listening to his explanation seriously but Li Huowang sighed secretly.

To think that the Muddled Ones can't even look at people directly. They must've accidentally hidden many of their close friends and family members.

Li Huowang felt pity for them.

The Muddled Ones and the Strayed Ones both led difficult lives.

As the sound of horse hoofs grew slower, Ji Xiang started talking faster, "Once we are there, Little Liu and Danqing will surround the perimeter to prevent the Muddled One from escaping. Me and Shen Tugang will force her out while Er Jiu will kill her immediately. Since the Ao Jing Sect doesn't need weapons to kill people, the Muddled One's karmic obstacle should not work on you. Disembark now!"

The carriage's tarp opened and the six of them stood beside the road. A very special secluded village appeared in front of them.

It was similar to the mountain villages that Li Huowang had seen before, but the village in front of him seemed to be abandoned. The ground, walls, and roofs were all covered in ivy.

"Little Liu, go. Remember that this mission will determine whether I die or not so you must be careful," said Ji Xiang.

Liu Zongyuan nodded with his wooden mask. Then, he leaped off the ground and entered the forest like a monkey. Soon, a faint mist appeared and covered the entire area. At the same time, the white impermanence with its red tongue flickered within the mist.

Then, without waiting for Ji Xiang's order, Shen Tugang walked into the village.

Seeing this, Ji Xiang sighed and carried his golden abacus as he too walked into the village.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang cautiously scanned his surroundings.

It was too quiet. Except for the sound of the clicking abacus, there were no other noises. The birds and insects had also gone silent.

Just as they had entered the village, they saw a single flower appearing in front of them. It was clear that the flower was well taken care of since there were no weeds surrounding it.

"Who's there? Come out!" Li Huowang unsheathed his sword halfway and the murderous aura instantly enveloped his body.

At the same time, everyone else also took out their weapons and pointed at a short wall.

Suddenly, a pair of feet wearing red shoes appeared from the darkness.

Remembering Ji Xiang's advice, Li Huowang instantly lowered his eyes.

But when he saw those feet again, he hesitated. They looked familiar.

Wait! Those are Miaomiao's feet!

Li Huowang raised his head and saw the familiar red veil.

At the same time, Hong Da had already thrown his rusted blade toward her.

Chapter 353 - Muddled One

Seeing that the blade was about to hit the Second Deity, Li Huowang elongated his bronze coin sword into a whip and hit it away.

“Wait!” Li Huowang ran up and stood between them. “Wait, she’s not the Muddled One. She’s my wife!”

Hearing this, Ji Xiang placed down the wish wood and asked, feeling confused, “Your wife? I don’t believe it! Ask her to remove her red veil. I don’t want the Muddled One to try and trick us.”

At that moment, without waiting for Li Huowang’s approval, Shen Tugang gently hit the drum on his waist. In response, the Second Deity’s drum rang out as well, almost as if they were conversing.

Once the sound of the drums stopped, the Second Deity removed the red veil on her face.

“Aiya! What is that? Junior Er, is she really your wife?” Everyone was shocked to see the Second Deity’s half-human half-beast face.

Li Huowang just ignored them and pulled the Second Deity a distance away. “Why are you here? Where is Miaomiao? Did she follow us?”

The Second Deity shook her head and trembled as she hugged Li Huowang’s waist. She had three feline eyes, and all of them contained her love for him. “Husband... I miss you.”

Her sharp fang bit Li Huowang’s neck shallowly as two tongues came out and licked his neck.

“Enough!” Li Huowang held her properly and looked at her seriously. "I don't have time for this. This place is very dangerous and you must leave now!"

"Husband, are you worried about me?" The Second Deity smiled, her mouth opening all the way to her ears.

Li Huowang approached her and held her head before looking into her largest eye. "Leave here, now!"

"Alright." A long tongue licked his face. Then, she left with a mysterious smile.

"Mother?"

At that moment, a voice rang inside his ears that caused him to feel even more sullen as he said, "Shh! She's not your mother!"

"Junior Er, is she really your wife?" Tuoba Danqing was so shocked that he completely stopped playing with the walnuts in his hand.

In response, without waiting for Li Huowang to explain, Shen Tugang said in an unfriendly voice, "Why? Do you have a problem with it?"

Then, he turned toward Li Huowang and nodded approvingly, "She's a good girl. Don't mess up."

"Alright alright, that's enough. Let's continue our mission. We are here to get a Muddled One and not on a date." Ji Xiang said anxiously.

Li Huowang looked at where the Second Deity disappeared before continuing their journey into the village. He was afraid that the Second Deity would ignore his warning and bring Miaomiao into the village.

Meanwhile, Ji Xiang's golden abacus once again started clicking while Tuoba Danqing started playing with his walnuts. The sounds they generated covered the entire village.

At the same time, Li Huowang also raised his awareness, afraid of the Muddled One suddenly appearing.

They kept walking until they saw a collapsed wall. Through it, they saw several shadows standing underneath the guava trees.

After looking carefully, Li Huowang saw that those weren't humans but were instead human dolls made from straw and other plant materials. Their surroundings were also very clean.

Just as Li Huowang was wondering whether the Muddled One was the one who did that, Hong Da threw out two small rusty knives toward it, destroying those effigies in an instant.

"Aaaaaa..." A sharp voice rang out from the depths of the village.

"Let's go!" Shen Tugang, who had been bored until now, immediately leaped into action as he hit the drum on his waist while running toward the source of the voice.

For some reason, his chants were much different than Li Zhi's and Bai Lingmiao's. His chants were exceedingly domineering.

"Hear me out for there are monsters in the city! Swallow them whole so peace befalls us! I call for the Immortals and they must come! I call for the Gods and they must listen!"

Li Huowang suddenly felt as if all of the colors around him were being drained, leaving behind a world of monotonous gray.

He felt goosebumps on his skin. He knew that something was here, but he didn't know what.

Shen Tugang's was visibly different from the other Shamans.

He might be as strong as Dan Yangzi. I wonder where Ji Xiang found him.

"Er Jiu, borrow my blade!" Hong Da passed a rusted blade to Li Huowang.

Seeing this, Li Huowang nodded and accepted the blade.

The shouting in the distance meant that Shen Tugang and Ji Xiang had found the Muddled One. The sound of drums and abacus encompassed the entire village, causing their surroundings to start shivering and twisting.

Even though the Muddled One hadn't revealed herself, it was clear that they were already fighting.

Li Huowang had many killing techniques but none of them would work for now.

However, rather than just waiting, Li Huowang decided to use what he could. He bit his finger and used his blood to draw a talisman.

He didn't know if it would work, but there was no harm in trying.

After remembering the pattern on the skull that he had brought here, he started looking around to find a similar pattern.

Amidst the chaos, Li Huowang looked everywhere before suddenly looking down at the rusted blade in his hand. The rusted blade that he had loaned from Hong Da was pointing at an abandoned well. There was a spider web at the top of the well.

The spider web was torn, and the pattern on it looked similar to what he had seen on the skull.

Does Hong Da's rusted blade amplify fortune-telling powers?

Li Huowang unsheathed his weapon and slowly approached the well. Once at the well, he carefully cut off the vines and looked down, only to find someone standing in the well, leaving him shocked.

When the person inside felt the light coming from above and raised their head, Li Huowang instinctively looked away to prevent himself from looking into their eyes.

At the same time, Li Huowang shouted at everyone, "Quick! There's ..."

However, he suddenly stopped.

"Wait, what did I want to say? Why am I here?"

When the others heard his voice, they looked at Li Huowang. Feeling puzzled, Tuoba Danqing asked him, "Junior Er, why are you holding the rusted blade while standing at the side of that well?"

"Rusted blade?" Li Huowang looked at Tuoba Danqing, Ji

Xiang, and Shen Tugang. “Wait, where did the rusted blade come from? Why is it in my hands?”

Chapter 354 - Appear

“Hm?” Li Huowang looked at the rusted blade in his hands with confusion.

Where did this blade come from? I already have two weapons so why do I have another?

Li Huowang threw the rusted blade onto the ground and used his own sword to poke at it. He was confused by the sudden appearance of the rusted blade.

Is this the power of the Muddled One? Is she using her power?

Li Huowang stared at the rusted blade carefully while slowly retreating to where everyone else was.

“Junior Er, is everything alright?” Tuoba Danqing looked at the anxious Li Huowang.

“I don't know why I suddenly had a rusted blade in my hands,” explained Li Huowang.

“But the karmic obstacles of the Muddled One are used to hide objects. How could it give you something?”

Li Huowang checked his entire body and shook his head when he found nothing. He then looked at Shen Tugang who was currently beating his drum.

“May the God of Venus command his army, and order them to stand in a row of fifty-five thousand. They shall wear black armor and hold the black flag. Those in shiny armor are the rookies. Don't call them to join the war or I will chase them away myself!”

As Shen Tugang continued to beat his drum, the atmosphere around them slowly shifted. Something condensed and then disappeared within the mist.

Looking at how Shen Tugang was sure of victory, Li Huowang did nothing and waited for them to chase out the Muddled One.

He would rather sit back and not interrupt them.

The sound of the drumbeats, walnuts clacking, and the abacus never stopped.

Just then, Shen Tugang suddenly shouted, “The Muddled One we are facing is an old one! She made one of us disappear! Erniu, stop conserving your strength and go all out!”

Hearing those words, Ji Xiang forcefully smacked his golden abacus.

Immediately, Li Huowang saw his surroundings start shimmering.

When Li Huowang looked at his sword, he suddenly saw it multiply. Sometimes there were two and sometimes there were three. The concept of ‘numbers’ around them seemed to have been affected and rendered useless. One could be five and could be nine at the same time.

Just then, Shen Tugang used all six of his hands to beat the drum forcefully. Rather than sounding like a chant, his voice was now a bellow. “A rainbow cloud descends upon us! I summon all of the Immortals of the Southern Palace! I call for the Eight Immortals and Eight Barbarians to take their post, protect the Eight Gates and Eight Doors!”

In response, dark clouds above the heavens descended and stopped just above their heads. Something seemed to be moving within the dark clouds.

Just then, Li Huowang saw a figure appearing from a distance away. Her body seemed to be shimmering as she phased in and out of reality from time to time. She was wearing a blue robe and black markings covered her face. Her trousers were also caked in mud.

“Er Jiu! She’s the Muddled One! Attack now!”

The moment Ji Xiang shouted, Li Huowang cut off half of his sixteen fingers. Then, while the Muddled One was busy with his fingers, Li Huowang tore off a large chunk of his flesh and skin before throwing it at the Muddled One.

However, when Li Huowang turned around, he saw his finger bullets and flesh net slowly disappear under the Muddled One's power.

He had to do something!

Li Huowang looked down at the feet of the Muddled One and whipped his bronze coin sword toward it.

When she saw that she wouldn't be able to dodge it, a beggar suddenly appeared beside the Muddled One. before being used as a meat shield to block the bronze coin sword.

It was Hong Da who had previously disappeared! He had now been unhidden by the Muddled One!

The sound of metal screeching rang out as the bronze coins impacted Hong Da's body and shot out sparks.

Li Huowang was mad when he saw his attacks being blocked so many times and instantly used his own sword to slice open his abdomen.

"You motherfucker, do you think you can hide all the time? Let's see how you hide this!" shouted Li Huowang as he stabbed both of his arms into his abdomen and forcefully tore out two of his rib bones. He then stabbed his rib bones into his own torso.

At that moment, Li Huowang took a deep breath from the shock of the pain, while the Muddled One also cried out as both of them fell to the ground at the same time.

Despite the pain, Li Huowang laughed maniacally. His sense of pain was currently being shared with the Muddled One. With her being crippled, it would now be much easier to capture her.

At this point, Li Huowang used a pike to rip one of his fingernails, using the impact to shoot himself upward.

The Muddled One's entire body was cramping from the pain. She wanted to attack again, but when she saw Li Huowang about to rip off more of his fingernails, she was finally afraid and ran away.

However, Li Huowang would never let her go. He immediately placed two talismans onto his knees. Veins started bulging throughout his body as he ran toward the Muddled One, leaving behind many afterimages.

As he used various torture methods, the distance between Li Huowang and the Muddled One was slowly getting shorter and shorter.

But when he crashed into a dusty house, the Muddled One once again disappeared.

“What’s happening? Where is she?” Li Huowang refused to give up. He was extremely close!

When he looked back at the rest, Ji Xiang answered his question. “Let us rest first. It’s not easy to force the Muddled One out.”

Ji Xiang’s face was pale and his fingers were trembling. Shen Tugang was equally tired too. Both of them had used up a lot of their powers to force out the Muddled One.

“You’ve already wounded her. One more time and she will no longer be able to run away again. Erniu specifically found people who can counter the Muddled One’s power this time around,” said Shen Tugang.

Compared to their initial meeting, Shen Tugang was now much more friendly with Li Huowang. He wasn’t sure if it had anything to do with Miaomiao's Second Deity.

Li Huowang nodded his head. “Fine. Once we catch the Muddled One, we can... Hm? What was I trying to say again?”

As Li Huowang’s anger cooled down, he looked around feeling confused.

It was not a large house, and there were even some sweet potatoes in a corner of the house. There was also a patch of dried grass with an indentation on it. It was clear this place was recently inhabited by someone.

Did someone live here?

As Li Huowang touched the rib bone on his torso, the intense pain made him remember again. “Yes! That’s right! It’s the Muddled One! She’s hiding my memories!”

Realizing this, Li Huowang took out some yellow talisman papers. Just as he was about to write something, he stopped. Then, he recalled her powers and used a small pike to start writing on his left forearm.

He quickly wrote their mission as well as the dangers of facing the Muddled One on his own flesh and then sighed.

“Look, there are writings on the wall!”

Tuoba Danqing’s sudden shout made all of them look at the walls.

Chapter 355 - Hidden

Li Huowang turned around and saw there were indeed some words written on the wall covered by the ivy vines. As he looked at the wall, he used his bronze coin sword like a whip and cleared off the vines.

Why me? And when will it end? Such a bizarre fate.

I don't want to kill! I want to look people straight in the eyes!

They couldn't see me the moment they turned around. I hate that!

"These things seem to have been written by the Muddled One. But... it doesn't seem to have been written by just one person," spoke Tuoba Danqing as he looked carefully.

"Danqing, stop looking. Also, give me some of your Gu poison. I need to use it with some of my lifespan pills." Ji Xiang took out some lifespan pills and ate them. At the same time, Li Huowang saw the white hair on Ji Xiang's head reduce significantly.

"Lord Ji Xiang, you've already used so many lifespan pills. Any more and it would be dangerous." said Tuoba Danqing.

"Sigh~ Do you think I don't know that? For now, let's finish the mission or I won't even have the chance to live long enough to become a Human Xiao," replied Ji Xiang.

Li Huowang ignored their bickering as he surveyed his environment while enduring the pain from the wounds he had inflicted on himself.

Now that the situation was under control, he wanted it to end as soon as possible to prevent any unforeseen circumstances.

"Hehe."

Hearing the sudden laughter, Li Huowang raised his head. At that moment, he was eye to eye with a woman with a dirty face!

Her hair was long and her face looked pretty even though it was caked in filth. As she appeared in front of him, she looked into his eyes excitedly.

She's the Muddled One!

Li Huowang suddenly realized who it was didn't hesitate in the slightest as he stabbed the woman's abdomen!

The Muddled One coughed up blood and fell onto the ground. She looked at Li Huowang with shock as she muttered to herself, "You are fine? Nothing's happening to you?"

However, Li Huowang was too excited and shocked to care about such details. He quickly approached her and raised a metal spoon, ready to gouge out her eyes that were capable of making people disappear.

"Er Jiu! Don't gouge out her eyes! Even if you kill her you must not gouge out her eyes."

Hearing this, Li Huowang dropped the spoon and immediately snapped all of her joints. By the time he was done with her, she could do nothing but move her eyes.

Even though Li Huowang wasn't sure what was happening, since the Muddled One appeared in front of him just like that, there was no way he was going to let her go.

After that, he cut out a strip of cloth from his red Daoist robe and used it to cover her eyes.

Surprisingly, when Li Huowang was covering her eyes, she did not try to struggle. Instead, all she did was stare at the words on the wall while screaming in fear.

"No! I didn't kill them! I don't know what happened to them, but I didn't kill them!"

Li Huowang used three strips of cloth to cover her eyes. He only let out a sigh of relief after he was done.

Li Huowang relaxed a bit before looking at Ji Xiang and the others. All of them were looking at him in surprise.

"Junior Er, how did you not get hidden by the Muddled One?"

Why did she just appear in front of you and allow herself to be captured?”

Li Huowang thought about Tuoba Danqing’s question for a moment, and then replied vaguely, “I don’t know. Probably luck.”

He actually knew that it might’ve been something to do with his status as a Strayed One, but he couldn’t really tell them that.

On the other hand, while Tuoba Danqing didn’t question it any further, he was still feeling puzzled.

What do you mean it was luck?!

At that moment, the Muddled One cried out once again, “NO! I didn’t kill them! I don’t know what happened to them, but I didn’t kill them!”

Li Huowang turned around and his pupils shrank from the shock.

The blindfold on the Muddled One’s eyes had disappeared and she was looking at the texts on the walls again.

Damn! Inanimate objects can’t cover her eyes! I need living objects.

“Li Sui, come out and help me!”

Following his call, two wriggling tentacles sprouted out from the wound on Li Huowang’s abdomen and wrapped around the Muddled One’s eyes. With this, everything finally quieted down.

Seeing that the Muddled One had really been captured this time around, Ji Xiang ran over and excitedly shook Li Huowang’s hands. “Er Jiu! Thank you so much! You’ve helped us a lot this time! Come and find me anytime you need help from me!”

“Lord Ji Xiang, there’s no need for that.” Li Huowang knew what Ji Xiang was talking about. Essentially Ji Xiang owed him one.

Even though it was unexpected, their objectives had been fulfilled and mission was finally over.

“It’s time to leave. The Surveillance Bureau is in urgent need of the Muddled One,” said Ji Xiang. He was much more anxious than the others.

Li Huowang nodded and carried the Muddled One on his back. As he did, he took one more glance at the wall.

My wife died. I threw her to the edge of the wall. Why are there so many corpses there?

As he read this, Li Huowang was puzzled and moved the pile of straw near the corner of the wall, only to reveal numerous corpses underneath the pile of straw.

“Why are there so many corpses? And all of them are women.” Even Shen Tugang was put off by what he saw.

Faced with this new discovery, everyone stopped.

“There are more texts on the wall,” said Tuoba Danqing as he read the texts aloud.

“These... These are all the Muddled One’s wives. There are more of them, but most of them were hidden away by him.”

“Wait, the Muddled One is a woman, so how could she have wives?”

“Let’s go, who cares if she had a wife or a husband,” said Ji Xiang, itching to go. Only when the Muddled One was delivered back to the capital would he be able to calm down. He couldn’t be bothered with figuring out whether the Muddled One was a guy or a girl.

But at that moment, Li Huowang, whose awareness was heightened, suddenly had a thought that caused his heart to drop. “Wait, what if there’s more than one Muddled One?”

As soon as he said that, everyone felt the atmosphere suddenly become heavier.

“Fuck! Why should we be afraid? Do you think I’m afraid of them? If it weren’t for the fact that they are very hard to find, I would’ve fought three of them at once!” Shen Tugang’s bellows snapped all of them back to reality.

“That’s right! Even if we can’t fight anymore, we still have junior Er Jiu. The Muddled One’s power is useless against him!”

Tuoba Danqing chuckled and patted Li Huowang's shoulder.

Soon, they made their way out of the village. However, even as they passed through the entrance, the other Muddled One still didn't make an appearance.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang took notice of Hong Da and realized that the man had been very quiet after he reappeared. "What's wrong, Hong Da? You've barely escaped death so why aren't you smiling?"

If it weren't for the fact that the Muddled One wanted to use him as a meat shield, Hong Da might've really been hidden away until the end of time.

Hong Da's lips were white as he tried to smile, but couldn't.

"There were so many people... So many of them..." His voice was hoarse.

"What do you mean 'a lot of people'?" asked Li Huowang.

Hong Da stared at the Muddled One on Li Huowang's back and said, "A Muddled One's karmic obstacle affect themselves even more than it affects the others. When I was hidden away by the Muddled One, I saw many of her enemies, but also a lot of her friends and family. They all told me that the Muddled One had hidden them away when they were facing danger. She hid all of them within her karmic obstacle.^[1] The Muddled One wanted to let them all out once it was safe, but... she forgot. She forgot everything. At first the Muddled One could still control her powers, but the older she got, the more she lost control of it. She hid her memories, her age, and even her gender. You could say that the Muddled One could become someone entirely different in just the next hour!"

1. It seems that Muddled Ones can hide people within a pocket dimension of their karmic obstacle. 🤔

Chapter 356 - Man

“It’s too horrible to be stuck inside...” Hong Da continued his story, “Those stuck within the karmic obstacle are neither alive nor dead. Even if they want to, they can’t change their condition. They can’t starve, and they can’t die from fatigue, but they still have to suffer the pain of hunger and fatigue. They are tormented by it at all times. You know, when I was hidden away by her karmic obstacle, her father told me that he didn’t hate his daughter. At the very least, the torture he felt was proof that his daughter was still alive.”

Hong Da sighed as he recalled his experience inside the Muddled One’s karmic obstacle; it had made him realize a lot of things.

Having heard all that, Li Huowang’s heart couldn’t remain calm either. He moved the Muddled One from his back to his arms and looked at her with a complicated look on his face.

“If only she could just remember... I’m sure that she wouldn’t want to torment her family and friends...”

The Muddled One’s life was pitiful. Her actions subjected those she saw to an eternal life of torment. Compared to her, Li Huowang’s status as a Strayed One was marginally better.

“Daoist, she’s so pitiful. We should let her go.” Monk’s illusion took pity on the Muddled One.

However Li Huowang sighed and shook his head. “No. Disregarding the fact that we need her to obtain information on the Sitting Oblivion Dao, if we let her go now, she would harm even more people. Do you want to do that?”

Even if she didn’t want to hurt people, a single glance from her was all it took to harm others. If his guess was right, the village had once been filled with people, but now, everyone was gone, and it was most likely because of her.

Monk felt conflicted. He wanted to do good deeds, but when he was presented with a pair of choices that contradicted each other, he didn't know what to do.

At the same time, Li Huowang realized something. He had always questioned why the Surveillance Bureau would hunt down Strayed Ones with such prejudice, but after he saw the Muddled One's powers, he understood why.

Disregarding their ethics, by hunting down the Muddled One, they were indeed protecting the country and the life of everyone in it.

Just the existence of a Muddled One and a Strayed One was more than enough to wipe out an entire kingdom, and so it was natural for the Surveillance Bureau to hunt them down.

"Junior Er, who are you talking to?" Tuoba Danqing looked at Li Huowang, feeling puzzled.

Li Huowang blinked and patted his abdomen. "I'm talking to my Nascent Soul."

No one else spoke. All of them kept away their weapons and let down their guard. Shen Tugang even yawned and stretched his body.

Just as Li Huowang was about to leave the village, Tuoba Danqing, who was playing with two large walnuts, approached him before pulling him slightly backward and whispering anxiously, "Junior Er, let me give you a warning. Once Ji Xiang returns to the capital, if he doesn't summon us for a period of time, then we should run to Qing Qiu and hide there for a while. We could technically work there too."

Li Huowang was shocked.

Is he asking me to run?

"Senior Tuoba, do you know something?" asked Li Huowang.

Hearing this question, Tuoba Danqing sighed before pulling him to keep up with the others.

We already obtained the Muddled one, so Ji Xiang should be fine. If something happens to him, what about the information that he promised me as the reward?

Thinking back on the Muddled One's power, as well as Ji Xiang's anxiety, Li Huowang had a feeling that the reason why the Surveillance Bureau needed the Muddled One so badly was because they wanted to use her power for something grand.

But Li Huowang was just a rookie who had joined the Surveillance Bureau only recently. He had absolutely no idea what was happening with the higher-ups.

There was no reason for him to know that either; his rank was just way too low.

Li Huowang looked at Hong Da who was still in shock, before following Tuoba Danqing.

They continued to move swiftly and soon reached the entrance. At that moment, the white mist surrounding the village slowly dissipated and Liu Zongyuan appeared in front of them, still wearing the same wooden mask.

"Lord Ji Xiang, how is it? Did you succeed?" Liu Zongyuan looked at them excitedly.

"Little Liu, go and call for the horse carriage. I want to rest." said Ji Xiang. His pale face was disheveled and his voice weak.

"Since you guys are going back now, we will part ways here. I won't be returning to Yinling City. Erniu, remember that my debt to you has been cleared off now. Next time, I won't help you even if you grovel in front of me." Shen Tugang turned to leave.

When Li Huowang saw that he was leaving, he immediately stopped him. "Senior Shen, could I ask you a question?"

Shen Tugang frowned slightly as his thick eyebrows quivered but this time, he wasn't cussing. "Ask quickly. I still have urgent work to do.”

Li Huowang looked at his drum and asked, “I’ve heard that Shamans are the slaves of the Immortal families, and that can never be free. However, you seemed to be free of them. Could you tell me why?”

Li Huowang had already noticed that Shen Tugang’s chants was extremely different from Bai Lingmiao’s. His chant did not respect the Immortal families but instead had a slightly threatening tone to them.

“Are you asking this for that girl from just now?” Shen Tugang instantly knew the reason behind his question.

Li Huowang nodded. He wanted to help Bai Lingmiao change her situation. Even if she could not escape their control, he wanted her to at the very least secure the initiative and not let Immortal families control the reins.

Shen Tugang nodded and whispered something to Li Huowang.

As he heard the secret, Li Huowang’s eyes grew wide; it was as if it was extremely impossible. “Is that how you do it?”

“Time for me to leave. I will treat you to a meal if I meet you again.” Shen Tugang smacked the wound on Li Huowang’s torso before leaving.

Just then, the horse carriage also arrived. Li Huowang snapped back to reality and rode the carriage.

Just as Li Huowang was thinking about the method Shen Tugang had just told him, Hong Zhong’s words shook him awake. “Li Huowang, wake up. Stop thinking about that for now. Why do you have an extra person in front of you?”

Hearing those words, Li Huowang looked up and saw a skinny man. As he looked at the skinny man, Li Huowang was on the verge of thinking he was not part of their crew.

However, Hong Da’s reaction was the strongest when he saw the skinny man, his eyes wide from shock. “HOW DID YOU GET OUT?!”

The skinny man looked at them and quietly said, “I suddenly remembered that I’m a Muddled One. I had asked that woman to hide me in her karmic obstacle so that I can find my family, but then she forgot about me.”

Chapter 357 - Hidden

“KILL HIM!”

Everyone’s killing intent flared up as numerous weapons were hurled toward the skinny man.

Li Huowang was the first to react, and he was also the one that the skinny man took notice of first. The man looked at Li Huowang before disappearing.

The moment he disappeared, Li Huowang felt his chin go cold. His bronze coin veil has been hidden by the Muddled One!

Li Huowang reacted to it but now was not the time for him to think about it. He was in an extremely dangerous situation right now!

Blood surged into his brain as his body trembled. He looked at everyone around him. Ji Xiang, Hong Da, Tuoba Danqing, and Liu Zongyuan.

Fwoosh~

As he used his flint, Li Huowang felt his body being engulfed in flames, and a burning pain enveloped his body.

Kill them! They know that I’m a Strayed One now! I need to kill all of them and I must not let any of them escape!

Just as Li Huowang’s body started burning, Liu Zongyuan’s body shriveled up into a ball and escaped into the forest.

He wasn’t sure who did it, but at that moment, Li Huowang felt a strong force sending him flying backward.

As he was flying through the air, the burning Li Huowang bellowed and crushed his left eye, instantly covering everyone in an eerie light.

Seeing this, Ji Xiang grabbed the wish wood and pointed it at Li Huowang, only to realize that there was no effect.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang took out his sword as he prepared to chop off his own left arm.

“Er Jiu! What are you doing?!” A giant white impermanence shouted from within the forest.

“Stop wasting your breath! He’s being controlled!” Hong Da was very haggard as he stabbed himself with a rusted blade.

However, his words were enough to snap Li Huowang out of it. He looked at them in disbelief.

Wait, they can’t see that I’m a Strayed One?

At that moment, Li Huowang suddenly recalled one specific item.

He remembered the spindle that Zhuge Yuan had given him. Back then, Zhuge Yuan had pointed at his bronze coin veil and said that the spindle would be much more effective compared to his bronze coin veil.

It was only now that Li Huowang understood what he had meant at that point in time.

The reason why they didn’t know he was a Strayed One was because of the spindle that Zhuge Yuan had given to him.

Li Huowang looked down and saw that his bag of torture tools was also burning. The bag had almost been destroyed by the fire.

I can’t let it drop from my body.

With this in mind, Li Huowang quickly took the spindle out of the bag.

But then he realized a problem. He needed to place it somewhere safe on him, but he didn’t even have his own skin, much less a pocket.

After a moment of thought, he finally decided to tear open a section of his flesh before placing the spindle inside his abdomen.

Once done, he slowly approached everyone. “Guys, it’s fine. I just defeated the Daoist that tried to take control of me.”

“Stop there!” Ji Xiang was still in shock as he pointed his golden abacus at the fiery Li Huowang. "I don't care if you are awake or not, just stand there!"

When they saw Li Huowang just standing there quietly as told, Ji Xiang discussed something with Liu Zongyuan and Hong Da.

Li Huowang wasn't sure what they were discussing, and so he grew more and more concerned about how to put out the fire on his body.

He suddenly thought about a method and pulled out the Profound Records that was embedded within his body.

Once the Profound Record was thrown onto the ground, the raging fire on Li Huowang's body was soon snuffed out.

At this point, since it had only been a short time since he set himself on fire, Li Huowang still had some of his skin remaining intact. Even so, Li Huowang looked like a candle that had just started to melt.

While this was still painful, it was much better than when he had been nearly completely burnt into charcoal.

"Thankfully I brought some spare clothes."

Just as he thought this, Li Huowang looked back and saw that the carriage was on fire.

"Sigh." Li Huowang had nothing to say as he used the Fiery Scripture to heal himself.

As the wax crawled across his skin, Li Huowang remembered Zhuge Yuan.

Not only did he see through my identity and not capture me, he even gave me the spindle to help hide myself. Is his kindness real?

A warm feeling appeared in Li Huowang's heart.

Li Huowang suddenly felt like he wanted to meet Zhuge Yuan again. There were many things he wanted to discuss with him.

"Er Jiu."

Li Huowang turned around and saw the three of them approaching him. They had finished their discussion.

“Er Jiu, could you determine who it was that tried to take control of you just now?” Ji Xiang’s tone was serious.

“Yeah, I saw a bald Daoist trying to harm me.” Li Huowang flat out lied.

“Hmm...” Ji Xiang thought about it for a moment, before sighing. “Fine, let’s go back. We can talk about it later.”

Once everyone agreed all of them started walking on the dirt path.

However, they still didn’t trust Li Huowang as they surrounded him.

They had just taken two steps when Li Huowang stopped and asked them. “Wait, do any of you remember what our mission was?”

Hong Da was also curious and looked at Ji Xiang. “I only remembered that Ji Xiang summoned us, but not anything else.”

“I was also summoned by Ji Xiang. Lord Ji Xiang, what is our mission this time?” Liu Zongyuan asked.

Li Huowang also looked at Ji Xiang. He too remembered nothing else besides the fact that Ji Xiang had called for them. Ji Xiang had promised him that once the mission was over, he would give Li Huowang the information about the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Without such a reward, Li Huowang would have never accepted a mission with such vague details and rewards.

With the three of them staring at him, Ji Xiang became serious as he wiped the ashes off his face. He was thinking hard.

“I... I can’t remember.” Ji Xiang was unsure. “Why did I call the two of you again?”

Hearing this, Li Huowang and Hong Da looked at each other. They didn’t know why either. Ji Xiang called both of them out, but forgot why he had even summoned them in the first place.

Are the superiors all this frivolous?

“Never mind that. Let’s first find a village and we can discuss from there later on. Now that we don't have a carriage, we need to walk faster or we will have to camp outside tonight," said Ji Xiang.

Li Huowang and Hong Da also stopped hesitating and picked up their pace when they saw the weather.

Chapter 358 - Main Deity And Second Deity

“Wear this. You look ugly being naked.” Hong Da gave Li Huowang his smelly robes.

Li Huowang thanked him and wore the robe with all of the rusted blades inside of it.

Just as he was about to put his arms into the sleeves, Li Huowang saw his own wounded forearm. There was something written on his skin, but the words were burned and had melted into each other.

“Hm? What is this?” Li Huowang placed his arm down as he wore the robe.

As he was about to catch up to them, Li Huowang suddenly stopped. “Wait! Something’s not right!”

Li Huowang quickly rolled the sleeves up and looked at the melted wound. Then, he used a dagger and cut open the wound on his forearm.

He slowly pulled the skin away, revealing his muscles and tendons.

Because of how deeply he had etched the words into his forearm, the words were still visible on his muscles.

When he saw what he had written, he quickly shouted at Ji Xiang. “It’s the Muddled One!”

As soon as he heard that, Ji Xiang’s face also lit up. “I remember now! We were here to help me catch the Muddled One!”

The three of them immediately grew serious as the atmosphere became heavy.

“The Muddled One has escaped and they are hiding away our memories!” said Li Huowang as he unsheathed his black-tassel sword and looked around carefully.

“It might not just be our memories. The Muddled One may have hidden someone else too. It’s just that we can’t remember them anymore. Careful not to look into his eyes.” Ji Xiang used his abacus as he started calculating something.

Soon, the sound of clicking stopped. Three out of the five beads had shot upward.

“Three people. The Muddled One has hidden three people.”

Ji Xiang’s words made Li Huowang and Hong Da’s scalps go numb. They had already lost three people without them even knowing.

Li Huowang quickly etched the new information onto his arm so that he would not forget it again. That way, the Muddled One’s powers would be less effective.

“Let me try to force them out of hiding. Protect me!” Ji Xiang placed his abacus onto the ground and started smacking on it.

Seeing this, Hong Da cautiously walked over and placed his rusted blades around Ji Xiang. The rusted blades were all pointed inward and resembled a lotus.

On the other hand, since Li Huowang could not do anything, he just waited there cautiously.

Time slowly passed and Ji Xiang used his powers again. Once again, the concept of ‘numbers’ was affected. However, it wasn’t very effective this time around. Even though Ji Xiang was drenched in sweat, the Muddled One still didn’t show up.

Suddenly, Li Huowang growled as he looked around. When he looked down, he realized that there were more sentences etched on his arm.

It was his own handwriting. It was just that thanks to the Muddled One, he had lost his memories of etching them onto his skin. He had forgotten when he wrote it.

Ji Xiang's method is working, but it's weak. We need to use our hearing and fast! The Muddled One has hidden not only Tuoba Danqing and Liu Zongyuan, but also Miaomiao! Earlier, the Second Deity hadn't left and secretly brought over Miaomiao to help us. We need to save them; we must not let them become like the Muddled One's family!

As he read the sentences etched into his own palm, Li Huowang's body trembled as goosebumps covered his skin.

Li Huowang didn't hesitate in the slightest as he took out the cotton from inside his ears and used his sharp hearing to scan the environment. At first, Li Huowang almost fainted from the explosive sounds. The sound of the abacus exploded incessantly in his ears.

"Daddy! It hurts! It's too loud!"

"Endure it! Just endure it! We need to save your mother!" Li Huowang gritted his teeth and closed his eyes. He needed to focus.

While it was very loud initially, he soon calmed himself down enough to be able to hear other voices.

"Uncle... Crazy..."

"No, not that," Li Huowang bit his lips and pressed onto his own head.

He continued to differentiate more and more sounds before he finally heard the sound of footsteps appearing and disappearing somewhere.

"It's... here!" Li Huowang opened his eyes and slashed at a tree behind him.

The massive tree was cut in half and a skinny man appeared from behind it.

At that moment, the Muddled One used his eyes and looked at Li Huowang, hiding away the black-tassel sword.

"Are you trying to pull off the same trick again?" asked Li Huowang as he stabbed his arms into his abdomen before breaking off two more ribs.

With the sound of Li Huowang stabbing his own ribs into his torso, both the Muddled One and Li Huowang bent over from the pain as they started howling in pain.

Enduring his pain, Li Huowang started running toward the Muddled One.

Seeing this, the Muddled One glared at Li Huowang. However, he realized too late that his ability did not work on the other party.

By the time the Muddled One realized what was happening, Li Huowang was just meters away from him. At the same time, Li Sui's tentacles were already wriggling in the air, ready to cover the Muddled One's eyes.

However, faced with this dangerous situation, the Muddled One did not panic and just waved his left arm.

Suddenly, a figure appeared and flew toward Li Huowang, it was Tuoba Danqing!

Then, another figure flew out as well. This time, it was Liu Zongyuan!

When the third person flew out, Li Huowang felt his heart become lighter, because he saw that it was Miaomiao.

Without waiting for the Muddled One to do anything else, Li Huowang stretched open his arms unconsciously and caught Bai Lingmiao.

As he caught her, they looked at each other. Even though they didn't exchange a single word, their eyes conveyed a lot of emotions.

After a moment, Li Huowang placed her down but she suddenly disappeared once again.

The Muddled One had hidden her once more!

"Muddled One!" Li Huowang roared and chased him down.

As Li Huowang once again closed in on him, the Muddled One threw another figure at Li Huowang. This time it was the Second Deity.

Just like that, the items hidden by the Muddled One were thrown out again and again like stones.

Various items appeared and were hidden away over and over.

Compared to the female Muddled One, this male Muddled One was much more well versed in the use of his powers.

Li Huowang knew he couldn't drag this out any longer or Ji Xiang would collapse. Once Ji Xiang collapsed from fatigue, it would be extremely hard to flush out the Muddled One.

And so, Li Huowang needed a plan.

When he saw the two girls being thrown out once again, Li Huowang quickly winked at them.

When she saw this, Bai Lingmiao nodded.

Soon, Bai Lingmiao and the Second Deity disappeared again.

When the Muddled One once again started throwing out various items, they appeared once more.

At the same time, Li Huowang stabbed his arms into his torso and twisted his ribs, causing the Muddled One to bend down in pain.

At that moment, the Second Deity turned in the air and kicked Bai Lingmiao's feet, launching her toward the Muddled One.

Bai Lingmiao used the force and flew directly toward the Muddled One. Along the way, she reached out and grabbed the sword beside her.

"WAIT, DON'T TAKE THAT!" Li Huowang shouted to stop her.

That was his black-tassel sword!

Bai Lingmiao also knew she shouldn't take that, but there was no other choice.

Just as the Muddled One finally managed to resist the pain to raise his head, a sword pierced into his forehead.

Everything became quiet when the Muddled One died.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang's eyes were wide as he stared at Bai Lingmiao holding onto the black-tassel sword.

"Hehe."

Bai Lingmiao suddenly started chuckling, her body bent slightly forward. At the same time, the Second Deity also started laughing. Gradually, their laughter grew louder and louder.

“HAHAHAHA!”

Chapter 359 - Change

Bai Lingmiao laughed. She laughed hard, almost as if she was venting everything inside her heart.

Even after spending so much time with her, Li Huowang had never seen Bai Lingmiao act like that.

“Quick! Return the sword!” Li Huowang hobbled towards Bai Lingmiao.

But when Li Huowang approached her, he saw the white-haired girl suddenly raise her arm and stab the sword toward his torso. She tore open his torso and revealed Li Huowang’s heart into the cold air.

Then, Bai Lingmiao walked over and hugged him, his blood staining her clothes red.

“Aaaa~” At that moment, Bai Lingmiao's face had an expression of relief.

Li Huowang wanted to say something to Bai Lingmiao, but she kissed him first.

After a few breaths, she moved backward and looked at him, her lips inching upward as she laughed.

On the other hand, Li Huowang's hands were trembling as he held her face. He felt extremely conflicted about the current situation. “Miaomiao, let’s stop. Alright?”

It was just like what happened to Lu Xiucan; the black-tassel sword’s murderous aura had transformed Bai Lingmiao’s behavior.

Hearing Li Huowang’s words, Bai Lingmiao slowly calmed down and returned back to the gentle girl she was as she spoke in a sheepish voice, “Senior Li, is this how you want me to be?”

However, when she saw the ray of hope in Li Huowang’s eyes, Bai Lingmiao’s shy expression immediately changed into one of excitement. “Hahaha! Impossible! Dream on! I will never return to my introverted self! I’ve seen many things and I don’t want to take care of all of them! I finally feel free! If I knew how nice it was to be free of such thoughts, then I would’ve touched your sword much earlier! Plus, look at you and me! We are now much more compatible! Hahahaha!”

While she was shouting, some of the features of the Immortal families, such as hairy ears or snake scales, appeared intermittently on her face.

As he heard those words, Li Huowang trembled from the pain, both physical and mental. In the end, he just hugged her gently. “Miaomiao, I’m sorry.”

Finally in his embrace, Bai Lingmiao closed her eyes and felt a sense of euphoria from smelling the stench of blood on him. “Li Huowang, you can return to the village now. Everyone’s waiting for you.”

Li Huowang released her and looked at her strange yet familiar face. He struggled a bit before saying, “Don’t worry. I will find a way to turn you back. This is my fault.”

However, as soon as he said that, Bai Lingmiao snarled and shoved her thin arm into his chest before grabbing his heart.

“Did you not hear what I said? I said that I love this feeling of freedom! How dare you try to dictate what kind of person I can or cannot be?” Bai Lingmiao raised one of her sharp fingernails as gently poked a hole in his heart.

At that moment, several tentacles sprouted out from within Li Huowang’s abdomen and entangled Bai Lingmiao’s arm, no longer letting her harm Li Huowang.

“Li Sui, don’t do that.”

Only after Li Huowang’s command did Li Sui’s tentacle retreat.

Bai Lingmiao chuckled as she removed her arm from his chest before using his robes to wipe off the blood of her hands. Once she’s done with that, she hugged him tightly, almost like a long-lost lover.

Even though they looked like they were deeply in love, her words were anything but lovely. “Don’t think that I will keep relying on you all my life. We aren’t even married yet. I’m a living human, not an accessory to you.”

Li Huowang looked at her with a complicated look in his eyes. He was not as easily startled as before. Since it had happened, he was thinking about how to reverse this change.

While they were talking and hugging each other, the others caught up to them. They saw the Muddled One’s corpse on the ground and sighed before turning to look at Bai Lingmiao.

Bai Lingmiao was not afraid of them and glared right back.

“Junior Er, as the saying goes, one should get a kind and gentle wife. Your wife is very hot-tempered. If both of you stay together, then your house is bound to never get an ounce of peace,” Tuoba Danqing advised Li Huowang based on his past experiences.

Hearing those words, Bai Lingmiao was about to say something but Li Huowang stopped her.

At the same time, Ji Xiang also felt that this was not a good time for this. “Danqing, now’s not the time to talk about this. Let’s go back. I’m very tired.”

After using his power for so long, Ji Xiang was so weak that he could fall over at any moment. He could barely stand up, let alone walk.

Meanwhile, as Li Huowang was being supported by Bai Lingmiao, he recalled the past moments he had shared with her.

Since Bai Lingmiao became like this due to me, I will definitely find a way to bring her back!

Li Huowang swore adamantly in his heart. He was already doing what other Strayed Ones could only dream of achieving. By comparison, dispelling the murderous aura from her body was just a minor issue.

As his thoughts reached this point, Li Huowang looked at the people around him. Compared to the last time, when he was all alone and had to do everything by himself, this time around, he might be able to get some help from the people around him.

But right now, Bai Lingmiao was beside him, and so he couldn't ask for their help.

On the way back, no one spoke. All of them were busy thinking about their own issues.

Due to their fatigue and the accident from earlier, they failed to reach a village before nightfall. However, they didn't complain and just found some firewood to light up a bonfire and rest.

That night, Bai Lingmiao and Li Huowang slept while cuddling.

Li Huowang had not felt such comfort in a long time.

However, neither of them could fall asleep. Under the illumination of the bonfire, the two of them just stared at each other.

When she saw Li Huowang staring at her, Bai Lingmiao smirked as she slyly whispered into his ears, "Why are you staring at me like that? Are you still thinking about having sex even though you are injured so badly?"

Hearing this, Li Huowang sighed and hugged her closer.

In response, Bai Lingmiao tore open his torso and put her face into his chest cavity before kissing his heart. "Relax, I'm still the same Bai Lingmiao who will die fighting with you. I will never forget what you did for me throughout our travels. None of that will change. The only thing that has changed is the way I think."

"But you still changed." Li Huowang's voice was filled with self-loathing and defeat.

"Oh? Do you dare say that you did not change at all throughout our journey? In fact, weren't you the one who changed the most?"

“I changed?” Li Huowang shook his head. “No, I did not. I’m still Li Huowang.”

“Are you lying to yourself?” Bai Lingmiao rolled her eyes. “You’ve changed much more than me. The past Li Huowang would never chop off his fingers or gouge out his eyeballs without hesitation.”

“Are you saying that the past me is the real Li Huowang while the present me is not?” asked Li Huowang.

Chapter 360 - It'S Over

Li Huowang continued to listen to Bai Lingmiao as they cuddled near the bonfire.

“Hah, listen to yourself! Maybe I’m in the same situation as you. I was Bai Lingmiao in the past, and I’m still the same Bai Lingmiao in the present. In fact, I’m a better Bai Lingmiao now!” As she said this, her eyes shone with a mysterious light.

“Also, don’t forget that you are the one that killed my entire family,” added Bai Lingmiao.

As soon as he heard those words, Li Huowang felt his body go numb.

“I had always been struggling in the past, not being able to choose a side. I can’t forgive you, but I couldn’t let go of my family. However, I’m different now. Now that I know that they were from the White Lotus Sect, and what they were trying to do to you, I can only say that you did not kill them thoughtlessly. In that situation, it was either them killing you or you killing them. See, I can think much more clearly now. No more hesitations, no more pain!”

Li Huowang looked at the unfamiliar Bai Lingmiao, her words making him realize that she had become another person altogether.

If he had to compare her to someone, then she was definitely similar to Peng Longteng.

Bai Lingmiao’s actions and choice of words were very similar to Peng Longteng’s, and he didn’t want that.

Just then, a soft body gently hugged him from behind as a forked tongue slid past his ears.

When he realized that it was the Second Deity, he immediately stood up, surprising both of them.

At the same time, Li Huowang’s sudden actions attracted everyone's else's attention as well.

In the end, he forced a smile as he looked at them. "I'm going to the toilet."

Then, he looked at Ji Xiang and pointed at the dark forest to the side before walking into it.

Soon, Ji Xiang also entered the forest. When he looked at Li Huowang, he revealed a bright smile.

"Er Jiu, is something wrong? You can tell me and I will definitely help you if I can."

Li Huowang's actions just now had been very clear. If Ji Xiang couldn't even recognize such a simple message, then he might as well gouge his own eyes out.

After thinking about what Bai Lingmiao had said to him just now, Li Huowang carefully asked Ji Xiang, "Lord Ji Xiang, are there any methods to dispel the murderous aura that enters one body from a soldier's weapon?"

The current Bai Lingmiao was not the one from his memories. Even if he knew that she would never forgive him, he still needed to change her back.

"Murderous aura entering the body? You are going to need to ask the military for that. I'm not quite sure either," replied Ji Xiang.

After a moment of thought, Li Huowang asked a different question, "Lord Ji Xiang, do you know anyone from the military within the Liang Kingdom? Could you recommend me to someone?"

Ji Xiang glanced at the fireplace. "Sure, I can do that."

If it wasn't for Li Huowang, all of them would be dead. By comparison, this was a simple request.

Of course, he would just be referring Li Huowang to someone. As for why Li Huowang needed to find someone in the military, Ji Xiang avoided prying too much.

After agreeing to Li Huowang's request, Ji Xiang recalled the dangerous encounter just now. "Thankfully the mission is over for now. I will see if I can bribe my superiors so that I can be dispatched to a place that's not as dangerous. The missions within the Surveillance Bureau are inhumane."

"Thank you, Lord Ji Xiang." Li Huowang thanked him.

He didn't care about whether or not he would succeed, but Li Huowang would definitely work hard to restore Bai Lingmiao back to how she was.

"Alright, are there any other matters? If not, let's go back. We still need to travel tomorrow morning," asked Ju Xiang.

Just as Ji Xiang was just about to leave, both he and Li Huowang turned to look into the forest at the same time.

"Someone's there!"

It was already night and they were in the wilderness. Thus, it was clearly unnatural to have someone looking at them.

Li Huowang immediately pulled out two talismans that he had drawn with his own blood and slapped them onto his knees before running toward the direction of the gaze.

On the other hand, Ji Xiang stood where he was for a moment, before running back to the bonfire. He needed to look after the dead Muddled One to make sure that no one tried to steal it.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang weaved through the darkness of the forest as he approached his target.

When he saw that the other person was still running, Li Huowang immediately chopped off one of his fingertips.

The bone in his fingertip exploded outward and shot toward that person.

Soon, the bone bullet landed a hit and Li Huowang managed to catch up, finally allowing him to see who it was.

It was similar to a human, but it was very skinny and short. The skin on the person seemed to be supported by its skeleton. Its eyes were large and fish-like, as if they could fall off at any moment. Its mouth was caved in and there were very few teeth left inside.

As he looked at it, Li Huowang wasn't sure if this being was a human or an evil being.

At the same time, the thing was not afraid of Li Huowang's weapon, and just stared at it with a stupid gaze.

Shit! Is this a distraction?

Li Huowang broke the limbs of the being before carrying it back to the bonfire.

When he arrived back at the bonfire and saw that everyone was still there, including the Muddled One's corpse, he sighed in relief.

"Lord Ji Xiang, do you recognize this thing? It was the being that was staring at us in the forest." Li Huowang raised the thing up.

"Oh?"

Just as Ji Xiang was about to inspect it, a blood-curdling cry came from behind him.

Li Huowang turned and saw that it was Hong Da.

Hong Da was staring at the being with extreme fear. "That thing... That's a human that was hidden by a Muddled One! If the Muddled One did not release it back to reality, then... that means..."

In the next moment, Hong Da suddenly grabbed some soil and munched on it, as if he was possessed. The fear in his eyes deepened.

"There's no taste! Nothing! I can't swallow it either! WE ARE TRAPPED IN A MUDDLED ONE'S KARMIC OBSTACLE! We have been hidden by it without us even realizing!"

Hearing this, everyone felt their heart drop as they looked toward the dark forest.

Suddenly, Ji Xiang ran up and shouted. "Stop spouting bullshit! The Muddled One we were trying to catch is dead! A dead Muddled One can't hide us! Or are you trying to tell me that there's another one?”

Hearing this, Li Huowang felt his heart skip a beat. “Lord Ji Xiang, there’s indeed another one! The female Muddled One!”

“What are you talking about? A female Muddled One? Wasn’t there only one?”

Everyone looked at Li Huowang and thought that he had remembered wrongly.

But when Li Huowang saw the words that were etched onto his arm, he shook his head. His memories were still intact. It was just that everyone had forgotten.

“No! We were here to capture the female Muddled One, not the male!” declared Li Huowang.

“Then where is the female Muddled One?” Ji Xiang’s voice was shrill, cold sweat pouring down his face.

Li Huowang pointed at the corpse on the ground. “She’s probably hidden within his karmic obstacle.”

Hearing this, Ji Xiang’s face paled, the blood draining from his face. His legs went limp as he crumpled onto the ground.

“A dead and a live Muddled One touched each other. The dead one is hidden within the live, and the live one is hidden within the dead. We are fucked! It’s over! We are done for!”

Chapter 361 - Yin And Yang

Li Huowang's face was unusually grim as he watched the collapsed Ji Xiang before him.

He remembered that Ji Xiang had mentioned that the male Muddled One was dead, but the female Muddled One was still alive. Even Zhuge Yuan couldn't possibly handle them together.

Li Huowang wasn't sure of Zhuge Yuan's true strength, but he knew one thing for sure: he was in deep trouble.

"Huowang, what happened to this eunuch?" Bai Lingmiao asked, looking around vigilantly, clearly unaware of the severity of their current situation.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and suppressed the strong unease in his heart. Whether he would live or die didn't matter to him; what mattered to him was that Bai Lingmiao couldn't get involved!

Li Huowang helped Ji Xiang up before saying with urgency, "Lord Ji Xiang! Do not be discouraged; we can still fix this! Just think about the fact that others in the bureau have survived something similar to our current situation!"

Ji Xiang looked back at Li Huowang with despair written on his face. "You don't understand. It's impossible to survive this!"

Just as Li Huowang was about to reply, gazes from all directions made him grip his sword tightly. A group of people emerged slowly from the woods, all with the exact same appearance as the creature Li Huowang had captured.

They were hunchbacks with large bellies swaying as they stared at Li Huowang and his group with their bulging fish-like eyes.

“There are newcomers again? Great!”

“That girl looks pretty, hehe...”

“Yes, and she has a pretty big butt.”

Li Huowang's expression turned fierce at the hunchbacks' remarks. He brandished his bronze coin sword and tugged at the red threads, swinging it like a whip toward the hunchbacks. However, the hunchbacks didn't avoid Li Huowang's attack and chose to take it with their thin bodies. The sharp bronze coins sliced through the hunchbacks as if it were a hot knife slicing through butter.

The hunchbacks seemed indifferent to their injuries, squirming on the ground.

“We're in no rush, and we're not going to do anything. We're just going to wait.”

“We'll wait one, two, or perhaps even three years until you become just like us.”

Li Huowang felt a shiver down their spine at the hunchbacks' words. These hunchbacks were no longer humans. They had long forgotten themselves and became monsters themselves after the Muddled Ones had spirited them away.

Li Huowang cursed inwardly and ignored the hunchbacks to lift Ji Xiang off of the ground. “Lord Ji Xiang, this is nothing, really! We're trapped, but that's it! Anyway, just think about the people waiting for you to go back home!”

Ji Xiang's eyes stirred, seemingly recalling something.

The fear and despair in Ji Xiang's eyes vanished as he said, “Yes, she's still waiting for me at home! I'm going to bring her back to the village, and I'm going to resign!”

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief. “Now that you've calmed down, Lord Ji Xiang. Can you start thinking of a way to get us out of here?”

Ji Xiang tried to stay composed by patting his cheeks vigorously while in deep contemplation. Moments later, Ji Xiang looked up and said, "One of the Muddled Ones is alive while the other is dead. The karmic obstacles in their bodies are coincidentally Yin and Yang. The Yin and Yang have blended, so we can't escape.

"We must find the living female Muddled One to escape!"

Ji Xiang became more and more composed and articulate as he continued, "Yes, that's right! We have to find the female Muddled One! We might be able to live if we kill her!"

At Ji Xiang's remark, everyone set everything aside and made a mad dash into the forest to find the so-called female Muddled One. The scenery around them peeled away as Li Huowang led Bai Lingmiao through the forest.

"Huowang, what's going on with this damned place? I've been beating the drum for quite a while now, but I still can't get any response from the Immortal families," Bai Lingmiao said, sounding frustrated.

Li Huowang wasn't surprised to hear Bai Lingmiao's remark. He knew those low-level Immortals wouldn't be helpful to them at all.

"This is like looking for a needle in a haystack. It seems that we have to use talismans and divination to aid us in our search," Li Huowang said, but he quickly realized that he had run out of yellow paper.

"Do you have any yellow paper on you?" Li Huowang asked Bai Lingmiao.

Bai Lingmiao pondered briefly before pulling out a tiny paper horse folded with yellow paper. "I use this as a Shaman. Try it out."

Li Huowang accepted the yellow paper and unfolded it. Then, he looked around and dashed toward a man peeking at them behind a tree. Soon, Li Huowang returned with a bloody skull, and he immediately started his divination.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the divination symbols. Moments later, he tossed the skull away and continued his search. Divination was usually reliable, but it was ineffective this time. Li Huowang had tried his best, but he couldn't find any reliable information from the divination symbols.

Li Huowang continued the search with Bai Lingmiao until Tuoba Danqing found them a day later.

"Come here, quick! Hong Da has already found it!" Tuoba Danqing exclaimed. Li Huowang regrouped with Tuoba Danqing, and the three ignored their exhaustion to return to where they had come from.

Upon regrouping with the others, Tuoba Danqing immediately got to work as he ruthlessly twisted the female Muddled One's head and hurled it to the ground.

Li Huowang's heart tightened as he looked around; as always, he still couldn't see anything other than darkness. The group waited for quite a while but found no changes whatsoever. Those who had been spirited away were still here.

"What's going on?" Li Huowang asked incredulously.

Just then, the bloody head of the female Muddled One moved and rolled slowly toward its body. The female Muddled One's head remained glazed, clearly lifeless, but she was undeniably alive.

A peal of jeering laughter echoed from all around them.

"Hahaha! You actually tried to kill her? It seems that you people have no idea that no one can die here."

"Do you really think that we don't want to die? We want to die, too! Living forever like this is scarier than death!"

The hunchbacks' words sent a chill down everyone's spine.

They had to kill the female Muddled One for them to escape, but no one could die here!

Just then, Bai Lingmiao pulled out Li Huowang's purple-tassel sword and slashed out, targeting Hong Da's neck. Hong Da bled profusely, but he didn't look like he was going to die.

Everyone understood their predicament just then—they were in an unresolvable deadlock.

Ji Xiang became downcast. He opened his mouth to say something, but a fist struck him right in the face.

"This is all your fault, you damn eunuch! If you hadn't brought us here to catch a Muddled One, this wouldn't have happened to us!" Tuoba Danqing roared, abandoning his sunny demeanor as well as any respect he had for his superior as he rained down punches and kicks upon Ji Xiang.

Chapter 362 - Plan

Tuoba Danqing had a complete mental breakdown, and everyone else was in bad shape as well. Liu Zongyuan fell to the ground on all fours, pounding his fists in frustration. Hong Da stood frozen in place, staring blankly into space.

Despair enveloped everyone, and the incessant jeering laughter of those who could never die became a cacophonous din. It seemed that nothing would make a difference at this point, and even death was already a luxury they could only wish for.

However, Li Huowang was different. After experiencing a variety of hardships, he developed a will that was seldom defeated by any difficulties.

Li Huowang looked around, and his gaze landed on Bai Lingmiao, whose expression was particularly fierce. Li Huowang's voice was trembling as he said, "Don't worry, I'm here. No one can harm you with me around!"

The Second Deity approached Li Huowang from behind and leaned gently on Li Huowang's back. Surprisingly, Li Huowang didn't show any negative reaction.

"Do you have a plan?" the Second Deity asked.

Bai Lingmiao looked up at Li Huowang before her. Their situation was so dire that she found it hard to believe that Li Huowang could possibly have a plan.

However, Li Huowang nodded and stared at the pitch-black dome above them. He smiled bitterly, saying, "The Immortal families can't enter this place, but there's an entity that can definitely come here."

"Who?"

"Ba-Hui—Baiyu Capital's Ba-Hui!"

Li Huowang had been to Baiyu Capital before. Even a Muddled One that had blended life and death was paltry before an entity that others dared not even imagine. Li Huowang contemplated for a while before saying, "I'm going to use the Cang-Qiang Ascension and Ba-Hui's Shou San to break this deadlock."

Li Huowang's plan seemed to be the only plan with the highest chance of success.

Bai Lingmiao's heart skipped a beat; she could still remember Li Huowang's words.

"Isn't that..." Bai Lingmiao trailed off.

"Yes, that's right," said Li Huowang before turning to look at Tuoba Danqing, who was busy creating new holes in Ji Xiang. Li Huowang then led Bai Lingmiao toward the dense forest.

The others didn't even bother following Li Huowang; perhaps it was because they didn't care where he was going, or perhaps they no longer cared about everything.

"The Cang-Qiang Ascension requires the dual suffering of the mind and body. Extreme physical pain is easy, but it's going to be difficult to find extreme mental suffering—" Li Huowang stopped upon recalling something. His eyes showed a hint of hesitation that he immediately suppressed.

Bai Lingmiao saw that and trembled, but she sounded decisive as she said, "Tell me, what do you need me to do? I can endure everything."

Li Huowang shook his head, and his lips quivered as he said, "I don't need you to do anything. I just need you to keep an eye on me because... I have to enter the hallucination to find—"

Li Huowang's eyes glimmered in intense struggle, but it was soon replaced by the light of determination the moment his gaze landed on Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang wasn't an ordinary person. He was a Strayed One. If the Muddled Ones could use their abilities, then he could definitely use his own abilities as well.

It would be the same as his first Cang-Qiang Ascension. He just had to do something in the hallucination, and that side would definitely inflict the utmost mental agony on him.

Li Huowang examined the young woman before him carefully as the two of them stood in the depths of the dark, desolate, and dense forest.

“Don’t worry; I’m going to save you from this predicament, just like back in Zephyr Temple.”

“No! You have to think of another way!” exclaimed Bai Lingmiao, rejecting his plan.

However, Li Huowang had no intention of listening to her at all.

“Li Sui, come out. I want you to be obedient and stay with your mother. I’ll be back soon,” Li Huowang muttered, and black tentacles abruptly emerged from his chest before transforming into a squirming cluster of tentacles.

“Miaomiao, don’t be afraid; this is my son,” Li Huowang explained.

This was Bai Lingmiao's first time seeing Li Sui.

"What did you say?" Bai Lingmiao’s eyes widened as she stared at the terrifying monster before her. “T-this is your son? Who's the mother?”

Li Huowang chuckled, but he didn't explain anything. He didn't have the luxury to explain as the surroundings were changing.

“Wait for me. Stand back a bit farther away, so you won’t get hurt. We can't die here, but it's still going to hurt.

Li Huowang's surroundings were melting, but the ongoing changes had become much slower than before. Eventually, Li Huowang found himself in that dark and filthy cave under the bridge.

Li Huowang looked around and took in the familiar sight for a while. Then, he stood up and rushed to the nearby riverbank to wash his face. Li Huowang stared at himself on the water's surface.

Miaomiao is waiting for me. I need to use the hallucination to find the extreme mental suffering necessary to save her! Li Huowang thought, seemingly hypnotizing himself. Li Huowang repeated it thrice before standing up. Then, he started pondering how he could accomplish his goals. However, it didn't take Li Huowang that long to receive an answer to his question. He knew just what to achieve extreme mental suffering.

Just then, Li Huowang heard footsteps outside.

Huanhuan soon appeared in Li Huowang's line of sight; she was holding a basket of steamed buns.

Huanhuan grinned upon seeing Li Huowang. "Uncle, you're awake again?"

Extreme pain and extreme mental suffering. It doesn't matter. This is all fake. Everything here is just a hallucination. Li Huowang thought as he looked around. Then, he picked up a rope from the ground and started walking toward Huanhuan.

This must be fake. Otherwise, how could this kid appear so soon when I've just returned? Yes, this must be fake. There's no need for me to hesitate. Li Huowang loomed over Huanhuan, and his right hand holding the rope trembled violently.

"Uncle?" Huanhuan muttered fearfully, taking a step back. The uncle before her seemed to have become a bit different from before.

Just then, Li Huowang deflated like a balloon and slowly exhaled all the air from his lungs.

No, this is wrong. Li Huowang turned around; his teeth chattered as he gnashed them amidst his inner turmoil. She's not going to be enough. It hasn't been that long since I've met her, so even if I kill her, the mental suffering I'll experience will not be enough. More... I need so much more than her!

Li Huowang knelt and wrote two names on the ground—Yang

Na and Sun Xiaoqin. Li Huowang's eyes filled with fear as he stared at the two names on the ground, and he even started trembling in trepidation.

This is just a hallucination—a hallucination! I transmigrated a long time ago! This isn't real!

Li Huowang raised his trembling hands, but he retracted them quickly as if he had been electrocuted. All of a sudden, Li Huowang grabbed a rock on the ground and slammed it on his own head.

Blood flowed from the wound on his head, but it wasn't enough. He smashed it on his head again and again until the blood, sweat, and tears created a grotesque mixture that made him appear extremely frightening to anyone's eyes.

This is fake—this is clearly fake! This is all a hallucination! Why the hell am I hesitating, then? Miaomiao is waiting for me—she's waiting for me to save her!

Chapter 363 - School

This is a hallucination; this is a hallucination; this is a hallucination! Li Huowang trembled and repeated to himself, seemingly trying to assert his own beliefs as he knelt on the muddy ground of the dark cave with his head covered in blood.

This scene frightened Huanhuan. The steamed buns in her hands fell to the ground as Huanhuan turned around and rushed out of the face.

Li Huowang knelt for a long time as the cave alternated between dim and bright. After three cycles of dim and bright, Li Huowang approached the nearby riverbank to wash the scabs off of his face.

Then, Li Huowang turned around and stepped out. He looked up and saw the cold light piercing between his fingers.

Meanwhile, one of the two names on the ground had been covered completely in blood, and only the words "Sun Xiaoqin" were legible.

Li Huowang could still remember where Yang Na's school was located. She had described to him the delicious street food she had eaten at the time, and they even promised to explore the streets together once Li Huowang got better.

Li Huowang's memories of Yang Na were vivid, including her mentions of events she had described only once to him.

Li Huowang cut off his own hair that had clotted together with his blood, revealing his head covered in scab. Li Huowang then took off his filthy old clothes and put on clean clothes that he had dried in the sun.

Li Huowang could finally walk among other people without anyone pointing fingers at him, as he looked like a completely ordinary individual. Li Huowang took advantage of the night and sneaked into the train station. He disguised himself as someone seeing a relative off with luggage.

The dazed Li Huowang ended up falling asleep on the train. When he woke up once again, he found himself in the city where Yang Na lived.

Li Huowang glanced at the sign hanging above the bus stop and walked slowly in the direction of the university. Li Huowang walked at a snail's pace as if he were walking on an endless road.

However, Li Huowang knew that he would one day arrive at his destination.

Li Huowang found himself sitting on a plastic stool in a barbecue shop, staring blankly at the campus gate in the distance. His unusual behavior attracted quite a few curious glances.

What are you waiting for? This is just a hallucination! Yang Na is fake! Get up and take action! I can't give up on reality to live in a hallucination! Do you really want Miaomiao to become one of them?! I've transmigrated long ago, so Yang Na is going to be fine; she's living a great life in that world! A lunatic can't obstruct her from achieving happiness!

What are you waiting for? Go on! You're the reason behind Miaomiao's plight. I thought you wanted to save her?

Li Huowang struggled against his inner turmoil. He truly wished that someone would help him overcome his dilemma so that he would no longer be so indecisive.

"Hey, student. Are you okay?" the chubby female boss asked. She had approached Li Huowang at some point. "You look rather pale."

Li Huowang remained indifferent, completely immersed in his own world.

The chubby lady boss shrugged and wiped the table in front of Li Huowang clean with a cloth. She turned around and was about to attend to her own business when a scream burst out from the distant campus.

The chubby lady boss turned and found students running out of the campus in a panic.

“Huh? What’s going on?” asked the chubby lady boss.

However, the students ignored the chubby lady boss, prompting her to stand in the way of a male student, who was a frequent customer of her barbeque shop.

“What’s going on, Fatty?” the chubby lady boss asked.

“Call the police, Sister Liu! Have you heard of the gang that recently robbed a bank? They’re on our campus right now, and they barged into the female dorms! One of them even has a gun!”

Li Huowang turned slowly to the student and smiled. It can't get any faker than this. I guess this is really a hallucination. An incident like this is just a bit too rare. Li Huowang finally set aside his misgivings and stood up, walking toward the gate.

Li Huowang walked along the main road, sweeping his gaze across the fleeing female students in hopes of seeing a familiar face among them.

The tremors running through Li Huowang got even stronger the closer he got to the university. Li Huowang stopped and decided to attempt to address the trembling by turning to the blooming magnolia tree on his left, saying, “Miaomiao, I’ll definitely attain the necessary extreme mental suffering.

“If I somehow became paralyzed from the mental suffering, then please help me inflict on me extreme physical pain. It’s not going to be difficult. Do you still remember that person who dug his throat out? Just follow what he did and do it on me.”

Li Huowang still felt a little worried, so he turned to the fallen bicycle next to him and said, “Li Sui, you better not stop Miaomiao if she has to do what I said, right? She’s not going to hurt me. She just has to do it to help us escape from that damned place.”

“No matter what appears, remember to keep following me. I’ll save whoever I can from the Surveillance Bureau. If I can’t save those who can still be saved, then forget it.”

The university was huge, and Li Huowang was struggling to find Yang Na. When he reached the female dormitory, the university was already filled with police sirens.

Li Huowang looked up at the tall building before him and heard roars from inside the building. It seemed that hundreds of female students had been trapped in the upper floors of the building.

This is a hallucination—this is all a hallucination! Li Huowang exclaimed to himself as he stepped past the iron gates. The first and second floors were empty, as all the female students living on those floors had already escaped. Li Huowang walked up the stairs until he stumbled upon two men carrying a young woman downstairs.

Li Huowang nodded at them and stepped aside to make space for them to walk past him. Li Huowang was planning to go upstairs, so there was no need for him to stop here.

“Stop! I told you to stop! Don’t come over here! Do you really think that I have no idea what you’re up to? You’re an undercover, aren’t you? I could tell from a mile away!” one of the two men screamed. He was a bald man, and he pointed the dagger in his hand at the young woman’s neck.

Despite the bravado, however, the bald man seemed extremely nervous. Li Huowang could tell from the bald man’s irregular breathing.

“We want three SUVs with full tanks! And five million—No, ten million! Police officers and anyone related to them are not allowed to approach this building.

“You have one hour to prepare everything we need, and you better hurry up because we’re going to kill one person every thirty minutes!”

Li Huowang ignored the bald man and turned to the disheveled young woman in the bald man's arms, asking, "Are you familiar with Yang Na? Which floor does she live on?"

The young woman was so scared of everything that was happening to her that she couldn't speak at all amidst her anguished and terrified sobbing.

Li Huowang didn't mind it and was about to continue his journey upstairs.

"Damn it, stay there!" someone screamed and pointed a rusty pistol from the bottom nose of the stairs directly above the landing. The rusty pistol was aimed at Li Huowang's head.

Li Huowang looked up and saw a tall, gloomy-looking man walking downstairs while pointing the same rusty pistol at Li Huowang.

"Can you not see what's in my hands? It's a gun!"

Chapter 364 - Suffering

Li Huowang chuckled and shook his head. Then, he turned to the wall next to him and said, "Miaomiao, take Li Sui a little farther away. You can't die here, but it's still better to be safe than sorry."

"Who the heck are you speaking to?! Are you wearing a Bluetooth earphone? Take it off!"

"Do you have any idea just how bad my mood is right now? I'm on the verge of exploding right now," Li Huowang said; his exhausted voice echoed in the spacious stairwell.

Li Huowang's words had yet to finish echoing when he flipped his hand, revealing a dagger. Li Huowang's expression became ferocious as he stomped his feet on the ground and rushed at the trio before him, akin to a hungry tiger pouncing on its prey.

Bang!

A gunshot echoed, wounding Li Huowang. Li Huowang's blood scatted haphazardly everywhere, but the pain only made Li Huowang feel excited rather than afraid.

A cold light flashed as the hand of the tall, gloomy-looking man flew away, along with his gun and fresh blood. The tall, gloomy-looking man let loose a piercing scream, but it was immediately silenced by Li Huowang lacerating his throat.

A gurgling noise soon followed as the tall, gloomy-looking man collapsed to the floor.

The scene scared the remaining two men out of their wits. They held the young woman firmly and roared, "Don't come over! We have a hostage!"

"That's only going to work on a real police officer! In this world of yours, I am nothing but a madman!" Li Huowang exclaimed.

The blood that had pooled on the floor soaked Li Huowang's feet, but Li Huowang remained undeterred. He ignored the two men and the young woman, proceeding to walk up the stairs with a dagger stuck in his chest.

Li Huowang's voice sounded hoarse, akin to a howling ghost, as he exclaimed, "I'm sorry, Yang Na! But I'm here... here to find you!"

Li Huowang searched every single room on each floor. Upon arriving on the fourth floor, he finally found the four remaining hostage takers.

Li Huowang tilted his head and swept his gaze across the necks of each of the four men while seemingly indifferent to the hole in his chest.

The four men were afraid of Li Huowang. Even with hostages and weapons in their hands, they felt like they were mere prey before the blood-soaked Li Huowang.

Just then, the weakest and most timid among the four men let go of the young woman in his arms and said, "Can we surrender? We really didn't do much! I wasn't even willing to rob that bank. Leopard forced me to do it, and he's the mastermind!"

Li Huowang pulled out the dagger sticking out of his chest and laughed maniacally.

Tears then streamed down his cheeks as he rushed toward the four men. There was a stark difference between murderers and those who had yet to kill people. Dark-red blood soon dripped down the stairs, flowing down every step of the staircase.

Li Huowang panted heavily as he sat on two corpses. He was injured, and pain radiated all over him. Li Huowang reckoned that either the nerve or the tendon of his right arm had been severed, as he was having issues lifting it.

"Huo... Huowang?"

Li Huowang shuddered upon hearing the familiar voice, and he suddenly felt like leaving and running away as far as possible. However, Li Huowang immediately suppressed the urge to run away by muttering to himself that he was in a hallucination. He couldn't falter here, as Bai Lingmiao had yet to escape the Muddled One's prison.

Having made up his mind, Li Huowang looked up and saw Yang Na.

Yang Na was wearing an exquisite jade earring on her right ear—it was a gift that Li Huowang had entrusted to his mother to give to Yang Na on her birthday.

“Sniff...! Huowang! What happened? How come you're seriously injured?!” Yang Na exclaimed, rushing over to Li Huowang's side with tears streaming down her face. She cast a helpless gaze upon Li Huowang's wounds. Then, she tried to stem the bleeding by putting pressure on the wounds with her hands, but it wasn't working at all.

This is fake, this is fake, this is fake... Li Huowang thought as he tightened his grip on the dagger in his left hand. He inhaled sharply and was about to raise the dagger when Yang Na screamed, "Why did you even come here to save me?! Are you crazy?! Why did you even come here?! How am I supposed to forget you now?"

Yang Na's words made Li Huowang feel as if the dagger in his hand weighed a ton, and Li Huowang almost gave up on his goal.

However, Li Huowang chose to remain true to his goal and used all of his willpower to resist the agonizing pain, all for the sake of thrusting the dagger in his hand toward Yang Na's chest.

"AAAH!!!" Li Huowang exclaimed as the dagger pierced Yang Na's thick sweater and then her skin.

Yang Na blinked at the sharp pain, and her eyes quivered as she stared at Li Huowang.

However, her eyes shone not in fear, disappointment, or fury. Her gaze held nothing but deep grievances as she muttered, "Huowang, why?"

Yang Na's anguished gaze was like a sharp dagger that pierced Li Huowang's heart.

No, it was way more painful than a stab in the heart.

Li Huowang was about to put more strength into his hands when he suddenly felt a burning pain envelop his throat. The pain intensified rapidly, and the scenery around him distorted.

Clang!

The dagger in Li Huowang's hands fell to the floor as he trembled violently under the extreme pain.

Yang Na ignored her own wound and rushed over to pull the falling Li Huowang into her arms.

Boom!

The scenery peeled away, and Li Huowang found himself in a pitch-black forest. He was kneeling, and the red Profound Records were right in front of him. In addition, there seemed to be something nestled within the bamboo slips.

Just then, a tongue peeked out of the bamboo slips. The Profound Records came to life as the tongue started speaking, "A tongue to turn the wheel of reincarnation! An eyelash for the boundless universe! Words cannot describe the intricacies of the realm!

"The sinister Heavens reveal what was hidden! My Master, the highest authority! Who dares disturb it?!"

The Profound Records' voice made Li Huowang feel as if he was transcending the boundaries of human perception, allowing him to sense Ba-Hui's existence. Li Huowang also managed to confirm that the Profound Records was indeed alive.

Li Huowang touched the red bamboo slips, which had transformed into red wriggling worms. Li Huowang looked up and saw a rift in the pitch-black dome. A colossal eyeball that appeared to be larger than the sky itself peered inside through the rift.

The eyeball wasn't Ba-Hui. Li Huowang could feel Ba-Hui, but it was distant. Li Huowang estimated that Ba-Hui was still in the Baiyu Capital.

The eyeball soon vanished, allowing Li Huowang to sense Ba-Hui—no, see Ba-Hui.

Li Huowang saw Ba-Hui receiving a portion of his agony, and an extreme agonizing pain descended, interweaving with Li Huowang's agony before bursting out in all directions.

Soon, everything felt the extreme agonizing pain, including Bai Lingmiao and those hunchbacks. Eventually, the extreme agonizing pain pervaded the trees, the soil, and even the air, which trembled ever so slightly in pain.

Li Huowang lifted his hands, and the pain intensified. Every new wave of pain was under Li Huowang's control. Li Huowang's transcended perception smelt two eyeballs. One black, one white, intertwined in harmony. There were no boundaries between the two eyeballs, as their boundary canceled each other out.

Li Huowang was smack in the middle of the two eyeballs. Li Huowang raised his hands higher, peeling away all the pain from himself and poured all of it onto the two eyeballs.

Chapter 365 - Sky

Li Huowang stared blankly; he could sense everything around him, but he could no longer feel any pain. His transcended perception allowed him to feel that the fused Yin and Yang had split apart.

It wasn't because Yang was missing; it was all because the Yin had come alive. Only living beings could feel pain, so the dead Muddled One came alive and let out a heart-curdling scream, just like the screaming rocks and trees.

Li Huowang staggered when he tried to walk. He was utterly exhausted and could only stagger forward. Just then, several pitch-black tentacles reached out to support him before becoming pillars sticking out of the ground for Li Huowang to lean against.

"Dad..." Li Sui tore open the wound in Li Huowang's chest and burrowed inside of it.

Li Huowang's mouth fluttered open as he tried to say something, but all that came out of his mouth was blood; he couldn't make any noises at all. Li Huowang raised his right hand, which had been stripped off of its nail, and pointed south. He could feel a rift somewhere south.

Bai Lingmiao instantly understood what Li Huowang was trying to say. She picked up the Profound Records on the floor and carried Li Huowang to head south along with the Second Deity's help.

They had just taken a few steps when the world suddenly inverted, sending them plummeting straight toward the rift in the pitch-black dome below them. When they passed through the rift, the piercing sunlight made everyone squint.

The world inside the dome was pitch-black, but daybreak had fallen outside.

They were finally out!

The Second Deity spun upon realizing that they were getting closer and closer to the ground. She took Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao in her arms and braced for impact.

Boom!

A deafening noise echoed as they landed harshly on the ground.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang's merged perception separated slowly as Ba-Hui averted its gaze on him. Li Huowang's sense of pain also returned.

"Huowang! Are you okay? Listen to me!"

Li Huowang heard a familiar voice. He opened his eyes and saw Bai Lingmiao, but Yang Na's face overlapped with Bai Lingmiao's face. Their faces overlapped as if they had become one person, and their mouths opened at the same time as they shouted at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was so disoriented by the sight that he couldn't distinguish whether he was in reality or he was back in that hallucination.

"Huowang!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed, patting Li Huowang's cheeks lightly with her soft hand. However, Li Huowang didn't respond.

Bai Lingmiao held her whip and got ready to beat the drum on her waist to ask for Granny Bai's help.

However, Li Huowang grabbed Bai Lingmiao's hand and shook his head slightly. Li Huowang had finally distinguished that he was in reality.

Bai Lingmiao was standing before him, and Yang Na wasn't here. Bai Lingmiao turned and sprawled out on the ground. As he gasped heavily, some of his flesh and blood slid out from the hole in his mouth and onto the ground.

Li Huowang mustered all of his remaining energy to raise his head and look around. He saw the Profound Records lying in the distance, stained with mud, and then he started crawling toward it.

Bai Lingmiao quickly ran over to fetch the red bamboo slips still dripping with blood.

Li Huowang extended his hand and opened up the Profound Records. The bloody tongue and the throat appeared before him.

Li Huowang weakly raised his hand and opened his mouth wide before raising the Profound Records and dropping it directly into the horrifying hole in his mouth.

Soon afterward, the tentacles burrowed out from Li Huowang's mouth and wrapped around Li Huowang's tongue and organs. The tentacles rearranged and bound Li Huowang's organs into their rightful positions.

"It's good that you're fine. You really scared the hell out of me!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed as she embraced Li Huowang.

Li Huowang thought back to his experience in the hallucination and forced a smile. He reached out to hug Bai Lingmiao and controlled his icy tongue as he coughed. "Why.. did you... suddenly... do it?"

He had yet to kill Yang Na in the hallucination, but Bai Lingmiao had already taken the initiative to perform the Cang-Qiang Ascension.

"You told me to make a move once you could no longer take it? I saw that you were about to pass out, so I made a move. Did I do something wrong?"

Li Huowang shook his head. "No, It's fine..."

Yang Na was injured, but she was still alive.

"Thank you... Miaomiao..." Li Huowang kissed Bai Lingmiao on the neck. Her timely intervention had saved Yang Na. Otherwise, his attack would have pierced though, if things had gone according to his plan.

Li Huowang truly didn't understand why he cared so much about something that was clearly fake, but the thought that Yang Na was still alive made him happier than anything.

Li Huowang finally understood that Ba-Hui only wanted suffering, not death. The other Simings were a different story. Perhaps that giant white-boned Bodhisattva or something else would want death.

Yang Na's death wasn't necessary. The heart-wrenching pain that had inundated him when he decided to kill Yang Na was enough to perform the Cang-Qiang Ascension.

“Yang Na, I’m sorry..” Li Huowang muttered dazedly, “I scarred your chest. You should hurry and seek medical help...”

Bai Lingmiao frowned at Li Huowang's words, but she did not say anything. Bai Lingmiao struggled to help Li Huowang up, and the two started walking away. Their priority was to leave this eerie place.

Li Huowang finally managed to take a good look around. However, he couldn't see anything but soil, which was a completely different scenery from what he had been expecting.

“Where are we? Haven't we already escaped?!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He looked ahead and saw a dense forest up ahead. Unfortunately, the trees were extremely tall with thick canopies. They were on a distant cliff as well.

As far as Li Huowang could remember, there weren't supposed to be any cliffs or tall mountains here.

A cliff? Why is there a cliff here? Li Huowang looked around and noticed towering cliffs, but he soon realized that they weren't cliffs. They were at the bottom, while the surface was above them. In other words, they were in the middle of an expansive basin.

The moment the living and dead Muddled Ones made contact, they had actually not just spirited them away. They had also dug roughly a meter deep and spirited away everything in the vicinity for miles.

“Huowang, look! What’s that in the sky?!” Bai Lingmiao exclaimed.

Li Huowang looked up with great difficulty and found that the cloudless sky above seemed to be missing a piece for some reason. Li Huowang quickly realized that they had come from that missing piece, and it was a pitch-black dome at the time.

“Can this really be the doing of a Muddled One...” Li Huowang was stupefied, and he couldn't help but question, “What exactly is a Muddled One? How come when a living and a dead Muddled One make contact, they can spirit away even the sky?”

Chapter 366 - Carriage

Li Huowang finally understood what it meant to face trouble that even Zhuge Yuan would find difficult to handle.

What exactly were Muddled Ones? How could they affect both heaven and earth? Li Huowang thought. He could still remember Ji Xiang telling him that Muddled Ones and Strayed Ones were a troublesome bunch. In other words, Strayed Ones had an ability comparable to that of Muddled Ones.

What is my ability? Do I have the ability to change positions, or is it my ability to project my body's illusion? No, no, no... Li Huowang shook his head vigorously. His ability was insignificant compared to the Muddled Ones' ability to spirit away a chunk of the sky.

His ability was not even worthy of being compared to the Muddled Ones' ability.

However, Li Huowang believed that he had a latent ability as a Strayed One. Perhaps his latent ability was comparable to the Muddled Ones'.

Upon recalling the condition of the male and female Muddled Ones, however, Li Huowang felt complicated emotions. Was it really a good thing to have such a powerful ability?

Li Huowang had no idea, but one thing was for sure—he had never stumbled upon something good in this cruel world. Li Huowang also didn't really think that he would stumble upon something good without paying the price.

Perhaps he would live a life more miserable than living as a Muddled One the moment he awakened his latent ability.

"Huowang, someone falling over there! One of them looks like that old eunuch!"

Li Huowang turned and saw a few black dots falling from the torn sky.

The torn sky was also becoming more and more unstable as time went on.

Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao found Ji Xiang in the middle of emaciated corpses. Ji Xiang held the corpse of the male Muddled One in his arms, unwilling to let go despite the injury to his head.

Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao eventually found the others. Through the scars on his hands, Li Huowang found that one person was missing—Tuoba Danqing. It seemed that Tuoba Danqing had been thoroughly spirited away by either the male or the female Muddled One. In other words, he would never be able to return.

Li Huowang asked for an explanation, and he heard the same story from the others. Tuoba Danqing was too slow while they were escaping, and he was ultimately left behind.

Although Li Huowang was a bit skeptical, he chose to believe them, as they were together and Tuoba Danqing was the only one missing.

Soon, Li Huowang, Liu Zongyuan, Hong Da, and Bai Lingmiao found themselves at the relay station located in Yinling City. They bid farewell to Ji Xiang, who had decided to return to the capital.

“I’m leaving now. You guys should go back first. I’ll send you guys a letter once I’m back in the capital. Don’t worry; the rewards are definitely going to be satisfactory. I’ll confront the management first before anyone else if they dare to short-change us! We almost died, so we’re not going to let them short-change us!”

After saying those righteous words, Ji Xiang turned to Li Huowang holding Bai Lingmiao’s hand. Ji Xiang thought briefly before reaching into his sleeve and pulling out the bronze coin veil. Then, Ji Xiang held it out to Li Huowang.

“Er Jiu, I believe this belongs to you. I saw it by chance when we were fleeing, so I picked it up for you,” said Ji Xiang, sounding much more amiable than before.

Li Huowang had intentionally distanced himself from Ji Xiang and the others to perform the Cang-Qiang Ascension, so there was no way they would know what Li Huowang had done.

Despite that, Ji Xiang's attitude toward Li Huowang changed greatly for some reason, but it wasn't a sense of camaraderie that brought the two men closer. It was more like Ji Xiang regarded Li Huowang with respect and a hint of fear.

Ji Xiang took advantage of the opportunity and lowered his voice, saying, "Rest assured, I'll fulfill my promise to you. In ten days to half a month, I will send you what you want using a carrier pigeon."

"Farewell, Lord Ji Xiang," Li Huowang said, accepting the bronze coin veil and wearing it. He already had Zhuge Yuan's black spindle, which was much more useful than the bronze coin veil, but an extra layer of insurance wouldn't hurt.

"You saved our lives, and we owe you this favor. My position will become yours."

Li Huowang let go of Bai Lingmiao's hand and nudged her gently to the side before approaching Ji Xiang. Then, he leaned closer into Ji Xiang's ear, whispering, "Lord Ji Xiang, if you really want to repay me, then please introduce me to those military families. I'm in urgent need of such connections."

Returning Bai Lingmiao to her original state was even more important than getting rid of the Strayed One. Li Huowang's survival didn't matter, as he had treated her badly enough.

"Okay, okay, I understand," Ji Xiang beamed. He pulled out a red silk scarf from his sleeves and wiped away the dust on Li Huowang's robes. Then, he got onto the carriage.

The sound of horse hooves echoed and slowly faded away as Ji Xiang disappeared into the distance in the carriage, which was also carrying a Muddled One's corpse.

The remaining three exchanged glances.

Liu Zongyuan scratched his head and said, "I hear there's a new brothel on the eastern side of the city, so how about—"

The other two turned around and left before he could finish.

The severely injured Li Huowang sat in a carriage that was slowly making its way to an inn. Li Huowang took a slow breath as he sprawled out on the soft cotton bed. They had endured all kinds of hardships for a Muddled One, and it was great that they had completed their objective.

At this point, Li Huowang could only wait for Ji Xiang's carrier pigeon.

At last, Li Huowang had taken a big step forward in his plan. Moreover, Ji Xiang owed him a huge favor. After all, if it hadn't been for Li Huowang, Ji Xiang would have been doomed. Li Huowang knew that Ji Xiang's favor would be of huge help as long as he used it in the right way.

"Sniff, sniff!" Bun placed its head gently on Li Huowang's elbow. It seemed to have sensed that Li Huowang was seriously injured, and its ears seemed to droop in anguish.

Just then, two dark fingers grabbed Bun by its scruff and hurled it out the carriage.

"Huowang, why don't you throw away those bamboo slips? You get injured every time you use them. Aren't they painful to use? I can't believe you've been using them despite that," Bai Lingmiao said. She picked up a pillow from the side and placed it behind her head.

Li Huowang smiled lightly while staring at Bai Lingmiao's face, "Yes, I'm in pain. I'm in so much pain that I feel like dying. However, Miaomiao, don't you think that the Profound Records is the easiest to use? Just imagine cultivating one of those messy things."

Bai Lingmiao cast a contemptuous gaze at Li Huowang. "Why don't you give it a try? You won't know until you try. At this rate, I'm afraid you'll die if something goes wrong."

"Die..." Li Huowang muttered. He exhaled slowly, and his eyes showed no fear as he said, "There's nothing scary about death."

Bai Lingmiao seemed to have noticed Li Huowang's intentions to die, so she pounced on Li Huowang like a cheetah; her dark fingers grabbed Li Huowang's neck, and she stared into his eyes as if she were a wild beast.

"You still want to die? This always happens every time you use the Cang-Qiang Ascension! Do you still consider yourself a man? Why do you want to take the easy way out? Have you already forgotten how you killed my entire family?!"

"You still have to pay me back for the rest of your life, so you are not allowed to die!"

Li Huowang nodded gently, and Bai Lingmiao leaned over, biting Li Huowang's shoulder. Moments later, she stood up, leaving a bloody row of teeth markings.

The atmosphere inside the carriage was oppressive.

Bun had stuck its head out of the window, but it immediately retreated.

"Miaomiao, I met a Shaman, and his name is Shen Tugang," said Li Huowang. Then, he told Bai Lingmiao about Shen Tugang's unique way of interacting with the Immortal families.

As their conversation went on, the atmosphere in the carriage warmed up slowly.

Chapter 367 - Shaman

A spacious carriage slowly rolled down the streets of Yinling City, heading to the inn where Li Huowang was staying.

Li Huowang covered in injuries was inside the carriage. He turned to Bai Lingmiao and calmly said, "If the Immortal families are going to follow you for your entire life, anyway, then you'd be better off using Shen Tugang's method rather than allowing them to use you as a mere laborer.

"However, his method is risky, and whether or not to use it depends on your situation."

Bai Lingmiao was currently not under any threat by the Immortal families, but Li Huowang couldn't help but worry about her upon recalling Li Zhi's words.

Bai Lingmiao stared at Li Huowang in surprise. "Does the man's lyrics really look down on the Immortal families? Just what are the lyrics?"

Li Huowang pondered briefly over Shen Tugang's words before saying, "Drive away the wolves and devour the tigers. The Immortal families are a bunch of creatures that bully the weak and fear the strong. Intimidate them, and you can negotiate with them."

"What did Shen Tugang do to intimidate the Immortal families?" asked Bai Lingmiao with a solemn expression.

"He decided to rear evil spirits," Li Huowang replied, "However, he didn't go into the specifics, but there's no way he would have told me about it, as it's a cultivation that is closely intertwined with his own life and death."

Bai Lingmiao silently repeated his words with a thoughtful look.

"Shen Tugang said it's like balancing something almost equally heavy on both sides. Neither can be too heavy or light. Both sides can be employed together if done properly, but if done improperly, it can be dangerous.”

Li Huowang reached out and patted Bai Lingmiao’s hand.

“Don’t worry, I’ll come and help you once I’m done.”

Li Huowang had to prioritize things, and he felt that returning Bai Lingmiao’s personality back to her original personality was the top priority.

Bai Lingmiao’s face showed a hint of distress upon seeing Li Huowang’s torn right hand.

Bai Lingmiao pulled her hand away and said, “No need. It’s useless for me. I’m fine now, and the Immortal families haven’t really done much to me.”

“Really?” Li Huowang stared at the black scar on Bai Lingmiao’s fair neck.

“Why would I lie to you? You should be more concerned about yourself,” said Bai Lingmiao, changing the topic.

The Immortal families were plotting against her, but she had no plans of telling Li Huowang about it. Li Huowang had suffered enough, and she believed that there was no need to make him go through even more suffering.

Bai Lingmiao believed that the method Li Huowang had mentioned was worthy of pondering over.

“Don’t say things like that. It’s better to be prepared than sorry. I’ll pay attention on your end. If the Immortal families cause you any trouble, I want you to let me know as soon as possible.”

The carriage came to a stop just then, as they had arrived at the inn. The Second Deity bent down and carried Li Huowang off the carriage.

The two walked upstairs amidst the strange gazes of the people in the lobby. The Second Deity walked into the room and closed the door to the room.

“How about you come back to Cowheart Village with me? I'm sure everyone has been waiting for you,” Bai Lingmiao said, looking down at Li Huowang on the bed.

Li Huowang thought about it, but he eventually shook his head and said, “No, I'm just going to wait here. I would miss Ji Xian's message if I were to go back to Cowheart Village.”

In addition, Li Huowang had no intentions of getting involved with others. The best outcome for them was to live a peaceful life, and if Li Huowang were to get involved with them, they would never be able to live a peaceful life.

There were already enough people who had died by his side.

Bai Lingmiao's lips curved into a smile just then. She then took off her clothes and lowered her head to kiss Li Huowang.

“I'm still injured...” Li Huowang muttered, sounding in pain.

“Heh, that makes it even better. You can't die, after all. Also, you still haven't told me who Yang Na is!” Bai Lingmiao exclaimed.

Soon, the thin threads keeping Li Huowang's wounds together tore one by one. After a long time, Bai Lingmiao lay spread eagle on the bloodstained bed with her left foot on Li Huowang's chest. She was gasping for breath with a soft smile.

Li Huowang was about to say something when Bai Lingmiao lifted her slender left leg and smacked it down Li Huowang's chest, making the latter exhale sharply.

“Do you really think I don't know the matter between you and the Second Deity? Now there's Yang Na. You have too many women, Li Huowang,” Bai Lingmiao said, sounding resentful. It seemed that she wanted to take revenge on Li Huowang.

Li Huowang noticed that Bai Lingmiao brimming with killing intent, and Bai Lingmiao with nary a trace of killing intent had markedly different reactions in the face of the same situation.

Li Huowang caressed Bai Lingmiao's leg without saying anything.

Li Huowang closed his eyes slowly and was about to drift off when Bai Lingmiao suddenly said, "The Second Deity is a part of me. If I die someday, you can treat the Second Deity as myself. However, that Yang Na nonsense is unacceptable!"

"If she dares to appear before you, then don't blame me for not showing any mercy!"

Li Huowang looked helpless as he said, "Yang Na exists solely in my hallucination. Are you jealous of a mere illusion?"

Just then, Li Huowang realized that Bai Lingmiao had become the Second Deity. The Second Deity wasn't wearing that red veil, and her peculiar appearance was completely exposed to Li Huowang.

Her slender mouth opened slightly, and a voice filled with grievances echoed soon afterward. "Senior Li..."

Li Huowang was stunned, and he felt as if the past Bai Lingmiao was right before him.

"Senior Li..." Tears flowed from the five eyes of the Second Deity, and she appeared like a puppy that had been bullied as she choked up in tears while in Li Huowang's embrace.

"Miaomiao? Is that really you?" Li Huowang muttered, but he felt a shiver down his spine upon coming up with a terrifying idea. Could it be that Bai Lingmiao had failed to absorb the killing intent and that she had been replaced by the Second Deity?

Was she forced to become the Second Deity?

While holding the Second Deity in his arms, Li Huowang cast a fierce gaze at the empty room and shouted, "Second Deity! Come out and tell me what's going on!"

Li Huowang realized just then that the hairy body of the Second Deity had become smooth and soft.

"Main Deity, Second Deity, is there any difference?" Bai Lingmiao asked. She was still in Li Huowang's embrace and was staring at Li Huowang seductively with her pink pupils. "Do you really care about who you use? You're not picky, anyway."

"Tell me... who are you?" Li Huowang asked with a solemn expression. Despite his injuries, he looked exceptionally intimidating.

Chapter 368 - Hope

Bai Lingmiao smiled upon seeing Li Huowang's terrified look. She shifted to a more comfortable position in his arms and rubbed her head gently against his chest.

“It’s funny to see you so scared. Lie down, and I’ll explain things to you,” Bai Lingmiao said.

Li Huowang's body relaxed, but his heart was still pounding madly against his chest.

Was the Bai Lingmiao before him the Main Deity or the Second Deity?

He had to know before he could determine what to do next.

Bai Lingmiao squinted, and then she burst into laughter.

“Why are you laughing? Hurry and explain!”

“Well, I don’t know how to explain it to you; it’s difficult to put into words.”

“Then, keep it as simple as possible. The simpler, the better.”

Bai Lingmiao pondered briefly before asking, “Huowang, do you know what’s inside the human body? What are humans made of?”

Li Huowang frowned unconsciously. He couldn't understand what she was trying to explain with such a nonsensical question.

“Ah~ Huowang, guess~” Bai Lingmiao said coyly, which made Li Huowang feel uncomfortable. Bai Lingmiao had never been the type to behave like this.

“Are you talking about the physical mortal body?”

“Nooope,” Bai Lingmiao shook her head and said, “How should I put it? Let's just say that humans are made of ten emotions and eight sufferings. The ten emotions are joy, anger, sorrow, greed, hatred, infatuation, fear, love, and evil^[1], and the eight sufferings are birth, aging, sickness, death, resentment, separation from loved ones, unfulfilled desires, and the dominance of the five aggregates.”

“Everyone has varying degrees of intensity of the ten emotions and eight sufferings, but they all exist. Your identity and your actions are spurred by those things.”

Li Huowang’s heart quivered. “Who told you that? The Immortal families?”

“Why are you in such a hurry? Let me finish,” Bai Lingmiao said, glaring in displeasure at Li Huowang before continuing, “Those who are not making use of their ten emotions and eight sufferings still have those—they exist but are hidden.”

“Ordinary people can hide them just fine, but Shamans are different. Most Shamans have two sides—a Main Deity and a Second Deity.”

Li Huowang glanced at the two girls on his left and right and urged Bai Lingmiao to continue.

“Though we share the eight sufferings, the ten emotions are separate. Back then, the Immortal families used my hidden ten emotions and combined them with some of their scattered things to create the Second Deity.”

“That means...”

“It means we’re one person. Our memories are a bit different from each other, but we are indeed both Bai Lingmiao. The killing intent is making me make use of more joy, anger, hatred, evil, and greed, allowing her to have less of them.”

“The Second Deity used them, as the past Bai Lingmiao wasn’t really making use of her joy, anger, hatred, evil, and greed.”

Li Huowang looked at the faces right before him. His mind was in a mess, as it was the first time he had heard of something like this.

“Who told you that? Was it the Immortal families? Don’t trust them; they could be deceiving you for all we know!”

"The Immortal families aren't the Sitting Oblivion Dao. They're not going to have fun fooling you with knowledge that everyone probably knows," Hong Zhong said upon appearing out of nowhere.

Li Huowang instantly covered Bai Lingmiao with a blanket the moment he saw Hong Zhong before asking, "Are you aware of the so-called ten emotions and eight sufferings, too?"

"How cute, you're actually asking something that is common knowledge. Aren't you hiding in the Surveillance Bureau? Ask the people there, and you'll know whether I'm speaking the truth or not," Hong Zhong replied.

Li Huowang had spent so much time in this world, but it was his first time hearing the so-called ten emotions and eight sufferings.

I think Luoism had a Nascent Soul kid who liked talking about all these, but I wasn't really paying any attention. Li Huowang could still remember that the goal of cultivation was to escape from the ten emotions and eight sufferings.

"So, Huowang, do you finally understand? I have just a bit more joy, anger, hatred, evil, and greed. Bai Lingmiao is still Bai Lingmiao. I'm the freer and better Bai Lingmiao!"

"No, the original Bai Lingmiao is the only Bai Lingmiao that I know!"

Bai Lingmiao wasn't agitated at all, and she pointed at the Second Deity next to her before saying, "Then, that's your Bai Lingmiao right there. She's that obedient, indecisive, and weak Bai Lingmiao."

Li Huowang turned to look at the Second Deity. When he saw her pitiful beast eyes along with that familiar yet foreign gaze, Li Huowang unconsciously reached out to embrace her.

"All right, you two should go on. I'll give you some space," Bai Lingmiao said, putting on her belly band as well as revealing pants. She then pulled apart the curtain and left.

The cold snake scales prickled Li Huowang, but he didn't flinch as he pressed his face against it.

“Don't worry; I'm going to turn you back! I promise!” Li Huowang vowed.

Li Huowang gradually recovered under the care of Bai Lingmiao and the Second Deity.

However, Li Huowang became more and more restless with every passing day. He still hadn't heard anything from Ji Xiang, and Li Huowang was starting to get worried that something had happened to Ji Xiang.

Li Huowang woke up to another day. He sat up on the bed, and a foot kicked him almost immediately.

“You're getting really annoying! You woke me up again!”

Li Huowang didn't respond. He had gotten used to it long ago. He pulled apart the blanket, got up, and quickly covered the blanket again to make sure that the warmth wouldn't escape.

Li Huowang then opened the window and used it to climb onto the roof. He patted his abdomen to shake off the dust on his hands before taking out an enlightenment book.

A tentacle with a pair of eyes burrowed out of his navel and read the book with Li Huowang. Li Huowang listened quietly to the voice in his ears that had completely taken over his own reading. Li Huowang realized that the book was about to accomplish its task and that he would soon have to find something else to teach Li Sui.

The issue was what would he teach Li Sui. Li Huowang could only teach Li Sui using these enlightenment books, as advanced and obscure literature was beyond him.

Should I just forget it? It's not like I'm planning to let him take the imperial examination. He can speak clearly, and our relationship has become more harmonious. I've already achieved my previous goals.

“Dad, I want to learn this,” Li Sui said, showing Li Huowang a piece of turmeric paper with his tentacle.

“You want to learn to draw talismans?” Li Huowang wasn't sure whether Li Sui could use them, but he found it strange to have a tentacle monster draw talismans for him.

While Li Huowang was hesitating, a black shadow fled across him from above.

Li Huowang looked up, and a stack of letters fell from the sky.

“Those are...” Li Huowang's heart thumped. He snatched them out of mid-air and opened them to see the greetings with the name Er Jiu at the start. Li Huowang's pupils constricted. This was what Ji Xiang had promised me!

Li Huowang read every single word, looking for the words “Bei Feng.”

Li Huowang's eyes darted left and right, and his gaze soon came to an abrupt halt as his breathing turned into ragged pants. Li Huowang's sweat drenched the paper in his hand as he muttered, “It's been two months since we parted in Yinling, and today...”

The records of the Surveillance Bureau stated that Sitting Oblivion Dao's Bei Feng was just like Li Huowang—a Strayed One!”

It was precisely because he was a Strayed One that he managed to make use of the bewilderment in his heart to disperse the mounting obsession that came with age, allowing him to live 194 years old.

Based on Bei Feng's long relationship with the Surveillance Bureau, Li Huowang deduced that Bei Feng had a way to break free from the hallucinations!

Li Huowang's heart filled with excitement as tears streamed down his face. He had experienced so many hardships along the way—hardship that always made him feel despair, but today, he finally felt hope for the first time!

Chapter 369 - Double Happiness

The rooster crowed, and Yinling City woke up once more; the quiet streets gradually became bustling, filled with pedestrians and donkeys.

Everyone was busy with their own affairs, and no one took notice of a visibly excited red-robed Daoist sitting on the roof tiles of an inn. Of course, no one could understand Li Huowang's mood.

“Dad?” Li Sui was rather surprised as he used two tentacles to touch Li Huowang's rapidly beating heart.

It had been two hours since all this started, but Li Huowang had yet to calm down. He was still reading the contents of the letter in his hands. No one could understand what this letter meant to him. However, it was a meaningful letter for Li Huowang. It meant that he wouldn't be trapped in pain and bewilderment forever, that his life wouldn't be filled with suffering and despair, and that he still had hope.

All the suffering he had to go through over these years would be worth it the moment he learned the method to dispel the hallucination from Bei Feng. By then, he would be able to live like an ordinary person and spend his life peacefully with the people he loved.

The desire to die in Li Huowang's heart vanished. Now, he only had one goal—live on and escape the Strayed One's bewilderment!

“Huowang, why are you on the roof?” Bai Lingmiao's familiar voice echoed.

Li Huowang snapped back to reality, and he jumped down to hug her tightly. Then, he took a good look at her delicate face and said excitedly, "There's a way, there's a way, there's a way!"

Li Huowang had just established a clear goal, and Bai Lingmiao's issue could finally be resolved. The happiness had just doubled, as Ji Xiang had said in his letter that he had some connections to military families who could get rid of Bai Lingmiao's killing intent!

"What's going on? Are you losing your mind?" Bai Lingmiao asked, sounding confused.

Li Huowang shook his head lightly, and then he gently pecked her pink lips before running away with a spring in his steps.

"Let's go! Pack up, and we're going to the capital!" Li Huowang exclaimed before disappearing.

Meanwhile, a group of adults with their children in tow had surrounded the Bai Family Hall in the Bai Family Village; they wore excited looks as they stared into the hall.

Lu Zhuangyuan's slick demeanor had vanished, and he emitted a solemn air as he sat on the master's chair. Five children of varying heights, each holding a cup of tea in their hands, were before Lu Zhuangyuan.

The tallest of the children spoke first, saying, "Disciple Zhan Yuansheng would like to join Trope Leader Lu Zhuangyuan to learn how to make a living. In the meantime, any silver I gain will belong to you, my master. In the case of any natural disasters or misfortunes, I will accept my fate. If I were to selfishly escape or become disobedient, then I would be beaten to death!"

The child then served the tea in his hands to Lu Zhuangyuan, who took a sip with a gleeful visage. The child then knelt down and kowtowed thrice before Lu Zhuangyuan, all the while calling him "Master."

The other children followed until all five had sworn allegiance to Lu Zhuangyuan.

Lu Zhuangyuan then put on airs and said seriously, "A scholar is produced every 3 years, but it takes 10 years to produce an actor! Though we are in the lower aspect of the 9 classes, there are still 360 trades, and each can produce a scholar!"

"Disciples, you must practice diligently and make sure not to slack off! I want you to become renowned figures that everyone will remember through the ages!" Lu Zhuangyuan exclaimed, painting his grand picture. Then, he cleared his throat and turned to his eldest disciple, saying, "Juren, take them to test their skills."

Juren and the children soon departed.

Left all alone, Lu Zhuangyuan jumped down from the master's chair and dropped his act, grinning like a fool.

Holding a handful of melon seeds, Puppy teased him, "Troupe Leader Lu, your Lu Family Troupe is thriving. I think it's about time you buy a theater in Yinling City!"

Although it was said in jest, Puppy's words resonated in Troupe Leader Lu's heart. Lu Zhuangyuan broke out into a smile. " Hehe, thank you for your good wishes!"

Zhao Wu leaning on a wooden crutch sounded confused as he asked, "Troupe Leader Lu, where did you find those children? Are their parents really willing to let their children act with you?"

People with land usually wouldn't send their children to act in a theater as people like them usually found it shameful to become actors.

"Hehe, of course, they must be willing first," said Lu Zhuangyuan. Then, he pulled out a tobacco pipe from his back, lit it, and took a few puffs with a triumphant look. "They were all little beggars whom I had encountered while traveling for performances. They couldn't refuse my offer when they heard about food and shelter.

"Ah, I hope you won't be surprised knowing that despite the Liang Kingdom's prosperity, there are still beggars out there."

"What's surprising about that? Unfortunate people are a dime a dozen. However, I want to know why they even bother becoming actors when there is so much land for the taking. Couldn't they simply become landlords?"

Lu Zhuangyuan recalled the fields surrounding Cowheart Village and felt a pang in his heart. In the end, he nodded, saying, "Well, becoming a landlord and an actor are not mutually exclusive."

Lu Zhuangyuan couldn't feel reassured. Those lands didn't belong to him. Without Li Huowang around as the master of the house, they would have no way of fighting back if they were driven away one day.

However, Lu Zhuangyuan knew that building a theater meant that every brick and tile of that theater would belong to him. He would also be able to live with peace of mind by then.

Lu Zhuangyuan actually wanted to discuss it with Miss Bai, but her family had gone through something, and he hadn't been able to find the right time to talk about it with her.

Lu Zhuangyuan's plan was to wait for Miss Bai's recovery before sending his daughter-in-law to make inquiries. Unexpectedly, Miss Bai became like that young Daoist, and she disappeared without a trace.

"Puppy, do you perhaps know where Miss Bai went? When is she coming back?" Lu Zhuangyuan asked the shifty-eyed Puppy. After all, the entire Bai Family Village belonged to Miss Bai. She had to be here for anyone to discuss land ownership, tenantry, or even what crops to plant.

They seemed like immortals and could survive on dew, so they can afford not to get involved in the mundane world. However, they should have told me before leaving.

Puppy's face lit up with joy upon hearing Lu Zhuangyuan's question. "Ah, yes, my wife is pregnant. I'm going to be a father, but it'll be at least around the New Year or during the Qingming Festival.”

Lu Zhuangyuan’s face wrinkled with disdain. That's not my question; why is this guy even showing off to me? Does he not know that I'm already a grandfather while he's still about to become a father?

“What about Miss Chun? I haven’t seen her around for quite a while now.”

Puppy tossed a salted melon seed into his mouth and cracked the shell with his teeth before saying, “How would I know? She’s not my wife, and there’s no way she’ll become my wife with that stinky temper of hers.”

Lu Zhuangyuan chuckled at Puppy’s defensive remark before leaving the hall.

Puppy spat out the melon seed shell and left the Bai Family Hall. He was well aware of who was an insider and an outsider. He could tell his fellow disciples what he had found in the cellar of the Bai Family Ancestral Hall, but he couldn’t share that with the Lu Family Troupe.

Puppy wandered around the somewhat deserted Bai family village before walking toward the entrance of a high-walled courtyard in the eastern side of the village. Puppy grabbed the tiger-head door latch and knocked. “Simpleton, open the door. It’s still daytime, so why did you even lock the door?”

Chapter 370 - Bai Family

Puppy shouted outside and opened the door soon afterward. Gao Zhijian wasn't wearing any upper clothing. He frowned as he stared at Puppy. The sweat dripping down his body created steam despite the freezing weather.

“Do you smell that? Yang Xiaohai’s side is steaming dumplings today! Pork and green onion dumplings!”

Gao Zhijian stared briefly at Puppy’s mischievous expression before shutting the door harshly. Gao Zhijian could still hear Puppy’s grumbling behind the door, “Ah, you really are boring. Lu Xiucan is more fun than you, but I don’t know where that kid went. It’s been a while long, and I kind of miss him.”

Gao Zhijian remained silent and allowed Puppy to grumble for a while. Once he could no longer hear Puppy’s ramblings, he turned around and gripped the heavy halberd before him by the hilt. Then, he grunted and pulled it up.

The heavy halberd was made exclusively for Peng Longteng.

Gao Zhijian felt like he were a child riding a horse as he swung around the heavy halberd. Gao Zhijian swung it a few times, and the ground trembled with each swing as the heavy halberd shattered the stone slabs on the ground.

Gao Zhijian panted heavily and looked down at his trembling hands; they were red because the blood vessels in his hand had ruptured. Gao Zhijian turned around and picked up the military manual he had found on the late Peng Longteng.

Gao Zhijian wiped the blood from his trembling hands on the military manual, and the content of the book changed completely. It turned out to be a military cultivation manual.

Gao Zhijian sat down cross-legged and followed the notes in the manual. He concentrated his killing intent and circulated the latent energy inside of him according to the manual.

Gao Zhijian performed a few cycles while sitting cross-legged like a fierce-looking Arhat in a temple. Faint strands of blood qi seeped out of Gao Zhijian, and anyone with keen eyes would see that Gao Zhijian's figure had slightly grown bigger.

A bug happened to fly by. Gao Zhijian opened his eyes, and his gaze landed on the fly. Inexplicably, the fly stiffened and fell to the ground.

"Time to eat!" Yang Xiaohai shouted.

Gao Zhijian closed his eyes slowly, and when he opened them again, he became the honest Gao Zhijian once more. Based on Peng Longteng's appearance, Gao Zhijian deduced that the manual was dangerous, so he wanted to try it out himself first before sharing it with anyone else.

Gao Zhijian walked to the well in the courtyard; he hoisted a bucket of ice-cold water and poured it over himself. He freshened up, put on his clothes, and then he finally opened the door to head toward the kitchen.

The others were already eating hot porridge and delicious steamed dumplings. They chatted casually as they ate, sitting together without any regard for genders

Gao Zhijian picked up a bowl and plucked fifty dumplings with his chopsticks before sitting down and eating slowly by himself. He poured himself a saucer of dark vinegar, but he decided not to eat porridge.

Gao Zhijian took a bite first and dipped the bun into the dark vinegar before stuffing the whole thing into his mouth. Gao Zhijian ate slowly, and he would sometimes glance at the doorway.

Time went on, and as more and more people dispersed, Yang Xiaohai scratched his head in confusion. "Is Senior Xiaoman not going to eat again?"

Yang Xiaohai pondered briefly before covering a bowl of dumplings with a plate. Then, he proceeded to wash the steamer baskets along with the round-faced lady.

Gao Zhijian chucked the last remaining steamed dumpling into his mouth and washed it down with the dark vinegar. Then, he picked up the bowl of dumplings that Yang Xiaohai had set aside and walked outside.

His destination was clear—the Bai Family Ancestral Hall. The three monkeys arranged side by side turned, and the secret door appeared before Gao Zhijian.

Gao Zhijian bent down and entered. The oil lamps hanging on the walls illuminated the dark staircase. Gao Zhijian soon found himself in the main hall, and he saw Chun Xiaoman chanting something inscrutable.

“Disciples look up at the blue sky. Fellow masters are beside. Twenty-four divine beings help disciples learn to drag knives. Dragging knives transform into goose feathers. Iron rulers transform into lamp wicks. Rolling stone transform into water bubbles...”

Chun Xiaoman heard footsteps, prompting her to turn around. Her eyes immediately brightened upon seeing Gao Zhijian. “Zhijian, come here and take a look. Am I reading this right? How come there aren't any reactions?”

Gao Zhijian grabbed the book and examined it for a while before handing over a bowl of dumplings to Chun Xiaoman, saying, “Eat.”

Chun Xiaoman noticed that Gao Zhijian had more or less recovered. Unfortunately, Gao Zhijian had become incredibly taciturn since then, and he would often only say one word. However, it wasn't really an issue as long as everyone could understand him.

“I'm not going to eat. I want to examine the contents of that book,” said Chun Xiaoman, looking a bit impatient as she pushed the bowl of dumplings away.

However, Gao Zhijian wasn't going to accept Chun Xiaoman's excuse. He extended the bowl over toward Chun Xiaoman and said, "Eat."

Gao Zhijian's attitude made it clear that he wouldn't say anything unless Chun Xiaoman ate the dumplings.

Chun Xiaoman accepted it reluctantly. Then, he ate the dumplings with small but urgent bites.

"Is Miaomiao back?" asked Chun Xiaoman.

Gao Zhijian shook his head while reading the book in his hand.

"Where did that brat go? She didn't even send me a letter," Chun Xiaoman grumbled, and then her heart suddenly skipped a beat. "Could it be that she has—"

"No, no, no," Chun Xiaoman interrupted herself, "She won't do silly things again."

Chun Xiaoman continued eating, but she was to eat not to feel full but to drive the anxiety that had gripped Chun Xiaoman's heart. Chun Xiaoman ate vigorously, so she ended up choking and hiccuping.

Gao Zhijian put down the book and patted Chun Xiaoman's back gently.

Chun Xiaoman eventually came to her senses, and she said, "If it really doesn't work out, let's gather everyone and look around where Miaomiao was last seen. I'm really worried since there's no news at all."

"Okay." Gao Zhijian nodded.

Chun Xiaoman wanted to continue eating her dumplings when Puppy barged in and rushed forward with a smile. "Junior Bai's letter has just arrived!!"

Chun Xiaoman stood up immediately and asked, "Where is she? What's in the letter?"

"Why are you asking me? I don't know how to read," Puppy said with a shrug before handing over the letter to Gao Zhijian.

With Gao Zhijian's help, Chun Xiaoman understood that Bai Lingmiao was fine and that she had decided to go to the capital to handle some trivial matters. More importantly, Bai Lingmiao said that she would return after she was done with everything.

"As long as she's fine..." Chun Xiaoman finally breathed a sigh of relief.

Bai Lingmiao's absence had been giving her nightmares.

Gao Zhijian leaned even closer to the letter and examined it carefully for a while before stammering, "T-t-this is Senior Li's handwriting!"

Senior Li was the only one who preferred to write in square-shaped characters, and the latter's handwriting was quite distinct.

Puppy chuckled and pointed at Chun Xiaoman before sneering, "I told you that they were having a quarrel. You're just an outsider, so you shouldn't have gotten involved, but the milk has already spilled. You may have indirectly chided her husband, and there's a high chance that they simply made up at the end of the day.

"You really should have believed in me. I told you so, right?"

Chapter 371 - Shangjing

Clop, clop, clop!

The sound of horse hooves seemed incessant as Li Huowang's carriage traveled along with the other passersby. Li Huowang could see many peddlers and wheelbarrows[1] as they closed in on the largest and most prosperous city in the Liang Kingdom, Shangjing.

Bai Lingmiao sat on top of the carriage while staring at the castle walls. The castle walls looked ancient, seemingly standing for more than a thousand years. The castle walls were made from black bricks, and they stood as tall as small mountains.

Meanwhile, the moss that had covered the walls indicated its old age.

“So this is Shangjing? It’s very unique.” Bai Lingmiao was looking at the capital with excitement.

Li Huowang stood up and carried Bai Lingmiao down before covering her eyes with a silk cloth. “It's so bright, so don't open your eyes. You're going to hurt them.”

The headquarters of the Surveillance Bureau was here—in Shangjing. If it hadn't been for the black spindle, Li Huowang wouldn't have dared to ever come here.

Bai Lingmiao felt annoyed, but she didn't remove the silk cloth.

Bai Lingmiao sat on Li Huowang's lap and stretched lazily. “I'm definitely going to change these useless eyes of mine one of these days!”

Li Huowang stifled Bai Lingmiao's excitement by saying, “Stop the nonsense. We're entering the capital now, so be quiet.”

Li Huowang's carriage followed the travelers and soon arrived at the gates. The guards took just one glance at Li Huowang's carriage, which resembled a coffin, and they instantly knew that something was up.

Upon seeing Li Huowang's identity token as a member of the Surveillance Bureau, however, they didn't say anything and simply allowed Li Huowang entry.

Li Huowang suddenly felt happy with his decision to join the Surveillance Bureau.

If it hadn't been for his identity as a member of the Surveillance Bureau, he would have had issues entering and exiting cities.

When the carriage entered the capital, Li Huowang was surprised to see the sheer number of people beyond the gates. There were people as far as Li Huowang's eyes could seem, and they stretched all the way to the watchtower in the distance.

"Let's find a place to stay first," Li Huowang said, guiding the carriage to move slowly amidst the crowd.

The sun was starting to set, and the rays of sunlight reflecting off of the blue roof tiles and red walls were starting to dim. The buildings were tall, and each of them showcased large banners. Meanwhile, there seemed to be an infinite number of people and carriages moving to and fro along the street.

This was a testament to the Liang Kingdom's strength. It looked similar to Yinling City, but there was a stark difference between them.

If one word were to be used to describe the difference, it would be the word "history."

After all, Shangjing was one of the surviving cities of the previous dynasty, the Qi Kingdom.

While Li Huowang was busy looking around the capital, the crowd abruptly moved toward the left of the street. Everyone wore excited looks, and they seemed to be waiting for something.

Li Huowang followed the crowd and soon arrived at an empty crossroad. There were three white towers several meters tall while a group of topless youths were carrying pouches in their hands. They were warming themselves up around the white towers.

While Li Huowang was thinking about what was going on, a short man walked out of the crowd.

The short man was carrying a gong on his back, making him appear like a tortoise, which elicited quite a few peals of laughter from the crowd. The short man ignored the laughter and raised three incense sticks toward the three white towers. Then, the short man closed his eyes and prayed.

Is this a prayer ceremony for the people of Shangjing? Li Huowang was intrigued, but it wasn't an unusual sight in this crazy world.

Just as Li Huowang was in the middle of his speculations, the short man took off the gong from his back and struck it hard, shouting, "Grab the Bun Mountains!"

The youths leaped onto the three white towers with their pouches. They used both their hands and feet to grab something off the white tower before storing it in their pouches.

Hm? Li Huowang did a double take at the three white towers and saw that the white towers were made out of white buns. As the youths climbed up the three towers of buns, the white towers became human towers as the youths climbed onto each other to climb even higher.

The youths fought each other to seize the buns, and as they fought, the buns at the top of the tower fell to the ground. The nearby onlookers wasted no time, rushing over to the fallen buns and ignoring everything, even manure, just to grab a bun.

Meanwhile, Bun poked its head out from under the carriage and snatched one of the white buns on the ground. Bun chewed the bun with delight, attracting Li Huowang's gaze.

Li Huowang saw that the white bun had the character for "longevity" stamped on it.

Bai Lingmiao swept his gaze across the wasted buns on the streets and chuckled sarcastically. "Hahaha, looks like the people of Shangjing are just different. To think they would waste white buns made out of wheat flour.

"There are regions where the people can't afford to eat such buns even during the New Year."

Li Huowang turned his gaze somewhere and asked, "Don't you think those towers looked like three incense sticks? I think they're praying to something."

"Prayer? You should stop guessing," Bai Lingmiao replied.

Li Huowang went silent as he looked at the crowd before guiding the carriage away.

There were so many people, and Li Huowang wasn't familiar with the place, so it took him quite a while to find a suitable inn for them to stay in.

It was already night when they arrived at the inn, and it looked so much better than the others. There was even a stage in the middle of the inn's main hall, clearly to attract customers using plays.

Everyone ate and drank happily; no one really paid any attention to Bai Lingmiao.

However, the waiter was an exception. Upon seeing Bai Lingmiao and his group, he immediately ran over to them and asked, "May I know what you would like to order, esteemed guests?"

"Two seasonal vegetables and two meat dishes."

"All right, please sit and wait. Your meal will be served soon," said the waiter before turning around and leaving.

Li Huowang placed both of his swords on the table, and he instantly felt like a massive weight had been taken off of him. "You should go ahead and rest once we're done eating. I still need to find Ji Xiang."

"Why are you looking for that old eunuch? Do you need any help?" Bai Lingmiao asked.

Li Huowang glanced at Bai Lingmiao and patted her head without answering her.

“Fine, fine, you are the head of the household. Your words are the rules, and you don’t need to discuss things with me,” Bai Lingmiao said, looking away and pouting.

The two went silent and waited for their meal. Eventually, the food was served; they chose to feed Bun first before enjoying their meal. Li Huowang wasn’t sure whether it was because he had been traveling for a long time or the cooks of the inn were simply amazing, but he ate a lot.

Li Huowang wolfed down his food while watching the performers on the stage. Just then, the performers jumped down the stage and moved around the main hall to greet the customers.

One of the performers came to Li Huowang’s table and performed. However, Li Huowang’s face remained indifferent, and the sight made the performer feel like his pride was being trampled upon, so he went all out.

The performer closed in on Li Huowang and shook his head; the makeup on his face changed instantly. The performer waved his hand in front of his face, and his makeup changed once again. [2]

The performer thought that the customer would surely be impressed, Li Huowang grabbed his sword instead and pressed it on the performer's neck.

“Who told you to change your face?! Why the fuck are you changing your face?!” Li Huowang snarled.

Chapter 372 - Kindness

Li Huowang wanted to peel off the face of the performer to see if he was hiding other faces underneath. The performer was so shocked and terrified that he trembled all over.

The owner of the inn noticed the commotion and rushed forward to Li Huowang, saying, "I'm so sorry that he has offended you, dear guest! As an apology, your meal is on the house, and I'll even give you two a free bowl of soup. Will that be okay?"

Li Huowang stood quiet for a few seconds before he sheathed his sword and sat back down.

"What's wrong with you? Why did you get so agitated?" Bai Lingmiao asked, sounding confused by Li Huowang's outburst.

Li Huowang sighed. The performer's rapid makeup change reminded him of how the Sitting Oblivion Dao could change faces. Now that the ordeal was over, Li Huowang acknowledged that he had overreacted.

Li Huowang continued with his meal as he explained. "Don't worry, we're in Shangjing. The Headquarters of the Surveillance Bureau is here, so there's no way the Sitting Oblivion Dao can come here."

Li Huowang made quick work of his meal and decided to look for another inn without plays. Afterward, Li Huowang went to the address on the letter. Of course, he was by himself.

He wasn't familiar with Shangjing's streets, so he only managed to find it when the curfew started at midnight.

The door opened, and Ji Xiang peeked from behind the wooden door with a lantern in hand. He looked around to make sure that no one else was around before pulling Li Huowang inside.

Li Huowang looked around the tiny courtyard and saw nothing but a well and a giant jujube tree that occupied half of the courtyard. Li Huowang was surprised that Ji Xiang was staying at such a small place, even though he was a high-ranking member of the Surveillance Bureau.

In addition, there were no maids around, either.

Regardless of its size, the house was perfect for a family of three.

“Er Jiu, I’ve been waiting for you.” Ji Xiang smiled, holding Li Huowang’s hand firmly.

Li Huowang retracted his hand forcefully, and he sounded resolute as he said, “No worries. I’ve always been grateful for Lord Ji Xiang’s kindness!”

“Hehe, no need to thank me,” Ji Xiang said, smiling as he looked at Li Huowang.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang had no idea what Ji Xiang was thinking at all.

Li Huowang decided not to waste any more time, as Ji Xiang was in the flesh right in front of him. Moreover, there was indeed a debt that had to be settled. “Lord Ji Xiang, you said that you found someone from the military capable of removing someone else’s killing intent. Was it true?”

Li Huowang thought that Bai Lingmiao’s issue had to be addressed first.

“Yes, of course. Everything has been prepared, so let’s go.”

Although Li Huowang had no idea why Ji Xiang seemed much more anxious than him, there was no reason to delay things, so Li Huowang followed Ji Xiang through the long corridor and arrived at the back door. There were two sedan chairs^[1] waiting for them.

“Please enter~” the four bearers said, kneeling with grace, which was a result of countless hours of training.

It was Li Huowang’s first time riding a sedan chair, and he found it uncomfortable.

He felt like throwing up every time it swayed.

Ji Xiang opened his curtains and turned to Li Huowang's sedan chair, saying, "Brother Er Jiu, where are you staying here? Remember that little house where we came from earlier? If you like it, I can just give it to you as a gift."

"I appreciate Lord Ji Xiang's offer, but I don't like receiving gifts with nothing in return. I also don't think that I can accept such an expensive gift."

For some reason, Li Huowang thought that Ji Xiang had become much more compassionate after he had saved the latter from the Muddled Ones. It made sense, as there was no way someone would give an entire house away after exchanging just a few words with them.

Ji Xiang pretended like he was upset and replied, "Ai~ Brother Er Jiu, that's not right. You're not going to receive it with nothing in return. In fact, a broken house is not enough repayment for your help.

"I prepared it for my retirement, so I hope you'll like it. Anyway, let's just say that it's yours now. The deed to the place and the keys are underneath your seat. I even left you something inside the house."

Li Huowang checked and saw three bronze keys and several pieces of paper.

Li Huowang looked down at the items and pondered over why Ji Xiang had decided to give his house away.

After a while, Li Huowang realized what was going on. Ji Xiang wanted to repay Li Huowang for his favor in one go. That was why he decided to give Li Huowang a house. The item he left in the house must be priceless, too. But why did he give me the house that he bought for his retirement? Is he going to resign from the Surveillance Bureau?

Li Huowang was in deep contemplation when the curtains to the sedan were opened; the bearer's voices soon echoed, announcing their arrival. “Please disembark~”

Li Huowang placed the keys and the documents behind his shirt and exited the sedan chair. He then looked up and saw a massive stone lion snarling at him.

Li Huowang took a few steps backward and realized that he was at the entrance to a prison. It seemed Ji Xiang had a robust network with prisons.

The door opened slowly, and Ji Xiang led Li Huowang into the prison.

The main gates were shut, and Li Huowang saw another gate. It was a smaller gate, and they had to walk like ducks to enter it. The multiple gates and towering walls made the prison extremely secure.

They walked past the second gate and saw another gate.

Li Huowang saw the image of a tiger painted on the gate, but Ji Xiang told him that it wasn't a tiger but a legendary beast, Bi'an. [2]

Li Huowang felt quite a few gazes landing on him the moment they walked past the third gate. Li Huowang squinted and had to adjust to the darkness first before he could finally see who was looking at him.

If he were to describe his location, he would say that he was in a room full of someone like Peng Longteng.

Every single individual in the room had tattoos on their face, and they were either drinking or fighting. Each of them was from a military family, and the killing intent in the air was so dense it was palpable, making it hard for anyone to breathe.

Li Huowang couldn't imagine the prowess of the prisoners here that the prisons actually had to employ a group of prison guards that reeked of killing intent just to suppress the prisoners.

“Aiya~ is that you, Grandpa Chen? Why are you here?” said an old prison guard while staring at Ji Xiang. The old prison guard's white hair beard stretched to the underside of his ears.

“Hehe~ Cao Baihu~ Long time no see. How's your family doing?” Ji Xiang replied with a smile before approaching the old prison guard.

“They're doing pretty fine. It's just that my daughter-in-law is still fighting with my son-in-law every day. Wait here, I'll go and pray to the Prison God[3] first.”

Cao Baihu moved to the left.

Li Huowang saw an indent in the left hall, where a small shrine was enshrined. There were three deities inside the shrine. The one in the middle resembled a kind-looking old man, but the ones on the left and on the right looked like goblins with fierce expressions.

The deity in the middle has to be the Prison God, thought Li Huowang.

Chapter 373 - Small Favor

Li Huowang sat on the bench as he looked at Cao Baihu lighting up an incense to be offered to the Prison God.

Usually those from the military don't light up incense nor pray to any gods, but I know basically nothing about them. Perhaps this is a custom of the Liang Kingdom's military?

After lighting up the incense and offering it to the Prison God, Cao Baihu sat back down and took just a glance at Li Huowang's bronze coin veil before turning to Ji Xiang, saying, "You must have a favor to ask me, as you had come all the way to this inauspicious place."

"Hoho, Cao Baihu is an astute man indeed. I will keep it short. This is Brother Er Jiu, and someone in his family has been inundated and is being plagued by the killing intent of a weapon. I suppose that's a minor issue for you, right?"

Cao Baihu nodded.

Li Huowang sighed in relief. Li Huowang thought it was a serious matter, but he was happy to know that it was just a minor issue for Cao Baihu.

Li Huowang grabbed his gourd and poured out all of the lifespan pills he had onto the table, saying, "Cao Baihu, this is just a tiny gesture of my good faith for you; please accept them."

However, Cao Baihu pushed the lifespan pills back to Li Huowang. "No need for that. I'll just consider us friends from now on, so you don't have to give me these. Even though we're from different departments, both of us are still working for the sake of the Liang Kingdom."

Ji Xiang chuckled and smiled. "So, Cao Baihu, are you going—"

"I would have immediately come out to help you, but..." Cao

Baihu interrupted, trailing off.

An hour later, Ji Xiang and Li Huowang walked out of the prison with frowns.

Ji Xiang slammed the doors harshly and said, “What kind of man is he?! How dare he ask us for a favor before helping us with our minor issue! Rather than Bi’an, they should just draw the Pi Xiu[1] instead!”

“It’s fine, Lord Ji Xiang,” Li Huowang said, “We’re asking them for a small favor, so it is only natural for us to repay it.”

“Sure, that’s the correct thing to do, but ...” Ji Xiang trailed off. He clapped and sounded regretful as he said, “Sigh, I’m sorry for finding someone like him for you.”

Li Huowang knew that Ji Xiang was just putting up an act, but it was a very convincing one.

“No worries. It’s just a small favor. I will do it,” said Li Huowang. He didn’t sound disappointed, as he never really expected to receive a free lunch in this world. Li Huowang just had to escort a prisoner in exchange for Bai Lingmiao’s treatment; it was a profitable trade.

“I’m so sorry.” Ji Xiang smiled regrettably.

“Lord Ji Xiang, no need to apologize. Let’s go back first. If you still feel that you owe me, you can just tell me more information about the prisoner. Of course, only if you know anything about them...” Li Huowang said. He was still unsure as to what he was supposed to do. After all, this was his first time accepting a mission from the Liang Kingdom’s military.

“No need to worry about that. Old Cao is right; it’s just a small favor. It wouldn’t affect you as long as you have no plans of becoming an official.”

“An official?” asked Li Huowang, sounding curious. The two sedan chairs arrived at the small courtyard house once more. To show his appreciation, Li Huowang offered Ji Xiang some tea in the house to talk things over.

Ji Xiang smiled and accepted the offer. The two sat in the hall, and Li Huowang's question made Ji Xiang's smile freeze.

"Lord Ji Xiang, are you really going to leave? Are you not going to reconsider it?"

Li Huowang had never once thought that it was taboo to say such words out loud. He needed to make things clear, after all. What am I going to do once he leaves? Tuoba Danqing is already dead, so who else should I find to get more missions?

Ji Xiang sighed and placed the teacup down slowly. "You know what we went through last time. Plus, I'm too old, and it's time for me to rest. There are still people waiting for me at home, so I will leave the world to the youths like you~"

Ji Xiang clasped his hands together and kowtowed toward the northeastern corner of his house before saying, "I'm not sure what the superiors are thinking. I dared not ask nor listen for any news. I think it's wise for me to prioritize my life."

Li Huowang frowned as he sipped his tea. If he's telling the truth, it means Shangjing might become chaotic in the near future. I need to be careful, and I can't get involved. Regardless of what the higher-ups are doing, I need to steer clear of them.

Li Huowang had only one goal: to find Bei Feng for the sake of removing his issues as a Strayed One.

Ji Xiang seemed to have seen through Li Huowang's thoughts, and he pulled out something from his clothes. It was an intricate-looking identity token. Ji Xiang pushed it over to Li Huowang, and the latter finally saw the words written on it—Seventh Banner.

Li Huowang was surprised. "I got promoted again? And I even skipped a rank?!"

Ji Xiang chuckled and said, "Er Jiu, I could only help you this much. I couldn't promote you any further. Upon my departure, you can go to the headquarters to take on missions. You now have the right to do so, and your revenge will not get delayed.

"You're already a Seventh Banner, so the other Ji Xiangs cannot order you around anymore. You're also free to choose any missions. If you need help, you can order those at the Tenth Pawn rank to help you."

Li Huowang stared dazedly at the identity token. He thought Ji Xiang wanted to return Li Huowang's favor by giving him a house, but Ji Xiang had decided to do more than just that, which meant Li Huowang now owed Ji Xiang a favor.

"Lord Ji Xiang, I don't think this is..." Ji Xiang trailed off, shaking his head.

"Er Jiu, you're a great person and a powerful fighter. You're even better than me. All I ask is don't forget me once you've become famous, all right?"

Ji Xiang smiled and patted the imaginary dust off of his clothes. Then, he bowed to Li Huowang before leaving through the back door.

Left all alone, Li Huowang sat quietly in the hall he stared at the identity token in his hands. Eventually, Li Huowang stood up and walked into the house. He could still remember Ji Xiang's words about how he had left him something in the house.

He instantly identified what Ji Xiang had left for him.

It was the wish wood with a withered Strayed One's tongue nailed to it.

The withered tongue trembled ever so lightly as if it had sensed someone's presence.

Li Huowang poked the withered tongue gently; he also poked the nail that had pinned the tongue to the wood.

It was a priceless artifact, but Ji Xiang gave it away so easily.

Li Huowang was unsure of what Ji Xiang thought of him, but Li Huowang was convinced that Ji Xiang had misunderstood something about him.

Meanwhile, Ji Xiang sprinted through the darkness and soon appeared in front of another small house. He opened the gates and saw a brand new horse carriage waiting inside the courtyard.

An old woman peeked out from within the carriage and saw Ji Xiang.

“Brother, how was it?” asked the old woman.

Ji Xiang leaped onto the carriage and ushered it northward. “The man from the Ao Jing Sect has arrived at Shangjing. I’ve done what I promised him, and I even gave him many things. I no longer owe him any favor, so we can leave now!”

“Really? That’s amazing! We can finally go home!” the old woman exclaimed in delight. The old woman's delight made it clear that Ji Xiang was treating her well.

The old woman took out a guokui[2] and tore a small piece to feed Ji Xiang. “Why are you treating that man from the Ao Jing Sect so well? You even spent a long time waiting for him.”

Chapter 374 - Emperor Of The Liang Kingdom

Ji Xiang munched on the guokui while explaining, "It seems that you don't understand just how special he is. I rummaged through all of the books from the first to the fourth archive before finding out how he had saved us all. He used the Ao Jing Sect's secret technique, Cang-Qiang Ascension!"

"What is that?" the old woman's tone of voice lowered upon sensing the severity in Ji Xiang's voice.

"I don't know. I couldn't check any further than the fourth archive. All I know is that the majority of the people who had used it had perished, while the survivors became extraordinary cultivators.

"Now that I think about it, it makes sense. Why does the technique have the word Ascension? In its name? Ascension to where? Those who had used that technique are no longer humans. Do you really think we can offend someone like that?"

The old woman nodded. "I think you did the right thing, Brother. We can't afford to owe him a favor."

"I think there's another reason why he decided to join the Surveillance Bureau. I don't think he simply wants to take revenge on the Sitting Oblivion Dao," Ji Xiang said.

The old woman took out her handkerchief and wiped the beaded sweat that had formed on Ji Xiang's forehead. "It's fine. Let's just forget about these. They're no longer of concern to us, and we should just go home."

Ji Xiang nodded and stared at the city gates with a pensive gaze. Ji Xiang revealed his identity token, and the city gates opened, allowing them to leave.

Soon, the towering city gates closed once more.

Li Huowang woke up the next day and prepared everything he needed before he embarked on a journey to the prison.

However, Li Huowang was surprised to find out that he wasn't alone.

There was a child guiding a blind man toward the prison.

Does he need that many people to escort a prisoner? Li Huowang pondered and waited silently.

Soon, a man sitting on a cow arrived, and he was dressed in clothes that Li Huowang had never seen before. A four-armed statue of a female Buddha was on the man's lap, and the man's head was lowered while his mouth fluttered open with inscrutable chanting.

Li Huowang reckoned that the people in Shangjing seemed to have an idea as to what was to happen, as they dared not approach the prison. The shops near the prison were all closed, and the entrance to the prison was desolate.

The heavy doors of the prison soon opened, and a metallic cart carrying a cage with a prisoner inside of it appeared before everyone's eyes.

The man in the cage was different from what Li Huowang had imagined, and a golden face mask covered the prisoner's face. The mask was unique and special; it was rectangular in shape with two circular holes for eyes, a triangular nose, and large ears.

If it hadn't been for the patterns and carvings on it, Li Huowang would have thought that it was a Three Star Mound mask[\[1\]](#).

"You just have to escort the prisoner to the main gate where he will be executed; that's all you have to do," said the prison guard to the three escorts, which included Li Huowang.

"The main gate? We're not even leaving the city?" Li Huowang thought that he had misheard. It would only take them four hours to reach the main gate at the slowest, so Li Huowang couldn't help but be surprised.

"Yes, that's right," the prison guard replied, sounding anxious. He turned around and immediately retreated.

The prison guard had pushed the cart over to the three escorts, and it rolled slowly toward them. Li Huowang glanced at the other two escorts before walking over to the cart and pushing it outside.

Regardless of what was going on here, he had to complete this task for the sake of Bai Lingmiao's treatment.

As the cart moved slowly in the city, more and more people gathered nearby, creating an uproarious din. The majority of the people were pointing and smiling at the prisoner; none of them seemed shocked by the golden mask.

Li Huowang reckoned that they had long gotten used to it.

The noises awakened the prisoner in the cage, and the prisoner immediately smashed his head on the beams of the cage, shouting, "How dare you people treat me like this?! I'm the Emperor—the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom!"

Li Huowang's heart tightened at the remark. He looked around but was surprised to find that the crowd didn't listen to the prisoner at all.

The blind man next to Li Huowang chanted, "Blame those involved; don't blame those working. Blame those involved; don't blame those working."

Li Huowang decided to ignore the prisoner and focused on his job. Li Huowang finally knew why the military wanted outsiders like him to do this job and why it might affect him if he ever wanted to become an official or minister.

The cart traveled slowly, and they eventually reached a huge road next to the large red walls of the palace.

Li Huowang felt numerous gazes landing on him from above the palace wall, but he didn't dare to look back, afraid of raising any suspicions. Li Huowang focused entirely on his job.

“Ji Song! You think you’ve won? We’ll see about that! One day, you’ll end up like me!” the prisoner roared toward the palace walls.

The people on the palace walls didn’t reply as they stared quietly at the prisoner

The cart moved slowly, but it reached its destination without any accidents. The executioner was already waiting for them. It was already noon, and a crowd had formed at the execution site.

“Ji Man has been sentenced to death for treason, and there is no pardon for such a crime!”

A red token was thrown to the ground, and the prisoner was dragged out of the cage.

The prisoner was limp, and a yellow stain had marred his trousers.

The executioner promptly shackled the prisoner.

Li Huowang stared at the prisoner and found the latter’s body to be a bit weird. His stomach was large, while his limbs were skinny. It didn’t look like a bulging stomach from excess fat. From what Li Huowang could see, there seemed to be countless tiny orbs trying to burst out of him beneath his skin.

The executioner sprayed the wine in his mouth onto his blade before raising it up high and decapitating the prisoner in one swing. Blood haphazardly scattered in the air, drenching the ground.

The executioner took off the prisoner’s golden mask before presenting it with both hands to the minister.

The minister wrapped the mask with golden silk before running back into the palace with haste. The other ministers left as well, abandoning the corpse to grow cold on muddy ground.

The crowd rushed over to dip their white buns in the blood that had pooled beneath the corpse, and they ate the buns with relish. Two women even fought each other, as they had failed to dip their buns evenly into the blood.

Li Huowang scoffed at them.

Is that it? Is it really this easy? Li Huowang thought with a frown. He was about to leave when he turned around upon recalling something and approached the headless corpse.

Li Huowang took a dagger and sliced open the prisoner's abdomen. Numerous small orbs popped out of the corpse.

Hm? Li Huowang picked up one of the fist-sized orbs. The body of the "Emperor" is stuffed with pills. He was engorged by all the pills that had been forcefully stuffed into his stomach and intestines.

1. Sanxingdui, an archaeological site in China that has many bronze age artifacts. The types of masks found there are quite unique 🙌

Chapter 375 - Coffin

Li Huowang retreated from the execution site while his mind was still full of the scenes he had just seen. It was hard to imagine someone would stuff themselves full of pills until their stomach bulged visibly.

Li Huowang pondered over the prisoner's status and was convinced that there was a deeper reason behind it.

Historically speaking, emperors often consume pills to extend their lives. The practice may hold true in this world as well. Even Dan Yangzi, that damned illiterate baldy, wants to become immortal, so how could the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, which was the strongest kingdom, not desire immortality? It's normal for people to fear death, but...

Li Huowang could still remember Emperor Xu Fu, who had taken five hundred children with him to find the secret of immortality.[\[1\]](#)

However, Li Huowang couldn't even begin to comprehend just how crazy the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom's search for immortality had been, as they were in a crazy world, after all.

Li Huowang looked up at the palace walls, and he couldn't help but think about what was happening in the palace.

Upon sensing the wary gazes of the guards, Li Huowang shook his head and walked toward the prison.

The happenings in the palace weren't Li Huowang's business. The mission was complete, and Li Huowang just wanted to acquire the method to treat Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang entered the heavily-guarded prison once again. Cao Baihu grinned upon seeing Li Huowang. “Oh? You're back, Brother Er Jiu? Tell me everything that happened during the mission.”

There was no reason to lie, so Li Huowang recounted everything.

“Cao Baihu, I've completed the mission. I hope you'll fulfill your end of the deal.”

“Of course, of course.” Cao Baihu smiled and reached into his clothes. He took out a tiny black coffin, which was the size of a forearm, and gave it to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang wasn't sure whether he was just being too sensitive or not, but staring at the large red "longevity" character on the coffin made him feel as if the coffin was exuding the air of death. Li Huowang felt like it truly contained a corpse.

The coffin emitted the same air as the droves of deceased sheep beneath Qing Qiu.

This definitely doesn't belong to the military. It belongs to another sect. Li Huowang was certain of it. It was far too "different" from the items usually associated with the military. The difference was quite literally heaven and earth.

Cao Baihu rapped his fingers on the table three times. “Take the coffin, aim it at the person who had been inundated by killing intent, and then open it. The killing intent will vanish in just three breaths.

“However, you have to remember that the coffin must not stay open for more than three breaths, or there will be consequences.”

“It's that easy?” Li Huowang accepted the black coffin and was astonished by its light weight. The coffin was so light that he thought it was made out of paper.

“Hoho, it's just killing intent, right? It's not a serious matter. If it weren't for my post, I would go and deal with it myself. It wouldn't take long,” Cao Baihu said nonchalantly before downing a cup of wine.

Rumble!

The ground shook lightly just then, and an unknown aura rose from the bottom of the earth. Li Huowang stood up instinctively as goosebumps broke out all over him. It was clear that something sinister was sealed underground.

“Fucking hell! That shitty thing!” Cao Baihu slammed the cup on the table and picked up his blade. He started walking toward the prison door while saying, “I need to do something so I won’t force you to stay here. Just return the coffin to me once you’re done using it, as I don’t want to go and collect it myself.”

Li Huowang soon walked out of the prison and found everything surreal. He looked down at the coffin in his palm and thought, It's that easy? I can turn Bai Lingmiao back just like that? Was he lying to me? Wait, what if everyone lied to me? Do they know that I'm a Strayed One?

Li Huowang felt cold at the absurd idea. Li Huowang grimaced and looked around, feeling as if everything around him was out to get him, including but not limited to the roof, stone lion statues, the tiles on the floor, and even the pebbles on the ground.

Li Huowang took a while to calm down, and he looked down at the coffin in his hands once more. He patiently rummaged through his memories to try and make sense of what was going on.

Li Huowang took a deep breath. No, I don't think they know my true identity. Otherwise, they wouldn't have let a variable like me anywhere near the palace.

Li Huowang was soon convinced that he was overthinking things. Since the military could make use of killing intent, it wasn't strange that they could disperse it as well.

Perhaps it was truly just a small issue.

Now that I got the item that I needed. Li Huowang put away the coffin in the pocket behind his shirt and returned to the inn. Upon opening the door to his room, Li Huowang instantly clapped his eyes on Bai Lingmiao sitting in front of a mirror.

Bai Lingmiao was combing her hair with a dark fluid.

“What are you doing?”

“I’m using black vinegar to dye my hair black. I don’t really like this white color; it doesn’t suit me at all.”

Li Huowang went silent and took a deep breath before taking out the small coffin.

Before returning to the inn, Li Huowang had paid a man to raise his sword against Li Huowang. Li Huowang used the coffin on that man, and the man’s killing intent was sucked away by the coffin.

Bai Lingmiao saw the object in Li Huowang’s hand through the bronze mirror.

“What is that? A coffin?” Bai Lingmiao asked.

Li Huowang opened the coffin while aiming it at Bai Lingmiao. A strange suction force rushed out of the coffin, and it sucked away Li Huowang’s hesitation and regret. Li Huowang even felt that the coffin was sucking away his will to find Bei Feng; the coffin was insatiable, seemingly capable of sucking away everything.

“One, two... three!” Li Huowang exclaimed and closed the lid. Then, he stared at Bai Lingmiao.

A crisp noise echoed as the comb covered in black vinegar fell to the ground.

Bai Lingmiao turned around slowly, and she stared at Li Huowang in fear with her tear-filled eyes.

Li Huowang trembled at the familiar sight, and he rushed to hug her as hot tears welled up in his eyes.

Li Huowang hugged her tightly for a long time before releasing her. Then, he examined her to see whether there were any side effects. “How are you feeling? Do you feel uncomfortable anyway? Tell me!”

Bai Lingmiao was crying, but she didn’t respond.

Soon, she reached out for the purple-tassel sword.

Li Huowang smacked Bai Lingmiao’s hand away and retreated.

When Li Huowang looked up, he found that Bai Lingmiao's eyes were filled with pain and resentment.

“Senior Li, please... I can't live without it,” Bai Lingmiao muttered.

1. Actually, it was recorded to be 3000 children 🤔

Chapter 376 - Surveillance Bureau

Li Huowang hesitated in the face of the crying Bai Lingmiao, but he eventually relented.

Li Huowang stared blankly as Bai Lingmiao gripped the purple-tassel sword. The pain in her eyes was soon replaced with pleasure.

The murderous Bai Lingmiao was back.

Li Huowang finally understood that the crux of the matter wasn't the killing intent that had pervaded Bai Lingmiao; the crux was permanent, and it was the fact that he had killed her entire family.

“Hehe.” Bai Lingmiao let loose a carefree and nonchalant laughter. Then, she bent over and picked up the comb before drenched it in vinegar. She sat down in front of the bronze mirror and combed her hair once more.

Li Huowang stared at Bai Lingmiao's back, and he finally let go of his obsession to treat her. He approached her carefully and hugged her from behind.

“No matter what, you will always be my Miaomiao,” Li Huowang muttered.

Bai Lingmiao shoved him away, and she glared at him before shouting, “Do you really think that I'll forgive you so easily? Have you already forgotten my question not too long ago? I asked you whether you truly liked Bai Lingmiao or you simply wanted someone who would listen to your demands!”

Bai Lingmiao hurled the comb away before storming off.

“Where are you going?”

“Why do you even care?! I'm going to look for another man to marry! I'm going to look for someone who deserves me! I'm not going to marry a paranoid man like you!"

Bai Lingmiao ran away. Li Huowang wanted to give chase, but something soft struck Li Huowang from behind and engulfed him. The Second Deity had just hugged Li Huowang from behind, and she pressed herself against him.

"Don't worry, she's not going to do what she said," the Second Deity said.

Li Huowang held the Second Deity's hand and kissed it. Then, he sounded dejected as he said. "It's fine. Her departure is probably for the best. Anyway, just wait for me at Cowheart Mountain. Once my issue is resolved, I'll go back and look for everyone."

The Second Deity rubbed her hairy face against Li Huowang's neck before retreating. Li Huowang looked back and found that he was all alone in the room.

Li Huowang stared off into space for quite a while before walking outside and shouting, "Waiter! Bring me an urn of strong wine!"

The wine was soon delivered to the room.

Li Huowang quietly opened the wine and drank in big gulps. Li Huowang's senses had been heightened drastically by the Cang-Qiang Ascension that he had performed many times by now.

Unfortunately, the heightened senses had the unfortunate side effect of low alcohol tolerance, as Li Huowang couldn't even remember when he passed out. All he knew was that he was awakened by the crowing roosters from outside.

Li Huowang grabbed his head; the splitting headache made him feel dizzy. He stood up shakily and walked toward the window. Halfway there, however, he tripped over himself and fell face first on the ground.

Li Huowang stood up slowly and caught a glimpse of a black tattoo on the back of his hand. Li Huowang shook his head; it wasn't a tattoo—it was Li Sui's wriggling tentacle.

I don't have much time. Li Huowang had to remove his hallucination before Li Sui obtained full control of his body. Otherwise, he would become like his past self once more; he would be forever at the mercy of his hallucination.

Li Huowang would rather die than let that happen.

It was simply too agonizing to be unable to differentiate between reality and a mere hallucination.

Li Huowang opened the window, and sunlight struck his face. He gnashed his teeth and snarled at the sun before pumping his fist into the air.

"You motherfuckers want to torture me that badly? I'll fight to the bitter end to change my fate! COME ON! DO YOU WANNA KNOW WHO'S CRAZIER BETWEEN US?!"

Li Huowang jumped down the window and started walking toward his next destination—the prison. Once morning had truly arrived, Li Huowang had already returned the coffin and was already making a beeline for the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang glanced at the six gates sandwiched between the two stone lion statues. He flashed his identity token groggily at the guards before walking into the stone plaza.

The plaza was huge, but there were only a few people. A massive celestial globe larger than a house was in the middle of the plaza. Astonishingly, it was made completely from stone!

Li Huowang looked around and walked to one of the smaller buildings in the south.

Li Huowang was instantly struck by the strong smell of ink upon entering.

A man holding several books turned to face Li Huowang.

"Hey, hey, hey, who are you? This is where we print almanacs, and outsiders are not allowed here," the man said.

Li Huowang showed his identity token to the man. The man examined it briefly before pointing in the opposite direction. "You came to the wrong place. You're supposed to go in the opposite direction."

"I came to the wrong place?" Li Huowang muttered and took a quick look at the building's interior, finding several documents hanging on the walls.

"The Surveillance Bureau sells the official almanac. Those who are caught illegally printing it will be executed, along with their immediate family members and spouses."

Li Huowang nodded and bade goodbye before turning around to leave. He walked toward an empty-looking building. The massive metallic mask on the building had attracted his attention.

The mask was roughly three meters tall, and it was covered in green rust after being exposed to the elements for such a long time.

The mask looked similar to that unique golden mask; the only difference between the two was that the eyeholes had been replaced with protruding cylinders. The cylinders protruded from the eyeholes and were soaring into the boundless sky.

Li Huowang looked away and walked into the building.

The interior wasn't big, and it was roughly the same size as a classroom in the modern world. Surprisingly, the building was completely empty; there was just an empty square when Li Huowang walked in.

Just as Li Huowang was feeling confused, several gazes landed on him. He turned to where the gazes were coming from, but he couldn't see anyone. Li Huowang knew just then that he was at the right place and revealed his identity token.

Deep thuds echoed as a wooden wall transformed, revealing a hidden door. A skinny man walked out from the hidden door, and there was a blind black bird perched on the skinny man's shoulder.

"Is this your first time here?" asked the black bird.

Li Huowang nodded. "I'm usually in Yinling City, and this is my first time in Shangjing. Greetings, Senior.”

“Follow me, and I will show you the path.”

The skinny man walked into the hidden door with the black bird on his shoulder.

Li Huowang followed closely behind them and was surprised to see that the hidden passageway wasn't covered pitch black. The oil lamps hanging on the walls illuminated the path, and clanking noises constantly filled the passageway.

Li Huowang stared at the skinny man's back and decided to be a bit more proactive.

He had found it a good idea to do so in situations like these, so he said, “Senior, my name is Er Jiu, and I am from the Ao Jing Sect.”

“Sima Lan, from the Mo Family. No need to be so formal. You're a part of the Surveillance Bureau, so we're considered half-brothers,” the black bird replied.

“Mo Family?” Li Huowang's pupils constricted. It had been a long time since he last heard of the Mo Family's name. The Mo Family was a famous family with a deep history back in the modern world.

However, Sima Lan misunderstood Li Huowang's reaction and explained, “Don't worry, my family is from the Qi faction, not from the evil Liang faction.”

Chapter 377 - Sima Lan

“Qi faction? Liang faction?” Li Huowang had no idea what Sima Lan was talking about. Is the Mo Family separated into two different factions? Why is the Liang faction considered evil?

Li Huowang stared deeply at the skinny man with a black bird on his shoulder for quite a while before finally asking. “Senior Sima, what are the Qi faction and the Liang faction of the Mo family?”

Sima Lan was confused about why Li Huowang seemed ignorant of the two factions, but he chose to reply, and the black bird on his shoulder spoke in his place, “They were once united, but their cultivation led them into nurturing different ideologies, which resulted in a clash of ideologies after the family head's death.

“The family split into two factions by then. The Liang faction believes in ghosts, fate, and destiny, but they've misunderstood the family head's teachings. They walked down the wrong path and allied themselves with the detestable Dongzhen Sect, becoming half-human bastards.”

Sima Lan's expression was soured, and he looked like he had recalled something he didn't want to remember.

Li Huowang went silent; he knew that the Liang Kingdom's standards when it came to orthodox, official organizations were quite loose. The Liang Kingdom would recognize an organization as an “official” organization as long as it would bring profits to the kingdom and would not harm it; it didn't matter whether the organization's practices were evil or upright.

Li Huowang didn't ask any more questions out of courtesy. It had already become clear to him that the Mo Family's issue was the difference in ideologies and techniques.

Li Huowang had to focus on his own issues first before even thinking about anyone else's issues. Li Huowang had learned that Bei Feng had the method to stop the hallucinations of a Strayed One, so Li Huowang just had to find Bei Feng and learn that method from the latter.

Cooperation? It was his first choice, but he cast it aside immediately. The Sitting Oblivion Dao couldn't be trusted. If they found out that Li Huowang was a Strayed One, Li Huowang's life would forever be chaotic.

The only thing Li Huowang could do was find Bei Feng and extract the information from the latter.

To do that, Li Huowang had to find a helper within the Surveillance Bureau. He was sure that he could find someone useful, and that was actually one of the reasons he decided to join the Surveillance Bureau.

They walked along the hidden passageway.

Li Huowang's keen ears picked up some noises. He could hear wood clanking against each other, birds flapping their wings, and the footsteps of people running around.

Li Huowang ignored those noises and followed closely behind Sima Lan. Just then, an eunuch appeared in the distance. The eunuch lowered his head and walked silently on one side of the passageway.

The eunuch passed by Li Huowang and pushed a brick on the wall.

A low rumbling echoed as the same wall opened, revealing a room. Li Huowang looked around and saw a massive window on one end of the room; a variety of birds flew in and out of the room through the window.

One of the eunuchs inside the room untied the papers tied to the birds' feet before placing those papers in a bamboo tube. The eunuch then dropped the bamboo into an odd structure—an array of bamboo pipes that resembled a spider.

The bamboo spider exuded the smell of mold, and it looked quite aged. Even the gears made out of bamboo inside of it had been devastated by mold. Regardless, the bamboo spider was still working, and its gears turned and clacked as it worked.

The letters inside the bamboo tube were distributed to the eunuchs in the room.

The eunuchs skillfully placed the letters into their own categories before placing them all into a cabinet that resembled a medicine cabinet.

Eunuchs, carrier birds, a bamboo spider. Every single one of them moved fast and efficiently to fulfill their role in the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang's curiosity was piqued when Sima Lan turned and started walking toward a nearby staircase. Li Huowang snapped back to reality and followed after Sima Lan, who turned left to go down the stairs.

"Memorize the markings. You can enter from both the Gate of Rest and the Gate of Life. Make sure not to enter the wrong door," Sima Lan said, pushing one of the doors open to reveal a dim hall.

The hall was filled with screens. There were shadowy figures either standing or sitting behind those screens, which meant every screen was occupied. They were so close to Li Huowang, but even his keen ears couldn't quite make out their conversation.

Goosebumps broke out all over Li Huowang as he walked through the forest of screens amidst the muffled voices in the hall. Li Huowang had to reassure himself that he was in the Surveillance Bureau, not in a town filled with ghosts.

Li Huowang was worried that his identity would end up getting revealed the moment he entered. Fortunately, the spindle that he had received from Zhuge Yuan was pretty effective.

Li Huowang looked around and found that the interior of this hall was similar to the previous hall. The screens and pillars were riddled with molds. Li Huowang didn't expect that the grand hall would be so musty and dirty.

“Senior Sima, why is everything here moldy? Is the ventilation here that bad?” Li Huowang asked casually.

“Maybe. The molds appeared at the beginning of this year; they weren't here last year,” Sima Lan replied. Then, he pointed at something and said, “Since this is your first time here, go ahead and register yourself over there. Once you're done, I'll tell you more about certain things.”

Li Huowang followed Sima Lan's finger and saw a plain-looking man in the distance.

The plain-looking man wearing a long robe was counting something with his fingers behind a tall counter. The tall counters reminded Li Huowang of the counters at the pawn shops of the modern world.

If Li Huowang had no idea that he was in the Surveillance Bureau, he would have thought that the plain-looking man was a storyteller working in a tea shop.

Sima Lan's black bird flew toward the tall counter and pecked the plain-looking man.

The plain-looking man didn't even glance at Li Huowang; he continued counting in one hand while he extended his other hand to Li Huowang and said, “Give me your identity token.”

The plain-looking man's surname was Nangong, and he stroked the engraving on the token for a few moments before throwing it back to Li Huowang. “You must be Er Jiu. Erniu told me about you before he left.”

Li Huowang nodded. He could still remember that Ji Xiang's real name was Feng Erniu.

Nangong started talking with Sima Lan.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang mulled over his next steps.

Eventually, the conversation between Nangong and Sima Lan ended. Sima Lan turned to Li Huowang and got ready to bring him somewhere else.

Li Huowang stared at Sima Lan and asked, "Senior Sima, who should I find if I want to accept missions?"

Sima Lan was surprised, but he didn't show it on the outside as he replied, "You've become a Banner, so you don't need to accept missions from others. You have to choose your own missions."

Sima Lan then led Li Huowang to the great hall and pulled open one of the screens.

A table surrounded by a few stools was behind the screen.

Sima Lan's bird pecked the table, and a pale-looking eunuch arrived. The pale-looking eunuch bowed toward Li Huowang and Sima Lan. At this point, Li Huowang had become one of the shadowy figures he saw behind the screens earlier.

"Ask him if you need any missions. He has the latest list of missions, but of course, those missions were updated this morning. If you need any help from someone below your rank or from someone idle, you can ask him to enlist them for your mission."

Li Huowang nodded at Sima Lan's explanation and turned to the pale-looking eunuch, asking, "How do I accept missions?"

Chapter 378 - Records

At Li Huowang's question, the pale-looking eunuch politely explained, "Sir, only those below the Seventh Banner would have to look for someone to give them a mission. The procedure changes slightly from the Seventh Banner onward."

Li Huowang nodded, verifying that Tuoba Danqing hadn't lied to him.

The Surveillance Bureau was very lax to outsiders but strict to their own members.

The higher Li Huowang's rank, the stronger the restrictions he would have to face.

If Li Huowang were to become a Ji Xiang, it would be no different from becoming an official of the Imperial Palace. Li Huowang would have his own custom-made uniform as well as daily missions to accomplish.

Of course, the Surveillance Bureau would become more generous to him by then.

The Surveillance Bureau might bestow upon him the method to disperse a person's obsession, which would allow them to keep on extending their lifespan using lifespan pills. Of course, that wouldn't be it; Li Huowang would also gain access to the Surveillance Bureau's treasures and hidden techniques.

The higher his rank, the stronger the treasures and techniques he could receive. A mercenary like Li Huowang would never be able to have access to such things unless he made a drastic move. At best, Li Huowang could buy items from the Surveillance Bureau using lifespan pills.

Li Huowang's quality of work and speed would be the deciding factor when it came to when the Surveillance Bureau would officially allow him entry into their inner circle.

Once the higher-ups of the Surveillance Bureau believed that a certain worker was smart, hardworking, strong, and with a reputable background, they would send someone to negotiate with the said worker, asking them to enter the inner circle.

Of course, Li Huowang didn't really care about that. He just wanted to fulfill his own goals. "Are there any missions related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao?"

"Please give me a moment, sir. I'll go and fetch the relevant documents," said the pale-looking eunuch with a bow. Then, he turned around and walked out of the screen.

Sima Lan frowned, and the blind black bird spoke in his stead, "Why are you looking for the Sitting Oblivion Dao?"

"I have a grudge against them," said Li Huowang. His excuse was both believable and reasonable.

Sima Lan didn't probe any further, but it was unsure whether he believed Li Huowang or not.

Soon, the pale-looking eunuch returned with a stack of parchment and papers.

"Sir, these are all—"

The pale-looking eunuch's words had yet to finish echoing in the air when Li Huowang grabbed the documents and read them. He read through all of them but found none of them contained anything about Bei Feng.

Li Huowang looked up and saw that Sima Lan had disappeared somewhere.

Li Huowang merely shrugged and asked the pale-looking eunuch. "What's wrong with these missions? These are just some random small fries. The majority of them are suspicions as well rather than confirmed sightings. Do you have any missions involving the Four Joys or the Three Officials?"

The pale-looking eunuch became even more pallid at Li

Huowang's remark as he hurriedly said, "Oh, no, sir. If there were any missions involving the Four Joys or the Three Officials, we would send people to deal with them immediately!

"Those figures are exceedingly dangerous, and we can't let any missions related to them rot in here, waiting for someone to take the mission during their spare time.

"Missions are divided in ranks as well, sir, and the missions involving the Four Joys or the Three Officials would always be considered Third-rank missions.

"The leader would immediately dispatch people to deal with such missions as soon as they appear. There's no way we'll wait for someone to take it here."

Li Huowang nodded, finding the pale-looking eunuch's explanation as reasonable.

The Surveillance Bureau had to react fast enough to the appearance of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's higher-ranking members; otherwise, the Liang Kingdom would suffer greatly.

Unfortunately, the discovery put Li Huowang at an impasse. He was in the Surveillance Bureau, but he still couldn't find Bei Feng.

Li Huowang pondered briefly before asking, "Are there any information or records about the Four Joys and the Three Officials? Anything is fine."

"We do have those. Please give me a moment, sir."

Li Huowang had just in case, but the pale-looking eunuch moved speedily and soon returned with a massive stack of documents. "Sir, you're a Seventh Banner, so you can read all of these."

Li Huowang decided to do just that. Of course, his goal was to find any information related to Bei Feng. After reading the entire stack of documents, Li Huowang finally discovered something. Bei Feng was in Tanyang County's Wu State three years ago.

According to the records, Bei Feng had accompanied Dong

Feng to seize control of a Strayed One. They had blackmailed the Strayed One, saying that Bei Feng would kill the family of the Strayed One if the latter refused to cooperate with Bei Feng.

Li Huowang frowned and continued reading.

Bei Feng was one of the Four Joys, so he was extremely strong. He was strong enough to instantly drown anyone in confusion. He had excellent synergy with Dong Feng, allowing him to exchange bodies with others.

They needed just a single eye contact to exchange bodies with that person.

To make matters worse, they would retain their abilities even after the exchange.

The records revealed that they had plunged the entire Tanyang County into chaos, and they exchanged the bodies of many people; a notable example of it was the incident wherein they exchanged the bodies of the wife and the grandmother while they exchanged the bodies of the grandson and the husband.

They caused great confusion in everyone's relationship with each other.

Bei Feng was an exceptional expert at exploiting others through tricks and deception by taking advantage of their desires, which was the hallmark of the Four Joys.

Bei Feng managed to fool a ton of people into becoming his accomplice. He even managed to transform a seventeen-year-old girl into a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao in just two hours, effectively turning her into Wu Tiao[1].

The battle on that fateful day resulted in the deaths of a Ji Xiang and a Jian Zheng. However, they managed to secure the Strayed One, and they also killed Dong Feng.

Li Huowang memorized every single piece of information related to Bei Feng. Li Huowang knew of the Ji Xiang position, and he reckoned that Jian Zhengs were most likely higher in rank compared to Ji Xiangs.

The Surveillance Bureau had sent over a dozen people, but they still lost two members, which was enough evidence of Bei Feng's formidable strength.

Moreover, Bei Feng possessed the strange power to make anyone else exchange bodies with someone else; he could also transform someone into a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao through deceit.

The pressure on Li Huowang's shoulders abruptly became heavy upon realizing the true strength of the Four Joys. Based on the records, it was impossible for Li Huowang to stand against them alone.

Thankfully, Li Huowang no longer needed to fight by himself.

Can Bei Feng threaten to kill the people inside the hallucination of a Strayed One?

Li Huowang hesitated at the thought, and his expression turned ugly at the thought that his mother and Yang Na could fall for the deceit of the Sitting Oblivion Dao or die in the worst-case scenario.

Li Huowang handed over the stack of documents to the pale-looking eunuch.

"You may return these," Li Huowang said.

"Yes." The pale-looking eunuch bowed and turned around to leave.

"Wait," Li Huowang stopped the pale-looking eunuch and asked, "With my rank, can I read the majority of the documents here?"

"Yes, you may read anything in the first to fourth archive."

"I need information about Strayed Ones. Anything will do," said Li Huowang with clenched fists. Li Huowang was a Strayed One, but he wasn't actually quite clear as to what exactly were Strayed Ones.

Li Huowang was already here, so he decided to take complete advantage of the Surveillance Bureau's resources to understand the Strayed Ones.

1. unknown position for now, will change after more info 🤔

Chapter 379 - Strayed Ones

“Father?” Li Sui lifted his two eyeballs and saw a rapidly beating heart overhead.

Li Sui had no idea why his father’s heart was beating so fast, and the discovery amused Li Sui rather than unnerved him. It wasn't the first time that it happened, but the experience never seemed to get old.

Li Huowang had ignored Li Sui's call, prompting Li Sui to carefully poke Li Huowang’s heart with his tentacle. Upon receiving no reaction, Li Sui tugged on it gently.

“Ouch! What are you doing?! Stay still!” Li Huowang scolded.

Li Sui was startled, and he immediately retracted his tentacle.

Li Sui dared not move upon getting scolded.

After a while, Li Sui started moving once more, but he didn't change spots. Instead, he decided to toy with the black spindle that his father had given to him.

Li Sui had no idea what the word "spindle" meant, but his father called it "spindle," so he decided to call it that as well. Li Sui circled the spindle numerous times with his two eyes before getting bored. However, he didn’t want to go out. He liked to stay in Li Huowang’s abdomen, as it was quiet and peaceful.

After a while, Li Sui carefully extended a single tentacle with an eyeball out of Li Huowang’s belly button to examine the world outside. Li Sui saw a table before his father. Aside from a cup of tea, there was nothing else on the table. Li Huowang looked anxious, as if he was waiting for something.

Where are we? Li Sui tried to listen to his surroundings, but he could only hear muffled noises.

Oh, someone's here. Li Sui cast a careful gaze at the pale-looking man holding a stack of documents. Why are there so many books? Is father going to teach me how to read again? I don't want to learn anymore.

The pale-looking man placed the documents on the table.

Li Sui wanted to read, but he was unfamiliar with the words on the documents aside from a few words.

Strayed Ones? What does that mean? Li Sui tried to take a closer look, but Li Huowang had picked up the book.

Li Huowang's pupils quivered as he read the book. He read it carefully, afraid of missing even a single letter, as it contained a ton of information about the Strayed Ones!

Li Huowang flipped through the pages and was taken aback.

The book truly had a ton of information about the Strayed Ones, but they were all descriptions rather than what Li Huowang needed. Li Huowang needed the method of using a Strayed One's eyes and a Muddled One's hair to make an artifact.

"Next," said Li Huowang as he grabbed the next book to start reading it. Li Huowang read book after book, but all of them were books about using a Strayed One's body or mind for cultivation purposes.

Li Huowang was disgruntled by the discovery. The information was useless to him unless he cut himself open and refined his own organs into weapons or artifacts.

Chirp!

A shrill chirping interrupted Li Huowang, startling him.

"Why are you reading about the Strayed Ones? Do you have a Strayed One?"

Li Huowang turned around and saw Sima Lan.

Is he suspicious of me? Li Huowang was slightly flustered. He took a quick breath and arranged the books neatly before replying,

"I read that Bei Feng is a Strayed One, so I'm trying to learn more about the Strayed Ones."

"How about the elders of the Ao Jing Sect? Did they not tell you about them?" Sima Lan asked.

Li Huowang removed the cloth bag from his back and opened it, revealing the artifact that Ji Xiang had given to him—the wish wood. The Strayed One's tongue was still pinned to the wood.

"The elders at Cross Temple always told me that the Strayed Ones are living treasures. We must not fight them head-on and must coax them gently. They never told me why, though. There's no way I can try coaxing Bei Feng if I ever meet him next time, so what am I supposed to do?"

"I see," Sima Lan said, nodding. "Then, you don't have to check the fourth archive. You're a Seventh Banner, so I'm just going to tell you."

Li Huowang's ears perked up as Sima Lan said, "Beings that live and die cannot produce another being that can't live and die; beings that can't change cannot produce beings that can change. Those who can't live and die can produce beings that can live and die; those who can't change can produce beings that can change. Beings that can live and die must live and die; beings that can change must change.

"This is why such beings live, die, and change."

Li Huowang's head throbbed in pain as he attempted to comprehend Sima Lan's words. In the end, he decided to stop Sima Lan and said, "Senior Sima, please keep the explanation simple enough for me. I'm not exactly educated, so you can just keep things simple for me."

Sima Lan frowned, and his gaze on Li Huowang briefly contained contempt and disdain. However, he didn't express it and simply knocked the blind black bird on its head.

The blind black bird answered, "Our master said that everyone has ten emotions and eight sufferings, but Strayed Ones are different. Not only do they have the ten emotions and eight sufferings, but they also have the primordial breath. In the beginning, everything is just starting to take form; when there is form, there is essence, but it is incomplete.

"Strayed Ones are like that—they have both form and essence, but they're still incomplete. The Strayed Ones are extraordinary foes, as they possess the primordial breath.

"They can make use of their primordial breath to meld their ten emotions and eight sufferings with the Heavenly Dao. Even the Gods cannot save you against a Strayed One once the latter has decided to use their primordial breath against you."

Li Huowang gulped at the remark and hurriedly asked, "What's going to happen once a Strayed One decides to use their primordial breath?"

"The land would be torn apart; the seas would churn, as storms and torrential downpours would all be just a single thought away for that Strayed One!" Sima Lan exclaimed, sounding surprised by his own voice as well.

Hm? Li Huowang was surprised. Are Strayed Ones really that strong? If a Strayed One is capable of reshaping the land itself, can they still be called a Strayed One?

Li Huowang's eyes glazed over as he peered over Sima Lan's shoulders to stare at the illusions behind him—the faceless Hong Zhong, the innocent monk, the headless Peng Longteng, and the legless Jin Shanzhao.

No way! How can their explanation of Strayed One be so different? Why aren't they talking about hallucinations? What about the illusions that follow a Strayed One once a Strayed One kills? And what about the technique to project my body's illusion?

"Hohoho, of course, the runt from the Mo Family isn't exactly knowledgeable about the Strayed Ones. He has merely recited what he had memorized from textbooks, and do you think that he has seen a Strayed One before?" Hong Zhong teased Li Huowang, "Oh, wait, he's standing in front of a Strayed One right now! Hahaha! "

Li Huowang's eyelid twitched, and he directly ignored Hong Zhong. He stared at Sima Lan and asked, "If an ordinary Strayed One is already that strong, doesn't that mean that Bei Feng is even stronger?"

"Yes," Sima Lan said, nodding. "I'm sure you already know, but it's exceedingly difficult to deceive the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. That's exactly why Bei Feng became one of the Four Joys."

"How do I fight Bei Feng?"

"If we knew that, Bei Feng would have perished long ago. How could we let him wreak havoc everywhere he goes?"

Li Huowang frowned at Sima Lan's response. It seemed that he had to go back to the drawing board and revise his plan.

Chapter 380 - Storyteller

Does that mean Bei Feng is different from the other Sitting Oblivion Dao members? And why can't I control my hallucinations? Is it because I can't control the primordial breath? Did Bei Feng manage to control his hallucination because he learned how to control his primordial breath?

Li Huowang slowly analyzed Sima Lan's words while calmly listening to the latter's explanation. After all, Sima Lan's words were the words of his deceased family head.

What if the family head was wrong? Li Huowang had gone through so many things that he had learned to doubt the veracity of the stories told by others in this world.

Li Huowang hesitated but did not question Sima Lan's explanation out loud, as questioning the words of the Mo Family Head was both impolite and borderline insulting.

"Are you trying to find Bei Feng? What did he do to you?" Sima Lan asked, sensing that Li Huowang and the Sitting Oblivion Dao had a long history with each other.

Li Huowang grimaced as he clenched his fist, and his voice sounded deep as he said, "It's not just Bei Feng! I detest everyone in the Sitting Oblivion Dao! They had disguised themselves as our six elders in the Ao Jing Sect!"

Sima Lan nodded calmly as if it was a common occurrence.

"Do not be too fixated on revenge. You'll be an easy target to trick once they discover your obsession," Sima Lan advised.

"Thank you for your advice. I understand."

"Take your time to read the books here. If you don't understand anything, go and find Nangong. I have some matters to do, so I will leave now," said Sima Lan. Then, he turned around to leave, but he had just taken two steps when he came to a halt and said, "Oh, you might be out of luck if you're looking for the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

"The Storyteller had just killed Fa Cai, so the Sitting Oblivion Dao must be looking for the Storyteller to avenge Fa Cai. You might find it difficult to find them."

Sima Lan's casual remark made Li Huowang's heart beat even faster. The Storyteller? Zhuge Yuan?

"Senior Sima, is that true?" Li Huowang asked urgently.

"Of course. The Storyteller just killed one of the Three Officials, and the rest of the Sitting Oblivion Dao is definitely not going to just stand by and let him go. Two days ago, there were reports of people spotting the Storyteller fighting against the Sitting Oblivion Dao. You don't have to worry about your revenge for now since someone's taking care of it for you. Isn't that great?" Sima Lan said before finally stepping out of the screen.

Left all alone, Li Huowang turned to the pale-looking eunuch.

"Please find all the records you can about Zhuge Yuan, as well as anything that has the word Storyteller in it!"

The pale-looking eunuch soon returned, but rather than a stack of documents, he was only carrying a single, thin book.

"Do we only have a book about Zhuge Yuan?" Li Huowang asked, sounding confused.

"There are more in the sixth archive, sir, but you need to be a Third General to read them."

Li Huowang sighed. Why is the Surveillance Bureau doing this? Hiding information here and there. Are they not worried that someone will end up destroying an entire nation because they failed to get certain information?

Li Huowang picked up the book and focused on reading. The information in the book was roughly the same as what he already knew, aside from a few details.

According to the Surveillance Bureau, there were numerous Storytellers, and Zhuge Yuan was just one of them.

Whenever they appeared, a massive change would occur in that place. The Storytellers would appear haphazardly, and no one knew their headquarters.

The Surveillance Bureau usually doesn't bother with those who aren't threats to the existence of the Liang Kingdom.

However, it wasn't the same for Zhuge Yuan.

Storyteller Zhuge Yuan has been spreading rumors and propaganda. Kill on sight.

The Emperor of the Liang Kingdom had passed down such an order. Of course, Zhuge Yuan would be fine so long as he stayed out of the Surveillance Bureau's radar, but the Surveillance Bureau would definitely do everything in its power to kill Zhuge Yuan once he was found.

Li Huowang was certain that the Surveillance Bureau had more records of Zhuge Yuan, but he couldn't read them with his current rank.

I think the Surveillance Bureau knows more about Zhuge Yuan's personality. Is he really that kind? Why did he become a Storyteller? What if he's a storyteller in the literal sense of the word? Why did he snatch away that Muddled One last time?

Li Huowang carefully pondered over those questions. Then, he pressed his abdomen and felt the spindle underneath it.

Zhuce Yuan had given him a helping hand. If it hadn't been for him, Li Huowang would have been in grave danger.

"We will meet again in the future, Er Jiu. My name is Zhuge Yuan. If you have problems that you can't resolve, come and find me at Xing Island in the Western Seas. My powers are limited, but I will help you as much as I can."

Zhuce Yuan had said such words to Li Huowang, but Li Huowang knew that he couldn't trust others so easily in this world. Moreover, whether Zhuge Yuan was truly a kind person or not was still debatable.

Li Huowang thought for a long time before shaking his head and walking out from the screen. Whether he trusted Zhuge Yuan or not didn't really matter to him. Li Huowang would have to find him anyway if he wanted to uncover Bei Feng's whereabouts.

“This is your first time here, so let me show you the way out.”

“Do you have a map of the Liang Kingdom? The more detailed it is, the better.”

Under the pale-looking eunuch's guidance, Li Huowang arrived back at the plaza with the celestial globe. Li Huowang sighed as he stared at the massive globe.

Li Huowang was holding a map in hand, and the location of the Western Seas had been marked on the map—he had marked exactly where Zhuge Yuan had told him to go if he ever needed help.

Unfortunately, it was a pretty distant place. Li Huowang wanted to leave the same day, but it was already dusk by the time he finished purchasing the rations and the items he would need for the trip.

Li Huowang sat at a roadside stall and stared at the sunset. The streets of Shangjing dimmed as the sun vanished into the horizon.

I need to rest properly today because I'll depart tomorrow. Regardless of what Zhuge Yuan thinks of me, I'm sure I'll have to risk my life on this journey.

“Sir, your noodles and meat buns are here. I'll place your vinegar on this saucer.”

Li Huowang pushed the vinegar away. Meat buns are desserts; why are they dipping their desserts in vinegar? The people here are crazy, too, not just the world itself.

Bun caught a whiff of the fragrant food, and it nudged Li Huowang's leg with its nose.

Li Huowang gave Bun some noodles and a few meat buns before ignoring it outright.

Bun needs to lose some weight.

The stall owner approached Li Huowang while wiping his hands on his apron. “Dear customer, you can take it slow today. The sun is setting, but we don’t have a curfew today. It’s the week before the New Year, after all.”

Li Huowang nodded and continued with his meal. So it has been another year...

On that night, Li Huowang lay on his bed and listened to the din outside. The people were celebrating outside, creating a festive atmosphere. However, Li Huowang wasn't interested in them at all, as he was too worried about the dangers he would soon face. He couldn't get his heart to calm down.

Li Huowang knew that it would be dangerous, but there was no way he could increase his strength drastically in such a short period of time. He couldn't even refine artifacts using the body of a Strayed One. After all, how could he use his own body as a material?

Hm? Wait a minute...

Chapter 381 - Refining

“Shopkeeper Li, how is the cinnabar that I requested? Has it arrived yet?”

Shopkeeper Li busy with the abacus looked up head and saw a weird-looking man in a red Daoist robe. Shopkeeper Li smiled instantly, as the weird-looking man was a big buyer. “Hehe, sir, it arrived a long time ago and has been waiting for you. The entire thirty kilograms are ready. Little Tiger, help this customer deliver his order home.”

“No need, I’ll carry it myself,” Li Huowang said, paying the final installment. Then, he grabbed lifted the sack with one hand and stepped out of the pharmacy.

The pharmacy assistant, Little Tiger, looked at his boss in astonishment and asked, “Shopkeeper, why did that guy buy so much cinnabar? Most people only buy a few pieces, even if they use cinnabar for medicinal purposes.”

The shopkeeper flicked Little Tiger on the forehead and asked, “Did that hurt? Good! I want you to remember that you’re just an assistant! The reason behind our customers’ purchases is none of your business! So what if he eats those cinnabar with rice?”

"It's none of your business!"

Meanwhile, Li Huowang walked up to the carriage outside and hurled the heavy sack of cinnabar onto the carriage. Li Huowang then hopped into the carriage and let loose a sharp whistle.

Bun showed up and hopped into the carriage.

“Let’s go!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He glanced at the sack of cinnabar next to him, pulled the reins, and urged the horse to pull the carriage toward the city gates on the western side of the city.

Last night, Li Huowang discovered a bottleneck in his previous approach. He mulled over the matter and recalled that others used cinnabar to refine artifacts. If they could do it, why couldn't he?

Li Huowang had an extraordinary regeneration rate as well. Aside from pain, he wouldn't really suffer from any untoward effects. In addition, artifacts made from the organs of a Strayed One would have extraordinary abilities.

Li Huowang reckoned that his strength would increase dramatically if he were to obtain such artifacts; he also believed that they would be useful in his upcoming showdown with Bei Feng.

The horse pulling the carriage emitted distinct clopping noises on the stone steps as the carriage gradually made its way out of the city. Once outside, Li Huowang went off the beaten path until he found a place that met his requirements at sunset.

The place was a flat clearing before several graves.

Bun's alert level shot through the roof; it lowered its stance and bared its teeth at the graves.

"I'm just borrowing this clearing in front of you guys for one night. Please don't take offense for what I'm about to do," Li Huowang said, bowing toward the graves before turning around to retrieve something from the carriage.

Bun pounced forward just then, startling a few mice that scampered off in all directions.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang took out the small furnace he had obtained from the Human Xiaos. He placed some cinnabar inside the furnace and laid it down on top of some high-quality charcoal.

Li Huowang had some experience refining pills, so refining cinnabar was an easy task for him. An hour later, Li Huowang opened the furnace, and a silver liquid along with some dregs appeared before Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's refinement method had come from Dan Yangzi. The latter had taught him, while he was still at Zephyr Temple. The silver liquid from refining cinnabar was called quicksilver, or mercury in Li Huowang's previous world.

Li Huowang filtered out the dregs before taking out a bowl to collect the quicksilver.

However, he needed more quicksilver.

Li Huowang proceeded to go for another round of refinement. An hour later, Li Huowang's lips curled up into a satisfied smile as he stared at the large bowl of quicksilver in front of him.

"This should be enough..." Li Huowang muttered and turned around to take the shovel that he had prepared beforehand. He immediately started digging until he had created a hole deep enough to submerge a human being. Li Huowang closed his eyes, took a deep breath, and rummaged through a leather bag, pulling out a gleaming dagger amidst the torture apparatus inside the bag.

The monk rushed over with a look of reluctance and said, "Daoist, can you reconsider? It doesn't have to be like this,"

On the contrary, Hong Zhong sitting on Peng Longteng's shoulders looked eager to witness the spectacle.

Li Huowang ignored the illusions' words; his determination remained as steady as a boulder. He raised the dagger in his hand and slashed at his scalp, tearing it open to reveal the blood vessels underneath.

Li Huowang took off his clothes and stood naked in the pit.

He lowered his head and covered himself with soil.

Burying oneself was difficult, but Li Sui was around to help.

Li Sui's tentacles swept the soil toward Li Huowang, making sure that Li Huowang was buried in densely packed soil.

"Li Sui, be obedient, okay? Help me... just a bit more," Li Huowang urged.

Li Sui obliged and two tentacles emerged from Li Huowang's neck. The tentacles lifted the large bowl filled with quicksilver and carried it over toward Li Huowang's open scalp.

Li Huowang gulped and said, "Move it slightly aside before pouring it into the wound; make sure not to spill it."

Li Sui obeyed and focused completely on the task at hand.

The large bowl of quicksilver tilted, and the silver liquid plummeted into Li Huowang's wound, creating a magnificent sight as they sparkled in the moonlight.

"Carefu—AAAAH!"

The process was extremely difficult, but Li Huowang dared not waver, afraid of spilling the mercury. The pain was tolerable at first, but it eventually became an itch that pervaded him entirely. When the itch turned extreme and reached its peak, Li Huowang struggled desperately against the soil that had surrounded him.

Li Huowang felt as if ants were biting him all over, and the sensation was driving him insane. Li Huowang twisted and turned, squeezing himself upward like a snake. After much effort, he finally managed to escape the pit he had dug himself.

"Haaa..." Li Huowang trembled like an aspen tree, and he was in so much pain he couldn't even tell which part of his body radiated the strongest pain.

Li Huowang took a few moments to calm himself down and get used to the pain, but when the cold breeze of the twelfth lunar month swept over his skinless frame; the pain was akin to being stabbed a thousand times with a knife.

It was so painful that he almost fainted.

Li Huowang took out the Fiery Scripture and chanted the incantations inside of it. A burning centipede climbed up Li Huowang, and he was soon covered in charred scars.

It was going to worsen the pain, but Li Huowang still decided to put on his clothes. Li Huowang glanced at the pit and heaved a sigh of relief. Then, he walked over to the carriage and collapsed inside of it. Li Huowang fought the fatigue to curl up and defend himself from the cold breeze before finally fainting.

Chapter 382 - New Year

Li Huowang saw the night sky when he opened his eyes once more, and the sight baffled him until the monk told him that he had slept for three days. Aside from being hungry, Li Huowang felt much better than before he had peeled off his own skin.

Li Huowang pulled out some dry rations and a water flask. Then, he ate and drank with relish. After his meal, he stood up and walked toward his own skin. He was surprised to see Bun curled up into a large yellow ball—from head to tail—on top of Li Huowang's skin.

Bun was asleep, but it dared not leave Li Huowang's skin.

Li Huowang even saw two large dead rats nearby, indicating that Bun had protected Li Huowang's skin while the former was still asleep.

Bun woke up immediately upon getting hit by the fragrance of food.

It wagged its tail incessantly at Li Huowang.

It's bizarre how I'm starting to like dogs more and more the more people I meet. Li Huowang patted Bun's head. He threw half a piece of bread far away, letting Bun fetch it on its own.

Bun rushed toward the bread and chewed on it.

Li Huowang glanced at Bun before pulling his skin out of the soil.

He had considered other ways to peel off his skin, but this method was the best, and it required no help from any outsiders. Moreover, the skin was completely intact and without any damage.

Li Huowang disposed of the mercury before retrieving the Profound Records and walking toward the carriage. Li Huowang proceeded to wrap his skin around the dry straw dummy he had prepared beforehand.

Li Huowang cast a peculiar gaze upon his own skin. It was a bizarre sight, indeed. Li Huowang took out six incense sticks, lit them up, and then inserted three incense sticks in each eye socket of the dummy.

Li Huowang cut a few strands of his own hair.

Afterward, he drew a few symbols on his hand, which was holding a few cinnabars.

"Heaven and Earth, the root of all energy! Broadly cultivated through eons! Within and beyond the three realms, I alone am honored. The golden radiance inside of me shall reflect on my body!"

Just as the final syllable of the chant came out of Li Huowang's mouth, he finished drawing symbols on his hand. Li Huowang felt nervous just then. Did it work? It should work, right? I've been practicing it for a long time.

Li Huowang eventually saw white smoke rising from the seven orifices of his skin wrapped around the dry straw dummy. The incense he had inserted into the straw had caused it to burn.

The skin grew smaller as the smoke grew larger and thicker. The white smoke eventually dissipated, and a palm-sized humanoid figure appeared in front of Li Huowang.

Success! Li Huowang grabbed the humanoid figure and examined it closely. The humanoid figure's features were blurry, and the skin had turned wax yellow. The humanoid figure was like a tiny paper human being cut out from turmeric paper.

From what Li Huowang had read, the artifact in his hand would ward off disasters and turn his luck around during unfavorable moments. Most importantly, it would die in Li Huowang's stead.

Li Huowang had no idea how that worked, but one thing was for sure—the artifact was a life-saving artifact.

In addition, he could make more of this life-saving artifact once he had recovered enough strength, which meant Li Huowang had an "infinite" supply of this life-saving artifact.

Li Huowang finally felt confident in the face of upcoming dangers.

Unfortunately, the other Strayed One artifacts weren't so easy to refine. He had to find natural treasures that could only be stumbled upon, not bought to refine such artifacts, and there were even artifacts with materials written in characters he couldn't understand. Among those powerful artifacts, the life-saving artifact that he had just refined was the easiest and most straightforward artifact to refine.

"Do I.. have a golden finger^[1] now?" Li Huowang muttered while staring at the humanoid figure in his hand. He then mocked himself inwardly.

"Dad? What's a golden finger?" Li Sui asked.

Li Huowang shook his head and refused to answer Li Sui's question.

Li Huowang pondered over where he could hide the humanoid figure. It was a powerful artifact that couldn't be stored haphazardly. After a while, Li Huowang emerged from his thoughts and held the humanoid figure near his navel.

A tentacle reached out and wrapped around the humanoid figure before dragging it into Li Huowang's belly button.

"Thanks, Dad."

Li Huowang nodded and hopped into the carriage. "Let's go."

Li Huowang took out some cold dry rations and took a bite. He then washed the food down with cold water.

"By the way, tonight is New Year's Eve, right?"

"Yes, it's New Year's Eve. Actually, I've been looking forward to this night since last month."

Puppy dressed in a silk robe chatted with Zhao Wu. Eventually, Puppy found a seat and sat down to eat. Puppy instantly zeroed in on a large chicken thigh, and he immediately devoured it.

Before he could swallow the food, Puppy's eyes inadvertently landed on the other dishes on their New Year's Eve dinner—braised carp, stewed meatballs, pickled mustard greens with pork belly, pickled peppers with lamb tripe, four-happiness meatballs, spicy pig trotters, stir-fried meat with poached eggs, and chopped chicken.

Yang Xiaohai couldn't make anything fancy, but each dish was a hearty dish capable of satisfying the palate of just about anyone.

Of course, they could only eat so many delicious dishes during the New Year's Eve dinner. Puppy was so moved by the delectable sight that he felt that tonight was the happiest New Year's Eve in his life so far.

Puppy picked up the tender pieces of the fish using his chopsticks and placed them into his wife's bowl.

"Eat more! Let's work hard and eat more than that Gao fool!"

The others weren't much better than Puppy, especially those new disciples that the Lu Family Troupe had recruited recently. Those children were so eager to eat that they almost buried their heads into the plates.

"Ah... I wonder where Miaomiao is right now. Is she even eating properly?" Chun Xiaoman muttered absentmindedly. She stabbed the bones in her bowl with her chopsticks.

Zhao Wu was sitting next to her, and he picked up a meatball that he quickly placed into her bowl, saying, "She has divine powers, and Senior Li is with her. Don't worry, let's enjoy the New Year and talk about it later."

"Eat," said Gao Zhijian as he placed another meatball into her bowl.

Everyone ate in delight, and that was when a figure appeared in the Bai Family's large courtyard. "Oh, a New Year's Eve dinner?

The food must taste great, as I can smell it even from here.”

The familiar voice made everyone turn toward where it had come from at the same time.

Bai Lingmiao was standing there with a smile.

Chun Xiaoman reacted before anyone else; she stood up and rushed over to Bai Lingmiao. She touched Bai Lingmiao all over, and upon confirming that Bai Lingmiao had returned in one piece rather, Chun Xiaoman sighed in relief.

“You really worried me. The next time you leave, you better say goodbye to me before leaving, okay?” Chun Xiaoman said.

Bai Lingmiao patted Chun Xiaoman's shoulder, and then she walked past her to go straight to the hall. There were a total of three tables in the hall, and she headed straight for the largest one.

More specifically, she walked toward the main seat facing the entrance.

Lu Zhuangyuan was sitting in the main seat, as he was the eldest of the group. A spicy pig trotter in his mouth made his left cheek bulge, and he stopped chewing upon seeing Bai Lingmiao.

Bai Lingmiao merely stood in front of Lu Zhuangyuan.

However, Lu Zhuangyuan instantly realized what she was trying to say, so he laughed heartily and picked up the tobacco pouch on the table. Then, he moved aside and stole his son's seat by nudging the latter away from the table.

“Hehehe, Miss Bai, welcome back! Oh? That Daoist didn’t come back with you?” Lu Zhuangyuan said.

Bai Lingmiao lifted a cup of wine high up and exclaimed, “Let me give everyone a toast on this New Year’s Eve!”

Chapter 383 - Arrival

Everyone stared with wide eyes at Bai Lingmiao and her wine glass.

What happened to Miss Bai? How come she had changed so much?

Bai Lingmiao had never been the type to propose toasts.

The others hesitantly picked up their wine glasses and toasted Bai Lingmiao—the true owner of the village.

Everyone started eating again.

Chun Xiaoman sat next to Bai Lingmiao and grabbed her hand. She sounded anxious as she asked, “Miaomiao, what's going on? Why do you seem so different now?”

Bai Lingmiao casually picked up a piece of chicken and stuffed it into her mouth.

“What?!” Chun Xiaoman’s voice was so loud it almost destroyed the roof. Chun Xiaoman what had happened when Lu Xiucui touched Li Huowang's sword.

The disciples couldn't focus on eating upon hearing Chun Xiaoman's voice. They stood up one by one, asking with concern about what had happened. After the chaotic questioning and displays of concern, the New Year’s Eve dinner soon came to an end.

It took a long time for them to settle down. Fortunately, Bai Lingmiao was still Bai Lingmiao, even though her personality had changed drastically.

However, not everyone took it lightly. Chun Xiaoman hugged Bai Lingmiao tightly while crying in regret. Chun Xiaoman blamed herself for not following Bai Lingmiao; she believed that if she had been by Bai Lingmiao's side, this wouldn't have happened.

Bai Lingmiao struggled out of Chun Xiaoman's embrace; she sounded impatient as she said, "I feel like going deaf with how loud you are. If you really care about me, you should be happy for me. I've already let go of everything now, and I feel much better."

Everything that had happened was already water under the bridge; there was no use crying over spilled milk.

Chun Xiaoman's eyes were bloodshot as she vowed, "Don't worry. Once I've mastered that supernatural technique, I won't let anyone hurt you ever again!"

"Technique? What technique?" asked Bai Lingmiao with her slender brows furrowed.

Chun Xiaoman panicked and hastily corrected herself, saying, "No, I mean, in the future! I'll find a supernatural technique to protect you in the future!"

Unfortunately, Bai Lingmiao wasn't so easily fooled. "That doesn't sound right. Don't lie to me. Did you find something under the ancestral hall? Xiaoman, tell me the truth."

Bai Lingmiao seemed to have already guessed it, so Chun Xiaoman didn't bother hiding the truth. Chun Xiaoman stared at Bai Lingmiao with a complex expression and sighed before saying, "Miaomiao, I was afraid you'd worry. You know your family..."

Chun Xiaoman rambled on, and Bai Lingmiao's eyes brightened.

She couldn't even wait for dawn as she rushed toward the Bai Family Ancestral Hall.

I should've recalled it earlier! Bai Lingmiao couldn't hide her joy as she ignored Chun Xiaoman's shouting at her from behind.

Bai Lingmiao twisted the bronze monkey statue, lifted her skirt, and rushed into the dark hall. However, Bai Lingmiao didn't go toward the main hall. Instead, she rushed to the side and opened wooden doors, one after another.

Bai Lingmiao abruptly stopped in the middle of her search. Faint scenes in the deepest recesses of her memories had just struck her. She had been here when she was young.

“Wait, wait. Where did Second Uncle and Youngest Uncle go? Wait! It's this way.”

Bai Lingmiao dashed down the corridor until she found a dead-end.

“Miaomiao, it's not here. Puppy found your family's divine technique beyond the third door on the other side,” Chun Xiaoman said.

Bai Lingmiao ignored Chun Xiaoman and crouched down. Then, she carefully groped around the uneven wall. Eventually, she pressed down on a protruding brick, and a rumbling noise echoed.

Bai Lingmiao turned and found that the dead-end wall was rising.

A row of solemnly draped white banners with lotuses presented themselves before Bai Lingmiao. A crystal-clear white lotus emitting a faint glow that illuminated the entire room stood on a table in the corner of the room.

There were books as well, and they were wrapped in soft cowhide; there was even fine sand next to them—Bai Lingmiao assumed that the sand was there to absorb moisture.

Clearly, the White Lotus Sect cherished these books.

“Goodness...” Chun Xiaoman muttered and stared blankly at the scene before her. She never really thought that there would be another secret room inside a secret room. The way the items here were secured made it clear to Chun Xiaoman that they were extraordinary. Chun Xiaoman believed that the technique she had cultivated painstakingly couldn't compare to any of the items here.

“It looks like my family has left me quite a few good things,” Bai Lingmiao looked around with joy.

“ Sniff! Sniff! ” Faint crying echoed from the corner of the room.

Bai Lingmiao’s face showed a hint of impatience. “What are you crying for? What’s there to cry about?! Do you not see how Li Huowang is right now? I thought you wanted to help him? Especially when relying on the Immortal families is useless!”

Chun Xiaoman carefully approached the corner of the room, only to discover that the crying was coming from the crouched and pitiful-looking Second Deity.

Chun Xiaoman hesitated briefly before mustering the courage to walk up to the Second Deity and patting her back gently. The Second Deity trembled like an aspen tree as she leaned against Chun Xiaoman and sobbed softly.

Chun Xiaoman's eyes glazed over while staring at the red-veiled figure in her arms. The moment they made contact, Chun Xiaoman immediately realized that the Second Deity was the true Junior Bai that she knew.

Chun Xiaoman looked up with a complex expression at the ecstatic Bai Lingmiao in the distance.

“Miaomiao, everything here belongs to the Bai Family, so I'm not going to say anything if you want to cultivate any of them. However, I'm sure you haven't forgotten those who were buried, have you?” Chun Xiaoman said.

“No need to beat around the bush. Don’t worry; I'm not going to use any of the White Lotus Sect's techniques that are extremely harmful or with unreasonable demands. I’m not Li Huowang, you know?” Bai Lingmiao replied.

“Go! Go!” Li Huowang shook the reins, urging the four horses pulling the carriage to run even faster. A regular carriage only needed one horse, but he had added three more horses to reach the seaside town sooner.

Li Huowang even slapped acceleration talismans on the three extra horses.

The four trembling horses covered in blood and sweat eventually came to a halt.

Li Huowang jumped down and turned toward the seaside town in the distance. The seaside town couldn't compare to the capital or Yingling City, but it was still bustling with people. Li Huowang swept his gaze across the black-tiled roofs of varying heights, and then his gaze landed on the sea in the distance.

The sea was vast—so vast that the horizon seemed to merge with the sea. The salty sea breeze blew over Li Huowang's skinless face, and Li Huowang frowned instantly at the stinging sensation that bloomed all over him.

We're finally here. Luckily, there were no incidents along the way. Li Huowang put on a bamboo hat with a black veil and tugged at the reins again. After passing through the unguarded town gates, Li Huowang made a beeline for the relay station and returned the three borrowed horses.

Li Huowang had borrowed those three extra horses using his identity as a member of the Surveillance Bureau.

Chapter 384 - Candy

After returning the horses, Li Huowang walked into an inn. The journey had been exhausting, and he needed to recover his strength before boarding the ship.

“Guest, your dishes are ready,” the waiter said and turned around to leave.

“Wait,” Li Huowang said, stopping the waiter. “Why are these fish and shrimp still alive? How am I supposed to eat them?”

“Hehe, is this your first time in Huating City? No, they’re not alive; it’s called raw pickling. Look, the other guests are eating it that way. Try it out first. If you don’t like it, then it’s going to be on the house.”

Li Huowang glanced at the food on other tables, and then he used his bandaged right hand to shoo the waiter away.

Due to its proximity to the sea, the local cuisine had a significant difference compared to the local cuisine in other regions. Of course, the local cuisine featured mostly seafood.

Li Huowang found it a bit hard to get used to it first, but he found the dish to be surprisingly refreshing. The pickled meat was sweet with a unique flavor to it.

Li Huowang ate to his heart’s content, and then he lay down to sleep. Li Huowang woke up later in the day. He sat up on the bed and shook his groggy head before getting out of bed.

“All right, let’s go find that ship,” Li Huowang muttered to himself. He had no issues locating the ship heading to Xing Island, as it was a square-bottomed ship capable of accommodating dozens of ships.

Li Huowang was about to get aboard the ship when the unkempt and bearded ship captain stood in his way and asked,

“Stop, stop, stop. What’s your surname?”

“Er,” Li Huowang replied.

“You'd best not fool around. Who has the surname Er in this world? If you don't want to tell me the truth, then you better get out of here. I can't be bothered to talk nonsense with you.”

“Bai,” Li Huowang added.

“That's more like it,” the captain said. Then, he examined Li Huowang from top to bottom and waved his hand.

“Next! What’s your surname?” the captain asked someone else.

Soon, the ship left the port, and the harbor district gradually disappeared into the horizon,

Li Huowang exhaled slowly while standing on the deck of the ship. He was about to meet Zhuge Yuan once more, and he felt complicated emotions at the idea alone.

Was he excited, happy, curious, and suspicious? If Li Huowang were asked, he would reply that he felt a hodgepodge of emotions.

Li Huowang rubbed his belly and felt a bit more at ease. He was no longer the Li Huowang who had just left Zephyr Temple. He was prepared regardless of what would happen next.

“Hehe, why not sit inside the cabin for a while?” A voice echoed from behind Li Huowang. “The sea breeze on deck is quite cold.”

Li Huowang turned and saw a young man with bandages around his forehead. The young man grinned while leaning closer toward Li Huowang, who was leaning on the railings of the ship.

Li Huowang couldn't be bothered with the overfamiliar young man and moved away with a frown.

“It can be said that we share the same fate, as we've embarked on a journey on the same ship. It's going to take us six days to reach Xing Island. How about you come inside and play a round of leaf cards with us? We're short one player, and it's a great stroke of coincidence that I saw you out there,” said the bandaged young man.

“No,” Li Huowang replied coldly. He took a few quick steps toward the other side of the deck.

The bandaged young man didn’t insist and turned around to walk into the cabin.

The world abruptly darkened.

Everyone looked up and saw a massive ship passing by. The ship seemed to be as huge as a mountain. She blotted out the sunlight, and she had bronze lion heads the size of Eight Immortals’ tables on her port and starboard sides.

The bronze lion heads were wide agape, and their teeth were glimmering jewelry.

The colossal ship was a warship, and the warship’s current condition meant that she had just gone through a grueling battle.

Everyone on deck immediately prostrated upon identifying the ship.

Liang Kingdom’s warship? Who are they fighting? Li Huowang pondered as the warship emitting a powerful, oppressive aura slowly made its way toward the harbor district.

Everyone on deck sighed in relief and stood up when the sun shone down on them once more.

“You’ve got guts by not prostrating toward the ship. If what you’ve done had provoked the soldiers, you would have lost your life!” The bandaged young man gave Li Huowang a thumbs-up.

“Where were they from?” Li Huowang asked.

“I don’t know, but there are some rumors that they went overseas to find something,” replied the bandaged young man.

They used a warship just to find something? Li Huowang was immediately reminded of the Muddled One that Ji Xiang and himself had been looking for. What if the Muddled One was just one of the things they’re looking for? Why do they want so many treasures?

Li Huowang felt that something big was about to happen, but he had no clues about it. In the end, Li Huowang shook his head and pushed away the distracting thoughts. Then, he turned around and headed toward the cabin.

Nothing eventful happened in the next few days. The sea was calm, but Li Huowang felt like time was excruciatingly slow, as he couldn't wait to reach Xing Island.

“Jade Kirin.”

“Six hundred.”

“Ten thousand. Baldhead, can you play faster? You dawdle like a woman.”

“Hey, wait a minute, I won! Pay up! Pay up!”

Li Huowang leaned against the ship's railings and watched silently at his fellow passengers playing leaf cards to pass the time. It only took him a few days to figure out how the game worked.

In a nutshell, the leaf cards game was like mahjong but with fewer tiles

Mahjong had over a hundred tiles, while leaf cards had only a few dozen cards.

In other words, it was a game with a much faster pace than mahjong. In addition to the rules of the game, Li Huowang had already analyzed the game behavior of the players; the bandaged young man had a penchant for cheating, while the bearded bald man was the best player and had won the most games.

Li Huowang wasn't the only spectator. The other bored passengers formed a crowd to observe them playing the game for entertainment.

“Damn it, you brat, how dare you cheat! No wonder I've been losing every round all this while!” someone exclaimed, and the card game quickly turned into a brawl.

However, the onlookers were more entertained rather than scared.

“Ahhh...” Li Huowang heard a soft voice below him. He looked down and saw that a little girl, seemingly under four years old and wearing open-crotch pants, had wobbled over to him and was tugging at Li Huowang's pants.

Upon sensing Li Huowang's gaze, the little girl grinned and opened her palm, revealing a half-eaten piece of sesame candy.

Li Huowang could see from the little girl's innocent eyes that she only wanted to share her tasty candy with others. Li Huowang was suddenly reminded of his foolish female senior back at Zephyr Temple, who wanted to share her candy with him.

"Sniff!" Bun sitting in the corner stuck its head out.

The little girl was overjoyed to see the yellow dog, and she immediately handed the half-eaten candy to Bun.

Bun opened its mouth carefully to take the candy when a tentacle rushed out and snatched it away.

The little girl let loose a peal of laughter while staring at the black tentacle retracting into Li Huowang's red Daoist robes. The little girl clearly had no idea as to what had just happened.

The little girl rushed up to Li Huowang and tiptoed with her mouth wide open while staring at where the tentacle had vanished.

Just then, a woman with a pale yellow complexion rushed toward her and hugged her. The woman held her struggling daughter and bowed repeatedly toward Li Huowang before walking toward the female-exclusive cabin.

Bun glanced at its motionless master and tilted its head. It leaned over to lick the small handprint on the red Daoist robes, and it found that the sticky handprint still carried a hint of sweetness.

Chapter 385 - The Dragon King

Li Huowang patted Bun's head gently and stared at the departing little girl through the semi-transparent black veil.

A hint of envy blossomed in his heart as he mused, How nice would it be to regress to the time when I knew nothing...

A muffled bang echoed just then, and the ship swayed to the left. The people fighting inside the cabin immediately turned into a tangled mess as they rolled to the left.

Li Huowang unsheathed his sword and thrust it into the ground. Then, he reached out and grabbed Bun's tail. That was such a massive rogue wave. Is the carriage in the lower deck okay?

Li Huowang couldn't help but feel nervous as he thought about the consequences of Black Taisui breaking free in the cabin. He couldn't wait for the ship to stabilize as he stumbled toward the stern of the ship.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief upon seeing that the carriage he had nailed down to secure was doing fine. The blindfolded horse was still quietly chewing on horse fodder as well.

Li Huowang examined the carriage carefully to reassure himself.

After a while, he turned around to leave and was astonished to find that the people in the cabin had gone missing. The thin leaf cards on the ground were scattered haphazardly on the floor.

A muffled bang echoed once more, and the entire cabin swayed violently.

What's going on? Li Huowang sensed that something was amiss and frowned deeply.

He gripped his sword and rushed toward the deck.

The pouring rain quickly drenched Li Huowang, and he eventually found the people from the cabin. They hadn't inexplicably vanished but had gathered on the deck, listening to the captain roaring while gesticulating wildly..

“Who was the idiot who lied about their surname?! Come out! Everyone on this ship is going to end up as fish food, and it's all because of you!”

Boom!

A deafening noise echoed, and the ship swayed deeper; everyone on board was frantic, creating a cacophonous din that pervaded the entire deck despite the pouring rain.

Li Huowang noticed something amiss. At first, he thought a rogue wave caused the swaying of the ship, but the nearby sea was calm. Clearly, the ship was swaying not because of powerful, towering waves but because of something else.

Li Huowang walked up to the railings and peered into the water. Perhaps it was due to the dark clouds in the sky, but the deep blue sea had become a mysterious ink-green color.

Bang!

A violent tremor ran across the ship.

Li Huowang clapped his eyes on a blurry figure underwater, and strands of black hair swayed gently in the water as they rose to the surface.

There really is something in the water. Li Huowang's expression turned ugly at the thought that there was something similar to a sea god in the waters.

Nothing had happened during the majority of the trip, and the chaos only happened when they would soon arrive at their destination. Just as Li Huowang was contemplating what he was supposed to do, he heard powerful knocks behind him.

The captain was on all fours, knocking his head on the floor.

Blood flowed out of his forehead as he stood up and drew a dagger from his waist.

“Who the hell is it?!” the captain roared desperately, “If you're not going to come out, then I'm going to kill everyone!”

The captain's bloody and desperate look scared everyone.

The young man with a bandaged forehead hurriedly pointed at the pale yellow woman next to him and said, “It's her! I heard her calling her daughter by her nickname! Her daughter's surname is Chen!”

The captain rushed toward the little girl as if he had seen an oasis in the middle of a desert. The captain grabbed the little girl by the arm; she was the same little girl who had given Li Huowang a sesame candy earlier.

“A person with the surname Chen actually dared to board the ship?! Damn it, how come the Dragon King didn't find her until it was too late!”

“What are you doing?! Let go of my daughter!” exclaimed the pale yellow woman.

“The Dragon King is already knocking on our doors! What do you think I'm about to do?! Damn it, let go!” the captain roared.

The din created by the roars and the cries of the little girl pervaded the deck, but it sounded muted amidst the torrential rain.

Bang!

The ship swayed upon getting hit by something.

The onlookers panicked and tugged at the pale yellow woman to force her to let go of her daughter.

Li Huowang was about to, but a voice echoed from next to him.

“Are you guys still humans? You actually want to feed a child to an evil spirit in the sea?”

Hmm? Li Huowang looked up to see that the bearded bald man had spoken up. The bearded bald man was one of the best leaf card players from earlier.

Since someone else had intervened, Li Huowang didn't bother to step up. He stood calmly, ready to watch how things would unfold. If someone else would handle the situation, he was happy to remain an onlooker.

The captain wiped away the rain on his face and turned to the bearded bald man, shouting, "Talk is cheap! The Dragon King is in the water! My ship won't last a few more hits, and if the ship sinks, we're all going to die!"

"You want to throw that child into the sea, but do you really think that what's in there will calm down and leave once you've thrown that child into the sea?"

"Of course! This Dragon King only eats people with the surname Chen! We'll survive once we've thrown her into the sea!"

"You fool! Move aside!" The bearded bald man pushed the captain aside and walked toward the bow of the ship. He gestured with both of his hands, creating hand seals while chanting an incantation toward the inky-black water.

The bearded bald man looked ordinary, but he definitely had tricks up his sleeves.

Li Huowang pondered briefly before asking, "Are you confident?"

"Would I be here if I weren't? Also, I can't back down now, can I? A real man won't shrink back and watch a little girl die for me."

Li Huowang glanced at the little girl in her mother's arms and nodded. "Well said."

The bearded bald man glanced at Li Huowang and finally noticed the latter's strange attire. "Who are you, and which sect are you from?"

Before Li Huowang could answer, the ship swayed once more, and a creaking noise echoed from beneath the ship. The creaking that sounded loud and clear even amidst the rain sent shivers down everyone's spine.

The captain urgently shouted, "She can't hold on anymore! Hurry up and do whatever you need to do!"

Li Huowang took off his hat and stepped onto the ship's railings. He looked down at the black hair on the surface and noticed that they had multiplied. "Regardless of what's underneath, let's work together. Hopefully, our combined strength is stronger than this thing."

The bearded bald man cast a solemn gaze at Li Huowang's skinless head and nodded.

"It's coming! Get ready!" Li Huowang roared. Then, he unsheathed his bronze coin sword and crouched down.

The bearded bald man took out some Buddhist beads and placed them on his fingers.

A black shadow emerged from the waters.

Li Huowang jumped into the waters.

The clumps of black hair on the surface of the water seemed to come alive, and they moved to catch Li Huowang in mid-air.

Li Huowang's mouth fluttered open as he chanted a quick incantation. The bronze coins came to life, and there was a flash of light as the clumps of black hair were sliced into pieces.

Li Huowang took a deep breath before landing in the cold sea.

Splash!

The salty seawater enveloped Li Huowang instantly, and he immediately shivered in pain as if he had been dunked into a cauldron of hot oil.

Chapter 386 - White Tower

In the face of a formidable enemy, Li Huowang ignored the pain that had pervaded him and took out two glowing stones from his pocket. He wasted no time and hurled the glowing stones deep into the sea.

The glowing stones descended quickly, illuminating the sea and revealing the Dragon King. The Dragon King turned out to be a snake-like entity covered in black hair.

“What is that?” Li Huowang frowned. He gnashed his teeth to suppress the pain, and then he drew his sword with his right hand before slashing at his wrist. Sinister bone spikes emerged from his severed wrist, and they flew toward the so-called Dragon King.

Soon, several black tentacles wriggled out of the stump of Li Huowang's wrist, transforming into a hand. Li Huowang's left hand swept across the entity covered in black hair, and the nearby seawater was dyed in black blood.

The entity couldn't coalesce and was forced to disperse. Dark green eyes that resembled human faces appeared on the black hair. The eyes were filled with hostility and killing intent.

Those faces aren't human faces; they're monkey faces! The Dragon King doesn't exist. It's just a bunch of water monkeys! Li Huowang deduced upon observing the faces. At least they understand human speech, even though they're just water monkeys.

Li Huowang drew the purple-tassel sword, and killing intent burst out of him as he opened his mouth and roared, “Get lost!”

The churning seawater from Li Huowang's mouth attracted the attention of the water monkeys, and they stared at Li Huowang for a while. Eventually, the entity covered in black hair swayed with the waves and disappeared as if it were terrified of Li Huowang.

The crisis had been averted, so Li Huowang got ready to return to the surface. However, he realized that the bearded bald man was missing. Where is he? I couldn't really see him earlier.

Li Huowang rushed to the surface to take a few deep breaths. Afterward, he dived down to look for the missing bearded bald man. Eventually, Li Huowang found the bearded bald man on the seabed.

Half of the bearded bald man's face was missing, and the water monkeys had gouged out his left eye. The fierce waves had peeled the bearded bald man's skin, and he looked even paler than Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang stared at the bearded bald man's corpse, unsure of what to say.

“Amitabha, Amitabha, you're a baldy who's done good deeds. You're an extraordinary monk,” the monk said, and then he chanted prayers for the bearded bald man.

Li Huowang sighed and grabbed the bearded bald man's corpse before swimming toward the surface. I should have tested his skills before letting him go underwater.

Just as Li Huowang was regretting his decision, the monk abruptly exclaimed, “Daoist, watch out! Something's behind you!”

The monk's words had yet to finish echoing in the air when Li Huowang turned abruptly and saw a grotesque colossal maw covered in long, follicle-like tentacles.

Hmm? Li Huowang stared at the dusty ceiling fan above him.

A white wildflower filled his vision.

“Brother, you're awake? Look, isn't this flower beautiful? I picked it from outside.”

Li Huowang followed the chubby hand holding the white wildflower and found a middle-aged man with a naive, chubby face.

The middle-aged man looked to be at least forty or fifty years old, but he behaved like a child; his eyes also radiated an exceptionally innocent light.

Li Huowang's muscles tensed up. No! I was about to get consumed by that thing in the water! How come I'm here?

Li Huowang struggled to sit up but found his limbs bound.

"Brother, we're in the White Tower Hospital. However, some call it the White Tower Prison. I was brought here by the guards while I was rummaging through garbage on the street.

"The guard said I wasn't stupid enough, so he let me feed you and gave me more candy in exchange."

Li Huowang's mind quickly spun as he looked around the unfamiliar surroundings.

It doesn't matter why Black Taisui's ability had failed; the fact that I'm in the hallucination means that I'm still alive. There's still hope! No, I'm in that thing's stomach! I have to get out of here as soon as possible!

After figuring everything out, Li Huowang turned to the middle-aged man next to him and asked, "Can you help me out? Untie these restraints for me."

The middle-aged man shook his head vigorously and made a noise reminiscent of a drum using his lips and said, "No, no, no. The guard said I can't untie you. If I untie you, I'll be sent to the small dark room."

Li Huowang was in the middle of a critical juncture on the other side, so he had no time to waste here. There was a high chance that he was about to be devoured. With that in mind, Li Huowang took a deep breath, turned sharply to the left, and flipped the entire metal bed, causing a loud crashing noise.

The middle-aged man was terrified, and he rushed toward the iron door, pounding on it as he turned to the camera overhead and cried out, "Guard, come here! Hurry up, and come here! I'm really scared!”

Li Huowang twisted and lifted the iron bed up high before throwing it to the ground. Li Huowang exerted so much force that he inadvertently fractured the bones in his left palm, causing him to wince and gnash his teeth

Regardless, he pulled strongly, and his floppy, broken left arm slipped off the restraints as if it were made of noodles.

Li Huowang used the pinky finger of his left hand to desperately remove the restraints on his right arm, and he ended up succeeding. Unfortunately, Li Huowang could already hear approaching footsteps in the distance.

Li Huowang moved even faster, freeing himself just in time.

A prison guard rushed toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang swung his right knee toward the prison guard, breaking the latter's ribs.

Li Huowang managed to subdue one of the prison guards, but the remaining guard swung his stun baton toward him.

The electricity that coursed through Li Huowang froze him briefly, but he gnashed his teeth and yanked the two batons away. Then, he glared at the prison guard.

The guard trembled all over, frightened by Li Huowang's appearance. Although he still had other weapons, it seemed like the odds weren't in his favor. The prison guard suddenly recalled why this guy was admitted here.

“Li Huowang? That's your name, right? You can hear me, right?

"Calm down, calm down. Your girlfriend has just visited you not too long ago. I'll call her over to meet you. What do you think?"

Li Huowang grabbed the magnetic stripe card and the stun baton from the fallen prison guard on the floor before rushing toward the door. I don't care what you are. You better not think that I'm going to patiently wait for my demise in your stomach!

Li Huowang opened every single iron gate in his way and attacked the guards who dared to obstruct him. Soon, an alarm blared throughout the White Tower Prison's mental health ward. A few specialized teams soon rushed into the ward.

Li Huowang assessed the situation rationally, and he decided not to escape through the exit. Li Huowang looked left and right before charging into the prison guard's office.

Before the prison guards could even react, Li Huowang jumped down the fourth floor.

“ Cough, cough! ” Li Huowang spat out blood and forced himself to stand up.

Li Huowang ignored the mentally unstable patients nearby and smiled smugly at the enormous gray prison building behind him. I don't care what you are, but do you really think that you can gobble me up so easily? Fat chance!

Chapter 387 - I'M Sorry

“What’s up with him? How did he survive such a long jump? Should we call the ambulance?”

“Guard! Someone's injured here!”

“Ah! I know him! I saw him on TV! Apparently, he’s a hero who fought for the people.”

“Look, his hand is injured! He’s really pitiful.”

The whisperings of the nearby patients didn’t disturb Li Huowang at all.

He looked away from the prison building and looked around. I’ve come out of its belly, but I’m still in the water. I have to get back on the ship soon, or I’m going to drown!

Li Huowang's gaze eventually landed on a distant steel watchtower. The steel watchtower seemed to be located on the periphery of the White Tower Prison. A soldier with a gun was scratching his neck and was staring in their direction in confusion.

The tower was high and was the highest place throughout the prison.

There's no mistaking it! That's my ship! Li Huowang quickly raised his hands as if he were swimming. He swung his arms constantly while heading toward the steel watchtower as if he were swimming.

Li Huowang could feel his entire body screaming at him, and his arms were so fatigued that he could hardly lift his arms. He felt like collapsing to the ground.

The hints that his body was throwing at him allowed Li Huowang to deduce that the monster had seriously injured him. Of course, he had no idea whether his injury was caused by the monster's teeth or by its stomach acid.

Regardless, he wouldn't give up so easily.

Li Huowang used all his strength to swim, and he muttered to himself, Li Sui, help your dad swim faster! I can't see what's happening over there right now, so I'm counting on you!

Li Huowang felt a surge of strength just then, and he inwardly exclaimed, Thank you, Li Sui!

A large group of prison guards rushed out of the prison gate, and they wielded a variety of weapons—large nets, iron forks, and more.

They rushed anxiously toward Li Huowang, and hot pursuit ensued on the oval-shaped field of the White Tower Prison grounds. A group of armed figures was chasing after someone who was running like he was swimming at the same time.

Li Huowang was slower than them, so the distance between the two sides narrowed rapidly.

Li Huowang found out that a dense wire mesh wall was separating the watchtower from the periphery of the prison grounds. However, Li Huowang remained undeterred and stuck his fingers into the gaps to start climbing up the wall.

The soldier on the watchtower noticed that they were losing control of the situation, so he hurriedly raised his gun and closed one eye to aim at Li Huowang.

“Don't shoot! Absolutely do not shoot!” a panicked roar echoed from the crowd behind Li Huowang. “He has gone viral! We'll be in trouble if he dies here!”

Meanwhile, Li Huowang had finally scaled the wire mesh wall.

Unfortunately, a rolling cage with spikes appeared before him. Li Huowang reached out to one of the spikes, but a blue arc of lightning jumped from the spike toward Li Huowang's finger, which meant that the spikes were filled with high-voltage electricity.

The iron forks and nets retracted quickly at the sight, afraid of getting electrocuted.

This little pain is not enough to stop me! Li Huowang's expression turned fierce as he grabbed the rolling cage with one arm and forcefully flipped himself onto the spiked cage. His skin burned, and smoke rose almost immediately from his clothes.

“Turn it off! Hurry up!” someone roared.

Li Huowang looked like he was about to catch fire anytime soon, and the sight dumbfounded everyone down below. Li Huowang was enveloped in smoke, but he could still move.

“Goodness, are we staring at a human being?”

Li Huowang used the final vestiges of his strength to jump onto the watchtower's iron platform. Li Huowang panted heavily, and he felt numb all over. His vision swam and had dimmed as well.

Li Huowang was truly tired, as he had just squeezed out the final vestiges of his strength to jump onto the iron platform. However, he could see that he was so close to the ship—the end was so near, and he couldn't let all his efforts go to waste.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and stood up. He used his scorched hand to support himself on the railing as he staggered toward the stairs that led to the top of the watchtower.

The two soldiers on duty had no idea whether to raise or lower their guns. In the end, they pointed their guns to the floor and watched as the terrifying lunatic climbed up the stairs to reach them.

The lunatic soon reached them, but he stopped moving. Clearly, the lunatic had no intention of attacking them. Of course, Li Huowang didn't need to move, as he knew that he had already returned to the deck of the ship and had survived the ordeal.

Li Huowang panted heavily and muttered, “Captain, don't.. stop. Keep going toward Xing Island.”

Loud alarm bells abruptly echoed in Li Huowang's heart, and he was startled out of his daze by the sound of approaching footsteps. Li Huowang rushed toward the wall on the other side and made sure there was enough distance between him and the newcomers.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the iron forks in the newcomers' hands and roared, "Water monkeys, right? Don't even think about dragging me back into the water!"

The newcomers remained undeterred and stepped forward.

At the sight, Li Huowang decisively raised his right hand and pressed it on his left eye.

"Huowang!" someone exclaimed. Li Huowang froze instantly upon hearing the familiar cry. Li Huowang then peered over the shoulders of the water monkeys and saw a figure in white.

The figure in white was Yang Na, and she looked extremely haggard.

The sight made Li Huowang feel as though someone had thrust a dagger into his heart.

"Huowang, are you awake? Do you still recognize me?" asked Yang Na.

Li Huowang instinctively lowered his head, avoiding her gaze. He languidly raised his hand and roared, "I am the Great Sage, Sun Wukong! Today, I will break through the Lingxiao Palace and wreak havoc in the Heavenly Palace!"

Li Huowang laughed with tears streaming down his face while dancing before everyone like a real lunatic.

Yang Na almost collapsed at the heart-wrenching sight, and she roared, "Huowang! What do you want me to do?! I really can't forget you!"

Li Huowang came to a halt, and his expression changed drastically as he staggered toward Yang Na. He raised his bloody right hand, revealing a small white wildflower the size of a fingernail.

Someone sneaked up on Li Huowang from behind and smashed the butt of their gun toward Li Huowang's arm, bending it in a grotesque way. Then, someone tackled Li Huowang, and the nearest two soldiers immediately rushed toward Li Huowang, pressing him firmly to the ground.

The others were afraid that the martial lunatic would suddenly go crazy and injure the others, so they hurried over to suppress Li Huowang. More and more people pounced on Li Huowang, and it seemed like they wanted to drown Li Huowang in a sea of flesh.

Li Huowang's gaze pierced the swaying crowd and landed on the helpless and despairing Yang Na.

"Nana... I'm sorry for what happened back then..." Li Huowang muttered.

Chapter 388 - Xing Island

When Li Huowang's words fell, his tense spirit filled with guilt could no longer hold out against the exhaustion. Li Huowang's eyes closed slowly as he passed out. The footsteps, the shouts of the prison guards, and Yang Na's crying gradually faded away.

After an unknown amount of time, Li Huowang woke up to the smell of incense. He couldn't see anything but blue the moment he opened his eyes. Li Huowang took a deep breath to compose himself and realized that he was lying down and staring at the sky. The sea waves crashing against the ship's hull and the prickly sensation of the wooden deck against his back made Li Huowang realize that he was back on the ship.

Li Huowang looked downward upon hearing weird noises and was shocked by the sight that unfolded in front of him.

A crowd was prostrating before him, and there were rows of offerings and incense burners just beneath Li Huowang's feet. Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine when he saw two children among the offerings. Li Huowang felt as if they were worshipping him like he was some kind of god.

Li Huowang was furious. He stood up and kicked the incense burners away.

"Are you all fools? Why do you guys always place your hopes on others? And you're even offering children to me!" Li Huowang roared and pulled the two children away from the offering plates. The children had red dots on their foreheads.

Li Huowang's sudden outburst terrified everyone. They retreated backward, and the captain repeatedly kowtowed and begged for mercy. "Dragon King, please calm down! Please calm down!"

Dragon King? Li Huowang looked down to see writhing tentacles black tentacles all over him. His arm was still severed and had been replaced by five tentacles entwined together.

Clearly, the black tentacles all over him had made everyone misunderstand that an evil spirit had possessed him.

“Li Sui, go hide. You're scaring them,” Lu Huowang said. The tentacles vanished instantly at Li Huowang's command.

Li Huowang glanced at the drenched deck and the clear skies. He didn't feel like explaining anything, so he turned to the captain and ordered, “Get up and continue sailing to Xing Island!”

“All right, all right! I'll sail!” the captain hurriedly said. He dared not resist nor kick up a fuss. Even if Li Huowang weren't the Dragon King, he was still someone he couldn't afford to provoke.

Li Huowang walked through the crowd and settled in a quiet corner of the ship's cabin.

He took deep breaths to calm himself down before turning to the monk.

“How did I get back on the ship?”

“Daoist, you crawled out from that creature's belly. It was too dark underwater, so I couldn't really see what it looked like. Ah, I remember seeing another living person in that creature's belly, but I don't know whether he managed to crawl out or not. Also, the creature's back was riddled with eyes,” the monk replied.

Li Huowang pieced together the scene using the puzzle pieces that the monk was handing over to him by recounting.

Li Huowang had expected it, but it turned out that his assumption was right. He had crawled out of the creature's belly by jumping down that gray prison building. Crossing the electrified cage with spikes meant that he had gotten rid of what had bound him underwater while climbing the watchtower meant that he had climbed onto the deck.

Li Huowang saved his life by moving in his hallucination. It was a valuable experience, and Li Huowang reckoned that he could use the same method if he ever found himself in another pinch.

Li Huowang believed that the encounter wouldn't have been so difficult if the creature hadn't been able to negate Black Taisui's ability in his abdomen. Fortunately, the outcome was still satisfactory despite the many twists and turns.

“Daoist, Li Sui helped you a lot. If it weren't for him, you wouldn't have been able to climb onto deck.”

Li Huowang put a hand on his stomach and felt relieved as he reviewed everything he had just gone through.

“Huowang!” A shrill noise echoed, and Li Huowang instinctively covered his ears.

The voice belonged to Yang Na, and Li Huowang couldn't possibly mistake that voice for someone else's voice. Li Huowang felt like someone had stabbed him in the heart with a dagger upon being reminded of her extremely haggard appearance.

Li Huowang covered his ears with a determined expression and comforted himself.

It's definitely a hallucination. There were too many coincidences for it to be otherwise. Yes, it's a hallucination! I don't need to care about what happens over there, as it's all a hallucination!

Li Huowang murmured to himself for a long time in an effort to push Yang Na's image out of his mind. Eventually, he removed his hands from his ears, and he could no longer hear any voices or the incessant ringing.

Li Huowang finally sighed in relief.

The auditory hallucination just now had to be a side effect of the hallucination. Li Huowang knew that he had to be more careful against an unfamiliar evil spirit in the future, as he wouldn't know for sure if Black Taisui's ability would work on them.

“Hehe... Looking at you like this, I think it's better if you just die,” Hong Zhong mocked.

Li Huowang ignored Hong Zhong and took out the Fiery Scripture to treat himself.

No matter how painful the suffering I'll go through, there's going to be an end to it. I can get rid of this life that's worse than death! I just have to find Bei Feng and force his method out of him!

"Three coins."

"Empty bottle."

"Half a coin, I win," said Li Huowang, revealing his leaf cards to the players.

The other three players threw their cards in frustration.

"How come you've won again? Are you using some kind of supernatural power to change your cards?"

"If I were to use a spiritual power, I'd use it to rob you guys. Why would I bother going through such a hassle by playing? Anyway, stop the nonsense and pay up."

The other players could only hurl dark silver pieces and some old as well as new bronze coins toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang piled them up into a tiny hill on his side of the table and was about to shuffle the cards when stomping noises echoed from above.

"The ship is about to dock! We've reached Xing Island!" the captain shouted.

Everyone stopped whatever they were doing and made their way toward the cabin ladders.

Li Huowang soon found himself outside the ship, and he sighed in relief as he looked around Xing Island's harbor district.

He was finally here.

Li Huowang suddenly felt a little lost about what he ought to do next. According to the ship's captain, Xing Island was like half the Jiang Nan region in size. It was such a vast island, so how was he supposed to find Zhuge Yuan?

Li Huowang pondered for a while before taking out a ginger-yellow paper from his pocket. He needed a talisman to divine, which would help him find Zhuge Yuan.

Unfortunately, he needed bone relics to perform a divination, and he didn't expect that he would have to perform a divination, so he didn't have any bone relics with him.

It took Li Huowang half a day to find an alternative for the bone relics.

Li Huowang cut open his healing severed arm. Then, he gnashed his teeth and sunk his hand into the flesh and blood. Once he found the bone inside, he grabbed it tightly and yanked it out.

Li Huowang felt empty and sore at the same time as he pulled out the bone holding together his flesh as if he were pulling out a radish from the ground.

Chapter 389 - Sedan Chair

It would be difficult to find human bones in this small fishing village on the coast of Xing Island, so Li Huowang had no choice but to use his own bones for divination.

Fortunately, the bone remained unharmed despite the divination. Li Huowang shoved the bone back into the hollow stump of his arm.

Now, I need to find the place indicated by the bone fracture. Li Huowang while walking toward the fishing village. The village was small, and one would encounter familiar faces after just a brief stroll.

Li Huowang saw a woman with a pale complexion buying steamed buns with her daughter in the distance. The young woman bought a coarse-grain bun for herself and half a steamed bun with a brown sugar filling for her daughter.

Li Huowang's heart softened while staring at the impoverished mother and daughter pair. He pulled the reins and approached them with the carriage.

"Benefactor!" The woman quickly bowed toward Li Huowang, her expression full of sincerity and fear.

The little girl nestled in her mother's arms and dared not to lift her head.

"Why did you bring your daughter to Xing Island?" Li Huowang asked.

"My... my husband is dead, so I came here to seek refuge with relatives," the woman said hesitantly; she also didn't dare to look at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang pondered briefly before reaching into his pocket and taking out the money he had won from playing leaf cards against his fellow passengers on the ship. He handed the money to the little girl.

Then, he stared at the woman and said, "She's a small child, so her appetite surely isn't that big. However, half of a steamed bun still isn't going to be enough for her. Take that money and buy something to eat for her."

Li Huowang drove the carriage away without waiting for the woman's reply. His destination was the inn not too far away. The divination talisman was both useful and useless. It was useless because it couldn't be controlled at all—one could only wait for fate to come after a divination.

Thus, Li Huowang planned to take advantage of the wait to recharge at the inn and prepare for the upcoming crisis. Li Huowang's routine remained unchanging after entering the inn—he bathed, ate, and slept.

Li Huowang thought he would need to work hard to find Zhuge Yuan, but someone took the initiative to look for him. Li Huowang was already asleep, but he suddenly woke up and kicked Bun at the bedside. He could feel someone outside.

Soon, there was knocking on the door, and a voice echoed. "Is Master Li around?"

The voice sounded delicate and rough at the same time.

Li Huowang approached the door carefully and opened it slightly to peer through the crack.

The visitor looked wealthy—clad in blue silk with a jade pendant hanging from his waist. He had a thin, long mustache, and his face was colored with rouge. The moonlight shining down on the visitor's face made him look extremely pale.

Li Huowang felt that there was something amiss with the visitor; the issue was that he couldn't quite point it out.

“Are you Master Li? My master has been waiting for you. Please come with me,” the visitor said amiably, and he even bowed toward Li Huowang.

“Who is your master?” Li Huowang asked, and his hand unknowingly gripped the purple-tassel sword.

“His surname is Zhuge, and his name is Yuan. He's also known as the Storyteller. Didn't Master Li cast a divination for my master today? That was how he knew you were coming.”

Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat. He had cast a divination for Zhuge Yuan, and the other party immediately knew the identity of the caster and even the caster's location.

Clearly, it was unwise to use divination carelessly, as powerful individuals could easily discover his whereabouts.

Li Huowang was silent as he stood by the door.

The visitor asked, “Master Li, are you with me coming or not? If not, I'll have to return and inform my master.”

Li Huowang pushed open the door and said, “Lead the way.”

The visitor nodded and went downstairs, with Li Huowang following closely behind him.

The entire inn was extremely quiet, and there weren't any noises aside from their footsteps.

Li Huowang soon found himself outside the inn, and it turned out that a pure-white sedan chair had been waiting for him beneath the silver moonlight. Four black-robed sedan bearers stood motionless like sculptures, creating an eerie scene.

“Master Li, please hop onto the sedan chair. My master's residence is quite a distance away, and we need to hurry up,” the visitor smiled and pulled open the curtain of the sedan chair.

Li Huowang's brows furrowed; he couldn't help but feel suspicious. Upon recalling the spindle that Zhuge Yuan had given to him, as well as the visitor's friendly tone of voice, Li Huowang compromised and sat in the sedan chair.

A creaking noise echoed as the bearers lifted the sedan chair.

“How long will it take us to reach Mister Zhuge's residence?” Li Huowang asked, but he received no response. He opened the curtain to look outside but found that the visitor had inexplicably vanished.

Moreover, the four sedan bearers appeared strange. Their limbs seemed to be without any joints, and they walked straight ahead without blinking even once.

The bizarre discovery made Li Huowang feel even more suspicious about everything.

What's going on? Are they not affiliated with Zhuge Yuan?

The scenery outside the sedan chair changed slowly. The black tiles of the houses in the fishing village eventually disappeared, replaced by dark green bamboo leaves in the woods.

For some reason, Li Huowang felt like something was hiding amidst the forest of dark green bamboo.

Hehehe...

Playful laughter echoed from the depths of the bamboo forest. Li Huowang's ears perked up to listen carefully, but he discovered that the playful laughter was just the noises generated by the bamboo leaves amidst the night breeze.

The swaying sedan chair moved nonstop through the bamboo forest.

Four hours later, Li Huowang was still inside the bamboo forest.

This bamboo forest is really big . Li Huowang thought. He peered outside and saw something that made his pupils shrink.

“Wait! I saw that rock not too long ago. You guys haven't been moving at all. You guys are moving in circles! Stop the sedan!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

However, the black-robed sedan bearers moved even faster.

Li Huowang unsheathed the purple-tassel sword, and he made a hole in the floor. He jumped into the hole with both feet together, but as soon as he landed, the ground riddled with dried bamboo leaves sank like clay and enveloped him instantly.

Li Huowang slashed out with his purple-tassel sword, and thick blood haphazardly spurted into the air, accompanied by what sounded like grotesque screams that couldn't possibly come from a human being.

Rustling noises echoed soon afterward, which told Li Huowang that the creature had retreated. Li Huowang panted heavily as he stood in the bamboo forest. The pure-white sedan chair and the sedan bearers had vanished. He was all alone in the middle of the bamboo forest.

What were those things? How did they know that I had cast a divination for Zhuge Yuan? Could the evil spirits on Xing Island be sentient?

Chapter 390 - "Li Huowang"

What's their goal? Do they know that I'm a Strayed One? Li Huowang pondered, and his expression changed intermittently as he arrived at many different conclusions. He looked around and found nothing unusual. In the end, he decided to return to the fishing village and wait until daybreak before doing anything else.

Li Huowang looked up at the round moon in the sky that the dark clouds had almost blotted out. Li Huowang took quick steps and scratched a nearby bamboo pole before heading back to his original position.

Li Huowang eventually left in the direction of the fishing village, leaving scratches on the bamboo pole every now and then to avoid getting lost.

The sky gradually brightened as he continued his journey, but his situation didn't improve at all despite the faint light. The hazy morning fog was everywhere, lowering visibility.

Li Huowang was starting to get tired when two faint lights pierced the morning mist.

The sight reinvigorated Li Huowang. I've arrived?

Li Huowang moved a few steps forward, only to find that the lights were two white lanterns hanging at the entrance of a building. Above the lanterns, there was a huge plaque displaying a word written in black—libation[1].

The walls were earth-toned and resembled arcs several stories high. Li Huowang glanced at the thin mist behind him. They're trying to deceive me, but who's the mastermind behind it?

Although the situation was utterly bizarre, Li Huowang wasn't really scared.

He had experienced far more bizarre situations, after all.

Li Huowang lifted his right foot and walked toward the door. After passing through a long corridor, Li Huowang found himself standing in front of a huge circular courtyard. The courtyard was surrounded by buildings with black roof tiles.

A cold breeze swept past Li Huowang, and it carried with it a piece of yellow paper money. Li Huowang followed the yellow paper money, and his gaze eventually landed in a distant memorial hall.

The memorial hall's interior was entirely in white, while a large and a small black coffin were inside. Li Huowang walked up to the memorial hall and looked around. The memorial hall had everything aside from mourning people.

"I mean no offense," Li Huowang said and bowed slightly toward the coffins.

Then, he moved quickly and rushed into the memorial hall. He reached out with one hand and pried open the lid of one of the coffins. Afterward, Li Huowang stuck his head inside and yelled, "Rest in peace!"

However, the coffin didn't stir. Li Huowang looked disappointed as he stepped backward. Then, he looked around the memorial hall, sweeping his gaze across the white cloth and paper offerings.

"I do not care what you are. I'm too busy to play with you. If you go too far, don't blame me for setting fire to this courtyard and the entire bamboo forest outside!" Li Huowang warned, and his voice echoed throughout the entire spacious courtyard.

Still, there were no responses whatsoever, no movements nor noises. Li Huowang patted the coffin and turned around to walk toward the exit.

Just then, a red figure appeared in the periphery of Li Huowang's eyes. The red figure was on the second floor of the building to Li Huowang's left. Li Huowang immediately turned and ran toward the red figure.

Before colliding with the wall, Li Huowang slapped two talismans, with inscriptions written using his own blood, on his thighs. Veins bulged throughout Li Huowang's legs, and he bent his knees, performing a mighty jump that allowed him to reach the second floor of the bamboo building, where he saw the red figure.

Li Huowang instantly felt his blood boil upon taking a closer look at the red figure.

"Sitting Oblivion Dao!" Li Huowang roared with all his might.

The red figure was none other than Li Huowang.

Li Huowang instantly understood what was going on.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao had long infiltrated Xing Island. He finally realized the mastermind of the bizarre encounter.

Just as gravity brought Li Huowang down, he took out the bronze coin sword and slashed out while chanting an incantation.

The red threads around the bronze coins extended rapidly like a whip and wrapped around a pillar. Li Huowang tugged, and he was propelled toward "Li Huowang" like a cannonball.

"Li Huowang" remained motionless as if he were too stunned to move.

Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat when his bronze coin sword pierced "Li Huowang."

There was no feedback at all—it felt like he had struck nothing but air.

Then, "Li Huowang" pulled out his own sword and thrust upward.

Li Huowang was stunned to see blood at the tip of "Li Huowang's" sword.

Li Huowang's abdomen was struck by a wave of sharp pain, and he was horrified to discover that "Li Huowang" could use his own projection ability!

The revelation made Li Huowang cast the same projection ability to escape, but he couldn't move an inch. Li Huowang realized it just then; the Sitting Oblivion Dao had used some method to deceive him and take away his projection ability.

Li Huowang had fought quite a few members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but none of them had such a bizarre ability. In other words, there was a high chance that "Li Huowang" could be one of the Four Joys or perhaps even one of the Three Officials!

Li Huowang dared not to hold back. He gouged his right eye and squeezed it hard. A grotesque noise echoed as a semi-transparent liquid oozed from between his fingernails.

A strange light beyond human perception replaced the world before Li Huowang, and everything slowed down to a snail's pace. Li Huowang took advantage of this opportunity to remove the sword sticking out of his abdomen.

"Li Huowang" had somehow deceived Li Huowang's ability away from him, so the latter knew that he couldn't let himself be led astray.

Li Huowang took out the flint and got ready to execute a major move. Unfortunately, Li Huowang's fleshly body refused to ignite, and that was when he recalled that he had peeled off his skin to create an artifact.

He no longer had any skin to Ba-Hui.

"Li Huowang's" movement was about to return to normal speed, and the sight made Li Huowang's heart skip a beat. Left with no other choice, he took out a blackened iron piers and stuffed it into his mouth.

He decisively pulled out a few molar teeth, and he scattered them like flower petals.

Li Huowang was aware of his projection ability's range, which was three meters. He made sure to take that into account as he attacked with his teeth. Li Huowang willed, and his teeth exploded, raining shrapnels made out of teeth toward "Li Huowang."

"Li Huowang" couldn't even defend himself as the shrapnel transformed him into a sieve. Unfortunately, "Li Huowang" remained standing without any signs of collapsing despite his severe injuries.

Li Huowang's heart tightened, and a sense of foreboding washed over him. He pressed the wound in his stomach and realized that "Li Huowang" had deceived his powerful healing ability away.

His ability is too bizarre and tricky. What should I do? Li Huowang's heart sank as "Li Huowang" glared fiercely at him.

1. A libation is a ritual pouring of a liquid, or grains such as rice, as an offering to a deity or spirit, or in memory of the dead. 🙌

Chapter 391 - Li Huowang

Li Huowang had no idea what to do as he stared at "Li Huowang" before him. He was afraid of engaging with "Li Huowang" for even the briefest moment, as there was a huge chance that "Li Huowang" would deceive his other abilities away.

Li Huowang reckoned that the only way to deal with "Li Huowang" was the Cang-Qiang Ascension, but he had no time to find extreme mental agony, considering that the enemy was already in front of him.

No, I can't fight under such uncertain circumstances. I need to retreat and find Zhuge Yuan! Li Huowang thought. Having made up his mind, he decisively severed both of his ears and hurled it at "Li Huowang."

Then, he turned around and ran.

The morning fog that had enveloped the bamboo forest had thinned out. Li Huowang ran with all his might in one direction. Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and used another bone to cast divination while running.

Li Huowang didn't care whether divination would lead him to Zhuge Yuan or not. He also didn't care, even if casting divination meant that he would be snitching on himself, as those two outcomes would help Li Huowang escape!

Li Huowang just had to find Zhuge Yuan.

Zhuce Yuan was strong enough to kill Fa Cai, so Li Huowang was convinced that he would be safe the moment he found Zhuge Yuan.

Just then, a donkey cart appeared before Li Huowang. The donkey was old, but it wasn't having any issues pulling its passengers—a mother and daughter pair.

“Benefactor?” The woman's eyes widened upon seeing the disheveled Li Huowang.

“Someone’s chasing me! Help me hide!” Li Huowang exclaimed, diving into the donkey cart without waiting for her reply.

The woman had no idea what to do, and she was still in the middle of processing Li Huowang's words when "Li Huowang" emerged from the nearby bamboo forest.

“Did you see someone who looked exactly like me?!”

The woman became flustered in the face of "Li Huowang."

However, her daughter lifted her hand and pointed in a random direction.

“How dare he run away!”

"Li Huowang" soon disappeared.

The woman hugged her daughter tightly and peeked into the tarp.

Li Huowang was pressing on his wound, and he sighed in relief upon seeing the mother and daughter pair.

“Thank you for your help. I will remember your kindness,” Li Huowang said. He truly didn't expect that his generosity at the time would end up saving his life.

The woman shook her head and said, “Benefactor, you saved my daughter on the ship, so helping you is the right thing to do. Ah, you're bleeding, sir. You should seek medical attention soon.”

Li Huowang shook his head and took out the Fiery Scripture.

“Forget I'm here. Go ahead and continue down your original route," Li Huowang said.

The woman nodded and covered Li Huowang with the tarp. Then, she held her daughter in a tight embrace and urged the old donkey to walk faster.

Li Huowang proceeded to cauterize his wounds.

After a while, the cart suddenly stopped.

Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat. He peeked out of the trap and saw "Li Huowang," and the latter was holding a cracked skull. Somehow, "Li Huowang" had obtained Li Huowang's divination technique and had used it against the latter!

Li Huowang took a deep breath and jumped down the cart. He stood in front of the donkey cart and shouted at the woman. "Run! The farther, the better!"

The woman glanced at the two Li Huowangs before staring at her terrified daughter.

A flash of determination fled across her eyes as she abandoned the donkey cart that she had just purchased and ran into the bamboo forest with her daughter and some of her belongings.

Li Huowang took multiple deep breaths. "Li Huowang" opened his mouth and was about to say something when a peculiar sound echoed. The two Li Huowangs turned to look at where the sound had come from at the same time.

Li Huowang was instantly delighted upon seeing the newcomer—Zhuge Yuan!

Zhuge Yuan was dressed like a scholar and was fanning himself casually while staring with an amused gaze at the two Li Huowangs.

Li Huowang's mouth fluttered open to speak, but "Li Huowang" beat him to the chase, shouting. "Zhuge! I'm Li Huowang, and he's a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!"

Li Huowang almost choked at "Li Huowang's" remark.

He didn't want to say the same thing, so he decided to just stare at Zhuge Yuan.

"Zhuge Yuan, you're strong enough to kill Fa Cai by yourself. Surely, you can see the real member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao between the two of us, right?" Li Huowang said.

Zhuge Yuan nodded and asked, "Did you bring the spindle with a Muddled One's hair around it?"

"Of course! It's with me!" Li Huowang opened his abdomen and took out the black spindle. However, he truly had no idea that the black hair around the spindle was a clump of hair from a Muddled One. If Zhuge Yuan hadn't said it himself, Li Huowang would have never known about it.

Li Huowang grinned while staring at "Li Huowang." It seems they have no idea that I've stored something in my abdomen.

Li Huowang put away the spindle and looked at Zhuge Yuan, saying, "Zhuge Yuan, be careful. That guy has the bizarre ability to deceive other people's techniques away for his own use."

"Say no more. I know," Zhuge Yuan said. He put his fan away and took out a brush from his sleeves.

Li Huowang stared intently at Zhuge Yuan. He wanted to know just how strong Zhuge Yuan was. After all, he managed to kill Fa Cai.

"Li Huowang" took a step back and Li Huowang sneered at the sight. So he's finally afraid? How dare he imitate me.

Li Huowang fell to the ground. He could no longer feel his left leg. Li Huowang was shocked, and he couldn't quite believe what was going on.

However, Zhuge Yuan raised the brush once again.

Li Huowang finally realized that Zhuge Yuan had decided to attack him.

"It's not me! That one is the enemy! He's a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!" Li Huowang shouted, and his voice cracked from fury and bitterness. Zhuge Yuan had just betrayed him, after all.

Zhuge Yuan pointed his brush at Li Huowang, and the latter could no longer feel his lower body.

"You liar!" Li Huowang roared defiantly, "So your kindness has been a lie all this while?! You've actually been working for the Sitting Oblivion Dao all this while?!"

Zhuge Yuan smiled and ignored Li Huowang's accusation.

He pointed his brush at Li Huowang's neck.

"No! I can't die! They're waiting for me! I can't die here!" Li Huowang roared and squirmed.

Zhuge Yuan decisively drew a circle around Li Huowang's head with his brush. A dull thud echoed as Li Huowang ceased all struggle and collapsed. The black spindle fell out of Li Huowang's clothes, and it rolled slowly toward Zhuge Yuan's feet.

Zhuge Yuan used a white handkerchief to pick up the bloody spindle before handing it over to "Li Huowang."

"Li Huowang" stuffed the black spindle into his abdomen and approached Li Huowang's corpse. He whipped out a dagger and peeled off Li Huowang's face.

"Li Huowang" peeled and peeled until Li Huowang's face was replaced by the bearded bald man, who was the best leaf card player on that passenger ship and had unfortunately met his demise in the depths of the sea.

"Senior Zhuge, I think that Sitting Oblivion Dao member really thought he was me."

Chapter 392 - Zhuge Yuan

“Senior Zhuge, I think that Sitting Oblivion Dao member really thought he was me.” Li Huowang said, looking up at Zhuge Yuan. He truly didn't expect that the Sitting Oblivion Dao member could steal his black spindle and weapon. To make matters worse, he had perfectly impersonated Li Huowang.

He must've made his move when I was stuck in the hallucination underwater. Perhaps he was the one who wanted to make sure that I'd get stuck in the hallucination!

Li Huowang recalled seeing a childish middle-aged man inside the White Tower Prison. Li Huowang was convinced that the childish middle-aged man was the persona of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, who had imitated him in real life.

“I also saw someone else while we were inside the belly of that monster! Perhaps that man had been waiting for you in the belly of that monster,” the monk said, reminding Li Huowang of what he had seen.

“Tsk, tsk, tsk.” Hong Zhong clicked his tongue as he walked up to the corpse. Then, he imitated the old monk's prayer to corpses and walked in circles around the corpse.

Everything was over, and Li Huowang had an explanation as to how the Sitting Oblivion Dao member had managed to impersonate him.

However, why did he decide to impersonate Li Huowang? Wouldn't his plan fail if Li Huowang had encountered "Li Huowang"?

Zhuce Yuan unfurled his fan, attracting Li Huowang's attention.

Li Huowang saw the same four words on the paper fan —“everyone has their values.”

“No need to worry. They're here for me. They don't dare to approach me without any disguises, so they decided to use your identity to get close to me. Their plan would have worked if you hadn't arrived here in time,” Zhuge Yuan said.

Zhuge Yuan then turned around to leave.

Li Huowang picked up his belongings and followed behind Zhuge Yuan. “I’m sorry. If it hadn't been for me, you wouldn't be facing such issues right now.”

Li Huowang was truly caught off guard by Zhuge Yuan's revelation. The fact that the Sitting Oblivion Dao's target wasn't Li Huowang himself was a bit of a hard pill to swallow for the latter, as both the Sitting Oblivion Dao and he had always butted heads whenever they stumbled upon each other.

Zhuge Yuan smiled faintly at Li Huowang's apology and replied, “Don't worry. This isn't the first time, so I've gotten used to it. They've been harassing me nonstop since I killed Fa Cai.”

Li Huowang looked and saw the corpse vanishing in the morning fog. He imagined the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao chasing after him, and he instantly felt suffocated. The Sitting Oblivion Dao members could replace anyone around him, after all.

Li Huowang turned around and looked at Zhuge Yuan. Zhuge Yuan seemed to be doing fine despite the Sitting Oblivion Dao's quest for revenge. In other words, Zhuge Yuan was exceptionally strong.

He must be stronger than Dan Yangzi! No, he must be even stronger than Dan Yangzi, even though the latter has become a half-immortal.

While Li Huowang was deep in contemplation, Zhuge Yuan frowned at Li Huowang's torso and said, “Junior Li, there seems to be something alive inside you. Should I take it out for you?”

Li Sui's tentacles riddled with eyeballs poked out from Li Huowang's belly button and cast a curious look at Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang shoved the tentacles back into his belly button and said, "Don't worry. It's just a Black Taisui. He's taking over my body, but he's the only one capable of suppressing my hallucination."

"I see. I think I've read about that once, but it's my first time seeing someone actually employ such a method," Zhuge Yuan said, nodding. Then, he recalled something and asked, "Wait, did you remove the first Black Taisui in your stomach and eat another one?"

Li Huowang was confused by the question, but he still responded, "I did think of doing that, but I want to keep it as a last resort."

"Don't ever do it. I've read that you will suffer a miserable death if you do that."

Li Huowang was delighted by Zhuge Yuan's news. Otherwise, Li Huowang would have perished without knowing how he had perished. The incident had allowed the two to become even closer to each other.

Their stroll became one of the rare moments in Li Huowang's life when he didn't have to worry about someone trying to kill him. The two strolled for an hour before they arrived at an elegant two-story building. The building was completely green, and the dark green bamboo forest provided a great camouflage for it.

In addition, the entire building was sticking out of the ground, which meant its pillars were hidden underground.

"I hope you don't mind stepping into my simple abode," Zhuge Yuan said, pushing the door open and gesturing to Li Huowang to come in.

The building had no locks, but Li Huowang knew that there was no way a thief could come in here. The interior also emitted a scholarly vibe; there were caricatures, paintings, and poems hanging on the walls.

Li Huowang could tell that every single painting was one of a kind. A certain painting caught Li Huowang's eyes: a painting depicting a white sedan chair being carried by four yellow skeletons. A white weasel holding a white lantern was standing at the helm and was guiding the sedan bearers down the right path.

The majority of the paintings were portraits of human beings, and there were portraits of men, women, elderly people, and children.

It seems that Zhuge Yuan enjoys painting portraits of other people; the paintings are very realistic as well.

Zhugue Yuan sat on a cushion and prepared some tea. “Junior Li, what type of tea would you like? Mountain’s Essence? How about Gentleman’s Silver?”

“I’m fine with either,” Li Huowang said as he sat across from Zhugue Yuan to watch him prepare tea.

Li Huowang had many burning questions, but he didn’t want to interrupt Zhugue Yuan.

Li Huowang decided to wait patiently and watch. Of course, he had no idea what Zhugue Yuan was doing, but Li Huowang could feel that Zhugue Yuan was doing something that required focus and true skill.

“Thrice-brewed Gentlemen’s Silver. The tea leaves on Xing Island are excellent, but the water here is ordinary, so I hope you won’t mind the taste.”

Li Huowang took a sip and realized that Zhugue Yuan had put away the utensils he had used to make tea, replacing them with a game board. The board was for a game called Go[1].

Li Huowang didn't even bother waiting for Zhugue Yuan's explanation as he placed a black stone on the board. “Senior Zhuge, why did you help me? Are you a Strayed One like me?”

Li Huowang's heart beat wildly against his chest as he waited for Zhugue Yuan's reply.

Zhugue Yuan placed a white stone on the board and answered, “No, even though both of us have the word ‘One,’ I am not a Strayed One. I'm a Twisted One.”

“You're a Twisted One?” Li Huowang asked, sounding disappointed. While he was on the passenger ship to Xing Island, Li Huowang had pondered over the matter and concluded that Zhuge Yuan was a Strayed One.

Li Huowang was disappointed, as he knew his life would become much easier if there were a powerful senior guiding him in this crazy world. At the very least, he wouldn't have to risk his life so often.

Li Huowang sighed, but he was still curious, so he asked, “Twisted? What does that mean?”

Zhuce Yuan made sure that the tea leaves wouldn't enter his mouth as he took a sip of his tea before replying, “Washing the windowsill during a good day; one will find the snake and the earthworm twisted together in the soil. The Twisted One's character is using the very same character as the 'Twisted' snake and earthworm[2]. Junior Li, it's your turn.”

1. A game where players have to surround the pieces of others using their own pieces 🤔

2. He's basically flexing by reciting a poem and telling Li Huowang what character of 'Twisted' was it. Man, this guy would be best friends with Jin Shanzhao 🤔

Chapter 393 - Really?

Li Huowang placed down a black piece and pondered over Zhuge Yuan's words before asking, "Twisted? What does that mean?"

Li Huowang was a Strayed One himself. He had witnessed the powers of a Muddled One, but it was his first time hearing of a Twisted One.

Zhugue Yuan shook his head slightly at Li Huowang's clumsy play. He placed a white piece on the board and replied, "The word 'twisted' means that my life is forever twisted with the existence of the Three Ancient Ones. I cannot escape from them even if I were to live or die."

"What are the Three Ancient Ones?" asked Li Huowang, placing another black piece.

Zhugue Yuan smiled and pointed upward with his fan. Li Huowang instantly understood what Zhugue Yuan was trying to say. After all, he could still remember the beings hidden deep within his memories.

"Junior Li, it's not that I don't want to tell you. It's dangerous to know too much of a particular knowledge. You can't make too many mistakes in life as well," Zhugue Yuan said, placing another white piece on the board.

Zhugue Yuan's implied message was clear: the Three Ancient Ones meant one of the Simings inside the Baiyu Capital. Zhugue Yuan didn't dare to utter the name of the Siming.

"I understand," Li Huowang muttered with a nod.

Silence descended upon the room, and only the chirping of the birds could be heard.

Zhugue Yuan's head throbbed at the messy board.

Li Huowang suddenly asked, "Thank you for answering my questions, Senior Zhuge. However, may I know why you are helping me even though you're not a Strayed One?"

The question had been gnawing away at his mind over the past few days, and he had finally asked it.

"Why do you ask?" Zhuge Yuan was surprised. "Our previous encounter was brief, but saving a life is still a noble thing to do. I can't just look at you throwing your life away for nothing. Your bronze coin veil is useless to those who are stronger, too."

"Is that all there is to it?" Li Huowang asked, sounding. He had been thinking about why Zhuge Yuan had decided to help him, which was why he was taken aback when Zhuge Yuan's motive wasn't as deep as he initially thought.

"Why do you think otherwise? My help isn't limited to those with 'One' in them, but those with 'Spirit' or 'Illusion' as well. If I can help, I'm going to help."

Is he trying to fool me? Just what does he want? Li Huowang thought, but he quickly abandoned the idea. Li Huowang's status as a Strayed One was the reason he was being chased. If Zhuge Yuan didn't want him for that, there wouldn't be any compelling reasons behind why he had decided to help him.

"Junior Li, did you travel all the way here just to ask me that question?" Zhuge Yuan asked, sounding perplexed.

"No, I'm here to ask for help," said Li Huowang. Then, he sat up straight and told Zhuge Yuan that he was chasing after Bei Feng.

Zhuce Yuan was kind and helpful to him, but Li Huowang wasn't the type of person to exploit someone's kindness. Li Huowang decided to propose a solution that would benefit them both.

"Senior Zhuge, you don't have to do anything. Since the Sitting Oblivion Dao is hunting you. Bei Feng will come to you soon. You just need to keep me close so I can fight them, too!"

Zhuge Yuan's hand holding a white piece in mid-air froze abruptly.

Li Huowang saw that and added, "Senior Zhuge, don't worry. I'm not going to leave immediately, even after I've achieved my goal. I'll help you with your problem first before leaving.

"Is it because you're unsure of my strength? I'm not as strong as you, but I know quite a few techniques from the Ao Jing Sect.

"I even managed to perform the Cang-Qiang Ascension three times, even though it's the hardest technique to perform! Even half-Immortals will not be able to withstand my Cang-Qiang Ascension!"

Zhuge Yuan raised his hand and gestured for the anxious Li Huowang to calm down.

"Junior Li, calm down. I never disagreed with your suggestion, but there are several things we should consider before anything else. First of all, you said you wanted to fight with me, but do you even know what I'm about to do?"

Li Huowang was stunned. "You mean you're not done yet even after taking away that Muddled One from the temple?"

Zhuge Yuan definitely had a reason for stealing the Muddled One. If he still hadn't resolved that despite his strength, the issue had to be particularly difficult.

Zhuge Yuan peered over Li Huowang's shoulder, and his gaze landed on one of the scrolls hanging behind Li Huowang.

It was a scroll depicting a beautiful mountain with a lake.

A dried-up corpse was in the middle of the mountain.

"I'm strong enough to kill Fa Cai, but those with the words 'One' will struggle fiercely to survive. The fate of foreign beings has tainted us. It's difficult, indeed.

"I'm about to embark on a suicide mission, and the Sitting Oblivion Dao is going to interfere with me from time to time. Junior Li, it is exceedingly dangerous, and you'd most likely perish. Are you sure it's worth it?"

“Of course, it's worth it!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He didn't even ask what Zhuge Yuan wanted him to do. “As long as I can get rid of my bewilderment and the hallucination, everything is going to be worth it!”

Zhuce Yuan took a sip of the tea, which had cooled down long ago.

“All right, let's talk about the second thing. Bei Feng is indeed a Strayed One, and he has indeed gotten rid of his hallucination. However, how can you be so sure that his method is going to be suitable for you?

“He's a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, after all. Perhaps he had deceived it away from someone else, and there's also a high chance that the method is evil. Do you intend to cultivate it even if that were the case?”

Li Huowang frowned. He downed his cup of tea, and he sounded bitter as he responded, “But what choice do I have? It doesn't matter what kind of technique it is, I have to see it for myself.”

Zhuce Yuan went silent, seemingly falling into deep contemplation. “Hm, I remember reading about a Strayed One's technique .”

“What is that technique?” Li Huowang's heart beat wildly against his chest.

“The hallucination of a Strayed Ones is all thanks to the primordial breath running rampant inside of them. The book said that if the Strayed One can control their primordial breath, the hallucination might stop altogether.”

“You've really read something like that?” Li Huowang needed it badly.

“I forgot some parts, but I think it's real.”

“Why do you say so?”

“It's all because of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's consistency. I've always been wondering why the Sitting Oblivion Dao has always loved to torment Strayed Ones above anything else.

"They've never inflicted such torment on the Muddled Ones or the Twisted Ones, so at first, I thought perhaps there's a long-standing grudge between the Strayed Ones and the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

"However, the book gave me enough puzzle pieces to solve the puzzle. If the book contained nothing but the truth, then the cultivation methods of the Strayed Ones are directly opposite of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's cultivation methods. If that's the case, then the reason behind their hatred for the Strayed Ones can be explained."

"Directly opposite the Sitting Oblivion Dao's cultivation methods? They cultivate, too?"

"Of course. The crazy things they've been doing were for the sake of establishing lies as truth. There are many different cultivation paths in this world. There are even those who cultivate 'Ghosts,' 'Dao,' 'Evil,' and 'One.'

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao cultivates 'Lies.'"

"Wait, if they're cultivating 'Lies,' and the Strayed One's cultivation methods are directly opposite of their cultivation methods, then what is the cultivation path of the Strayed Ones?"

Zhuge Yuan didn't answer. Instead, he placed a white piece on the board. Li Huowang's gaze turned to the board, and he saw that the black pieces he had placed on the board had created a single character—Truth.

"They cultivate 'Truth'?"

Chapter 394 - Past

“They cultivate ‘Truth’?” An epiphany struck Li Huowang, and he pondered deeply over the strange yet familiar term. He had read about what Zhuge Yuan was talking about in novels, but he knew that those novels were far from the truth.

If the Sitting Oblivion Dao is cultivating ‘Lies,’ and the Strayed Ones are cultivating ‘Truth,’ they’re most likely each other’s archenemies. That is indeed going to explain why they hate the Strayed Ones so much.

Li Huowang felt like the events he had gone through finally made sense. However, he had more burning questions rather than answered questions.

“Wait, wait, wait. Give me a moment to think about this, Senior Zhuge,” Li Huowang said. Then, he closed his eyes to focus on recalling everything he had gone through.

Zhuge Yuan stared at Li Huowang, waiting patiently. Eventually, he put the Go board away and retrieved the utensils he had used to make tea.

Zhuge Yuan was soon finished brewing another pot of tea.

Li Huowang finally opened his eyes just then and asked, “Senior Zhuge, I don’t think that’s right. If the Sitting Oblivion Dao truly cultivates ‘Lies,’ it would explain why they want to turn something real into something fake.

“However, if Strayed Ones like me can cultivate ‘Truth,’ doesn’t that mean that we can turn nothing into something out of thin air? I don’t have any powers like that!”

“Are you sure?”

“Of course! Ever since I became a Strayed One, except for the illusions that I can’t seem to get rid of, the only other power I got was the illusion projection!” Li Huowang exclaimed; he sounded very certain when it came to himself.

Li Huowang had been living in this bizarre world for more than a year now, so he had experienced many bizarre things, acquiring bizarre powers in the process. However, he had never obtained any powers related to the cultivation of 'Truth.'

If he had such a powerful power, he wouldn't have struggled so much. Li Huowang pondered deeply. He had to be extremely sure about anything capable of changing his life. In other words, he couldn't easily trust the words of other people.

"Senior Zhuge, are you sure that Strayed Ones can cultivate 'Truth'? Is there really a cultivation method that will allow us to do so?"

Zhuge Yuan pondered over it before answering, "I've read it in a book, but I'm not sure whether it's real or not. Based on my observations of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members, however, I'm certain that it's true.

"Plus, are you sure you've never experienced changing reality itself? As far as I know, anything can happen to the Strayed Ones. Perhaps you've done it before, but you simply failed to notice it. Why don't you try telling me everything that has happened to you so far? Perhaps I can point out what you might've overlooked."

Li Huowang thought about it hard and long before nodding. He decided to trust Zhuge Yuan. Zhuge Yuan already knew that he was a Strayed One, so he didn't really have anything to hide.

"Alright, let me tell you everything that has happened to me from the very beginning. Let's start from when I was in Zephyr Temple. I met an evil cultivator named Dan Yangzi. He was illiterate, but he somehow obtained a sacred text that made him yearn for immortality to the point of..."

Beneath the elegant bamboo eaves, Li Huowang slowly recounted his experience over the past year.

Li Huowang had experienced a lot and thought he would be speaking for a very long time. He even thought that he would talk overnight, but Zhuge Yuan stopped him when he was talking about the Benevolent Nunnery.

“Junior Li, look at this. Is this the pill recipe you told your master, Dan Yangzi, to eat?” Zhuge Yuan said, handing over a piece of paper filled with text.

Li Huowang couldn't appreciate calligraphy, but he could appreciate Zhuge Yuan's neat handwriting. The pill recipe he had given to Dan Yangzi was recorded on it, while the cultivation method to become an Immortal was written below the recipe.

Li Huowang looked at it and nodded. “Yep. This is it. What about it?”

Zhuce Yuan's calm voice rose a bit as he replied, “What do you mean, 'what about it?' Your pill recipe is like how you play Go—it's extremely messy. You really thought your recipe would help your master become a half Immortal?”

“Yeah, but I'm curious as well. Why did Dan Yangzi become—” Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence, and his eyes widened upon realizing something. “Are you saying that I used my power as a Strayed One to help Dan Yangzi ascend? No way. I hated him to the core, so I couldn't have helped him!” Li Huowang affirmed.

“However, Dan Yangzi still ascended. Junior Li, I want you to think about it. What was in your stomach at the time?”

“My stomach? Half of Dan Yangzi's face—” Li Huowang came to a halt mid-sentence, discovering the missing puzzle piece to complete the puzzle.

Zhuce Yuan nodded and took the words out of Li Huowang's mouth. “That's right. Even though he only had half a face, he was still alive! His flesh was within your stomach. He had used his obsession to become an Immortal and your powers to ascend!”

Li Huowang blanked out. Every single burning question in his mind was answered at once. He had never thought that he was the reason behind Dan Yangzi's ascension to immortality.

"See, what did I say? " Zhuge Yuan said, "A third party can easily spot something wrong within the narrative. Your master used a very crude method to do so, and he ended up becoming that abomination. However, he still became a half Immortal.

"Even if you don't quite understand it right now, I'm sure you're smart enough to know that he had used your powers to become a half Immortal. In other words, the Strayed Ones can indeed transform lies into the truth."

Li Huowang had no idea what to say in the face of the truth. As a Strayed One, he knew he had a strange power, but he truly didn't expect that he would be so clueless about it.

Wait! Aside from when I had inadvertently helped Dan Yangzi become a half Immortal, have I ever used this power unconsciously?

Li Huowang tried hard to recall anything strange from his experiences, but he had no idea which was real, and which was born from his power.

What's real? Li Huowang pondered.

Zhuge Yuan unfurled his fan and said, "Aside from your pursuit of Bei Feng for that method, I'm sure you have other plans, right?"

Li Huowang nodded seriously. "Thank you for your help, Senior Zhuge! Your words have allowed me to see that I have one more path to choose. However, how should I cultivate the "Truth"? How should I take control of my primordial breath?"

" Hmm... " Zhuge Yuan wasn't sure as well. "I'm sorry, but I can't help you with that. All I know about it was from a book, and I can't really remember the details because it's been so long..."

Chapter 395 - Storyteller

Li Huowang understood what Zhuge Yuan was trying to say.

Zhugue Yuan was trying to tell Li Huowang that there were other methods to deal with his situation rather than risking his life by staying by Zhuge Yuan's side just to lure Bei Feng out.

But I don't know how to use my abilities even though Zhuge Yuan told me that I can cultivate 'Truth.' I don't even know where to find any books or scrolls describing it. What should I do?

Zhugue Yuan noticed Li Huowang's distress and consoled the latter. "No worries. I will help you on my end by paying attention to any news about it. If I do hear anything, I'll let you know immediately."

Zhugue Yuan's leisurely attitude made Li Huowang feel anxious. He felt like Zhuge Yuan couldn't sense Li Huowang's desperation.

Maybe he will understand if I show him. Li Huowang showed Zhuge Yuan his arm covered in scabs. He used his purple-tassel sword and shaved off his skin, revealing his blood vessels underneath.

Numerous black tentacles wriggled inside each of his blood vessels. Some wormed their way out of the weaker walls of the capillaries like maggots.

"Senior Zhuge, I want to take it slow, too, but I don't have any time left. The Black Taisui can suppress my hallucinations, but it's taking over me. I don't know how much longer I can hold it back, but I really don't have much time.

"The Black Taisui would snatch away my body if I were to take it slow. I must cultivate 'Truth' as soon as possible."

Li Sui's sobbing echoed in Li Huowang's brain. Li Sui seemed to have learned how to express sadness.

The scene was gory, but Li Huowang had to make it clear to Zhuge Yuan. The search for the cultivation method to cultivate ‘Truth’ was indeed a tempting idea, but Bei Feng was just right in front of them.

Li Huowang also couldn't let go of Bei Feng so easily.

Li Huowang inwardly consoled the crying Li Sui while staring at Zhuge Yuan's face.

“I also think that Bei Feng has a cultivation method for cultivating ‘Truth.’”

Zhuce Yuan remained indecisive, fanning himself as he said, “Do you really have to do this? You're only going to have hallucinations without the Black Taisui. That's the worst that can happen. You're not even going to die, so why are you so anxious?”

Li Huowang's pupils widened when he recalled that scene. “You don't know what I've gone through! I know it's a hallucination, but I'd rather die than get stuck in that hallucination again! I want to be able to tell which is real and which is fake!”

The bamboo building went quiet afterward.

The two of them sat silently, seemingly pondering over something.

A bird landed on the window sill and pecked it before leaving.

“All right, since you need it urgently, let's bait out the Sitting Oblivion Dao. They might attack me soon, so you can just follow me.

“Thank you for your help, Senior Zhuge!” Li Huowang exclaimed, extremely pleased with the outcome. He had achieved one of his objectives and found a reliable ally as well. Bei Feng was strong, but he and Zhuge Yuan could fight Bei Feng together.

Li Huowang was never going to stop until he acquired the method to get rid of the hallucinations from Bei Feng.

Zhuce Yuan sighed inwardly in the face of Li Huowang's delighted face. He had decided to agree, as Li Huowang would most likely follow him secretly, anyway even if he had refused.

Zhugue Yuan would rather agree than allow Li Huowang to follow him secretly. In addition, they could communicate better, as they had decided to work together.

Zhugue Yuan also found Li Huowang to be quite pitiful. After all, everyone with the word 'One' was bound to live a challenging life.

"Relax, Junior Li. Since you've decided to follow me, I have to tell you what I'm about to do. This way, you won't be surprised by what's going to happen."

"Sure, tell me!" Li Huowang replied, ears perking up to listen attentively. He really wanted to know why Zhugue Yuan had taken a Muddled One away from the Surveillance Bureau.

Zhugue Yuan took a sip of his tea and said, "Junior Li, I'm sure you've noticed that things are getting chaotic. It feels like something big is going to happen soon, right?"

Zhugue Yuan was right. Li Huowang did feel like something big was about to happen, and he could still remember seeing that colossal navy ship at sea. Ji Xiang's departure from Shangjing to hide elsewhere had been nagging at him as well.

"That's true, but I don't think what's going to happen is related to me."

"Sigh," Zhugue Yuan sighed. It's all because of the royal family. I heard that the Empress of the Qi Kingdom had decided to revive the late emperor, who perished when he was just six years old. She apparently did that to solidify her power.

"Hahaha, the absolute leader of the Qi Kingdom is actually a zombie. What a joke."

Qi Kingdom? Didn't the Qi Kingdom fall to ruin hundreds of years ago? Isn't it the Liang Kingdom now? Maybe he thought the Liang Kingdom had annexed the Qi Kingdom, and he's used to calling it the Qi Kingdom. Li Huowang was confused.

Zhuge Yuan failed to notice Li Huowang's confusion as he continued, "That's not all. A skinny camel is still larger than a horse. The Qi Kingdom is slowly inching to ruins, but it's still a massive kingdom that few can afford to invade.

"Unfortunately, the officials of the Qi Kingdom have become corrupt. I don't know what method they used, but they managed to bestow upon the late emperor a 'fake' consciousness, and the late emperor came to life, giving out decrees.

"It even chose concubines. Let's ignore the fact that he's dead and think about his age. He's just six years old. Why would he need a concubine? He even specifically chose concubines born on the Yin year, Yin month, and Yin hour.

"I asked my friends to help me gather information and was shocked to find that the emperor was not only taking in concubines but also conscripting many men.

"Now that I think about it, it's been such a long time since there was such a massive conscription. I don't think it's necessary to conscript so many people just to fix the walls, so I think the emperor wants to build a tomb!"

"A tomb?" Li Huowang couldn't comprehend what Zhuge Yuan was saying. As far as he could remember, Zhuge Yuan's revelation had never happened, especially the mass conscription.

Zhuge Yuan ignored Li Huowang's confusion and added, "A zombie emperor, concubines born on the Yin year, Yin month, and Yin hour. Then, a tomb. Think about it: something grand and serious is about to happen."

Zhuge Yuan poured out the cold tea inside Li Huowang's cup and replaced it with hot tea.

"The officials have taken control of the palace, and they've collaborated with the Righteous Monastery. They've fallen into depravity and are infecting the entire capital with their corruption.

"Thankfully, there are still some righteous people within the palace. I'm just an ordinary storyteller, so I initially had no plans of getting involved.

"However, I realized that the lives of so many people would be at risk if I were to avoid getting involved. I can't afford to ignore it. That's why I took away that Muddled One and asked an old friend of mine to turn it into an artifact capable of wiping out memories. That artifact is going to be an important tool for me."

Li Huowang stared intently at Zhuge Yuan, but he hadn't been listening at all.

I thought the Twisted Ones were somewhat better off, but it seems that we have some similarities. The Twisted Ones, the Strayed Ones, and the Muddled Ones all have their own distinct abilities, and we also have our distinct curses.

Hey guys! Hopefully everyone's doing well.

Been busy irl but good to be back!

Chapter 396 - Two Blooming Flowers

“Senior Zhuge, please wait.” Li Huowang interrupted Zhuge Yuan. “I know what you're trying to say. You don't have to explain it any further.”

Zhuce Yuan was confused. “Junior Li, do you really understand me? Those who have heard my explanation so far have always told me that the Qi Kingdom doesn't exist. They'd always argue with me.”

“Since you say that the Qi Kingdom exists, then it exists.”

Li Huowang was a Strayed One, so he truly understood Zhuge Yuan's feelings. He wholeheartedly accepted Zhuge Yuan's explanation. There was no need to cause distress to another person with ‘One’ in their name.

Zhuce Yuan frowned, sensing that Li Huowang didn't believe him at all. “Junior Li, the Twisted Ones and the Strayed Ones are two different entities. The Qi Kingdom exists! The Liang Kingdom is fake!”

“Yes, I know. The Liang Kingdom is fake. The Qi Kingdom is real.” Li Huowang nodded. He made up his mind that even if Zhuge Yuan were to go and save the Qi Kingdom from ruins, even though the kingdom was no more, Li Huowang would still follow Zhuge Yuan.

Zhuce Yuan was kind, and Li Huowang was more than happy to help him.

Of course, there was a limit to it.

After all, the Twisted Ones' curse was related to a Siming inside Baiyu Capital. Li Huowang wasn't sure what Heavenly Dao was under the Three Ancient Ones' control, but he was sure that he couldn't do much about it with his meager power.

His current goal was to help Zhuge Yuan fight the Sitting Oblivion Dao and track down Bei Feng.

"Why won't you believe me? The book explaining how the Strayed Ones can cultivate the 'Truth' is located in a library somewhere in the capital of the Qi Kingdom. Come, let me tell you the history of the Qi Kingdom."

"Senior Zhuge, you don't have to do that," Li Huowang hurriedly said. He had to stop Zhuge Yuan, or the latter might speak for three days and nights straight. He feared that it would take three days and nights to fully explain it. "You just need to tell me where we should go, what we should do, and who we should kill. I'll follow your orders."

Zhuce Yuan relented upon seeing Li Huowang's determined look. Of course, he was a bit sad at the rejection. "Junior Li, you must not stop learning throughout your life. The sea of knowledge is boundless, and all past scholars only had one regret—the fact that they haven't read enough."

Li Huowang had no idea what to say, but he finally understood why Zhuge Yuan had the moniker—Storyteller.

"If the officials and eunuchs are truly causing havoc in the palace of the Qi Kingdom. I don't think we should discuss that here, Zhuge Yuan."

"Fine. There's still time. I can just tell you as we travel." Zhuge Yuan stood up and took some of the paintings on the wall. "Follow me to the capital, where we'll meet the Imperial Preceptor."

"All right," Li Huowang said. Then, he stood up and helped Zhuge Yuan take some of the paintings.

"Senior Zhuge, you said that Dan Yangzi had used his obsession and my power to become a half Immortal. Doesn't that mean that I can use that power, too?" Li Huowang asked.

“Of course, the Strayed Ones can use that power. Why do you think others resort to trickery just to capture them? That's exactly the reason why. They're afraid of the Strayed Ones' power.

"However, I think you shouldn't think about wielding your primordial breath for now. You're just going to harm yourself without the proper technique to wield it. Or what? Do you want to become a half Immortal like your master?"

Li Huowang went silent when he remembered Dan Yangzi's three heads. No one deserved to live such a life, even his enemies. Li Huowang had decided to wield the Profound Records rather than attempt to use his powers.

After all, the Profound Records was easier to use.

“Junior Li, I think you should still try to search for the cultivation method to cultivate the ‘Truth.’ I mean, think about the Muddled Ones. Unlike us, they have no choice, and most of them usually go crazy after using their powers haphazardly.”

“Shit! There's no way I'm going to lose! One head and one tail! No way I'm losing here!”

“Two heads! I bet ten coins!”

“Two heads!”

“Shit! Get out of here! Stay away from me! Don't you dare steal my luck!”

A group of people raised a cacophonous din, betting their money away in a gambling den filled with the sweat of its patrons.

Some of the patrons were notorious gang members, and it wasn't really a strange sight. After all, where there was light, there was also darkness. Yinling City was prosperous, and there was a reason behind its prosperity.

Surprisingly, Sir Kui's gambling den was considered one of the cleanest gambling dens in the city.

“Anyone else? Anyone else who wants to place their bets? Bets are confirmed once you lift your hands off of the table!”

Lu Xiucan sat in the middle of the gambling den with a demeanor that made him appear as if he were a general heading to the front lines. His naive demeanor was no more and had been replaced by a demeanor hardly seen in someone his age.

Lu Xiucan chuckled as he swept his gaze across the tiny hill of coins and silver on the table. He made a seal with his right arm inside his sleeves and stomped with his right foot; the coins inside the bowl moved unbeknownst to everyone.

Everyone howled and sighed when the bowl was opened. The two coins inside the bowl were both tails, and it was coincidentally the outcome with the least bets.

A few unrelenting gamblers grabbed the coins and inspected them, but they found nothing strange with the coins. Lu Xiucan were using rusty coins, but they were ordinary coins.

“Shit! I can't believe my luck is so bad tonight! Guys, let's go to Sir Kui and borrow some money!”

Time passed slowly amidst the cacophonous din. Soon, the roosters crowed to greet the day, and the gamblers exited listlessly as if their souls had been sucked out of their fleshly bodies.

Lu Xiucan stood in front of a chubby man while counting the money he had earned overnight. He could only take forty percent of the revenue, but his share was already big enough to make Lu Xiucan happy.

“Sir Lu, this is your share.”

“Thank you, Sir Kui!” Lu Xiucan exclaimed, eyes shining in greed as he happily accepted the money.

I really want to show Father just how much money I can earn overnight! This is more money than he can earn through performing for several days! Hmph! How dare he say I'm useless, even though he's a useless and senile old man.

Lu Xiucan was putting away his money into his two pouches when Sir Kui, the owner of the gambling den, advised, “Sir Lu, make sure to let them win from time to time. Let them win once every three or four rounds; that way they'll certainly come back.”

“Sure, I'm going to do that next time,” Lu Xiucan walked out of the gambling den with a spring in his steps. A few gangsters outside smiled at him and congratulated him.

Lu Xiucan seemed to be on good terms with the gangsters. He waved his arm and shouted, “Come here, let's go have breakfast! It's my treat today!”

The gangsters cheered at Lu Xiucan's words.

“Sir Lu truly is a righteous and generous man!”

“Sir Lu is the most generous man in Yinling City!”

“Of course! Who would dare to say otherwise?!”

Lu Xiucan felt like he was floating on cloud nine, and he couldn't suppress his grin.

This is how life is supposed to be! My previous life as a performer was almost like living as a prisoner!

Chapter 397 - Lu Xiucan

Lu Xiucan and the others happily walked into a restaurant for their breakfast.

Lu Xiucan didn't care, even though it was too early in the day—he ordered eight meat dishes. When the wine came, some of the smarter gangsters poured a glass of wine for Lu Xiucan.

Lu Xiucan drank it in one go and was greeted with cheers again.

The other customers cast contemptuous gazes upon them.

“Sir Lu has a great alcohol tolerance! Sir Lu is amazing!”

“Haha. I can't drink as much as Sir Lu. Would you be so kind as to give me pointers?”

“Hmph! This is nothing! When I was still hunting demons in Qing Qiu with Master Li Huowang, I could drink an entire jar of wine this high in one go!” Lu Xiucan replied.

“Sir Lu, tell us more about how you hunted demons with your master in Qing Qiu!”

“Okay, let me tell you that even though Qing Qiu looks safe on the outside, it's actually an extremely dangerous place with surging undercurrents! If it hadn't been for Master helping me, I would have died there!”

Lu Xiucan recounted everything that he had experienced in Qing Qiu while eating and drinking with the gangsters. Of course, most of the story had come from Puppy; Lu Xiucan recounted the story with him as the main character.

Amidst the cheers, Lu Xiucan's face turned bright red from the wine.

He was already slurring, but he felt that he could still drink more.

They indeed drank more and drank everything. Afterward, Lu

Xiucui waved at the gangsters and said, "Let's go to the brothel! It's on me!"

Everyone cheered louder, and they were so loud that the roof was almost torn apart from the volume of their voice. The gangsters served Lu Xiucui, and some of them even almost recognized him as their foster father.

Lu Xiucui laughed with them, feeling an unprecedented sense of fulfillment.

It was already noon when Lu Xiucui walked out of the brothel, but he wasn't hungry at all. The brothel was famous for giving its customers donkey meat buns. Of course, even though Lu Xiucui wasn't hungry, he got a bit too busy, so he decided to go back to his accommodation and rest.

Lu Xiucui wasn't exactly the ideal tenant to the landlords, but Sir Kui had managed to find several landlords willing to accommodate Lu Xiucui.

Upon arriving at his accommodation, Lu Xiucui pushed the door open and saw a woman doing laundry next to the well. The woman seemed to be quite skillful at doing laundry.

Lu Xiucui had purchased the woman somewhere, and her name was Tao'er. Lu Xiucui had purchased her, as she wasn't that expensive because of her tiny hips and ordinary looks.

Lu Xiucui wanted to make her his wife, but he no longer wanted to touch her after his first visit to a brothel. Tao'er was like a log in bed, and she couldn't be compared to the accomplished prostitutes in a brothel.

Lu Xiucui was now treating her as a servant—her task was to clean the house, wash Lu Xiucui's clothes, and cook some meals for them to eat.

Lu Xiucui collapsed on the bed right away and snored away.

Tao'er stood up and used a wooden bucket to scoop out hot water that she had prepared beforehand. Then, she dipped a towel into the bucket and used it to wipe Lu Xiucan clean.

Afterward, Tao'er removed his socks and soaked his feet in the warm water. After a while, she covered Lu Xiucan with a blanket and even wrapped his pillow with clean clothes.

Night soon arrived, and Lu Xiucan finally woke up. He rubbed his groggy eyes, and his nose twitched upon catching a whiff of dinner. Lu Xiucan then rolled down the bed and made his way over to the table.

Tao'er could not sit with him while he ate, and she could only eat his leftovers.

Tonight's dinner was two vegetable dishes, a soup, and a fried egg. The vegetables were stir-fried with lard, and it was an extravagant meal that Lu Xiucan once only dreamed of eating, but now, he had long gotten tired of it.

Lu Xiucan drank a mouthful of the winter melon soup and wiped his mouth clean with his sleeves. He was ready to win some money in the gambling den. He had to go early, or he would be locked out of the gambling den due to curfew.

Lu Xiucan stood up and glanced at Tao'er. He was astonished to see blood on her trousers, and he became angry after the initial shock had passed.

"What the fuck is that?! What happened?! Who dared to touch my woman?! I'm going to kill him!" Lu Xiucan roared.

Tao'er shook her head and said softly, "No one. It's just that my period is heavier this month, and it leaked out."

"Period? I'm asking you about the blood on your trousers! What the fuck are you talking about?!" Lu Xiucan shouted.

Tao'er then told Lu Xiucan what she meant by "period," and Lu Xiucan learned for the first time that women would bleed every month.

"I see. It all makes sense now. No wonder my sister-in-law is always unwell for a few days every month. I asked her once, but she scolded me for asking..." Lu Xiucan muttered.

Lu Xiucan handed over some silver fragments at the bottom of his pouch to Tao'er before heading out. "Go and buy some meat for me. I'm not going to eat leaves anymore! I've been eating vegetables all my life!"

The majority of the gamblers in the city were heading to the gambling den as well. A curfew was in place, but they would be fine as long as they stayed in the gambling den for the whole night.

Lu Xiucan entered Sir Kui's gambling den and took out the five bronze coins that Li Huowang had given to him. He played with it in his hands and revealed a greedy grin. With his techniques, there was no way he would starve again.

When he was ready to go to his usual post, Sir Kui stopped him.

Lu Xiucan turned and noticed the dragon tattoo on Sir Kui's shoulder and arm.

"Sir Lu, don't worry about earning money for now. I have something to discuss with you."

The two walked into the small courtyard behind the gambling den.

A hotpot was prepared with mutton slices next to it.

Lu Xiucan sat down and immediately started eating. He hadn't eaten his fill at home, so he was quite hungry. "Is something wrong? Please tell me if there's anything wrong. You accepted me that day, so you're now my benefactor!"

Sir Kui chuckled and poured Lu Xiucan a cup of wine. "Sir Lu, I heard that you were once a disciple of a Daoist? Is it true?"

"Of course! In fact, Master Li Huowang is an Immortal! He could even reattach his head! Evil beings are nothing but appetizers to him!" Lu Xiucan exclaimed, slapping his chest proudly as if he were Li Huowang himself.

"Since you are his disciple, you must be strong, too."

“Hehehe.” Lu Xiucan took a slice of mutton and placed it in the hotpot. Once it was done cooking, he took it out and munched on it with a grin. “Somewhat. I’m roughly forty—no, sixty percent as strong as him!”

“Good! Youngsters nowadays are truly amazing! Impressive!”

Lu Xiucan smiled sheepishly. It was amazing to think that the infamous Sir Kui would treat him with so much respect. Sir Kui had stroked his ego so much that he was already thinking about bragging to his brothers tomorrow morning.

However, he failed to notice Sir Kui's slight frown.

“Sir Lu, I have a difficult problem. I wonder if you can help me with it. I actually have a sworn brother, but for some reason, he ended up getting possessed. I’m not sure whether it was because he was just unlucky or not, but he has gone crazy. Neither the monks nor the Daoists whom I managed to find for him could help him. If you can help me, I’ll allow you to take eighty percent of my earnings here!”

Chapter 398 - Half-Immortal

Eighty percent commission?! That's double my current commission!

Lu Xiucan exclaimed inwardly, and he even started drooling from greed at Sir Kui's proposal.

However, he calmed down quickly. After all, he had seen a fair share of evil beings from his travels with Li Huowang. He knew that there were weak and evil beings. Li Huowang had told him that the bronze coins could cut down evil beings, but Lu Xiucan had never tried it before.

Sir Kui sighed with disappointment upon seeing Lu Xiucan's conflicted expression.

"It's okay. I'm not going to force you. It's not something an ordinary person can resolve, anyway," Sir Kui said.

Sir Kui's words made Lu Xiucan feel insulted, and his brain came to a screeching halt as he immediately exclaimed, "Shit! I'm going to do it! It's either I die, or that evil being will die. Do you really think I'm afraid of evil beings?

"If Li Huowang can do it, I can do it, too!"

Lu Xiucan was still confident in his chances of escaping, and it was all thanks to the bronze coins.

"All right! I knew you were an amazing guy! Here, let me toast you!" Sir Kui exclaimed.

However, Lu Xiucan placed his cup on the table and copied what he had seen in a book. "Don't worry about the wine, Sir Kui. Allow me to savor it with you slowly once I've dealt with that evil being!"

Sir Kui grinned at Lu Xiucan's confidence, and he even gave a thumbs-up!

Lu Xiucan savored every moment. He truly didn't expect to one day experience what Li Huowang himself had gone through.

"All right, then. Let's go," Sir Kui said.

Lu Xiucan's confidence seemed to have vanished once he was inside the carriage. He felt anxious as he kept trying to recall what Li Huowang had done when they stumbled upon evil beings during their travels.

The cogs in Li Xiucan's brain desperately, but he couldn't remember anything relevant at all. After all, he had always been the first one to run and hide every time there was danger. If there was nowhere to hide, he would hide under the carriage, not daring to take even a peek until the danger had passed.

Lu Xiucan lampooned his past self when the carriage finally stopped.

Lu Xiucan looked around and saw that they were out of the city.

They were in a small town, but the utterly bizarre part was that every single house had no light. Lu Xiucan had no idea where he was, but he knew instinctively that this small town was most likely somewhere near Yinling City.

A massive mansion stood before them, and the size of the mansion alone made it clear that the owner wasn't an ordinary Tom, Dick, and Harry.

"Sir Lu, follow me. My friend is inside," said Sir Kui before knocking on the mansion's door.

A creaking noise echoed as the door was opened by an old man carrying a lantern.

Upon seeing Sir Kui's face, the old man quickly ushered in the two. The old man's frantic manner seemed as if he were afraid that something strange would follow them inside.

"Sanjin, he is...?"

"Uncle Fang, don't worry. He's one of my sworn brothers, and he's a Daoist!"

The old man cast a puzzled gaze at Lu Xiucan puzzlingly.

Lu Xiucan put on a cold facade, copying Li Huowang's demeanor.

"Sanjin!" someone shouted.

Lu Xiucan turned around and saw a group of people walking toward them.

A large-framed muscular man stood at the center of the group. He was wearing a silk brocade, and prayer beads were hanging on his neck. However, his bulging muscles made him look incompatible with his clothes.

The others weren't anywhere better, either. They all looked fierce and ruthless. If it hadn't been for the other houses near the mansion, Lu Xiucan would have thought that he had entered a bandit's den.

Kui Sanjin bowed slightly toward them and greeted the large-framed muscular man earnestly.

Lu Xiucan noticed that something was off. Who are they to Sir Kui? Why do I feel that they're not the type of people to establish legal businesses?

Lu Xiucan regretted coming here. To make matters worse, he was in a foreign place, and it was pitch-black outside.

Soon, Kui Sanjin introduced Lu Xiucan to the large-framed, muscular man.

"Sir Lu, he's Sir Zhao. His son was the one who got possessed," Kui Sanjin said.

Lu Xiucan stared deeply at the large-framed muscular man with a fierce demeanor. He was about to say something when Sir Zhao grabbed Lu Xiucan's hands and exclaimed, "You must be half-Immortal Lu Xiucan! Please save my son! He's the sole successor of my family!"

"Yes, yes, we can take our time discussing what happened," Lu

Xiucan said, smiling. He truly loved seeing someone beg him for help, as it made him feel incredibly important.

“Half-Immortal Lu, we can't take our time. Please follow us! My son can't last any longer,” Zhao Tianhu said, pulling Lu Xiucan into the depths of the mansion.

The mansion was large. Lu Xiucan felt dizzy from the amount of turns they were taking to go somewhere.

Shit! I'm going to buy a mansion this large next time! Just as the thought crossed Lu Xiucan's mind, he was pulled right in front of a room. There were no lamps inside the room, and it seemed as if there wasn't anyone inside.

“Half-Immortal Lu, my son is inside! Save him, and I will do anything!” Zhao Tianhu exclaimed.

Lu Xiucan listened carefully but heard nothing.

“Sir Zhao, are you sure your son is inside by himself?” Lu Xiucan asked.

“Yes. he has already killed the two servants we sent inside!” Zhao Tianhu replied.

Then, Zhao Tianhu and his people pushed Lu Xiucan into the room.

“Sir Zhao, stop being so pushy. You have to tell me what kind of evil being is inside first! Is it strong? Is it a male, or is it a female?”

Lu Xiucan was pushed into the room, and the door was immediately slammed shut.

“Don't close the door! What are you guys doing?! I'm not going to run away, so open the door!” Lu Xiucan exclaimed, banging on the door. However, he received no response.

Dekdekdekdekdekdekdek~

An eerie peal of laughter echoed, making Lu Xiucan flinch as goosebumps broke out all over him. He turned around, revealing the five bronze coins in his hand. However, Lu Xiucan was already trembling from fear. Something was jumping around in the dark room, but it was so dark that Lu Xiucan couldn't see it.

Unfortunately, there was no going back. Lu Xiucan mustered his courage and shouted, “Stupid evil being! You're nothing before me! My master is Li Huowang! Touch me, and you are as good as dead!”

Lu Xiucan's threat echoed throughout the room, and he felt somewhat braver when the room went silent.

Heh, this is easy. Lu Xiucan gnashed his teeth and walked toward the middle of the room. Lu Xiucan groped around and realized that he was in a bedroom. However, he failed to find Zhao Tianhu's son.

No, it's too dark. I need a lamp. Lu Xiucan moved toward the table and saw a flint placed conveniently near the lamp.

Sparks flew as Lu Xiucan struck the flint. A spark made contact with the lamp's wick, igniting it.

As soon as the darkness was vanquished, Lu Xiucan saw a pale and thin face staring at him blankly on the other side of the room.

“AAAAAAHHH!”

Chapter 399 - Savior

Zhao Tianhu sighed upon hearing Lu Xiucan's voice. "And another one bites the dust..."

Kui Sanjin said nothing.

Meanwhile, a short man among their group spoke, saying, "Sir Kui, I have someone with relations to the Surveillance Bureau. Want me to talk to them?"

Zhao Tianhu slapped the short man on the head. "Are you stupid? Don't you know what we do? We're graverobbers! Why would you go and consult the Surveillance Bureau? They're going to kill us all!"

The short man retreated into the group of people.

"They're not the imperial guards. They won't care about us at all."

Zhao Tianhu sighed. "We should just give up on it if it's really impossible. We've sought so many people to help, but they all failed. We've done our best for Fourth Brother's sake."

However, the others disagreed. "You can't do that, Sir Zhao! Since it managed to turn Fourth Zhao into that ghastly creature, that item is definitely a prized treasure!"

"Yeah! We can just sell it and earn a lot of money since we're too scared to use it."

"Sir Zhao! I heard those cultivators have pills to extend their lifespan! We can exchange that treasure for those pills!"

"Shut up!" Zhao Tianhu shouted.

Everyone went quiet.

"If you think you can do it, why don't you personally try and tear off that wicked skin from Fourth Brother? That treasure will belong to you if you manage to do it! What? Do you dare try it? I know that it's a treasure that we can sell for good money, but it can fucking kill you!

"It already killed Fourth Brother and Sixth Brother. How many lives would you need just to take care of it?

"Anyway, just listen to me! We've got to block the windows and doors. We'll leave before daybreak, and hopefully, the officials won't discover our trails."

No one else dared to disobey Zhao Tianhu, and they prepared to carry out his orders.

"AAAAAAAAAH!" Lu Xiucan's shout echoed just then.

"What?!" Zhao Tianhu was astonished, but he was immediately delighted. "He's still alive! It seems we finally have a chance. Let's stay here and wait!"

"AAAAAAH!" Lu Xiucan shouted, running around the room while holding the bronze coins. A figure with a long neck and long hair chased him around as if it were a snake.

Lu Xiucan finally saw the corpses in the corner of the room, and the limbs of those corpses were tangled up with each other. Lu Xiucan ran with all his might, afraid of meeting the same horrible fate as those corpses.

Unfortunately, Lu Xiucan was eventually pushed into a corner. He gnashed his teeth and raised the coins. The long-necked evil retreated slightly.

It's fine! It's fine! It's afraid of the coins! Lu Xiucan consoled himself while catching his breath. The brief respite allowed him to take a good look at the evil being. The evil being was a humanoid evil being with its neck and limbs horrendously elongated, allowing it to wriggle them like snakes.

A moldy piece of leather was attached to the evil being's chest. The leather seemed to be made out of several human faces and scalps. The scars on the scalps indicated that the owners were monks. The orifices of monks' faces were sewn shut, while their foreheads were lined with what looked like intricate runes.

The entire piece of leather emitted an ominous air, and it would move every time the evil being.

Is that leather made from human parts? Is that why this evil creature can stretch its neck to such an extent? Lu Xiucan thought, but he honestly couldn't care less. His priority was escaping his predicament, but he couldn't see any way out of this.

The evil being quivered and squirmed as it slowly approached Lu Xiucan. At the sight, Lu Xiucan thrust the bronze coins toward the evil being, forcing it to retreat.

Lu Xiucan saw that and came up with an idea. He made sure his hands were raised as he moved slowly toward the window. Upon reaching it, he banged on the wooden window with his elbows.

After creating a hole in the window, Lu Xiucan judged that the hole was big enough for him to escape, so he turned around to jump into it.

However, the window was abruptly opened from the outside. The window struck him in the chest, knocking him down. Lu Xiucan immediately attempted to stand up, but the pale, emaciated face was only a few inches away from him!

Lu Xiucan briefly stopped breathing at the terrifying sight.

The evil being opened its mouth to devour Lu Xiucan when a strong beam of light struck the evil being from behind Lu Xiucan. The evil being's flesh melted, and it collapsed with a dull thud.

Lu Xiucan saw a white skull rolling on the floor.

The evil being's head had melted away, and it was considered dead without a head.

The leather sensed the death of its host, and it immediately detached from the fleshly body of its deceased host. Then, it launched itself at Lu Xiucan.

Swoosh!

A wooden pole flew into the room, impaling the leather to the ground.

Lu Xiucan stared at the leather and looked up slowly, tracing the pole's wooden shaft until he saw the banner tied to it. A Taiji symbol was drawn on the flag along with six words at the bottom of it.

If Lu Xiucan could read, he would understand some of the words that said—fortune-telling, glyphomancy, and divinations.

“Haha, I guess my good luck has returned. It makes sense, as I've been so unlucky over the past few days,” said Blind Chen as he entered the room. He looked around before going over to his wooden pole.

He was the same Blind Chen whom Li Huowang had met before. Blind Chen stepped on the leather and walked up to the wooden pole.

Lu Xiucan crawled up and stared at the blind man with a bamboo basket on his back

The blind man was stroking the leather with a pensive look, seemingly oblivious to Lu Xiucan's presence.

“Thank you for your help,” Lu Xiucan said.

Blind Chen ignored Lu Xiucan. He pulled out a black cloth and grabbed the leather with it. Then, he took out a mirror—the same mirror that Li Huowang had returned to him.

Zhao Tianhu and Kui Sanjin huddled next to the window, staring in disbelief at Blind Chen. They had no idea where the blind man had come from, and why he was so strong.

Blind Chen pinched the mirror in his armpit and used his wooden pole to poke around.

“Why are you blocking the window? Step back a bit. It's too crowded,” Blind Chen said.

The people outside took a step back upon seeing that the blind man wanted to exit through the window. However, they made sure that the old man was within arm's reach, and their greedy gazes were fixated on the old man's bamboo basket.

“Now that’s better,” Blind Chen said. He then assumed a horse stance and raised the mirror high up in the air using his right hand while making seals with his left hand. He chanted an incantation at the same time.

Lu Xiucan admired Blind Chen and wondered when he would become a sage-like individual like the latter.

Lu Xiucan was also surprised by the strength of Blind Chen's Bagua mirror. Lu Xiucan knew that Bagua mirrors could deal with evil beings, but the issue was that Bagua mirrors were definitely expensive.

Lu Xiucan wondered how much it would cost to buy one.

While Lu Xiucan was deep in his thoughts, Blind Chen reached a crescendo.

When his chanting ceased, Blind Chen pointed his mirror at the group of people in front of him and roared. “The limitless Heaven and Earth upholds justice for the world!”

A dazzling, radiant light erupted from the mirror, piercing everyone.

They only managed to utter a single shout of despair before dying. Blind Chen's Bagua mirror had reduced all of them to a puddle of red flesh.

Chapter 400 - Noodles

Lu Xiucan was in awe as he stood inside the messy room.

He never thought the blind old man would kill everyone just like that.

Aren't Daoists supposed to help kind and innocent people and punish evildoers? Why did he kill everyone? Aren't they innocent? I guess Daoists are different from what my old man told me. Lu Xiucan pondered.

Just then, Blind Chen turned around and looked at Lu Xiucan. Although Blind Chen was blind, Lu Xiucan felt that the old man could see him as he broke out into a cold sweat.

"Oh? Why is there someone still alive?" Blind Chen raised his mirror toward Lu Xiucan.

Lu Xiucan was scared out of his wits. He raised the bronze coins in his hands and shouted, "Don't kill me! My master is Li Huowang!"

Blind Chen came to a halt.

Lu Xiucan felt that he had been spared, but he still pleaded mercy to Blind Chen. "Do you know my master? Please spare me! I don't know these people at all!"

Blind Chen walked over and took the bronze coins away from Lu Xiucan's palm. "Li Huowang? I don't know him. However, the five bronze coins in your hands contain a trace of spiritual power, and they're going to come in handy. Not bad, I'll consider these coins payment for your life."

Blind Chen then turned around and walked away with his white banner while playing with the bronze coins.

Lu Xiucan stood blankly for a while until the soft night breeze swept past him, snapping him back to reality. Lu Xiucan stared at the puddle of flesh outside, and he couldn't believe that the powerful Sir Kui had perished just like that.

Sir Kui was like a mere ant compared to Blind Chen.

Blind Chen had thoroughly destroyed Lu Xiucai's ego.

Blind Chen wasn't the same as his master Li Huowang. Even though Li Huowang was cold and crazy, he wasn't the type of person to kill indiscriminately. However, Blind Chen was different. He seemed to be the type of person to kill as he wished.

A stronger sense of fear gripped Lu Xiucai's heart, and he started trembling from fear. If it hadn't been for those coins, he would have died like Sir Kui and his group members.

The fear soon disappeared, replaced by determination. Why? Why am I so worthless? I want to become like that blind man!

Lu Xiucai learned something from Blind Chen that he hadn't learned from Li Huowang. Food? Women? Those are nothing! I have to become strong like that blind man!

Lu Xiucai trembled at the thought that he could actually become strong enough to decide the life and death of other people.

I have to find my master and ask him to teach me how to become powerful! Lu Xiucai clenched his fist and ran out of the mansion.

"Come here, and let me test you. Who built the Qi Kingdom's foundations? I know you don't know, so let me just tell you. When the disaster of the Black Heavens befell us, General Qilu braved the seas with his people to come here.

"At the time, this land was in turmoil. Small countries were fighting against each other; the general fought in numerous wars to unify the countries, and he established the great Qi Kingdom when he was ninety-five years old.

"His grandson Qiheng continued his legacy by leading everyone to prosperity. He also established the Surveillance Bureau during that time period."

Bun was sprawled on Black Taisui, and its head was tilted sideways in curiosity. It was a dog, so it couldn't understand what Zhuge Yuan was saying.

The Black Taisui had occupied most of the space inside the carriage. As for the remaining empty spaces, Zhuge Yuan had filled them up with books and drawings. He didn't mind the Black Taisui's presence as he continued talking to Bun.

Bun yawned and was about to leave the carriage when it saw Zhuge Yuan holding a sausage in his hands. Bun sat down immediately and listened to what Zhuge Yuan had to say.

Li Huowang was driving the carriage, and he sighed upon taking a peek inside. Is Zhuge Yuan crazy enough to teach history to a dog?

Li Huowang didn't want to learn more about the Qi Kingdom's history, so Zhuge Yuan actually came up with an excuse to teach the dog and speak loud enough for Li Huowang to hear from the outside.

For some reason, he's trying to teach me the history of the Qi Kingdom. If not that, then he'd try to teach me calligraphy. What is wrong with him? Li Huowang lampooned inwardly.

Zhuce Yuan was very passionate about teaching, and his chatterbox trait didn't make him appear powerful at all.

The carriage traveled slowly on the dirt path. Li Huowang saw a stall by the roadside in the distance. There was white smoke coming up from the stall, and it seemed to be a stall selling food.

“Junior Li, why don't we stop here? We've eaten nothing but rations these days. I think it's good to have some 'real' food from time to time,” Zhuge Yuan said, opening up the tarp at the front.

Li Huowang was holding onto the reins when he glanced at the customers at the stall and the old lady serving the noodles. “No, it's not safe. Who knows? They might be members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao with a trap waiting for us.”

The Sitting Oblivion Dao hated Zhuge Yuan and would do anything just to kill him.

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao wouldn't stoop so low as to imitate a stall owner and poison food. Also, aren't you looking for Bei Feng? With your guard so high up, how are we going to find Bei Feng?”

Li Huowang froze, realizing his mistake. Indeed, he was supposed to look for his target, so he couldn't be so wary about everything. After all, how would he encourage his target to make a move against him if he were so wary about everything?

Li Huowang stopped the carriage and alighted. Zhuge Yuan alighted as well, followed by Bun.

“Table for two? Do you want some noodles? Fish noodles are our specialty. We use the entire fish, including the scales and bones to make the soup,” said the kind-looking old lady, who came up to them upon seeing them.

“Three. Bowls. Please.” Li Huowang enunciated each word while glaring at the kind-looking old lady.

The kind-looking old lady was shocked by Li Huowang's glare. She turned around and ran in a panic to talk to the old man cooking the noodles.

“Junior Li, calm down and eat properly. They're not members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao,” Zhuge Yuan said, using a white cloth to wipe the chopsticks clean.

“Oh? How can you say for sure? Do you have a method to uncover the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao?” Li Huowang asked, looking curiously at Zhuge Yuan.

“I guess you can say that. Since the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao cultivate 'Lies,' I would see a thread from their body if they got close enough to me like that kind-looking old lady.”

Li Huowang's curiosity was piqued, and he asked, “A thread? What does that mean?”

Li Huowang reckoned that he could learn Zhuge Yuan's techniques and use them against the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

“It's the thread that connects them to their Siming.”

Li Huowang was shocked. Zhuge Yuan's revelation was a bit different from what he had learned.

“They have a Siming?” Li Huowang asked.

“Of course. How would you explain their techniques if they don't have one?”

Chapter 401 - Acquaintance

“Of course, it was deceived from elsewhere! The Sitting Oblivion Dao deceives the heavens, the earth, and the Simings.”

Zhuge Yuan smiled and opened his fan with a snap. Then, he gently fanned himself and said, “Who said that? They fooled you. However, there are indeed rumors disseminating similar accusations.

“They don’t want others to know, so they spread rumors that the powers of Sitting Oblivion Dao are all from deception. But think about it, Brother Li. What if a mortal could ask the other Simings to bestow upon them power?”

Coaxing the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s Siming? Wouldn’t that mean controlling all “lies”? Li Huowang thought. After careful consideration, Li Huowang said, “Brother Zhuge, what is the name of the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s Siming?”

“Doulao Taiyin.”

Doulao Taiyin? Is that Siming responsible for all the “lies” in this world? Li Huowang fell into deep contemplation. Was the Siming in Baiyu Capital back then? Have I seen them before? Li Huowang tried hard to search through his memories from a year ago.

Zhuge Yuan seemed to have sensed something. He looked up at the sun and snapped his fingers before Li Huowang.

Li Huowang’s mind cleared instantly, and he couldn’t remember his thoughts just now.

“Brother Li. Mere mortals like us should avoid matters beyond the heavenly realm. It’s better not to get involved, lest we disrupt our karma and destiny,” Zhuge Yuan said.

Li Huowang nodded, and he sounded exhausted as he asked, "None of them will work?"

"It's best not to dwell on it."

Li Huowang had many questions about the Simings, but he could only swallow them for now and change the subject. "Brother Zhuge, can you teach me your cultivation method? Once I learn it, the Sitting Oblivion Dao will no longer be a concern."

Zhugue Yuan waved his fan once again.

He was about to speak when a mocking voice echoed from the side. "Look at this scholar. It's so cold, but he's waving his fan. He must be crazy."

Zhugue Yuan's expression stiffened. Then, he snapped his fan shut and turned to Li Huowang, saying, "The Twisted One's fate cannot be learned. However, once you master the Strayed One's cultivation method, the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao will flee quicker than a rabbit once they see you."

Li Huowang smiled bitterly at Zhugue Yuan's remark. It seemed that if he cultivated the Strayed One's cultivation method, he would become the Sitting Oblivion Dao arch-nemesis.

"I hope so. I just want to get rid of these illusions. The rest doesn't matter."

"Hehehe, here it comes! Hot and steamy fish soup noodles. Please try my old man's masterpiece."

Li Huowang picked up his chopsticks and took a few strands of noodles from each bowl before throwing them to the ground. Bun enthusiastically devoured the noodles.

"Brother Zhuge, let's make Bun eat first."

Zhugue Yuan had just taken out a silver needle, and he nodded knowingly at Li Huowang's remark. "That's not a bad method. I was wondering why you have a dog. What if it's a slow-acting poison? What if the dog dies after you've eaten it all?"

"No worries. I can just cut open my belly and expunge everything inside.”

Zhuge Yuan looked at Li Huowang in amazement. His mouth fluttered open to say something, but he couldn't find the words to say.

Bun squatted on the side, wagging its tail. Li Huowang saw that and picked up his chopsticks again. “Brother Zhuge, there’s no poison. Let’s eat.”

The kind-looking old lady was right—the fish soup noodles were delicious. The fish roe scattered in the soup went well with the milky-white broth, and it was an incredibly comforting meal amidst the cold weather.

Just as Li Huowang was contemplating whether to order another bowl or not, he suddenly looked up with furrowed brows, staring at the woods on the left.

Zhuge Yuan ate leisurely. He gulped and calmly asked, “What’s wrong, Brother Li?”

“Something’s happening in our south. Sounds like there are people fighting each other,” Li Huowang replied.

“Brother Li, how come your ears are so keen? You can actually hear quarreling from so far away,” Zhuge Yuan said, shaking his long sleeves and standing up.

Li Huowang stood up as well and followed him into the woods. They brushed aside the bushes and leaves, making a path for themselves. Eventually, they came to a halt upon getting hit by the strong smell of blood and stared at the chaotic scene in the distance.

Two groups were engaged in a fierce battle that was at its climax. Each one fought with determination, using unfamiliar and lethal techniques brand-new to Li Huowang. Lives were claimed every second as they fought.

Li Huowang's gaze landed on a corpse with a waistplate. Then, he turned to Zhuge Yuan and said, “One side is from the Surveillance Bureau, but I don't recognize the other side. Brother Zhuge, do you know them?"

Zhuge Yuan watched as someone pulled out a white maggot and slapped it on his wound with an exposed bone. Zhuge Yuan shook his head and said, "I have no idea, but one of them should be a Sitting Oblivion Dao member."

"Sitting Oblivion Dao? Who?!" Li Huowang exclaimed with a solemn expression. It seemed the word Sitting Oblivion Dao was now capable of evoking an instinctive reaction from Li Huowang.

"It should be that Miao woman with purplish lips."

Li Huowang's gaze darkened as he stared at the glimmering silver headdress fluttering amidst the tumult. However, Li Huowang decided not to make a move. "Brother Zhuge, she doesn't look like someone important from the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

"I'm afraid we'll alert them if we approach hastily."

Li Huowang's objective was unchanged—to capture Bei Feng and extract information.

Li Huowang had no intention of getting involved in anything else.

"Brother Zhuge, let's head back. Let's refrain from stirring up unnecessary trouble."

Zhuge Yuan nodded and got ready to leave with Li Huowang.

However, a masked man in the crowd noticed them and shouted, "Lord Zhuge!"

Zhuge Yuan opened his fan swiftly and kicked off of a tree trunk, charging decisively toward the black-robed man.

Li Huowang couldn't just stand by and watch Zhuge Yuan. He promptly drew the purple-tassel sword and joined the fray.

The deadlock shattered, and the enemies of the Surveillance Bureau were soon forced to retreat, all thanks to Li Huowang and Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang wiped away the blood on his face and walked up to Zhuge Yuan. Upon arrival, he saw the surviving individuals kneeling before Zhuge Yuan.

“Greetings, Lord Zhuge!” they shouted.

Li Huowang was dumbfounded. Zhuge Yuan actually has such a high standing in the Surveillance Bureau? How come he seemed like the plague in the eyes of Lord Ji Xiang back then?

“Ah, Brother Li, you’re here,” said Zhuge Yuan, helping up the same masked man earlier with a smile. “He happens to be a dear friend from my younger years. Don’t let his affiliation with the Surveillance Bureau mislead you; he’s also a grandmaster player recognized at the national level in the Great Qi!”

“A Grandmaster recognized in the Great Qi?!”

“Oh, remember that game we played with black and white stones? He’s one of the strongest in the Great Qi at that game.”

Chapter 402 - Great Qi

Li Huowang stared at the masked man in shock.

The black and white hair strands on the side of the masked man's face made it clear that he wasn't young at all. Regardless of his age, however, it was impossible for him to be a grandmaster from Great Qi!

If the masked man were from the Great Qi, then he would be over a thousand years old. Li Huowang stepped back and looked around. For some reason, he felt that he had unknowingly crossed into a weird place.

The others were surprised by Li Huowang's reaction. "Lord Zhuge, he's..."

"Oh, he's fine. Brother Li is a good friend of mine, and he has his unique way of doing things."

Zhuge Yuan turned to the masked man and asked, "Qin Lao, who were they? Why were they chasing you?"

Qin Lao seemed indignant as he cried out, "They are the lapdogs of the eunuchs! We were on our way to a secret meeting at the Three Kings' Mansion, but they ambushed us. This is no coincidence! There's a traitor in the Bureau!"

Zhuge Yuan was surprised. "Oh? There are traitors among the eunuchs of the Bureau? I had no idea that the court was in such turmoil."

"Yes, exactly! Our ancestral teachings say that imperial power should not interfere with the Surveillance Bureau. Considering those eunuchs' influence, no one cares about the rules anymore. Without rules, everything is in chaos!"

Li Huowang went back to the noodle stall, allowing Zhuge Yuan to talk with the members of the Surveillance Bureau. Li Huowang sighed in relief upon seeing that the customers were still eating noodles and the couple was still cooking noodles.

It seemed that Li Huowang hadn't inadvertently crossed into a weird world.

Li Huowang walked up to the old man cooking noodles and solemnly asked, "Old man, may I ask something? Are we in Great Qi or Great Liang?"

The old man looked confused and opened his mouth, revealing his few remaining teeth to respond, "What? Great Qi? Where is that? We've always been in the Great Liang Kingdom."

The old man's words confirmed Li Huowang's assumption. He had traversed the entire Great Liang—from the border of Qing Qiu to Xing Island—Apart from what he had heard from Zhuge Yuan, he had never come across a place called Great Qi.

Right, we're in Great Liang. What's up with that Great Qi Grandmaster, then? Where is he from? I have to clarify this, thought Li Huowang. He turned around and walked toward the woods when a group of people emerged from the woods

Zhuge Yuan supported the so-called Great Qi Grandmaster, and they were walking at the helm of the group. Among the survivors, they seemed to hold the highest status. The Miao woman from the Sitting Oblivion Dao was among them as well.

"Brother Li, good thing I found you. Qin Lao is seriously injured. We'll go ahead and let him rest in your carriage," Zhuge Yuan said.

"Brother Zhuge, I need to talk to you. Come to me later. There's something I want to ask," Li Huowang said.

Zhuge Yuan nodded and helped Qin Lao into the carriage. Then, he walked over to Li Huowang and asked, "What's the matter?"

Li Huowang stared deeply at Zhuge Yuan's face. He wasn't convinced that Zhuge Yuan was deceiving him. If he were being deceived, it wouldn't be for such a ridiculous reason.

"Brother Zhuge, tell me the truth. What's going on?"

"Oh? Brother Li, I don't understand what you're talking about. I've always been upright, and I have never lied to anyone."

"All right, come with me, then," Li Huowang said, bringing Zhuge Yuan to the noodle stall and asking the same question he had asked the old man earlier.

Li Huowang then turned to Zhuge Yuan with a questioning look.

"What? Great Liang? Where is that? We've always been in the Great Qi Kingdom," replied the old man.

"What?!" Li Huowang looked at the old man in shock. If the old man weren't just an ordinary person, Li Huowang would think that he was a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao and was trying to lie to him.

"Old man, that wasn't what you said to me earlier."

"Earlier? Sir, I'm sorry, but this is our first conversation."

"You...!" Li Huowang pointed at the old man and was about to say something when Zhuge Yuan's folding fan blocked Li Huowang's pointed finger.

"All right, all right, let's discuss these trivial matters later, Brother Li. Qin Lao is seriously injured. Our priority is to get him to receive treatment," Zhuge Yuan said. Then, he turned around and walked up to the carriage. "Qin Lao, don't worry! The Black Taisui in the carriage is bound securely! It's not going to harm you!"

Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan's back with a puzzled expression as his suspicion grew even stronger. Everything appeared really strange to him. Moments later, Li Huowang emerged from his contemplation and turned to the old man beside him.

"Are we in Great Liang or Great Qi?"

"Great Liang. Why are you asking me that question again?"

Li Huowang was no longer surprised upon hearing the old man's words. The changes had to be related to Zhuge Yuan's power as a Twisted One, but Li Huowang couldn't figure out how Zhuge Yuan was doing all this.

“ Woof, woof! ” Bun popped its head out from under the carriage, barking at Li Huowang. It seemed anxious that a group of strangers had taken the reins of its master's carriage. Li Huowang picked up the pace and caught up with them. The matter wasn't over yet, and he was determined to ask Zhuge Yuan what was going on.

After a few hours, the group finally began tending to their injuries, convinced that their attackers were gone. Li Huowang observed them silently. Aside from the Great Qi Grandmaster and the Miao woman from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, everyone wore peculiar clothes. They seemed to be people from a variety of places, which made sense as they were members of the Surveillance Bureau, famous for its diverse members.

The group was also keeping a close eye on Li Huowang. If it hadn't been for Zhuge Yuan introducing Li Huowang as his friend, they wouldn't have relaxed their guard around someone like Li Huowang.

It couldn't be helped as Li Huowang gave off an air of mystery and aloofness from his get-up, which consisted of a black bamboo hat, and a red Daoist robe stained with blood. To make matters worse, he also had a Black Taisui tied up in the carriage.

The air between the two groups was cold. Zhuge Yuan had been attempting to improve it, but the results weren't exactly that great.

The Great Qi Surveillance Bureau was wary of Li Huowang, and Li Huowang was similarly wary of them, who were allegedly from Great Qi. Just like that, the group continued their journey to the capital amidst the air of distrust so thick it was palpable.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang made sure to pay extra attention to the member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao in this group of people from the Great Qi Surveillance Bureau. Li Huowang wasn't sure why she had infiltrated the group, her motives were unclear as well.

Li Huowang was already aware of her identity as a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but he had no intention of exposing her right now, thinking that he might be able to use her to lure out Bei Feng.

Chapter 403 - Twisted One

“Come, take these. Junior Kun refined them,” said Zhuge Yuan, handing over ten pills to Li Huowang, who was nibbling on dry rations.

Li Huowang accepted them and asked, “What are these?”

“Brother Li, aren’t you skilled in pill refining? How come you don’t recognize these Fasting Pills? They’re great substitutes for meals, and you’ll feel invigorated just eating them. They’re perfect pills for traveling,” Zhuge Yuan explained.

Li Huowang took one and examined it carefully beneath the sunlight. The fingernail-sized pill was dark brown and was emitting a strong herbal scent.

“Brother Zhuge, let’s refrain from making a move against that small fry from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. We should employ a strategic approach and wait for the right moment to strike. That way, we’ll achieve our goals,” Li Huowang said while staring at the pill.

Li Huowang had many burning questions, but his main goal remained the same—to find Bei Feng.

“Rest assured; I understand,” Zhuge Yuan replied.

Li Huowang loosened his grip on the pill, and it “fell” to the ground, rolling away.

Bun rushed over and gave it a quick lick. It instantly lost all interest in the pill and crouched, staring at Li Huowang’s dry rations.

Li Huowang’s expression turned grim as he stashed the rest of the Fasting Pills into his pocket. Then, he turned to Zhuge Yuan and asked, "Brother Zhuge, do you have a moment? There's a question that has been bothering me for a while now."

Zhugè Yuan wasn't surprised at all. He had long guessed what Lǐ Huowang wanted to ask him. There were outsiders around them earlier, which made it inconvenient for Lǐ Huowang to approach Zhugè Yuan and ask questions.

"I guess you want to know whether we're in Great Liang or Great Qí?" Zhugè Yuan said.

Lǐ Huowang nodded. His earlier visit to the Surveillance Bureau to ask about Zhugè Yuan's information yielded no decent results whatsoever, which caught him by surprise.

Zhugè Yuan snapped open his white folding fan and lamented, "These matters involve the higher-ups, and for the sake of your safety, I dare not tell you too much. However, the Great Qí has always been there; the Great Liang is the fake one."

The Great Liang is fake? What did I experience then? Were my hardships in the Great Liang fake as well? Lǐ Huowang found it amusing.

Were the hardships and trials he had experienced in this vast world all fake? Were they just illusions, similar to the hallucination? He had slaughtered Bái Lǐngmiào's entire family, but was that fake all this while? It'd be great if that were the case.

Lǐ Huowang patiently said, "Brother Zhuge, you must've encountered people from the Great Liang throughout your travels to many different places. You snatched that Muddled One's corpse from the Great Liang's Surveillance Bureau. Why do you insist that the Great Liang is fake?"

"Ah, Brother Lǐ, it's not exactly a straightforward lie. Take the old noodle seller we've encountered earlier. In your eyes, he's a denizen of the Great Liang, but in my eyes, he's a denizen of the Great Qí.

"If neither of us looks at him, where do you think he's from?"

“He's from the Great Liang! He's not from the Great Qi!”

“How can you say that?”

“He is from Great Liang because he was born in the Great Liang, he grew up in the Great Liang, and he'll die old in the Great Liang.”

“But in my eyes, he's from the Great Qi because he was born in the Great Qi, he grew up in the Great Qi, and he'll die old in the Great Qi.”

“Brother Zhuge, are you suggesting that everything is from the Great Qi in your eyes? Why is it that only you can see that kind of scenery while everyone else sees the Great Liang? Have you never thought about that?” Li Huowang asked.

“No, everyone else also sees Great Qi, just like me. I understand what you're seeing, but what you're seeing is wrong, and it must be corrected,” Zhuge Yuan replied.

“Why is it so difficult to make you understand? It's obvious—” Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence when he met Zhuge Yuan's eyes. He suddenly realized that arguing with Zhuge Yuan was a waste of time.

“Fine, the old noodle seller is from the Great Qi. You win.”

“Sigh, you still don't trust me. Forget it, I'm not going to argue with you. Arguments are just going to cause conflict. Anyway, just watch, you'll know whether the Great Qi is real or fake once you've seen enough,” Zhuge Yuan said. Then, he turned around to leave.

Zhuce Yuan seemed disappointed that Li Huowang didn't actually believe in the Great Qi's existence.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang frowned, thinking about many different possibilities.

The Strayed Ones, the Twisted Ones, the Muddled Ones. None of them were easy to handle. Regardless of what the Twisted One would obtain from the so-called Three Ancient Ones, Zhuge Yuan was definitely the reason behind the strange changes.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang still couldn't quite figure out how these strange changes had come about.

Could it be that Zhuge Yuan had brought me with him, traversing a thousand years to connect the Great Qi from a thousand years ago with the Great Liang of a thousand years later? That doesn't make sense, though. How could that old couple exist a thousand years ago and a thousand years later?

The old man cooking noodles had changed his statement thrice as if there had always been two different noodle stalls. However, Li Huowang was standing right next to the old man, and he was certain that the old man had never changed.

It's like the whole world is putting up an act, holding two different scripts. The world is acting according to the first script in front of me and the ordinary people, but it's acting according to the second script in front of Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang contemplated silently. He couldn't help but recall what Ji Xiang had told him at the Buddha's Skeleton Temple. Is this what he meant by strange but reasonable things? Does this kind of thing happen often around the Twisted One?

The Abbess' Siming deals with decay, and Ba-Hui deals with suffering. What do the so-called Three Ancient Ones deal with? How could they create such strange changes around Zhuge Yuan?

Li Huowang knew it was best not to think about such things to avoid trouble, but he couldn't resist. After all, the "strange" situation was unfolding right before him.

Never mind, never mind, never mind... Li Huowang shook his head eventually; his head throbbed from the hodgepodge of assumptions and speculations. In the end, Li Huowang decided to believe whatever Zhuge Yuan would say. It wasn't his concern, anyway.

Li Huowang only had one goal—to find Bei Feng.

Zhugue Yuan had killed Fa Cai, so the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao would definitely not let him go. Li Huowang just had to stay by Zhuge Yuan's side, and he would have a good chance of finding Bei Feng.

Footsteps echoed just then. Li Huowang looked up to see a young man in a white robe.

Li Huowang could smell blood from the white-robed young man.

"This one's name is Xia Risheng. Greetings, Lord Li."

"What's wrong?" Li Huowang asked. The white-robed young man was a member of the Great Qi's Surveillance Bureau. However, Li Huowang wasn't sure whether Xia Risheng had come here to gather information or for something else.

"Lord Li, I'm a disciple of the Ao Jing Sect!" Xia Risheng exclaimed, opening his robe to reveal hooks hanging from him.

"Is that so? You should go back if there's nothing else. We have a long journey ahead of us," Li Huowang said, dismissing the young man. He was afraid of speaking too much and inadvertently revealing that he wasn't a true disciple of the Ao Jing Sect.

"Lord Zhuge said that you've executed the Cang-Qiang Ascension three times. May I ask if it's true?" Xia Risheng asked, staring at Li Huowang with admiration in his eyes.

Chapter 404 - Grand Elder

“Lord Zhuge said that you’ve executed the Cang-Qiang Ascension three times. May I ask if it’s true?”

Li Huowang stared coldly at the young man in front of him and asked, “So what? What is it to you?”

“So it’s true?!” Xia Rusheng exclaimed and immediately knelt on one knee. “I pay respects to the Grand Elder!”

Li Huowang stood up and sidestepped. “I’m not a Grand Elder or anything! You’ve got the wrong person!”

“You’re the Grand Elder! You definitely are the Grand Elder! Anyone capable of executing the Cang-Qiang Ascension three times using the Profound Records is undoubtedly a Grand Elder of the Ao Jing Sect!”

“At your level, you can forgo the Profound Records and directly feed the master with your flesh[1]! And that is the ultimate symbol!” Xia Rusheng exclaimed with extreme excitement.

Goosebumps broke out all over Li Huowang. He wasn’t that knowledgeable about the Ao Jing Sect, so he had no idea that they had such a concept.

“You’re mistaken! Zhuge Yuan lied to you. I’ve never executed the Cang-Qiang Ascension!” Li Huowang retorted. Then, he turned around and walked away, ignoring Xia Rusheng’s response.

What’s going on? The Cang-Qiang Ascension ritual involves exchanging extreme agony for power with Ba-Hui, right? According to him, is this ritual a symbol of some status within the Ao Jing Sect? Li Huowang knew about the so-called Grand Elders of the Ao Jing Sect, even though those Grand Elders had all been impersonated by the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

Even if there were people higher in status than Grand Elders, those with the Grand Elder title definitely had a high position in the Ao Jing Sect.

Wait, I can now sacrifice myself to Ba-Hui without using the Profound Records? What does that mean? Does that mean I'm getting closer to Ba-Hui? Li Huowang pondered, but he didn't think that it was a good thing at all.

It seemed that the Cang-Qiang Ascension had hidden dangers that weren't mentioned in the Profound Records. Li Huowang pondered for a bit more and decided to give it a try. He glanced at the others in the distance and into the nearby woods.

Li Huowang took off his red Daoist robe once he was deep enough in the woods. Then, he held the bronze coin sword horizontally in front of his chest.

"Li Sui," Li Huowang uttered.

Li Sui's tentacles emerged, wrapping around the hilt of the bronze coin sword before slicing open Li Huowang's skin, which had just healed. As time went on, more and more tentacles reached out and wrapped around the embedded Profound Records.

Moments later, the tentacles gave the Profound Records a forceful tug. Li Huowang ignored the pain and forcefully lifted the corner of his index finger's fingernail. With a swoosh, a deep blood mark appeared on a tree trunk ten meters away.

Can I really do without the Profound Records? Li Huowang wasn't so sure. Is this a good thing? It should be a good thing, right?

Li Huowang stood in place, staring blankly at the falling tree in the distance. The old problem had yet to be resolved, but new problems had already popped up. Li Huowang felt annoyed.

In the end, Li Huowang was still a bit reluctant to give up his advantage. At least, he could be considered without a weakness. Something similar to what Peng Longteng had done would never happen again.

I'll take it step by step. First of all, I have to get rid of the Strayed One's maladies. The rest will follow along. Ah... Why is life so exhausting? Li Huowang made up his mind and returned to the group.

After a short rest, Li Huowang and the group continued on their journey.

Qin Lao stood at the helm and led the way. Qin Lao had chosen to go off the beaten path for the sake of avoiding any ambushes. However, Li Huowang didn't really care. His task was to wait around Zhuge Yuan until the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao appeared to attack Zhuge Yuan. With that in mind, Li Huowang wasn't exactly afraid of getting involved in a fight.

Meanwhile, Xia Risheng clearly didn't believe Li Huowang's words of denial earlier, as his attitude toward Li Huowang changed radically.

Xia Risheng walked into a dilapidated roadside inn and wiped the stool and table clean with his sleeves. Then, he turned to Li Huowang and gestured for him to come in, saying, "Grand Elder, please sit here!"

Li Huowang sat down, and Xia Risheng immediately poured tea for him. Xia Risheng even stopped the waiter to order dishes for Li Huowang.

Xia Risheng's strange behavior made Li Huowang feel extremely uncomfortable. He neither needed a servant nor needed someone to wait on him.

"What do you want?" Li Huowang asked, sounding impatient.

"Nothing! It's my honor to serve you, Grand Elder!" Xia Risheng replied.

Xia Risheng appeared humble on the outside, but he had some ulterior motives. It'd be great if you could tell me how you successfully performed the Cang-Qiang Ascension!

"Okay, I'm the Grand Elder, right? Good. I order you to go far away! Don't appear in front of me until we've reached the capital!"

Li Huowang said.

“Um, yes, sir!” Xia Risheng replied and left.

Li Huowang sighed in relief. Then, he glanced at the Miao woman sitting with her companions. Strange, it's been so long, but there's been no movement from the Sitting Oblivion Dao. This is different from what I thought.

The members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao were supposed to attack Zhuge Yuan like moths to a lamp once they caught wind of Zhuge Yuan's activities.

However, there had been no attacks at all since the incident on Xing Island. The Sitting Oblivion Dao was silent. The only encounter they had related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao was the encounter with a low-ranking soldier whose identity as a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had been completely exposed.

Perhaps they're thinking that any minor disturbances won't harm Zhuge Yuan at all, so they're planning on doing something major? Li Huowang thought. He couldn't help but think about the worst-case scenario.

Of course, Li Huowang wasn't afraid. He was alone, so he genuinely had nothing to fear. His only concern was if Bei Feng would get involved. Fa Cai has died, so Hong Zhong and Bai Ban will definitely come. To kill Zhuge Yuan in one fell swoop, the Four Joys should come too, right?

While Li Huowang was busy contemplating many scenarios, Zhuge Yuan appeared and sat down in front of him.

“Brother Zhuge, where did you go?” Li Huowang asked.

“Oh, I bought a carriage. I want the interior to become more comfortable for Qin Lao.”

“You handle that kind of matter, too? I'm curious, Brother Zhuge. How did you get to know Qin Lao?” Li Huowang asked, picking up the teapot and pouring a cup of tea for Zhuge Yuan.

“I was in You Capital one day, and I saw Qin Lao playing chess under a tree with someone. Qin Lao’s playstyle was outstanding, and he won every game in an upright manner. I couldn’t help but approach him and make friends.”

“You got to know him just like that?”

“How about you, Brother Li? I don’t really consider the identities or status of my friends. I only value fate and mutual affection.”

“Brother Zhuge, your character is admirable.”

“Admirable? Shouldn’t that be the norm? Nowadays, I think people tend to overthink and complicate things, and that is exactly why they can’t make true and trustworthy friends. Nowadays—”

The waiter approached with a tray of dishes, interrupting their conversation and allowing Li Huowang to break free from Zhuge Yuan’s endless chatter, which had gotten quite a bit annoying these days.

“The dishes are here~ Stir-fried lamb, stir-fried water spinach, and an eight treasures duck. Please enjoy your meal,” the waiter said.

Chapter 405 - Discrepancy

Zhugue Yuan tossed a few silver pieces on the table.

The waiter picked them up and said, "Thank you for the three silver pieces, scholar."

Bun ate heartily beneath the table. As Li Huowang and Zhugue Yuan ate, Zhugue Yuan expressed his concerns in a low voice in between chewing, "Brother Li, it is imperative that you remain calm while you're looking for them. You don't want them to know your intentions.

"Relax. I'm here, so they'll definitely come."

"Brother Zhugue, I just feel that if we're in a den of burglars, no one is going to be wary of burglars barging into our homes. What I'm trying to say is that what if we—" Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence just as he started chewing on a piece of stir-fried lamb. He smacked his chopsticks on the table and roared, "Damn it, we're eating human flesh!"

Li Huowang rushed over and placed his sword against the neck of the cashier.

Meanwhile, Bun trembled as it stood up. Li Huowang smacked the pommel of his sword on the cashier's head before slicing open his stomach and pouring out the contents of his stomach.

Li Huowang washed his stomach with wine to make sure that the drug wouldn't take effect.

The others moved about busily while Li Huowang was busy washing his stomach clean.

Some swallowed pills, and some chanted scriptures. Xia Risheng reached into his clothes and pulled hard on the hooks hanging from certain acupoints.

Li Huowang's actions had not only alerted the others in his group, but it had also alerted the staffers. The waiter's fawning expression had vanished, and he rushed over to Li Huowang and the others with a large knife in hand.

The red-robed Daoist brandished his sword with a fierce look and kicked off of the table, jumping toward the waiter.

And that was the last scene the waiter saw before his consciousness went dark...

Everything went swimmingly afterward, and there was no suspense whatsoever. It was just a one-sided slaughter, and the entire inn was soon drenched in blood amidst the chaos.

Li Huowang was like a god of slaughter as he stood in the sea of corpses. Eight tentacles were sticking out of him, and every tentacle squirmed as they wielded a variety of weapons.

The Great Qi's Surveillance Bureau was shocked by the sight. They had seen many bizarre scenes, but they had never seen something like this before. Their reservations toward Li Huowang vanished just then. They finally considered Li Huowang worthy of being Lord Zhuge's friend.

Li Huowang panted heavily as he approached Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang sounded astonished as he asked, "Did you not see that the dishes were drugged?"

Zhuge Yuan had been vomiting since Li Huowang revealed that they were eating human flesh. He wiped away the saliva on his lips, and he looked disgusted as he replied, "Of course, I saw that it's drugged. However, I thought they only used drugs to make us fall asleep. It'd be a waste to throw away so much food, and I was going to take care of the drugs once we're done eating, but..."

"Who would've known that the lamb we were exacting was actually human flesh? This is absolutely disgusting!"

Li Huowang sighed deeply as he stared at the gaping hole in his stomach. He was in great spirits today, but to think he'd be involved in such a disgusting incident. Although he wasn't exactly afraid of something like this, it still left a bad taste in his mouth.

“Hasn't the Liang Kingdom always been stable? How could shop owners drug their own customers?” Li Huowang asked.

Hong Zhong had been absent for quite a while now, but he finally reappeared, emerging from behind a nearby table, saying, “Hehehe, Li Huowang, that's just your wishful thinking. Didn't you hear what the Twisted One say? We're in Great Qi, not Great Liang!”

Li Huowang paused slightly. Has this really become the Great Qi? What exactly is the Twisted One's special ability?

Li Huowang thought about many things in the blink of an eye. He wanted to ask Hong Zhong some questions, but he refrained from doing so after seeing Hong Zhong's eager expression. In the end, he took out the Fiery Scripture to heal his injuries.

However, Hong Zhong didn't give up so easily. “Ah, Lord Li is so knowledgeable. He's actually familiar with the taste of human flesh! How remarkable!”

Hong Zhong was about to say a few more words when Li Sui interjected, “Dad, can you give me a few swords?”

“A few swords? Why would you want that?” Li Huowang asked, stopping his chanting.

“I want to help you, Dad. Next time we encounter bad people, I want to be able to help you like what I did just now!” Li Sui replied.

“My body doesn't have any room for swords, so stop it with the nonsense, all right?”

Li Sui didn't want to give in and protested, “No, no, no! I want swords! I want swords!”

Black tentacles emerged from Li Huowang's legs and rolled on the ground. The sight resembled children running down a street in protest against their parents who didn't want to buy candied hawthorns for them.

Damn it, where did Li Sui learn to be rebellious? Li Huowang lampooned inwardly. He soothed Li Sui for a while, and Li Huowang finally managed to silence Li Sui by offering him his own bag of torture tools.

“See, there’s everything in here—knives, saws, awls, scissors, clamps, shovels. These are yours now. Whenever we encounter bad people, you can just use these to deal with them.”

Li Sui’s tentacles emerged from Li Huowang’s navel, and he started playing with the tools. Li Sui’s laughter echoed in Li Huowang’s ears. Li Huowang shook his head slightly and joined the Great Qi’s Surveillance Bureau members outside the shop.

Li Huowang had killed the staffers, so the mounts in the backyard now belonged to them.

Li Huowang’s horses finally had new companions.

Zhuge Yuan walked up to Li Huowang and said, “Rest assured, our people in You Capital already know that Qin Lao has encountered enemies. They’ll send someone to pick us up soon, and we’ll be at You Capital in no time.”

Li Huowang wasn’t very optimistic as he glanced at Qin Lao, who needed assistance just to get on and get off the carriage.

Li Huowang soon got into his own carriage and took out a map to pinpoint their exact location.

"At this rate, it's going to take us a while," Li Huowang muttered, tracing his blood-stained finger along the coastline and toward the center of the Jiang Nan region, “Hmm? You Capital?”

Li Huowang looked at the familiar yet unfamiliar characters and thought that he was mistaken. Li Huowang frowned and stared at it for a while, but nothing really changed. Shangjing had vanished and was replaced by You Capital.

Li Huowang cast an astonished gaze at Zhuge Yuan. “This is your map?”

Zhuge Yuan seemed annoyed as he replied, “Brother Li, you must be joking. I’m well versed in geography, and I’ve never needed maps to travel.”

“If that's the case, then why...” Li Huowang trailed off, hesitating.

Hong Zhong popped up once again and said, “Isn’t that normal? You’re in Great Qi, so it's not strange that you're using a map of the Great Qi.”

Li Huowang's brows knitted as he looked down at the map in his hands. He looked around the map, and his gaze soon landed on a red stain in the upper left corner of the map.

The red stain was from a drop of oil he had unintentionally dropped on the map when he was eating oily noodles while trying to find Xing Island on the map. The red stain made it clear that this was the same map he had used at the time.

However, Li Huowang had purchased the map back in Shangjing, so how come Shangjing wasn't on the map and had been replaced by the You Capital of the Great Qi?

Chapter 406 - You Capital

Li Huowang's mind was in complete chaos as he looked down at his own map.

He had no idea what happened to his map.

It was one thing if the Twisted One's ability affected only humans. He could at least explain it as some sort of hypnosis that affected people in a certain radius around the Twisted One, but why did his own map become a map of the Qi Kingdom?

What's up with the Twisted One's ability? Why is it so bizarre? Li Huowang was confused. Is the Great Qi from another parallel universe? Or maybe the Great Qi did not exist and was born from the Twisted Ones' ability?

"Junior Li, it's getting dark soon. We have to leave soon, or we will have to camp outside," Zhuge Yuan said, ushering Li Huowang into the carriage.

Li Huowang looked up and stared at Zhuge Yuan. "Senior Zhuge, can you tell me the truth? What is the Twisted One's ability? I really don't feel like guessing it after all this while."

"I can't say it," Zhuge Yuan said, using his fan to point at the sky.

"I'm not asking about the source. I'm asking about the bizarre things happening around you. I want to know because I don't think I can get used to it," Li Huowang asked.

"Around me?" Zhuge Yuan replied, "I've met people who would tell me that they're from the Great Liang and that the Great Qi had fallen to ruins years ago, just like you. However, I know that the Great Liang is fake while the Great Qi is real."

"But the Qi Kingdom..." Li Huowang trailed off. He decided not to argue about it, as he could foresee the outcome.

“Fine, I’m not going to ask any more questions,” Li Huowang said, putting away his own map. “Let’s go to the capital of the Qi Kingdom, the You Capital!”

Their journey to the You Capital continued, and they failed to encounter any members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. If it weren’t for the incident in Xing Island, Li Huowang would think that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had given up on Zhuge Yuan.

Their pace became a bit quicker, all thanks to the carriages that they had plundered from the shop that tried to poison them. Although they were off the beaten path, they still arrived at their destination fairly early.

The red sun rose from behind the city wall.

Standing on the roof of the carriage, Li Huowang sighed and said, “We’re finally at Shangjing—no, we’re finally at the You Capital.”

Li Huowang looked around and saw people approaching them. He felt out of place as he stared at everyone crying, happy to see their loved ones once again.

“Daoist, today is the first day of the month. Don’t forget to eat a chunk of the Black Taisui, or you’ll go crazy again,” said the old monk’s illusion.

“I know.” Li Huowang took out his dagger and carved a chunk of the Black Taisui. He chucked it into his mouth and started chewing.

“What are you eating, Grand Elder? Is it going to help with your cultivation?” Xia Risheng asked. He had been stealing glances at Li Huowang, and he saw Li Huowang throwing something into his mouth.

Li Huowang ignored Xia Risheng and jumped down. He took hold of the reins and guided the horse toward the main city gate.

Li Huowang looked around the city to see if there were any differences, but the You Capital looked the same as Shangjing.

There were still many people walking on the wide streets, and the shops he had seen in Shangjing were still around.

However, Li Huowang could see a few minute differences between Shangjing and the You Capital.

“Sir~ Come and play~” A soft voice entered Li Huowang’s ears. He turned around and saw a feminine-looking man. The feminine-looking man was wearing a see-through shawl that barely covered anything as he stood in a bamboo cage decorated with red flowers. The feminine-looking was in a provocative pose, too.

“Uhhh...” Li Huowang frowned while staring at the feminine-looking man covered in heavy makeup inside the bamboo cage. Wasn't this shop selling women? When did they start selling men?

“ Hmph! ” Qin Lao snorted with clenched fists.

Just then, two pale-looking plump men alighted from a carriage while holding hands.

They were far away, but Li Huowang still caught a whiff of their scent. It was the same scent as that Ji Xiang—a scent born from a strong perfume mixed with urine.

The two eunuchs ignored the gazes of everyone else as they held hands and entered the shop that was selling men. At the same time, an old scholar walked out of the shop accompanied by two beautiful men. They flanked the old scholar and stuck closely to him as they walked toward an ox cart.

One of the two beautiful men knelt on all fours, becoming a ladder for the old scholar to climb into the ox cart. Once the old scholar was in the ox cart, the two beautiful men entered it as well rather than returning to the shop.

Soon, the three disappeared into the distance.

“Ridiculous! This is all the fault of those officials! To think that such immoral acts are done in broad daylight in this city! They even have the guts to say that what they're doing is normal and respectable! Fuck them! They've colluded with those corrupt officials! The books they've read have been wasted on them!" Qin Lao roared.

Qin Lao was wheezing from anger. He found it hard to catch his breathing after his outburst, as he had just recovered from his injuries, after all. Everyone did their best to take him away to make sure that his stitch-up injuries wouldn't open.

Li Huowang stood quietly, seemingly waiting for something to happen.

When Zhuge Yuan was a certain distance away, the beautiful feminine-looking man in the cage became a woman. His appearance didn't change, but his face became much softer and less angular.

The man had become a woman right before Li Huowang's eyes.

Li Huowang frowned and stopped an old man walking around to sell his firewood.

"Are we in the Great Qi or in the Great Liang?"

The old man thought that Li Huowang had a few screws loose. "We're in Shangjing, the capital of the Liang Kingdom. What are you talking about?"

"Hehe." Li Huowang chuckled. His assumption was right. There was a certain range to the changes, and if anyone got close enough to Zhuge Yuan, they'd find themselves in another kingdom—the Great Qi Kingdom.

However, Li Huowang didn't have the time or the knowledge to figure out the details.

Li Huowang had no idea whether the Great Qi was real or not. He also had no idea why this was happening. In the end, he chalked it up to the Three Ancient Ones and blamed them for the changes.

There was no need to spend that much resources to figure out Zhuge Yuan's ability as a Twisted One. Li Huowang had no plans of doing so, as Zhuge Yuan's wasn't exactly harmful to him.

"Let's go!" Li Huowang jumped onto the carriage and grabbed the horse's reins, urging it gently to follow Zhuge Yuan and the others.

Chapter 407 - He'S Here

Li Huowang urged his horses to run faster. The bystanders had no idea that they were slowly becoming denizens of the Great Qi Kingdom.

When Li Huowang finally caught up, he looked around and saw the denizens of the Great Qi whispering to each other about their plans for the day. Li Huowang found the scene utterly bizarre. It felt like everyone had agreed beforehand to play along with Zhuge Yuan.

“Junior Li, where did you go?” Zhuge Yuan asked, sounding curious. “There are many people here, so you have to be careful. They could be from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

“Relax, I know what to do. This isn't my first rodeo. Anyway, where are we going, Senior Zhuge?”

Zhuge Yuan continued to fan himself even though it was cold. “We need to go to Sir Liang's house. Old Qin and the others will meet with us tonight to plan our next step.”

Li Huowang nodded, and his eyes were filled with pity as he stared at Zhuge Yuan. The latter was very strong, but he couldn't shake off his own curse. Zhuge Yuan still had no idea what was happening to him.

Li Huowang knew that no one could help Zhuge Yuan. Changes would only occur once Zhuge Yuan realized that there was something wrong with him. The words of any third party would be meaningless until then.

The carriages traveled deep into the city center, and they stopped at one of the mansions outside the palace. There were two stone lions carved from black stone outside the mansion gates, and a plaque was above the gates—House of Liang.

A middle-aged man clad in his official uniform walked out. The middle-aged man's distinctive feature was his goatee, and he looked to be around forty to fifty years old.

The middle-aged man's fast response to their arrival made it obvious that he had been waiting for them. The middle-aged man immediately bowed toward Zhuge Yuan and cried out, "Sir Zhuge! I really didn't expect to see you here!"

"I'm just a commoner so no need to bow to me, Sir Liang. Anyway, this isn't the place to discuss things. Let's go inside."

Sir Liang greeted his master, Old Qin, before leading them into his mansion.

Li Huowang was visibly out of place as if he was just a passerby.

They crossed the courtyard and reached the guest hall of Sir Liang's mansion.

Everyone immediately started talking about many things just as they sat down. They didn't even take a sip of the tea before them. Their main topic was to address the power gap between them and the imperial family.

Of course, saving the Great Qi from ruin was a part of their discussion.

However, Li Huowang didn't get involved. He simply stared at Sir Liang's side while thinking about other issues. I wonder what kind of identity Sir Liang has in the Liang Kingdom? If I asked him to leave Zhuge Yuan's side, would he treat me as an assassin? Wait, perhaps he's someone from the Sitting Oblivion Dao?

Engrossed in his thoughts, Li Huowang forgot the passage of time. The sun gradually set as more and more officials arrived at the mansion.

They all joined the discussion within the guest hall, and there were so many of them that there wasn't even a place to stand.

Li Huowang was too tired from the journey, so he walked outside to get some fresh air.

“Father, what are they talking about? Why can’t I understand them?” Li Sui’s voice echoed from Li Huowang’s ears.

“It’s fine if you don’t understand them. It doesn’t concern us,” Li Huowang said, realizing that Li Sui was becoming more energetic and inquisitive. He had once thrown a tantrum so that Li Huowang would give it a sword. Today, Li Sui had just asked for an explanation for something he couldn’t understand.

“Father, you’re hungry,” Li Sui said, using his tentacles to wrap around Li Huowang’s empty stomach. He had once used Li Huowang’s stomach as a hiding place, but now, he was too big to fit.

Li Sui was slowly but surely filling up Li Huowang’s cavities.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang learned one new thing about Li Sui: he had learned to empathize with people. Li Huowang felt warm but it was a bad thing, as it meant that Li Sui was maturing.

Li Huowang frowned, seemingly agitated. If he couldn’t obtain the method from Bei Feng’s mouth before Li Sui matured completely, he would have no choice but to endure the hallucination.

Li Huowang never once thought that one day, he would wish to see members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Footsteps echoed, prompting Li Huowang to turn around to see an old man with a lantern.

The old man was Sir Liang’s butler.

“Sir Li, dinner is ready, so please follow me,” the old man said.

Li Huowang listened carefully and realized that the guest hall was quiet. It seemed that they had left, while Li Huowang was engrossed in his thoughts outside.

They’re going to revolt soon, but they still have time to eat? Li Huowang stood up and followed the butler. He soon found himself in front of a table filled with delicious food. Li Huowang was so grumpy that he ignored Old Qin's words and ate quietly.

If Old Qin had so much authority in the palace, why was he in the Surveillance Bureau? Li Huowang felt that there was no point in risking his life for someone like Old Qin.

Everyone found Li Huowang's behavior to be quite rude, and they cast piercing glares in his way. However, that was the only thing that they could do. Eventually, they started eating, but Li Huowang was already done with his meal.

Li Huowang stood up and walked up to Zhuge Yuan. "How's your discussion going? When are we moving, and who should we kill?"

Perhaps the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao are waiting for a chance to strike. If I do something huge, I might be able to lure them out Zhuge Yuan used his sleeves to cover his mouth. Then, he downed the wine in his hands and placed his sleeves down slowly before replying, "Relax, Junior Li. We have such a grand plan, and we can't afford to move hastily.

"Many officials were imprisoned because they refused to submit to the empress. There were also many who ended up getting relocated to remote places. To make matters worse, those corrupted officials had plunged the You Capital into depravity.

"The denizens are dissatisfied, but we need more time to convince some of those on the fence to follow us. They're all denizens of the Great Qi, after all, so it's best to minimize casualties."

"Why are you pulling people like them to your group?" Li Huowang asked, frowning. He lost all interest in the matters of the Qi Kingdom the moment he learned of the Qi Kingdom's fate.

"Those on the fence belong to the military. With that in mind, do you really think they'd be useless in our cause?"

Zhuge Yuan had a vague inkling of Li Huowang's feelings, so he said, "Relax, I haven't forgotten your circumstance. Once this is done, I'll ask everyone in the Qi Kingdom to help me find the cultivation method to cultivate the 'Truth' for you."

Zhuge Yuan and Li Huowang's conversation was interrupted just then by a shrill voice that echoed from the mansion gates. "The Emperor is here~"

"The Emperor?!" Everyone, including Li Huowang, was shocked. Li Huowang suddenly recalled what Zhuge Yuan had told him—the current Emperor of the Qi Kingdom was nothing but a reanimated corpse.

Chapter 408 - Emperor

Gong!

Gongs echoed outside, and a piece of solemn, grand music approached.

The Emperor of the Qi Kingdom had truly arrived.

Before Li Huowang could even do anything, the officials busy eating their meals with vinegar stood up with pale faces and ran to the door.

When Li Huowang reached the courtyard, he saw everyone, including Old Qin and Sir Liang, kneeling on the ground. The music got closer and closer, and the heavy stench of perfume pervaded the courtyard. The massive sedan with a rounded dome soon appeared before everyone's eyes.

The red-colored dragon engravings on the pillar of the sedan were covered in ribbons while curtains with motifs of dragons soaring across the sky covered the entire sedan. Most importantly, no one could peek into it.

Li Huowang thought that was the entirety of the sedan, but it got bigger and taller as if there were no end to it. [\[1\]](#)

Li Huowang saw more decorations: lanterns, dragon flags, round jade decorations, bells, and even saddles. Every decoration was made with care, but they were strewn haphazardly.

The massive and heavy sedan towered over everyone like a small mountain.

Even Li Huowang found the massive wooden structure to be quite oppressive. The sedan seemed like a massive infant corpse, sweeping across everyone in the courtyard from above.

The stench of the perfume soon became so thick that some people in the courtyard felt suffocated.

Li Huowang turned to Zhuge Yuan and was about to ask questions when red-robed guards descended upon the mansion and surrounded it.

Bald eunuchs appeared after the red-robed guards, wielding horse-tail whisks. They lined up in front of the guards, forming a barrier between them and the people in the courtyard. They stood silently in the darkness, their pale faces making them appear more like paper dolls than real people.

The music had stopped at some point, and a deafening silence descended upon the courtyard. Everyone didn't dare to even breathe.

Li Huowang stood in a corner, staring at the unfolding scene as if he were a passerby. His gaze soon landed on the massive wooden sedan, and he looked as if he were contemplating something.

"They said you guys are playing. Why did you not bring me along to play?" A childish voice echoed behind the curtains.

Blood drained out of everyone's faces, and those with a faint heart collapsed to the ground out of fear.

"What are you guys playing? Bring it out for me, so I can play as well." The same childish voice echoed, and a child emerged from the curtains. The child was wearing the Emperor's Crown and was clad in a dragon robe in a black and gold motif.

Just then, the massive wooden structure became like the body of a child, creating an utterly bizarre sight.

Li Huowang stared deeply at the child. His keen intuition roared at him, saying that he wasn't staring at a child. There was no way a six-year-old could have such a piercing gaze. Moreover, the child seemed to be scrutinizing everyone's flesh and bones rather than their appearance and demeanor.

Li Huowang's heart started to beat wildly against his chest as he started doubting himself. Zhuge Yuan has told me about this! Does this mean he has the power to transform his stories into reality? This sight is just too realistic for it to be fake!

Just then, the eunuchs finally noticed the two people standing in the corner rather than kneeling on the ground, and they roared, “How dare you two stand there when His Majesty is here! Why are you not kneeling?!”

Li Huowang decisively whipped out two talisman papers. Then, he bit his fingers open, using the blood to draw on the talisman.

He slapped both talismans on his knees before taking out his purple-tassel sword and running toward the massive sedan. Li Huowang moved so fast that he became a blurry shadow.

“You guys have been fooled! That emperor is fake! He’s a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!” Li Huowang roared, and his voice sounded as loud and as deafening as a detonated bomb.

The red-robed guards immediately fell in position and stood to block Li Huowang's path toward the massive sedan.

Meanwhile, Zhuge Yuan's expression changed, becoming solemn after a long time of nonchalance. He flipped his hand, and an old almanac the size of two palms appeared on the ground.

Zhuge Yuan then took out a brush and pointed it at the night sky.

The darkness of the starry night sky seemed to congeal into ink, covering the tip of Zhuge Yuan's brush.

The brush shining with starlight touched the almanac, and Zhuge Yuan wasted no time, writing swiftly—Year of the Wood Pig, Tenth Month, on the Day of Gold. Prohibited: Lies. Prohibited: Changing Faces!

Zhuge Yuan lifted his brush once more, and the words he had written followed the tip of his brush. Zhuge Yuan then thrust his brush toward the starry sky and the darkness that had congealed as his ink flew out of the tip of his brush, becoming one with the starry sky.

The yellow words then scattered throughout the starry sky.

The emperor and the eunuch's faces distorted instantly, astonishing the red-robed guards.

“Haha! I’ve been waiting for you to appear and you’ve finally appeared!” Li Huowang took out the pliers without hesitation and pulled out his teeth before scattering them into the air. Several playing cards then manifested on the ground, puncturing Li Huowang’s stomach.

However, no blood gushed out of Li Huowang. Instead, he melted slowly and eventually disappeared into the ground. The red-robed guards looked around, but they couldn’t find him anywhere.

Moments later, the red-robed guards out of their confusion, but the red-robed Daoist was already on the mansion's roof. Before they could do anything, Li Huowang took to the air, jumping onto the emperor's sedan.

Li Huowang’s eyes were bloodshot as he glared at the "emperor."

His hatred and killing intent seemed to have consumed him as he used a flint to set himself on fire. A conflagration erupted, engulfing Li Huowang in the proverbial blink of an eye.

“WHAT MOTHER FUCKING MAHJONG TILE ARE YOU?!” Li Huowang roared.

Li Huowang was like a blazing kite lighting up the night sky, and the heat that he was radiating was so strong that the air seemed to distort around him.

The member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao masquerading as the emperor quickly retreated into the sedan.

However, it was too late. A blazing fire engulfed the entire wooden sedan; thick, black smoke soon rose, and a cacophonous din erupted as everyone came to their senses upon the terrifying sight.

“Come out! Where are you?!” Li Huowang roared, searching for the "emperor" amidst the roaring flames.

Just then, a shadow rushed past him, escaping the burning sedan.

“Think you can run away?” Li Huowang took out the rib bones that the Black Taisui had given to him and thrust them into his own abdomen. Every living creature in a certain radius around him felt the same excruciating pain.

The shadow let loose a cry of agony before falling into the flames.

The burning and bleeding Li Huowang endured the pain and approached the shadow. Grabbing the "emperor" by the shoulders, Li Huowang flipped the "emperor" around and saw that he had been tricked!

The "emperor" wasn't a human being but a mere puppet!

1. So basically a limo lmao 🤔

Chapter 409 - Goal

Li Huowang felt something was wrong the moment he saw the puppet.

And that was when he heard something behind him.

Li Huowang turned around and saw a saber flying toward it. However, Li Sui managed to block it with his tentacles and his array of torture tools.

The wooden floor cracked under the pressure, and Li Huowang's leg sank into the floor. The saber contained a terrifying force that sent him plummeting downward. Li Huowang recovered quickly and stood up to see two Sitting Oblivion Dao members waiting for him.

Ba Tiao and Jiu Tiao[1].

The two of them were burning just like Li Huowang. Their skin and flesh were bubbling, slowly becoming charcoal. However, the both of them didn't even wince from the pain.

The almanac was still active, as the two didn't speak to Li Huowang.

The two Sitting Oblivion Dao members were tall, and they each wielded a huge saber. They emitted a domineering aura akin to deities as they stood quietly, staring at Li Huowang.

"Where did you steal those weapons? Which military family did you deceive?!" Li Huowang roared.

The two Sitting Oblivion Dao members took to the air, jumping toward Li Huowang.

Clang!

A resonant clang echoed, and Li Huowang was blasted away by the impact.

However, Li Huowang was delighted when he saw the damage on the sabers of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members. It made one thing clear for Li Huowang—their weapons weren't as sharp as Li Huowang's!

“Li Sui, take this!” Li Huowang handed Li Sui the bronze coin sword and ran toward one of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members with his purple-tassel sword. The two exchanged blows, but Li Huowang suddenly cut off three of his fingers.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao member was distracted by the fingers.

Li Huowang took advantage of that opening to send a flurry of attacks toward the Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

The other Sitting Oblivion Dao member ran toward their comrade to help, but Li Sui's bronze coin sword and his array of torture tools stood in their way, stopping him from approaching Li Huowang.

The other Sitting Oblivion Dao member sliced off some of Li Sui's tentacles to no avail, as tentacles bursting out of Li Huowang would simply replace the tentacles that had fallen to the floor.

Sparks flew everywhere as Li Huowang attacked with the ferocity of a deluge. His enemy's saber shattered just then, and Li Huowang twisted his wrist, slitting the throat of the Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

Then, he turned to the other Sitting Oblivion Dao member and shouted, “Put down your saber, and I'll spare you!”

The other Sitting Oblivion Dao member ceased all movement and stood still. In the next moment, he fell backward and collapsed to the ground.

Li Huowang rushed to the check on Sitting Oblivion Dao member's condition, but the Sitting Oblivion Dao member was dead. He had died of extensive burns. It turned out that they weren't immune to fire. They had simply decided to fight till their last breath.

Li Huowang had wanted to interrogate one of the two, but they all ended up dead.

Li Huowang was so frustrated that he kicked the corpse out of spite. He initially thought that the Sitting Oblivion Dao member masquerading as the Emperor of the Qi Kingdom would be a high-rank Sitting Oblivion Dao member, but the fact that they died so easily meant that they were nothing but mere pawns.

Clang!

The bronze coin sword fell to the ground, and it had taken on an orange hue due to the surrounding flames. Li Sui retracted his tentacles into Li Huowang and cried out, "Father, it's hot... it hurts."

"I know, I know. I'm sorry. Next time, don't come out if I'm on fire," Li Huowang replied. He put away the bronze coin sword and emerged from the flames. He needed to kill the other Sitting Oblivion Dao members before the flames were gone.

However, the group of eunuchs and even the red-robed guards had vanished. If it hadn't been for the blazing fire behind him, he would have thought that he was hallucinating.

Li Huowang walked up to Zhuge Yuan and saw that the latter was rolling one of the art pieces he had taken with him into a scroll.

"Junior Li, how did you know that he's a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? He was too far away, so I almost ended up getting fooled by them," Zhuge Yuan said, sounding impressed.

"I didn't. There were only two options: either he was a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao or the real zombie emperor of the Qi Kingdom.

"Regardless, we have to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao members. It's either we are right that he's a Sitting Oblivion Dao member, or the real emperor has truly come here to kill all of you after learning of your plans. Either way, we'd have to fight."

"Oh! You are so smart. I truly am impressed," Zhuge Yuan said, putting away the scroll and praising Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked around and saw that everyone else had vanished. He then cast a confused gaze at Zhuge Yuan, asking, "Senior Zhuge, where are the rest of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members?"

"Them? They're gone."

"Gone? We finally stumbled upon them after such a long time of waiting, so how could you just let them escape? You should've at least forced one of them to stay for me to interrogate!" Li Huowang exclaimed, and his figure shone brightly.

The smell of flesh wafted over to Zhuge Yuan, telling him that Li Huowang was once again.

"Junior Li, calm down. Why don't you stop your technique first? It looks painful," said Zhuge Yuan as the flames illuminated his face.

Li Huowang was angry, but he still listened and jumped into the nearby pond.

When Li Huowang poked his head out of the water, he saw Zhuge Yuan extending an arm toward him. Li Huowang sighed and reached out for Zhuge Yuan's arm. The latter then pulled him out of the pond.

"Just tell me, where did the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao go?" Li Huowang asked. Then, he sighed as he looked around. There wasn't anyone else around him.

"I've used the art scroll made out of a Muddled One to erase their memory of the Liang Kingdom before replacing that memory with their memory of the Qi Kingdom. Then, I sent them back."

"Hm?" Li Huowang was shocked. "Wait, what did you say? Where are they right now?"

"They're heading back to the Qi Kingdom. There's a curfew, but they insisted on going back. I think they'd soon reach the western gates."

Li Huowang looked around and quickly climbed a wall. Then, he ran across the wall and hopped onto roof after roof until he reached the highest roof in the estate. It was night time, but Li Huowang's eyesight was superb.

He could see the massive gates and the wide streets, but the place was empty with not a single person in sight.

No one was at the western gates. Zhuge Yuan was telling the truth! The members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had gone to the Qi Kingdom!

“Junior Li, what are you looking at?” Zhuge Yuan said from next to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took a few steps back and looked at Zhuge Yuan with shock. “Does that mean the Qi Kingdom actually exists somewhere? It doesn't just exist around you. Once someone forgets about the Liang Kingdom and trusts your nonsense, they'll end up finding themselves in the Qi Kingdom?!”

Zhuce Yuan revealed a displeased look while fanning himself.

“Junior Li, what are you talking about? What do you mean by 'nonsense'? I've always told you that the Qi Kingdom exists. Did you not listen to what I've said?”

“But...” Li Huowang trailed off, confused. If the Qi Kingdom existed, then where was it? Was it in a parallel world? Were the Twisted Ones capable of connecting the parallel worlds?

If it were a parallel world, would that mean that the male prostitutes in the Qi Kingdom simply transformed into female prostitutes in the Liang Kingdom and were the same individual all throughout?

The Twisted Ones were utterly bizarre, and Li Huowang couldn't quite wrap his head around their ability.

While Li Huowang was trapped in his own thoughts, Zhuge Yuan explained, “Is it that hard to understand? I said that the Great Qi is real, while the Great Liang is fake. I think this issue is more about you—you can't differentiate the truth from the lies.”

“No, no, no...” Li Huowang trailed off, taking a few steps backward. Moments later, he calmly explained, “Senior Zhuge, let's not talk about it anymore. Even if the Great Qi exists, you should have left at least one of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members alive. You could have just sent them to the Great Qi once I was done with them.”

“Why would I leave one for you?” Zhuge Yuan asked, smiling cheekily.

“What do you mean, 'why'? I have to Bei Feng's strength and their whereabouts!” Li Huowang exclaimed and sighed in frustration. “Senior Zhuge, I'm sorry for that outburst. I really don't have a single clue right now, and I'm running out of time.”

Zhuce Yuan nodded. He took out a scroll of art and unfurled it. Then, he shook it vigorously until a dying individual rolled out of it.

“Junior Li, this is Bei Feng,” Zhuge Yuan introduced.

1. Eight and Nine Bamboos respectively. 🤔

Chapter 410 - Mahjong

“He's the Bei Feng I've been chasing after?” Li Huowang asked. He felt as if a hammer had struck his brain; he couldn't quite believe that Bei Feng would end up as a dying man right in front of him.

Li Huowang had been thinking of Bei Feng all day and all night since he learned that Bei Feng knew how to deal with the hallucination and control the primordial breath inside of him.

Li Huowang had been thinking about what Bei Feng would look like.

However, he truly never expected that he'd end up meeting Bei Feng here.

“Him? Is he really Bei Feng? Senior Zhuge, are you sure about that?” Li Huowang asked, staring at Zhuge Yuan with surprise.

“Yes, that's right. He is Bei Feng. He was hiding among the eunuchs, but I managed to find him.”

Li Huowang held Zhuge Yuan's hands and shook them rigorously. “Thank you! Thank you!”

Then, he crouched down and propped Bei Feng up. Afterward, he whipped out a dagger and slowly sliced the skin layer on Bei Feng's face.

After several layers, Li Huowang finally saw the bloody mahjong tile—Bei Feng.

Li Huowang was so excited that he almost swooned.

Li Huowang's trembling fingers carefully caressed the bloody mahjong tile.

“Haha, how come you're so happy? Are you my long-lost son or something?” asked Bei Feng in a hoarse voice.

Li Huowang took a deep breath to calm himself down, but his voice was trembling from excitement as he said, "B-B-Bei Feng! I've been looking for you!"

"Oh? You've been looking for me? I guess you're not going to kill me until I tell you everything I know, then," Bei Feng remarked.

Li Huowang ignored Bei Feng's remark and gripped the dagger in his hand tighter before walking over slowly to Bei Feng. Then, Li Huowang stared into Bei Feng's eyes.

"Senior Bei Feng, can you help me? Please tell me how to shake off the hallucination of a Strayed One. Tell me that, and I'm more than happy to negotiate terms with you. I'll agree even if you want me to release you."

Li Huowang didn't care whether Bei Feng accepted it or not. He just wanted to go to the next step.

However, Bei Feng's reply surprised him.

"Strayed One? Hehe, who told you I'm a Strayed One? I'm indeed Bei Feng, but I'm a fake. Fourth Brother is the true Strayed One, not me."

"Fourth Brother?" Li Huowang's pupils constricted. It was a haunting answer that plunged Li Huowang's elated heart into the abyss.

Bei Feng chuckled upon seeing the despair on Li Huowang's face. "What's wrong? Never played Mahjong before? Don't you know that there are four Bei Feng tiles?"

Four Bei Feng?! Does he mean that there are four Fa Cai? Four Bai Ban?! Four Hong Zhong? Li Huowang stood frozen as if he had been struck by a lightning bolt from out of the blue.

Moments later, Li Huowang snarled and lifted the man into the air by the neck. He thrust his dagger into Bei Feng's abdomen and twisted it wildly, roaring, "Impossible! How dare you try and trick me! Death will elude you once you've sufficiently angered me! You will never die until you tell me the answer!"

Li Huowang was about to talk about his exploits. "I'll have you know—"

"Junior Li," Zhuge Yuan interjected with an awkward look. "He's telling the truth. He's Bei Feng, but he's not a Strayed One. He tried to lie, but I saw through him."

Zhuge Yuan's words broke Li Huowang, and he went beyond pallid.

Li Huowang looked utterly lost, and he suddenly found himself unable to breathe. The feeling of immediately losing something that one had worked hard to obtain was truly the worst feeling ever.

"You like telling stories, right? Why did you not tell me that there are four Bei Fengs?"

"I thought you knew. I'm sorry I never told you this before, but it's not too late to tell you now," Zhuge Yuan said, opening his fan and regretfully patting his head with it.

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao members are adept at changing their faces. To the outsiders, they'd only appear one at a time, but each mahjong tile is shared with four others.

"That's why outsiders often think that the Sitting Oblivion Dao only has one individual representing a mahjong tile. They would always appear one at a time and always in different locations, and that is how the Sitting Oblivion Dao deceives everyone."

They had caught Bei Feng, but he turned out to be the wrong Bei Feng.

Li Huowang felt like his efforts had gone down the drain, and he was so angry at the harsh reality that he saw red. He twisted his dagger and swung upward, tearing through the Sitting Oblivion Dao's abdomen to slice the latter's heart into two.

Bei Feng's mouth was bleeding, and his features had distorted from the pain, but he seemed like he didn't care as he taunted Li Huowang. "Hehe, you're from the Ao Jing Sect? It makes sense, as you're an idiot as well."

"Junior Li, don't kill him. I kept him alive for you because he might know something.”

Li Huowang was still furious, but he acknowledged that Zhuge Yuan was right. In the end, he whipped out the Fiery Scripture and started treating Bei Feng's wounds.

Bei Feng saw Li Huowang's actions and laughed louder. “Oh, you're not going to kill me? It looks like you still need me, after all, hahaha!”

Li Huowang cauterized Bei Feng's abdomen before finally taking a good look at the latter. Bei Feng was wearing the face of a plain-looking old man.

Li Huowang was angry, but he couldn't do anything. He also couldn't afford to waste any time, so he decided to move on.

“Since you're one of the Bei Fengs, where are the other three? You should know because the four of you share the same face,” Li Huowang asked.

“Hehehe, looks like my hunch is right. Since you're looking for Fourth Brother, you must be a Strayed One too, am I right? You want to know the method to deal with a Strayed One's hallucination?” Bei Feng asked. He pieced together the puzzle pieces of information that Li Huowang had given to him and came up with the full story.

Li Huowang laid out his torture tools upon Bei Feng's refusal to answer him.

“I hate the Ao Jing Sect. You guys are always using the same antiquated methods. Sure, I can tell you, but ...” Bei Feng smiled at Li Huowang. “Are you going to believe me? I'm from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, after all, hehehe~ ”

Chapter 411 - Departure

Li Huowang glanced at Bei Feng taunting him before looking at Zhuge Yuan.

“Senior Zhuge, can you use your artifact that prevents him from lying?” Li Huowang asked. He knew that Zhuge Yuan's almanac was capable of countering the Sitting Oblivion Dao. With him around, the Sitting Oblivion Dao's deception wouldn't work.

“The almanac is still in effect. You can continue your questioning. He cannot lie for now.”

Li Huowang knelt down and looked at Bei Feng tauntingly. “What's wrong? Do you not want to say it? Should I ask Zhuge Yuan to add another rule stating that it's forbidden not to talk?”

“I'm not a three-year-old boy. The others are already in the city.”

“Which city? Stop trying to skim on the details!”

“Where else? Shangjing.”

“Where are they right now?” Li Huowang asked.

“They arrived in the eastern area this afternoon, and I don't know where they are right now.”

“Why are the Sitting Oblivion Dao members in Shangjing? Shangjing is where the headquarters of the Surveillance Bureau is located. Are you not afraid of getting captured?”

“Afraid? Hehe, we prioritize deceiving others. We're never afraid of anyone. The reason we never went to Shangjing is that we simply thought that it was a boring place,” Bei Feng replied.

“Stop changing the subject! Talk! Why are you in Shangjing?!” Li Huowang roared with a grim look.

Bei Feng scoffed at Li Huowang's disfigured face and said, “Our boss, Shai Zi[1] told us to come here. He said that the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom is doing something in the shadows. He told us to come here and see if we can deceive him. As for what he's doing, you probably know more than me. I just arrived here, so I know less than you."

The emperor? Li Huowang recalled Ji Xiang's search for a Muddled One, the heavily damaged warship, and the previous emperor, who was executed not too long ago.

Li Huowang had an inkling that the Liang Kingdom was trying to do something in the shadows. It seemed that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had caught wind of it as well and had come to Shangjing to see what was up.

"Who else is with the three Bei Feng?" Li Huowang asked.

"We're three Ba Tiaos, two Jiu Tiaos, four Bei Fengs, and two Hong Zhongs. Hehe." Bei Feng chuckled at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang slapped Bei Feng in the face. "Don't try to pull this trick again. The others have tried it on me, and it's useless!"

After learning everything he needed to know, Li Huowang finally stood up.

"Are you done? Is he useless to you now?" Zhuge Yuan asked, closing his fan.

Li Huowang nodded.

Zhuge Yuan unfurled a scroll, and a Muddled One's corpse appeared.

The long scroll circled around Bei Feng's head, and Bei Feng's eyes glazed over as he lost his memories of the Liang Kingdom. His body was changing as well; he shrank and became a small old lady.

The small old lady stood up with trembling legs. She seemed to have no idea what was going on. Upon seeing Zhuge Yuan and Li Huowang, she turned and ran toward a house.

"Where am I?! Honey, come out!" the small old lady shouted, knocking on the door.

"Aiyaya, don't worry. We're not going to eat you," Zhuge Yuan said, guiding her slowly into the house.

Zhuge Yuan emerged moments later and saw Li Huowang with a frown. "How is it? Were his words useful to you?"

Li Huowang nodded. "Yes, but we can't trust his words completely. Based on my experience with them, they can still deceive even while telling the truth. He had been telling the truth, but he definitely left out some details.

"He might have told me half-truths as well."

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the crowd of people, who were convinced that they were citizens of the Qi Kingdom. Then, he turned to Zhuge Yuan and whispered, "My apologies, but I will have to leave for a while. There's something I need to do. I'm not abandoning you; it's just that it's urgent. I'll return once I'm done."

"No worries." Zhuge Yuan was not offended at all. "Now that you know Bei Feng is within the city, what are you going to do?"

"The entire Sitting Oblivion Dao is here, so I can't fight any of them on my own. I have a plan, but I'm not sure whether it will work or not. Still, it's better than nothing."

Zhuge Yuan nodded. "Sure. Go and do your thing. You can come find me if you have any issues."

Li Huowang's heart felt warm at the remark. Zhuge Yuan was indeed one of the few kind people in this crazy world.

"All right." Li Huowang bowed to Zhuge Yuan and ran out of the Liang Residence.

Li Huowang didn't take a detour. He jumped on roofs after roofs, running in the southwest direction. His bold actions attracted some eyes, but no one stopped him the moment he raised his identity token.

Half an hour later, Li Huowang finally arrived at the Surveillance Bureau after jumping onto a myriad roofs. The person standing at the door wasn't the man from the Mo Family. The guard was a skinny woman covered in bandages with a black talisman on her forehead. Her skin was dark, and her orifices were plugged with yellow soil. It was downright frightening seeing someone like her in an empty room.

“Let me in, I have urgent news!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

The skinny woman didn't move, but the hidden door opened by itself.

Li Huowang ran into the hidden door and traced the path according to his memories.

Soon, he found himself in the hall filled with screens once more. He looked around and saw that there were few people in the hall, as only a handful of the screens were illuminated with candles.

Li Huowang ignored them and ran up to Nangong's desk. “Senior Nangong, I have urgent news! The entire Sitting Oblivion Dao is here in Shangjing!”

1. Meaning Dice, as in playing dice 🎲

Chapter 412 - Surveillance Bureau

“What did you say?” Nangong looked at the disfigured man in front of him. The man had lost all of his skin, but his identity token and the bronze coin veil made the man's identity clear to Nangong.

A few months ago, Li Huowang appeared, and he had never appeared again. Nangong was starting to think that perhaps something untoward had happened to Li Huowang until he returned for the first time in ages and said something outrageous like the how entire Sitting Oblivion Dao was in Shangjing.

“Er Jiu, you can't make any jokes about that. Do you know the gravity of your words? If your information turns out to be inaccurate, you will be incarcerated!” Nangong warned Li Huowang.

“Of course! Senior Nangong, I'm telling the truth. I caught Bei Feng myself and interrogated him,” Li Huowang said. He decided to tell Nangong the truth.

Indeed, he had captured Bei Feng, and the latter had told Li Huowang that all of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members were here except for Wan Tiao. The 108 normal mahjong tiles—the sixteen Dong Feng, Nan Feng, Bei Feng, Xi Feng, the twelve Hong Zhongs, Fa Cai, and Bai Ban were here.

A total of 136 Sitting Oblivion Dao members were in Shangjing!

The ordinary members of the Sitting Dao Oblivion were already a headache for the Surveillance Bureau, not to mention the Three Officials and Four Joys.

Most importantly, the Sitting Oblivion Dao leader Shai Zhi was in Shangjing as well.

Li Huowang had no idea how to play mahjong, but he could still remember seeing his mother play it during the New Year. Li Huowang recalled needing two dice to play mahjong.

It was difficult for him to face such strong opponents on his own. He needed to use the Surveillance Bureau. Li Huowang would then reap profits while the two were busy fighting each other.

“Senior Nangong, I know how important this news is, so I dare not lie! They must have a scheme going on, as they're all here. You know they're willing to destroy even a kingdom just to deceive!”

Nangong agreed with Li Huowang. The information was indeed extremely important, so Li Huowang was most likely telling the truth. “Wait here, I need to report this to the higher-ups. The risk is just too heavy, so I have to give them a report.”

Nangong walked into the door on the left side of the hall with a frown.

Li Huowang watched as Nangong left and sighed. The matter wasn't over yet. Nangong was just the messenger, and he could never make a decision about such a monumental matter. Li Huowang had to convince the higher-ups to spur the Surveillance Bureau into action.

Li Huowang paced back and forth, thinking about how to convince the higher-ups.

“The Sitting Oblivion Dao is here?” A deep voice echoed from a screen on Li Huowang's left. He turned around and saw a large shadow on the screen. Li Huowang didn't reply because he wasn't sure whether the person was friend or foe.

“Hehe, seems like something is going to happen to Shangjing soon. I may have to hide in Hou Shu. Great, it seems that I still have time.”

The figure behind the screen reminded Li Huowang of Tuoba Danqing and Ji Xiang's actions. Those veterans somehow sensed that something big was going to happen soon and had left before it could happen.

Tuoba Danqing had said that he was going to go hide in Qing Qiu once they had captured a Muddled One, but he ended up not making it back from the mission.

Meanwhile, Ji Xiang just gave Li Huowang a house in Shangjing and ran away.

“Do you know why the Sitting Oblivion Dao has gathered in Shangjing?” Li Huowang asked the figure behind the screen.

“Hehe. You don’t know? Then it’s better that way. This world is a crazy world indeed,” the figure replied and stopped talking afterward.

Li Huowang felt anxious. Something big was about to happen, and he remained clueless about it. He walked toward the screen and looked behind but saw no one.

There was a wooden sculpture on the table, and it depicted a monk carrying a rucksack.

The monk’s upper body seemed vibrant and full of energy. The monk looked cheerful as well and was all smiles; his large belly was comical, too. However, the monk’s lower body was incomplete and was a tangled mass of black roots that made the carving look bizarre overall.

“Er Jiu! Where are you?” Nangong shouted from afar.

Li Huowang gave one glance at the wooden sculpture before walking out of the screen.

”Senior Nangong, I’m here!”

“Follow me! Lord Jian Zheng wants to see you!” Nangong exclaimed, and he looked quite anxious.

Li Huowang followed closely behind Nangong.

Li Huowang had yet to fully understand the hierarchy within the Surveillance Bureau, but Li Huowang knew that Lord Jian Zheng was definitely someone special if they were dealing with matters regarding the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

“Here, wear this. You look terrible without it. You shouldn’t meet Lord Jian Zheng with that appearance,” Nangong said, handing over a gray robe for Li Huowang to wear.

Li Huowang accepted it and wore the large, gray robe to cover his wounds.

“Remember, don’t say anything stupid or lie to Lord Jian Zheng. He’s going to know whether you’re lying or not.”

Does that mean he can read minds? Will he know that I’m a Strayed One if I even think about it? Li Huowang was shocked, and he couldn’t help but ask, “May I ask which sect Lord Jian Zheng comes from?”

“Lord Jian Zheng is different from the both of us. He’s a disciple of Confucianism. They distance themselves from the superstitious, and they do not cultivate anything at all.”

“Doesn’t that mean he’s just an ordinary person?” Li Huowang asked, sounding doubtful. How could a higher-up managing the Liang Kingdom be a normal man?

“Do you really think that you can solve everything with your cultivation techniques? You’re too naive. There are some people who are born special. Even without cultivation techniques, they’re still capable of solving problems with their brain. Lord Jian Zheng even managed to deceive a Sitting Oblivion Dao member.”

Li Huowang was astonished. He had encountered members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao quite a few times now, so he knew what would it take to deceive one of them. Li Huowang reckoned that Lord Jian Zheng had to be a monster in the brain department.

Li Huowang felt giddy with anticipation. He couldn’t wait to meet someone like what Nangong had described. Of course, Li Huowang was also a bit nervous as to how he was supposed to negotiate with Lord Jian Zheng.

Li Huowang followed Nangong and walked down the wooden corridor until they reached a set of stone doors. There were two guards standing beside the gate like guardian deities.

Their killing intent told Li Huowang that they were from a military family.

Li Huowang followed Nangong through a maze-like room until they finally reached the doors of what looked like a study room.

“Lord Jian Zheng, Er Jiu is here,” Nangong said, bowing toward the wooden door.

Chapter 413 - Jian Zheng

"You may return. Let him come inside by himself." An old-sounding voice echoed from behind the doors.

"Yes," Nangong said. Then, he hinted at Li Huowang to be careful before leaving.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and entered the ajar wooden door.

The study room wasn't large, and it looked like a normal study room as well. There were numerous books on the bookshelves on the left. The walls were also covered in various caricatures and art pieces, reminding Li Huowang of Zhuge Yuan's bamboo house.

If he weren't in the deepest and most remote part of the Surveillance Bureau's headquarters, Li Huowang would think that he was in a regular scholar's study room.

"Er Jiu greets Lord Jian Zheng!" Li Huowang bowed toward the man in front of him.

"Are you Er Jiu? Raise your head."

Li Huowang looked up, seeing Li Huowang's disfigured face.

Li Huowang also saw Lord Jian Zheng, and it turned out that Lord Jian Zheng was a skinny middle-aged man with a goatee. His smile lines were so deep that it separated his face into three parts.

Lord Jian Zheng wasn't wearing anything flashy. He was wearing a regular purple robe with a jade hanging from his waist.

Lord Jian Zheng was in front of the study table, busy approving documents with a brush dipped in cinnabar. There was a pot of tea bubbling on a small stove, making the room much warmer than outside.

Li Huowang's heart froze upon recalling Nangong's warning. He lowered his head and said, "Lord Jian Zheng, the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao is—”

“You entered the city with the Storyteller this morning, am I right?” Jian Zheng interrupted Li Huowang’s sentence and train of thought.

Jian Zheng placed the brush on a stand and used a seal the size of his fist to stamp the corner of a document.

Li Huowang's heart quivered, but he started talking. He told Jian Zheng about the dispute between Zhuge Yuan and the Sitting Oblivion Dao, as well as how he discovered the Sitting Oblivion Dao’s movement through Bei Feng.

Li Huowang told the truth and refrained from telling even a single lie. Of course, he skipped some of the details that the Surveillance Bureau didn’t have to know.

“Oh, I know.” Lord Jian Zheng sounded calm.

Li Huowang was surprised. After all, they were talking about the Sitting Oblivion Dao here, and they were all in the city.

“My Lord! The Sitting Oblivion Dao is here! They—”

“You don’t have to tell me what to do. Why are you in such a rush? Are you trying to use the Surveillance Bureau to take revenge on the Sitting Oblivion Dao?” Jian Zheng asked with cold eyes.

A mysterious pressure enveloped Li Huowang, and he hurriedly said, “Er Jiu dares not to say that.”

Li Huowang bit his cheek and took half a step back.

Jian Zheng ignored Li Huowang for fifteen minutes before finally taking the pot of boiling tea away from the stove and pouring himself a cup of tea. He took a sip of the tea before looking at Li Huowang.

“Don’t worry about the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Someone else is going to deal with them. However, I need you to do something else. This is more important than the Sitting Oblivion Dao, so you need to be very careful about this.”

Jian Zheng's reaction was outside Li Huowang's expectations, but it didn't mean that he could afford to be careless. Li Huowang remained calm, knowing that he couldn't reveal anything suspicious.

“Yes, please give me your order.”

“I have no idea how you ended up knowing Zhuge Yuan, but I need you to go back to him. Someone will assist you at the right timing, and your mission is to steal the Six Divinations Almanac.”

Six Divinations Almanac? What's that? Wait, the almanac?! Li Huowang recalled the almanac that Zhuge Yuan had wielded. Jian Zheng wants me to take Zhuge Yuan's almanac!

Li Huowang reeled in shock.

“This is an important mission, and I will personally oversee you. You must perform well. If possible, you should kill Zhuge Yuan. However, his death isn't mandatory,” Jian Zheng added and frowned upon witnessing Li Huowang's silence. “Did you not listen to what I said?”

Li Huowang clasped his shaking hands together. “Yes, I heard and will obey.”

Jian Zheng didn't forget to promise Li Huowang some rewards.

“Succeed, and I'll ignore some of the things you've done in the Surveillance Bureau. In fact, I will allow you to become an official of the Surveillance Bureau. Consider it your honor.

“You may also choose three artifacts from the vault. I know that the Sitting Oblivion Dao destroyed your entire sect, so it's only natural for you to hate them. Complete the mission perfectly, and I will allow you to join in on the mission to kill the Sitting Oblivion Dao members. You will also be in charge of those we end up capturing.”

Li Huowang nodded solemnly.

Jian Zheng seemed satisfied with Li Huowang's response. He picked up a stack of paper and gave it to Li Huowang. "You may return after you deliver these documents to the archive. The archive is beyond the third door on the left."

Li Huowang walked up and accepted the stack of papers with both hands before leaving the study. Once he was out of the study room, Li Huowang frowned. What should I do?

He couldn't stop thinking about the best next course of action. Li Huowang's initial plan was to pit both parties against each other while reaping profits during the chaos, but his plan ended up failing before he could even start working on it.

Jian Zheng's reaction was truly unexpected. After all, the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao was here. Li Huowang couldn't fight the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao on his own; he needed the Surveillance Bureau's help. Most importantly, he needed another plan.

Should I steal Zhuge Yuan's almanac for the Surveillance Bureau? That's absurd!

Zhuge Yuan was a talkative lunatic, but he was one of the very few friends Li Huowang had in this crazy world.

Li Huowang was still thinking about what to do when he finally arrived at the third door on the left. He looked down at the stack of papers in his hand and was about to enter the room when he caught a glimpse of the words on one of the documents.

Feng Erniu? Li Huowang was familiar with that name. It was the name of the Ji Xiang, who gave him a house in Shangjing before leaving. Li Huowang proceeded to read the report. Former Ji Xiang Feng Erniu and his wife are dead? Their heads have been submitted as proof? Ji Xiang is dead? He worked for the Surveillance Bureau for so long, and he was killed just like that?

Li Huowang recalled the pallid-looking plump Ji Xiang, and his heart grew cold upon seeing the glaring red circle drawn on the piece of paper.

Li Huowang glanced at the study room and realized that this wasn't a coincidence. Jian Zheng knew that Li Huowang was familiar with the former Ji Xiang and had put the document at the top of the stack as a warning.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and entered the archive.

Chapter 414 - Son

Li Huowang sat in the corner of the room and stared quietly at the citizens of Qi Kingdom talking about something. He overheard them talking about whether they would recruit a group of eunuchs in the palace or not.

Some of them thought that eunuchs couldn't be trusted, but others thought that eunuchs were still useful and that they had to recruit more eunuchs.

Li Huowang stopped listening to their discussion and turned to Zhuge Yuan next to him.

Zhuge Yuan was drinking tea as if he wasn't involved. He didn't express his opinion as well. Considering his status, he could have made a decision for everyone, but he didn't do that.

Li Huowang sat down next to him and asked. "Aren't you going to stop them? They've been talking about it for so long. We need a leader to stop them."

"No worries. Qin Lao is here, and they'll eventually come to a decision. I think they'll come to a decision by tomorrow. The little emperor is not the key issue here, but the empress."

"I hope they do move out tomorrow. Anyway, I'm going to the toilet," Li Huowang said. He stood up and walked outside. Rather than going to the toilet, however, Li Huowang left the residence through the courtyard.

A slightly faded humanoid window sticker talked to him once he was outside.

"Why are you still acting? The people outside are waiting for you anxiously, including Lord Jian Zheng."

Li Huowang frowned at the sticker. "I don't even know where he's hiding his almanac. Why are you in such a rush? I'll end up alerting him if I move haphazardly. Do you not have any idea just how strong he is?"

"Pick up the pace. We're at a critical juncture, and you can't take the easy path here."

"Relax. I know the best time to act, and it's when the Sitting Oblivion Dao members are fighting against him. He's definitely going to use the almanac against the Sitting Oblivion Dao."

"Are you sure that the Sitting Oblivion Dao will start moving soon?"

"Of course. Zhuge Yuan had fought them many times before. At this point, it's either he dies or the Sitting Oblivion Dao dies. They've ambushed him twice and are definitely going to do it again.

"Anyway, I have to go back now, or Zhuge Yuan will get suspicious of me."

Li Huowang turned around and ran away without waiting for the humanoid sticker's response.

The humanoid window sticker ceased all movement. In a house ten Li away, a chubby woman was holding a scissor tied with red thread. She crumpled up a window sticker and hurled it into the fire. Then, she told Jian Zheng everything.

Jian Zheng's eyes were squinting as he heard the report. Two beautiful ladies were massaging his back and shoulders.

The incense finished burning and the plump woman went and lit up another.

Jian Zheng spoke again when the white incense smoke drifted once more into the air.

"Tell the guards to release the two Sitting Oblivion Sect from the prison. Let them be the messenger. Tell them that we will fight the Storyteller at noon. The Surveillance Bureau only wants the Six Divinations Almanac, nothing else."

The chubby woman was shocked by the order. The Sitting Oblivion Dao was the nemesis of the Surveillance Bureau, but Jian Zheng was actually going to use them?

“Lord Jian Zheng, are they really going to do that?”

“I know that they're a group of liars, but they will definitely do that. Everyone thinks that they're just a group of crazy liars, but they actually have things they hold precious. They're simply hiding it properly.”

Jian Zheng felt tired and proceeded to his bed. Upon hearing footsteps, the two ladies in the bed moved aside and lifted the blanket.

Jian Zheng lay down, and the two ladies lay at the edge of the bed. Jian Zheng placed his wrinkled feet in their bosoms, allowing their soft bosoms to envelop his feet.

Jian Zheng sighed and turned around on the bed. “Go. Notify me once we're moving out tomorrow. This is an important mission, and I must oversee myself.”

“Yes, I understand.”

The chubby woman raised the scissor and snipped it toward the direction of the lamp. The room was plunged into darkness. Then, she bowed slightly toward the bed before leaving the room.

Li Huowang woke up in the morning on the second day of his mission. He didn't eat breakfast and paced around the courtyard endlessly; his instincts were telling him that something was going to happen today.

Li Huowang ignored the people from the Great Qi walking past him.

The Liang Kingdom was in a more perilous situation compared to the Qi Kingdom. Li Huowang saw an approaching carriage. He prepared himself, but he saw an eunuch alighted from the carriage.

The eunuch was chubby with jade-like skin like the others, but he looked quite young. He wasn't wearing any jewelry, but prayer beads wrapped around one of his hands as embellishments.

The eunuch didn't walk into the residence. He stopped in the courtyard and started shouting, “Everyone, stop your useless work! We are not going to help you. We are returning the favor from before by acting like you do not exist at all.”

Qin Lao was reluctant to let go of one of the few remaining help they could possibly obtain. “But Lord Zhuge is with us! Will you not reconsider? We’ll share the glory once we succeed!”

The eunuch looked at Zhuge Yuan and bowed respectfully before chuckling at Old Qin. “Lord Qin, what do you think is most important to us, who are working in the palace?”

Everyone was stunned.

One of the ladies spoke hesitantly. “Gold?”

“Wrong! It’s a son[1]! You can’t help us, but the monks can!”

The eunuch took off his robes, revealing his enlarged belly covered in veins. The eunuch excitedly showed off his belly. “Who said that we can’t have children after getting castrated? Do you not see this? This is my own son!”

The eunuch used his hand wrapped in prayer beads to caress his belly. Soon, an imprint appeared on the eunuch's belly as if what was inside had reacted to the eunuch's touch. The imprint resembled a hand!

Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine. What the hell is happening to the Qi Kingdom? What did the monks from the Righteous Monastery do to impregnate the eunuchs? Wait, is his "son" even alive inside him?

The Righteous Monastery of the Qi Kingdom was clearly stronger and more influential than the Righteous Monastery of the Liang Kingdom.

Old Qin’s hands trembled violently at the sight. “The monks from the Righteous Monastery are evil and have fallen into depravity! You’re not going to live long by consorting yourself with them!”

“Who cares if they’re evil? I’ll help those who can give us a child, even though we've been castrated!" the eunuch retorted. Then, he carefully wrapped his enlarged belly with his robes, hiding it from everyone's line of sight.

1. Eunuchs are castrated once they accept their roles. This is to make them less threatening as servants of the imperial family. That's why they can't have children. 🤔

Chapter 415 - Hong Zhong

“And that's why the officials are so close to the Righteous Monastery and the abbot. You're asking the wrong group of people for help. Of course, the exception is if you can give us sons as well.”

The chubby eunuch returned to the carriage.

Right as he was about to enter the carriage, he stopped and looked back. “I almost forgot to say this, but Stepfather said that we will not interfere if you do make a move. If you're capable of imprisoning the empress, we'd be more than happy to deal with the aftermath for you.”

With that, the chubby eunuch left, leaving behind a gloomy group of people.

Li Huowang had no intentions of getting involved, but he still couldn't help but remark, “The difference in power between your group and the enemy group is too large. I don't think you'll have many allies here for your cause. This is a lost cause.”

“Don't worry; everything isn't set in stone. There are no permanent allies, only permanent interests; the result is still up to the heavens to decide,” said Zhuge Yuan. He then put his fan away and continued, “We have the justification as well. The empress ruling the kingdom is unprecedented.

“I'm sure everyone knows that, and they're not going to bother us at all.”

Li Huowang nodded.

Zhuge Yuan looked at Li Huowang and asked curiously. “Junior Li, are you okay? You've been quite unfocused recently.”

“No, I'm fine,” Li Huowang replied rather quickly.

“If you need my help, don't hesitate to ask me for help. I can still help you with some minor issues.”

Glancing at the window sticker, Li Huowang shook his head. “No, it’s fine. Let’s just work together and deal with the issue here in the Great Qi. Your problems are more concerning than mine.”

Clip, clop, clip.

The sound of horse hooves echoed from outside, and the combined volume was so loud that it sounded like an army was converging on their location. There was even the sound of drums, which grew louder by the second.

“Wait, why are the soldiers here?! I thought they were guarding the borders?!” someone shouted. The crowd inside the residence immediately got worried.

“Don’t panic,” Zhuge Yuan said calmly, calming down everyone. He picked up a few scrolls of art and walked outside.

Li Huowang frowned upon seeing the window sticker split into four pieces, briefly revealing Jian Zheng’s face.

When Zhuge Yuan walked out, he saw rows of soldiers ahead of him. The combined killing intent of the soldiers was so thick that it was palpable. The people nearby failed to escape in time, and some of them were so frightened to the point of swooning.

“Hoho.” Zhuge Yuan sat on the ground and unfurled one of the scrolls. A black Guzheng[1] appeared in front of him.

Ding~

Zhuce Yuan plucked on the string lightly, and the powerful drum noises were washed away.

The soldiers growled and ran toward them. When their killing intent reached its peak, a pool of blood appeared from underneath Zhuge Yuan’s Guzheng, melting it into a puddle of blood.

The buildings in the four cardinal directions peeled away; the wooden tiles fell off, and four altars covered in talismans emerged.

Several purple-robed Daoists brandished their swords at the same time and started a ritual. Someone shouted just then, and a barrier sprang up, covering everything.

“Junior Li, don’t you think this is interesting?” Zhuge Yuan waved his hand, and the old almanac appeared. He used his brush and pointed at the four altars. The four Daoists disappeared, and Zhuge Yuan’s brush was suddenly covered in something.

Zhuce Yuan raised his hand and got ready to write when Li Huowang shifted his illusion and used his invisible right hand to snatch the old almanac. Li Huowang immediately somersaulted and dashed toward the window sticker.

“Li! Huo! Wang!” Zhuge Yuan’s enraged voice echoed.

The tiles around him quivered violently.

“Stop watching and stop him for me!” Li Huowang shouted.

The people of the Surveillance Bureau appeared and surrounded Zhuge Yuan, but they weren't Zhuge Yuan's enemy at all. Several mahjong tiles appeared in the army just then, and they ran toward Zhuge Yuan with the same towering killing intent as the army!

Li Huowang was so busy escaping that he had no idea what was happening behind him. However, he could hear incessant cries. The voices echoed closer and closer the faster Li Huowang ran.

Upon reaching the rendezvous point, Li Huowang saw Jian Zheng waiting for him on horseback. No one else was around Jian Zheng, as the people of the Surveillance Bureau were doing their best to stop Zhuge Yuan.

“Give me the Six Divinations Almanac,” Jian Zheng said, extending his arm.

“Here it is!” Li Huowang handed over the old almanac.

When Li Huowang’s skinless hand and the wrinkled hand made contact, a sharp glint burst out of the almanac and flew toward Jian Zheng’s neck.

Jian Zheng failed to react in time, but the jade pendant on his waist flashed once and shattered. A white smoke appeared from the jade pendant, and it enveloped Li Huowang’s arm that was holding the dagger.

Li Huowang's arm was corroded until only the bone in his arm was left.

However, Li Huowang wasn't done just yet.

Li Huowang spat his molars, but he was caught off guard when his teeth failed to pierce Jian Zheng, merely getting stuck in the latter's chest. Clearly, Jian Zheng's purple robe had strong defensive capabilities; it wasn't just an ordinary robe!

"How dare you?!" Jian Zheng glared furiously at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took to the air and sat on Jian Zheng before thrusting his corroded arm into Jian Zheng's neck. His attack finally worked, and Jian Zheng's blood dyed his beard red.

Li Huowang leaned forward and whispered. "Why do you think I did this? Because I'm fucking Hong Zhong! Do you really think I'd be friendly with you guys?!"

Li Huowang stabbed Jian Zheng once more, and the latter's head tilted sideways.

Jian Zheng was dead!

"HAHAHAHA! THIS FEELS AMAZING!" Li Huowang roared madly and turned around. Then, he raised his corroded arm while sweeping his gaze across the people who had surrounded Zhuge Yuan.

"Hahaha! I tricked you guys too! Did you guys really not think that I may be a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao?!" Li Huowang tore off his face, revealing the flesh underneath.

Moments later, black tentacles burrowed out of his facial muscles and skull. The black tentacles moved together and transformed Li Huowang's head, making the latter's head appear rectangular.

grotesque noises echoed incessantly, Li Huowang's face distorted in pain.

"Father...!"

“Don't stop! Do it! Do it like what I taught you yesterday!”

Li Sui could only proceed, and Li Huowang's facial features became even more distorted. Li Sui popped out Li Huowang's eyeballs, and the latter's face finally resembled a Hong Zhong mahjong tile.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao members amidst the army cheered and whistled at the sight.

“Hahaha! Hong Zhong is amazing! To think he'd actually transformed into that brat!”

“Elder Hong Zhong is amazing!”

“Hong Zhong is unbeatable!”

Li Huowang laughed boisterously at their cheers. He even lifted Jian Zheng's corpse and shook it at them.

1. A musical instrument 🤔

Chapter 416 - Retreat

"Hahaha, you want the Six Divinations Almanac? Hahaha, how naive! This treasure belongs to us—the Sitting Oblivion Dao!" Li Huowang mocked the members of the Surveillance Bureau.

Hong Zhong's illusion celebrated wildly and clapped around Li Huowang. It was his first time feeling such unprecedented joy; he had never felt such a rush, even when he was still alive.

Everyone came to a screeching halt and stared alternately at the Hong Zhong on Li Huowang's face and Jian Zheng's corpse in his hand.

The Surveillance Bureau members besieging Zhuge Yuan were stupefied. They didn't expect that one of their comrades would end up being a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao in disguise, and he had even killed Jian Zheng!

The Surveillance Bureau rushed toward Li Huowang. Jian Zheng had died, and if they didn't want to be imprisoned for dereliction of duty, they had to capture Hong Zhong!

"Dad, they're running toward you!" Li Sui exclaimed.

Li Huowang was blinded, so he couldn't see what was going on.

"Calm down. Pop your eyeballs out and lead the way for me!" Li Huowang urged. He raised the blood-stained almanac and ran toward the city wall under Li Sui's guidance.

Anything could happen in this bizarre world. Jian Zheng was one of the Surveillance Bureau's higher ups, so Jian Zheng had been difficult to kill. However, Li Huowang didn't really care about success or failure. He did this to shift the blame onto the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Li Huowang had never taken the Surveillance Bureau's side; he had stayed true to his goal—capturing the Strayed

One Bei Feng!

Bei Feng was still in the capital, but both the Surveillance Bureau and the Sitting Oblivion Dao had to fight each other for Li Huowang to catch Bei Feng! It had to happen at all costs, even if Li Huowang had to create conflict between them.

Li Huowang had no reservations when it came to taking advantage of them. The Sitting Oblivion Dao had deceived him so many times that they were practically archenemies now.

Meanwhile, Li Huowang wasn't worried about his cover getting blown by the Surveillance Bureau. There was more than one Hong Zhong, after all. In addition, the Sitting Oblivion Dao was famous for their deception to the extent that no one would believe them, even if they were to speak the truth.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao was in a difficult position now that Hong Zhong had killed Jian Zheng. Li Huowang had learned this trick from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and he wasn't shy of taking a few pointers from their playbook.

Li Huowang jumped on roof after roof. He attached talismans to his knees and ran wildly. He'd laugh occasionally to taunt his pursuers. Li Huowang's instigation plan had succeeded. Now, all that was left for him to do was to escape from the Surveillance Bureau's pursuit and reclaim his true identity his Er Jiu.

Li Huowang had just jumped off a roof when a killing intent pierced him, making his hair stand on end.

Li Huowang felt himself twisting in mid-air. The blind Li Huowang then felt a strong breeze sweeping past him.

"Dad, someone on the wall threw a big stick toward you," said Li Sui. He had evaded the attack for Li Huowang.

"Don't panic; we're not too far away from the city wall. We'll be out soon!" Li Huowang felt a strange aura behind him, and the aura locked onto him.

Li Huowang's heart clenched, and he asked, "Li Sui, what's going on? Did something happen behind us?"

"Dad, the person you killed has just stood up! He's looking at your head!"

"What?! Jian Zheng is still alive? No way, he has to be dead! He's not Jian Zheng! He's someone else!"

Clearly, "Jian Zheng" had more tricks up his sleeves than Li Huowang could ever take into account. Li Huowang didn't have an exact grasp of the ongoing situation, as he was blind. However, one thing was for sure: the ordeal was far from over.

"Go!" Li Huowang switched places with his illusion and became invisible. Then, he ran toward the city gate with all his strength.

Li Huowang felt a chill above his head followed by a dull thud. The chill vanished immediately afterward. However, Li Huowang's situation was too dire for him to pay any attention to anything else aside from escaping. Li Huowang ran nonstop upon realizing that he didn't get hit by the oncoming projectile.

"Come on! Everyone, let's help Elder Hong Zhong!"

"Hong Zhong! We'll avenge you! Just go in peace!"

"Hong Zhong, make sure to send the almanac out of the city!"

The members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao shouted at Li Huowang, and he couldn't help but sneer in his heart. I'm deceiving you guys. I'm sure none of you has ever thought that you'd get a taste of your own medicine one day.

Of course, Li Huowang had no idea whether the Sitting Oblivion Dao members were truly acting as his rearguard, but the pressure on Li Huowang dropped.

Li Huowang soon reached the city gates. The heavy gates were closed, but it was no challenge for Li Huowang. He swung his bronze coin sword and sliced through the city gate as if it were made out of paper.

Li Huowang ran for quite a while until his hands eventually felt the familiar touch of bushes and leaves. In other words, he had left the city and had entered a dense forest.

Li Sui! Keep an eye out for me! Is anyone after us? Li Huowang asked inwardly.

"No, those people in armor stopped them from chasing after us."

It was the best possible outcome, but Li Huowang remained vigilant. He continued his run into the forest; sometimes, he'd turn invisible, and sometimes he'd wade his way through a river.

Several hours later, Li Huowang eventually stopped, feeling utterly exhausted. He was covered in beaded sweat as he sat on a boulder to catch his breath. The security in the city will definitely be heightened because of the chaos. I have to wait for things to cool down.

However, I can't wait for too long lest the Surveillance Bureau launches another attack on the Sitting Oblivion Dao while I'm not there. I have to be there before those two start attacking each other. I can't miss the golden opportunity.

Just as Li Huowang was engrossed in his thoughts, the sound of crunching leaves echoed to his left.

Li Huowang's ears perked up to listen.

"Ghost!" a terrified scream echoed, prompting the nearby birds to fly away. Then, there wasn't any more movement. Li Huowang frowned in bewilderment and confusion. Li Sui, who made that sound?

"An old man. He's carrying a lot of wood. He's on the ground right now, and he's not moving at all."

The perplexed Li Huowang made his way over to where he had heard the scream, and his hands soon found the old man.

Li Huowang groped around and discovered that the old man was wearing coarse clothes. The old man's face was covered in deep wrinkles as well, which was proof of his old age.

The firewood on his back and the broken hatchet in the old man's hand indicated that the old man was just an ordinary person who decided to come to the mountains to chop some firewood.

The old man still had a pulse, which meant that Li Huowang had simply scared him out of his wits to the point of fainting rather than death.

Li Huowang realized just then that the old man had to have been scared by his terrifying appearance. It made sense, as there was no way that Li Huowang's horrifying face was a common sight to ordinary people.

Li Huowang took out a dagger from his torture bag to try and restore his facial features. He raised his hands and reached out for his head, but he found nothing except for two tentacles bobbing up and down with an eyeball each.

Where did my head go?

Chapter 417 - What If

"Where's my head?"

Li Sui thought Li Huowang was talking to him, so he hurriedly replied, "Father, I know where your head is. It fell on the ground while we were in the city. Should we go back and pick it up?"

Li Sui's words seemed to drain the life out of Li Huowang. The latter went limp and collapsed to the ground.

"Father? Father, what's wrong?" Li Sui nudged Li Huowang with his tentacles, but he received no response. Li Sui couldn't understand why his father had stopped moving.

Was it because he lost his head? But Father lost his head long ago, and he still managed to run for such a long time. It shouldn't be because he lost his head.

The little toy that Li Huowang gave Li Sui squirmed all of a sudden. Li Sui used his tentacles to fish out the leather doll, and it grew rapidly once it was outside. In the blink of an eye, it became as big as a human being. It had Li Huowang's face, but it was shriveled up with just a thin layer of skin.

The flat and thin "Li Huowang" crawled and put his mouth on the shadow that his corpse had cast. In the next moment, "Li Huowang" began sucking. The shadow was funneled into the doll's mouth, and it grew rapidly.

Moments later, Li Huowang with a complete body and head appeared next to his own corpse. Li Huowang exhaled sharply in fear as he looked down at his headless corpse.

Li Huowang was already blind even before his head fell off his shoulders, so he had no idea who took his head away. However, Li Huowang believed that it was most likely the resurrected Jian Zheng.

Sure enough, the Surveillance Bureau still had tricks up their sleeves. If it hadn't been for the relic that had sacrificed its life for him, he would have died for real.

I must be extremely cautious the next time I face the Surveillance Bureau. Their techniques are too mysterious and dangerous. I may end up dying if I become too careless against them.

Just as Li Huowang was engrossed in his own thoughts, the surroundings abruptly trembled. Li Huowang thought the members of the Surveillance Bureau had arrived and were converging on his location when everything went white.

Li Huowang found himself staring at an unlit fluorescent light in the ceiling. He looked down and saw that he had been restrained with a straitjacket.

"Back again."

The doll had allowed Li Huowang to come back to life, but Li Sui was still inside his previous body. In other words, there wasn't anything stopping the hallucination from engulfing him once more, and as expected, Li Huowang found himself back here.

"Li Sui, Li Sui..." Li Huowang's voice was muffled by the cloth in his mouth. "Quick, come into my body and help me go back there."

Li Huowang immediately lifted his head and opened his mouth as wide as possible; the cloth covering his mouth stretched wide open as he struggled against it. The camera in the upper left corner flashed red and turned toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang had no idea if Li Sui could understand him, as he couldn't speak properly. However, there was a high chance that Li Sui couldn't understand him at all, as he had yet to snap back to reality.

"Li Sui! Stop playing around and hurry up!" Li Huowang exclaimed. However, there was no response, and it made Li Huowang feel anxious.

Li Huowang was anxious, as the black spindle was in the abdomen of his corpse, so if everyone ended up seeing his new body, they'd immediately identify him as a Strayed One! His cover would get blown!

The door to the room was pushed open. Sun Xiaoqin walked in with a meal box, and she froze in her steps upon seeing Li Huowang. Moments later, tears of excitement flowed out of her eyes. "Son, are you finally awake? You're finally awake, right?"

Sun Xiaoqin rushed over and held Li Huowang's head to examine him.

Sun Xiaoqin then removed the cloth from Li Huowang's mouth; Li Huowang's mouth fluttered open, and he was just about to play dumb and act foolish, but the words got stuck in his throat upon seeing Sun Xiaoqin's worried face.

Li Huowang fell silent.

"It's okay, it's okay. The fact that you can understand me means that your condition is improving. You'll get better one day. Here, have some food," Sun Xiaoqin said, wiping away her tears and picking up the meal box from the ground.

Sun Xiaoqin opened the meal box, and it turned out to be a four-layered meal box containing protein, a vegetable dish, soup, and a serving of rice.

Sun Xiaoqin took out a plastic spoon and scooped up half a spoon of white rice. She then dipped it in the egg soup before picking up a piece of pork and bringing it over to Li Huowang's mouth.

Li Huowang had no idea what Sun Xiaoqin's actions meant in the real world, but he opened his mouth and ate it nonetheless.

"Great, my son really is the best. Mom knows that you always wake up hungry. My son really is much easier to handle compared to other parents."

Li Huowang swallowed the food and asked, "Mom, how did you get in?"

Sun Xiaoqin bit her lower lip upon hearing Li Huowang's question. Afraid of scaring her son, Sun Xiaoqin endured the excitement and said, "This place is called a hospital on the outside, but it's actually a prison. The food here is terrible, and I was afraid you wouldn't eat well, so I came to visit you.

"Visitors are usually not allowed, but the warden is an easygoing person. He immediately allowed me to visit you when I said that my son behaves the best with me at your side. I guess there are still good people in this world."

Li Huowang nodded and continued eating with relish. After chewing a few times, he noticed Sun Xiaoqin's strange behavior. Eventually, Sun Xiaoqin took a small amount of rice and used it to plug up the tiny microphone near them.

Sun Xiaoqin sat back down and explained, "I may not be by your side by the next time you wake up, son, so listen to me. If someone ever asks you about the gold, just tell them that it's from your grandmother's dowry. Do you understand?"

"If you don't think it's going to work, then just stay silent. Never ever tell them that the gold was from your bed! There are many wicked people nowadays, so you must remember to never ever tell anyone about it!"

Li Huowang smiled helplessly and asked, "Mom, have you spent the gold?"

"What nonsense are you talking about? It was from your grandma's dowry! It must not be spent unless it's absolutely necessary! Don't worry, this place is funded by the government, and it's not that expensive.

"Your father is still doing his best to earn money as well."

"Mom, I gave you the gold so you could spend it freely. Don't save it. Anyway, this is all a hallucination, so I can have as much gold as I want—"

Li Huowang froze just then, and a terrifying question popped up in his mind as he stared at his mother. Li Huowang had always thought that this world was a mere hallucination, as he he could bring treasures here from the real world.

In addition, too many coincidences and unlikely things had happened to him so far.

However, Zhuge Yuan had said that the Strayed Ones could create something out of nothing. If his words were true, could it be that he had unknowingly used his power as a Strayed One to procure the gold and make those coincidences happen?

What if this world was real, too?

Chapter 418 - Reality

Could it be that this world is real as well? Li Huowang thought and looked around. He was a Strayed One, who had turned Dan Yangzi into an immortal, so materializing gold using his primordial breath would be a piece of cake for him!

But... why did I have to notice this now? I'm on the verge of catching Bei Feng and staying off the hallucination, so why does it have to be now? Li Huowang's face distorted into a grimace. Once again, he could no longer distinguish reality from the hallucination. If the hallucination was real, what was the point of his hard work?

What if this world is real? Li Huowang thought, and the idea became a Gu worm that burrowed into Li Huowang's mind, churning up a chaotic hodgepodge of emotions within him.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and smashed his face on the wall.

He wanted to use pain to distract himself from the ominous sensation.

No, this is wrong! This is wrong!

"Son! What's wrong with you?! Y-you're scaring me!" Sun Xiaoqin exclaimed, frightened by Li Huowang's actions. She put down the meal box and embraced Li Huowang's head, stroking his short hair repeatedly.

Li Huowang stopped moving and closed his eyes in pain. In reality, he wasn't afraid of wasting his efforts, nor he was afraid of pain and death. However, he was afraid of losing grip on what was real and fake. That sensation was just unbearable for him.

He couldn't confirm that this world was real, and even if his speculation ended up being correct, there would still be a degree of falsity to it. Is this even possible? How is this possible? I have yet to obtain that cultivation method.

How am I using my primordial breath? This doesn't make any sense. If both worlds are real, why can I materialize gold here but not there? Does my ability as a Strayed One vary in strength depending on the location?

Li Huowang glared angrily at the bedside table; he tried to use his mind to materialize a large piece of gold, but there was no change. Then, he tried to move the bedside table with his mind, but nothing happened.

Li Huowang's veins bulged, and his eyes became bloodshot. He was unwittingly transfixed on the bedside table, but it remained motionless.

"Son, stop scaring me. I really am scared. W-w-what's happening to you?" Sun Xiaoqin stuttered, and her intermittent sobbing made Li Huowang turn to her.

Li Huowang immediately noticed the wrinkles at the corners of her eyes, and he realized just then that it had been a long time since he last saw his mother. It turned out that her mother had aged a lot in the meantime.

Even if she was fake, Li Huowang couldn't help but feel sorry for her.

"Mom, I'm fine. I really am fine," Li Huowang said in a low voice. He relaxed slowly after making a decision that he couldn't act recklessly without any evidence. If he were to foolishly make a reckless decision, he'd fall into the same plight as before.

Li Huowang shook his head vigorously to calm his chaotic emotions. Then, he started taking deep breaths to calm down his racing heart.

Since he was already suspicious about the possibility that this world might be real, Li Huowang decided to look for evidence rather than just speculate. At the moment, the probability of this world being real was quite low.

It doesn't make sense that I can bring anything from that world to this world, but I can't do it in reverse. I mean, there's no way that the other world is the fake one, right? It's impossible for this world to be the real one instead.

Li Huowang leaned against Sun Xiaoqin's embrace and enjoyed the rare moment of peace. He had been yearning for this feeling in his dreams back in the real world.

"Mom, how is Nana?" Li Huowang asked.

"Nana? Nana is doing well," Sun Xiaoqin replied, sounding uneasy. She was busy taking tissues out of her bag to wipe away Li Huowang's sweat.

Li Huowang had long become capable of discerning lies from anyone's words, and it was all thanks to his experience fighting against the Sitting Oblivion Dao for so long. In other words, Li Huowang easily saw through Sun Xiaoqin's lie.

"Mom, what happened to Nana?" Li Huowang asked, becoming gloomy upon noticing something amiss.

Sun Xiaoqin attempted to lie once again, but Li Huowang saw through it.

Faced with her son's incessant questioning, Sun Xiaoqin finally relented and said, "I hope you're not going to get mad at her for not coming here often. She's still a good girl, after all."

"I'm not going to get mad at her. I just want to know where she is right now."

"Nana dropped out of school, and her parents took her to see a doctor."

"What happened to her?" Li Huowang asked, sounding nervous.

"It wasn't anything serious; she's just a bit depressed, and she's no longer interested in anything," Sun Xiaoqin said, picking up the meal box and feeding Li Huowang once again.

Li Huowang chewed the food, but it became tasteless. Li Huowang's heart was bleeding as he thought about the girl who had always been by his side since he was young. She had sacrificed a lot for him, but he hadn't been able to give her anything in return.

"It's okay, son. I heard it's just a minor illness that can be cured with medicine. Don't blame yourself for it."

"Mom, can you untie me?" Li Huowang said.

Sun Xiaoqin hesitated with the meal box in hand. Eventually, she nodded. "All right! I guess it must be uncomfortable being tied up like that all day. It's great to move around a bit."

With that, Sun Xiaoqin untied the restraints on Li Huowang.

"Hey, Ma'am Sun!" A nervous-sounding male voice echoed from the surveillance camera in the room. "What are you doing? Stop that!"

"My son is feeling uncomfortable being tied up all day. Don't worry, I'm here! He's very obedient with me here!" Sun Xiaoqin replied and picked up the pace.

"Wait, I'm coming over! I'm coming now—" The voice was inexplicably cut off mid-sentence.

Just as Li Huowang regained his freedom, the door to the room was flung open by two large-framed prison guards with batons in hand. They stood at the door and stared at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang's limbs were slightly atrophic, as it had been a long time since he had exercised. However, the large-framed guards still gulped a mouthful of their own saliva and nervously called for reinforcements using their walkie-talkies.

It wasn't a strange sight. After all, Li Huowang was the mad martial artist of the prison, and he was exceedingly difficult to handle.

Li Huowang ignored the guards and grabbed the iron bars blocking the window, reaching out for the sky. As the warm sunlight touched Li Huowang's pale fingertips, a trace of longing burst out of his heart at the warmth that caressed his hands.

How wonderful would it be if this was reality...

Chapter 419 - Bai Lingmiao

"The sun sets behind the western mountains and darkness covers the sky~ Nine out of ten houses have closed their doors but one remains open~ Burn the incense, beat the drum, and Summon the Gods~"

Dum-dum-da-da-dum~

Bai Lingmiao circled around a bound naked man in the center of the room along with the urgent rhythm of the drumbeats.

A group of people were in the corner of the room, and their eyes were filled with tears.

"It's an auspicious day to close the doors. The Southern Dipper gets close to the Northern Dipper. Do not close the doors yet~ First spray three mouthfuls of divine water~ Step into the southwest and northwest corner~ With the Heavens and Earth as witnesses, chase away the evil spirits and monsters!"

When Bai Lingmiao's words fell, she took off her red veil and shoved it into a water basin. Then, she covered the man's face with the drenched red veil. The man let out a miserable cry reminiscent of a ghost or a wolf's wail as he writhed against the restraints.

The soaked red veil changed shapes according to the beat of the drum. Sometimes, it'd become a wolf head with a massive wound in the crown of the head, and sometimes, it'd become a colossal skull made out of the skull of four snakes.

The cries became louder, and the man tensed up before collapsing to the ground. A blurry red figure crawled out from under the red veil and ran swiftly toward a nearby pillar.

Bai Lingmiao didn't move. She waited until the misty red figure had crawled into the pillar before walking up to it.

The Second Deity's sharp nails pierced the wooden pillar, and the pillar cracked open, revealing a tiny blood-red palace.

However, it seemed like the tiny blood-red palace had grown from the wooden pillar itself. It didn't seem like someone had placed the tiny blood-red palace after the construction was done.

"Have you offended someone?"

The Second Deity swiped at the tiny blood-red palace with her black nails, and the tiny palace collapsed. The blood-red color of the palace's material dimmed rapidly.

The victim handed over a pouch of copper coins, but Bai Lingmiao didn't immediately accept them. She looked around at the bare walls and decided not to accept them.

"Copper coins are too troublesome to carry. You can just use that money to repair that pillar and think carefully about who installed that pillar in the first place. Remember to stay away from them," Bai Lingmiao said, turning around to leave.

Bai Lingmiao walked out and sat in the carriage. Then, she breathed a sigh of relief and said, "This job is really hard to find."

Chun Xiaoman waited until the Second Deity was on the carriage before pulling on the reins and directing the carriage toward Cowheart Village. "Miaomiao, are you done with the Immortal family's quota for this month?"

"Yes, and we have to do it again next month," Bai Lingmiao replied with a nod. Then, she leaned back on the carriage walls. Afterward, she picked up a book from the side and opened it.

The book contained simple characters, and the page that Bai Lingmiao had opened revealed the character for the word "duck" on the left and a duck drawn on the right.

Bai Lingmiao grabbed a wooden stick and wrote the character over and over again in the air. After memorizing the character, Bai Lingmiao flipped the book to the second page and saw a pig.

The book was filled with character worksheets, and it wasn't available anywhere else. After all, Gao Zhijian had personally made this book.

There were so many books and techniques under the ancestral hall, but they were all recorded in texts rather than images. Bai Lingmiao had to learn how to read to know what her family had left behind for her.

Amidst the incessant creaking of the carriage wheels, the sky darkened. When Chun Xiaoman pulled the curtain open, it was already pitch-black inside the carriage. The only source of light was a pair of green beast eyes floating in the air.

"Miaomiao, it's already late. How about camping here tonight?"

"You go ahead and do your thing. I want to keep reading."

Chun Xiaoman sighed at the reply and pulled down the curtain. Then, she walked away to pick up some firewood. Miaomiao's personality had changed drastically, especially her way of doing this—she was stubborn once she had made up her mind.

Bai Lingmiao spent all of her time learning characters except for eating and drinking, and it appeared that she wouldn't give up until she became perfectly capable of reading.

After collecting enough firewood to set up a campfire next to the carriage, Chun Xiaoman returned and saw two familiar figures standing silently in front of her.

"Thank you. I'll get the pot. Watch the fire and make sure it doesn't go out."

There were only two of them, so a large pot was unnecessary. A small iron pot would do.

Soon, the guokui were broken into smaller pieces and thrown into the pot. Once it became a bit soft, Chun Xiaoman added cured meat and wild vegetables into the pot.

A simple meal was made in the blink of an eye.

Chun Xiaoman looked up and shook her head helplessly upon seeing Bai Lingmiao reading her book while eating. Chun Xiaoman was convinced that her close friend was going crazy.

"Why do you insist on doing such a troublesome thing? Gao Zjijian can read, you know?" Chun Xiaoman asked.

"It's always best to rely on oneself rather than others. Besides, his brain isn't good enough for what I want to read. What if he reads it wrongly? We'll have no idea, as we can't read those texts ourselves. Have you already forgotten how Li Huowang fooled that damned baldy last time? I don't want to end up like him."

"How about hiring some teachers, then?"

"That's a good idea. Let those teachers know that I'm a survivor of the White Lotus Sect. I'm sure they won't report me to the Surveillance Bureau."

Chun Xiaoman frowned. The old Miaomiao had never teased her like that. However, her dissatisfaction was assuaged when the Second Deity used her chopsticks to pick up two pieces of meat before putting them into Chun Xiaoman's bowl.

"You're still good to me," Chun Xiaoman said and leaned against the Second Deity's shoulder before continuing with her meal.

Soon, the meal was over, and the two lay on their beds, resting with their backs against each other. Bai Lingmiao turned around and put her hand on Chun Xiaoman's shoulder. At that, Chun Xiaoman decided to let go of her dissatisfaction.

Chun Xiaoman then turned around and stroked Bai Lingmiao's eyelid. Bai Lingmiao had changed, but she was still the same Miaomiao—the same close friend who would comfort Chun Xiaoman whenever she was the most vulnerable.

Chun Xiaoman was about to close her eyes when someone hugged her from behind.

Of course, it was none other than the Second Deity.

"Hey..." Chun Xiaoman trailed off mid-sentence. Eventually, she closed her eyes with an arm beneath the Second Deity and Bai Lingmiao's head.

The next morning, Chun Xiaoman woke up to find that the carriage was already moving. She yawned and stretched lazily. Then, she walked up to the front to take over the reins from the Second Deity, but the latter refused to hand over the reins.

"It's fine. I'm not going to get tired. I'm going to drive a carriage, not walk."

While the two were arguing, a small settlement appeared before them. The small settlement was full of farmers carrying wild game and woven baskets.

"Oh right, today is the fifteenth day of the month. It's when they set up the market."

The carriage soon entered the settlement, and a cacophonous din inundated the carriage from all directions. The noises were coming from the people hawking their goods on both sides of the street.

The carriage moved slowly as the street was filled with people. The majority of them simply listened to the hawkers without buying anything.

"Why is it so noisy?" Bai Lingmiao asked, sounding impatient. She pulled open the curtain, and the bright sunlight dazzled her. Li Huowang was about to cover her eyes with the ribbon that Li Huowang gave her when she spotted a familiar figure in the periphery of her vision.

"Xiaoman, isn't that Lu Xiucan?" Bai Lingmiao pointed out.

Chapter 420 - Meeting

“When I still had my artifact, money would hop into my pouch by themselves! I didn't have to pay any attention to bronze coins,” Lu Xiucan said, scoffing at the waiter, who had just booted him out of the restaurant.

“I'm sorry, dear customer. Regardless of what you say, our shop will not shoulder the payment for your meal,” the waiter said, slinging a white towel on his shoulder before returning to his post.

“Hey!” Lu Xiucan exclaimed. He was about to go on a tirade, but the woman next to him stopped him in time. The woman was none other than Tao'er, and she was the wife Lu Xiucan had bought for himself.

Tao'er opened up a pouch and took out two vegetable crackers from it before handing it over to Lu Xiucan.

“No! I don't want it! You can eat it. I'm a man, so how can I eat the leftovers of a woman?” Lu Xiucan said, pushing the vegetable crackers back to Tao'er.

Lu Xiucan's plan was to return to Cowheart Mountain to look for Li Huowang, but he no longer had any money for the trip. The trip wasn't that far, but he had no money, so he struggled quite a lot.

He approached the gangsters he had shared some drinks with and asked them for some money, but they all ignored him decisively.

“Why is the great Lu Xiucan starving on the streets?” A feminine voice echoed from somewhere.

Lu Xiucan was instantly furious at the remark. He turned around and saw two young women—Chun Xiaoman and Bai Lingmiao.

"What a coincidence! So, it's guys! Are you going back to Cowheart Village? Let me go with you! I'll drive!" Lu Xiucan got ready to hop onto the carriage, but Bai Lingmiao kicked him in the head.

"Did I say that you can get on the carriage?" Bai Lingmiao asked, looking down at Lu Xiucan from the window.

Tao'er helped Lu Xiucan up.

Lu Xiucan cast a confused gaze at the white-haired woman in front of him.

Bai Lingmiao was giving off a completely different air. She had become arrogant and unruly, which was a stark contrast to her previous gentle and quiet self.

"What's wrong with Miss Bai?" Lu Xiucan asked Chun Xiaoman holding the reins.

Chun Xiaoman sighed lightly. "What else? She became like you."

"Oh? She touched Master's sword as well?" Lu Xiucan's eyes widened in surprise.

"Xiaoman, stop talking to him. Let's go," Bai Lingmiao said. Ignoring Lu Xiucan, she pulled Chun Xiaoman into the restaurant.

However, Lu Xiucan followed them and sat down at the table with Tao'er in tow. Bai Lingmiao coldly glared at Lu Xiucan, asking, "Did I say that you can sit here?"

"Hey! Miss Bai, don't be so cruel. We're—" Lu Xiucan started.

"What is even our relationship?" However, Bai Lingmiao interrupted coldly, "Are you a fellow comrade of mine who had experienced hardships with me, or are you from my Bai Family?"

Lu Xiucan was infuriated by Bai Lingmiao's words. She used to be so kind, so how come she became so annoying to deal with?

"Fine! It's just a meal. I'm not going to starve to death by just skipping a meal!" Lu Xiucan exclaimed and pulled Tao'er to sit at a nearby empty table.

Chun Xiaoman wanted to say something to diffuse the tense atmosphere, but Bai Lingmiao kicked her lightly. With that, Chun Xiaoman dared not to speak.

The dishes and soup were soon served.

Lu Xiucan couldn't help but gulp a mouthful of his own saliva as the munching noises of the people around him pervaded his ears.

"Oh, right," Bai Lingmiao said.

Lu Xiucan's ears perked up, but he pretended that he wasn't interested.

"You don't need to follow us. Go and look for food elsewhere. Cowheart Village belongs to my family, and I decide who can stay there. I feel nauseous just from seeing you, so you'd best not go there."

"What?!" Lu Xiucan jumped up in anger. "You can't do this to me! The Lu Family Troupe lives there!"

"You really think it's their home just because I allowed them to stay there? Follow me there, and I'll chase them away," Bai Lingmiao said coldly.

Lu Xiucan was rendered speechless. He wanted to say something, but the words got stuck in his throat when he saw the eerie Second Deity. In the end, Lu Xiucan smacked the table and stomped off with Tao'er in tow.

Chun Xiaoman finally spoke, asking, "Miaomiao, don't you think you were a bit too harsh? He's still Troupe Leader Lu's son, you know?"

"I did not beat him up, much less scold him. What do you mean 'too much'? Did you not see the way he treated his own father? Why should I help such an ungrateful bastard? I don't understand why he's so arrogant even though he needs help," Bai Lingmiao replied and proceeded to eat her fourth bowl of rice.

Bai Lingmiao wasn't in a hurry to leave. She was planning on having a good sleep at an inn before continuing their journey.

Meanwhile, Lu Xiucan grumbled as he walked down a flea market. He gnashed his teeth and repeatedly cursed under his breath. Unfortunately, cursing wouldn't assuage the rumbling of his stomach. Lu Xiucan glanced at the woman, who had been following him quietly without any complaints, before pulling her away.

Lu Xiucan looked everywhere for food, but his efforts were to no avail, as they had no money. Soon, it was sunset, but they had only managed to fill their stomachs with water.

"Hey!" A man standing in an alleyway waved at Lu Xiucan. "Do you need money?"

Lu Xiucan walked over in surprise. "What's going on?"

The man opened his hand, revealing several silver pieces.

Lu Xiucan's eyes brightened, but the man put the silver pieces away.

Lu Xiucan was thrilled and was about to start asking questions when the man pointed at Tao'er behind him. "I'll give you three taels of silver in exchange for your wife becoming a concubine for a year. How about that?"

"A concubine?"

"What? Do you not understand? I want to borrow your wife to have a son, and I will return her to you once she's given birth."

"You son of a bitch!" Lu Xiucan roared and punched the man.

The two of them proceeded to fight each other.

However, Lu Xiucan wasn't as tall and as big as the man. He was hungry as well, so he was easily overpowered.

Tao'er ran over to stop them, but the man slapped her away.

Lu Xiucan saw red upon seeing his wife getting slapped in the face.

"You son of a bitch! I'm going to kill you!" Lu Xiucan roared and whipped a small dagger.

The man stopped abruptly upon seeing the dagger, and he sobered up when he saw the hostility in Lu Xiucan's gaze.

Eventually, he scoffed and turned around to leave.

The crisis had been averted, so Lu Xiucan automatically relaxed. He grimaced upon getting struck by extreme pain that radiated all over him. Then, he rolled his tongue in his mouth and spat—two molars covered in blood rolled on the ground.

"Damn it! Why am I so unlucky?"

Chapter 421 - Stepmother

The next morning, Lu Xiucan woke up feeling sore. He had no money to stay in an inn, so he hugged Tao'er and slept underneath the eaves of a house. The two slept hungry and cold.

Lu Xiucan regretted spending all the money he had been earning rather than saving a portion of his earnings. If he had some savings, he wouldn't have to suffer like this today.

To make matters worse, he had nowhere else to go, as he couldn't go to Cowheart Village.

"Husband, why don't you just rent me out as a concubine?"

"No!" Lu Xiucan firmly refused. "Where would my dignity go if I allow other men to impregnate you?"

Tao'er was sad as well as she said, "I don't want to become someone else's concubine, too, but we'd starve to death without money. My dad sold me off as well for food, as he didn't have any money."

Lu Xiucan gnashed his teeth and punched the ground out of frustration. He had just realized that Tao'er's visage was becoming yellow from hunger. If I were as strong as Li Huowang, I wouldn't have ended up like this!

In the end, Lu Xiucan bottled up his frustrations and stood up, pulling Tao'er toward the inn where Bai Lingmiao was staying.

Bai Lingmiao and Chun Xiaoman were preparing to leave when Lu Xiucan appeared in front of them.

Lu Xiucan was unwilling to submit to a woman, but he was even more unwilling to allow his wife to become someone else's concubine in exchange for money. Lu Xiucan gnashed his teeth and stuttered, "I-I'm sorry, Miss Bai. I-I made a mistake. Please let me go back to Cowheart Village."

“Is that how people are supposed to beg others for their help? How do you address Li Huowang? And how do you think you should address me?” Bai Lingmiao asked.

“I call Li Huowang 'Master,' so I should call you... Mistress!”

“That's right. Aside from your father, no one else has any obligation to treat you nicely in this world. If you need someone to help you, you need to be able to help them as well.”

Lu Xiucan nodded profusely. “Yes, I understand!”

“Sure. You can follow us, then. Anyway, where did you get your wife?” Bai Lingmiao asked, peering over Lu Xiucan's shoulder.

“I bought her. Look, they're selling some over there, too.” Lu Xiucan pointed out.

Bai Lingmiao followed Lu Xiucan's gaze and saw several skinny children standing on the streets. They had on collars made out of straws, and the adult standing before them was busy talking to what looked like a customer.

Chun Xiaoman frowned at the appalling sight.

Bai Lingmiao patted Chun Xiaoman's hand and asked, “How much silver for a person?”

“Depends. I bought Tao'er for five taels of silver.”

Bai Lingmiao squinted. Cowheart Village needs manpower. We don't have enough people, and we definitely don't have enough talented people capable of cultivating the techniques that my family had left behind for me.

We need more people to become even stronger, so I'll recruit people, just like how my grandfather recruited people in his generation.

Recruiting outsiders was risky, as those outsiders could leak their secrets. However, those who had been sold by their families to become slaves had nowhere else to go, which meant it'd be easier to control them.

Bai Lingmiao had no idea what her family was doing when she was young, but she could still remember how she had never gone hungry. She had meat to eat every day, and she even frequently wore a golden anklet.

The Bai Family also managed to force Li Huowang to burn all his skin. In other words, the Bai Family was a pretty formidable family.

Bai Lingmiao walked over and started haggling with the seller. The seller grinned upon hearing that Bai Lingmiao was going to buy everyone, regardless of gender and looks.

“Are they my slaves now?” Bai Lingmiao asked the seller weighing silvers on a scale.

“Ai~! What are you talking about? We're not like the barbarians in Qing Qiu. The emperor has decreed that we cannot sell slaves within the Liang Kingdom!” the seller retorted with a chuckle.

“They're not your slaves. They're your stepchildren! Everyone, bow down to your stepmother!” the seller exclaimed.

The children had gone numb and obedient from hunger and exhaustion, so they knelt on the ground and greeted Bai Lingmiao as their stepmother.

“Hehe. Miss, take these. These documents prove that you've bought them. They're yours now,” the seller said, chuckling in delight. He failed to notice the cold glint in Bai Lingmiao's eyes.

Dum-dum-da-da-dum~

Bai Lingmiao chanted under her breath as the Second Deity slowly slipped into a dark alleyway while beating a drum.

“I know you hate people like him, so don't worry. He won't live to see tomorrow,” Bai Lingmiao said, patting Chun Xiaoman's hand.

“Thank you,” Chun Xiaoman said, putting away the bell into her sleeve.

“No need to thank me,” replied Bai Lingmiao. Then, she turned around and swept her gaze across the hungry children. They weren't exactly good-looking, and they were of bad health as well, with crooked teeth and swollen wounds here and there.

The stronger ones among them had already been sold. These children were the remaining weaker ones among the seller's recent batch of slaves. Thankfully, Bai Lingmiao didn't really care about their looks; she just needed people.

"Everyone, don't be scared. I've decided to buy you because my village has many plots of land, and I need more farmers to work for me. You just have to give me forty percent of the harvest; you can keep the sixty percent."

The children's eyes lit up. They were mere stepchildren, so they weren't supposed to be qualified to obtain even a tenth of a harvest, much less sixty percent. It seemed that they were lucky enough to stumble upon a kind stepmother.

"Let's go. Cowheart Mountain is far, so we still have a long journey ahead of us," Bai Lingmiao said, hopping onto the carriage directly. The children followed closely behind her.

One of the girls with a mole at the corner of her lips could no longer endure her hunger and said, "S-stepmother, can you provide us with some food before we continue? We only had a sip of porridge yesterday. We just need a bit of food—a small handful of rice will do."

The seller was truly unscrupulous and had provided them only with the minimum amount of food to save money.

"What do you mean 'a small handful of rice'? If you're going to eat, anyway, you'd best eat until you're full!" Bai Lingmiao replied, tossing a big bag of dry rations.

Chun Xiaoman smiled. Miaomiao had become fierce and hot-tempered, but she was still as kind as ever.

The children couldn't contain their excitement upon seeing the guokui and the meat inside the bag. They wasted no time and started eating with relish.

"Hey, move! Let me eat first!" Lu Xiucan exclaimed, squeezing in among the children and stuffing four guokuis into Tao'er's arms before grabbing a handful of meat jerky for himself.

While chewing his food, Lu Xiucan turned to Bai Lingmiao inside the carriage and said, "Mistress, these children are quite the unruly bunch. How about you let me teach them manners along the way?"

Lu Xiucan had long gotten used to calling Bai Lingmiao "Mistress" after calling her that a few times earlier in the day.

Lu Xiucan had truly learned a valuable lesson from Bai Lingmiao. Without enough strength, there wasn't anything he could do. Lu Xiucan had learned to act weak whenever necessary to profit. It wasn't like he'd die if he pretended like he was weak.

"No, you're useless. You can't even hide your dissatisfaction toward me."

Lu Xiucan panicked and hurriedly said, "Mistress! How could I be dissatisfied with you? You're my master's wife as well, so there's no way I'd do anything untoward to you."

"Makes sense. Li Huowang will make you wish for death if you dare to do anything to me."

Lu Xiucan felt a shiver down his spine at Bai Lingmiao's remark, and the bloody scenes that popped up in his mind made it impossible for him to swallow the jerky in his mouth.

Bai Lingmiao leaned against the carriage window and looked down. "Are you content with staying useless forever? If not, then I have some techniques for you to learn. Do you want to give them a try?"

Lu Xiucan looked up at Bai Lingmiao and recalled the fateful night when that blind killed those men as if taking candy from a baby. Lu Xiucan soon found himself nodding profusely. Hmph! How dare she look down on me. She even called me "useless" not knowing that the reason I'm so weak is that I'm just unlucky. If given a chance, however, I can definitely become stronger than Li Huowang!

Chapter 422 - Conjoined Lotus

Bai Lingmiao's carriage arrived at the entrance of Cowheart Village. The villagers came out to greet her upon seeing her return. However, Bai Lingmiao's stepchildren soon attracted their attention.

"Well, this isn't that bad as well," Puppy said, supporting his pregnant wife. "We have too much land here, and we won't be able to work on them all, even if we had cows. At least, we now have farmers to handle the land."

"Hey, isn't that Lu Xiucan? Why is he—" Puppy was interrupted by someone shoving him aside. When he recovered his balance, he saw Lu Juren rolling up his sleeves and rushing at Lu Xiucan with fury in his face.

Lu Zhuangyuan rushed forward as well and slapped Lu Xiucan in the face twice.

The sight invigorated Puppy, and he exclaimed, "This is going to be entertaining!"

Lu Xiucan was soon tied to a tree at the entrance of the village.

Lu Zhuangyuan smacked Lu Xiucan with his smoke pipe, and the father and son proceeded to exchange insults.

"How dare you steal my money and run away?! Our old Lu Family has been upright for generations, but a scoundrel like you actually appeared in this generation! I can't accept that—I can't! I'm going to beat you to death, you little bastard!"

"If I'm the little bastard, then you're the big bastard! If you dare to fight me, then release me! Release me, and I'll kill you!"

"Who are you calling a big bastard?! Say that again! Who are you calling a big bastard?!" Lu Zhuangyuan roared, swinging the smoke pipe at Lu Xiucui's mouth.

Bai Lingmiao cast a placid gaze at the father-and-son argument. She leaned out of the carriage, looked around, and turned to the tall Gao Zhijian, asking, "Zhijian, can you bring some paper and pens? We need to sign up some laborers for the village."

Gao Zhijian looked away from Chun Xiaoman and turned to the children behind the carriage.

"All right."

Soon, the desolate Bai Family's ancestral hall became lively. People were queueing up, stamping their contracts with their handprints. None of them could read, but the contracts remained fair.

"Miaomiao, what's going on?" Chun Xiaoman asked, looking at Gao Zhijian busy writing on the pieces of paper.

"We're making them sign contracts. Grandfather often hired workers, and he always made them sign contracts. These people are just the beginning; more and more people will come here later. With that in mind, we might as well make it systematic from the start," Bai Lingmiao replied, recalling how her grandfather once managed the village.

"You still want to recruit more people?"

"Of course, Cowheart Village is quite large. We need to fill it up at the very least," replied Bai Lingmiao. More people were necessary to revitalize Cowheart Village, especially when they still needed to weed out those who were dumber than average.

Once the stepchildren had signed their individual contracts, Bai Lingmiao stood up and walked up to them, saying, "You're calling me 'stepmother,' so we can be considered family. The trip here was exhausting, so tonight, we'll slaughter a pig and have a good meal."

The children's anxiety upon arriving at a foreign place vanished instantly at the mention of meat. They started drooling; some of them had never tasted meat in their lives and had only heard that pork meat was delicious.

Yang Xiaohai worked hard for the sake of delivering a delicious dinner to everyone. A large black swine weighing over fifty kilos was slaughtered and transformed into a variety of dishes. Amazingly, no part of the pig was wasted.

Afterward, the children were assigned to the empty houses in the village, bringing life back to the quiet village.

The night deepened, and the village became quiet once more. Inside the ancestral hall of the Bai Family, Bai Lingmiao was holding a lantern, stroking the Bai Lian Sect's martial arts manuals with her fingers as her eyes sparkled with desire.

"What do you think? Can these help us resolve the issues we've been encountering from the Immortal families?" Bai Lingmiao asked the Second Deity standing quietly behind her.

The Second Deity recalled a familiar face. "Senior Brother Li said that we could seek out an evil being to use as leverage against the Immortal families."

"He did say that, but he said it so casually. How are we supposed to do that?"

Four lines of tears appeared on the Second Deity's red veil as an intense feeling of longing surged in her heart. "I miss him."

Bai Lingmiao snarled and chided, "How come you're always thinking about him?! Are you going to die without him? Why are you crying? This is exactly like when you tried to kill yourself back then. You're really pissing me off!"

The Second Deity sobbed and took out a jade pendant. The jade pendant was a gift from Li Huowang; they were planning on selling it, but she decided to keep it.

Bai Lingmiao said, "Have you not noticed that we can no longer intervene in his affairs? If you want to avenge our parents and settle the score, you can go ahead and be a burden to him—become an obstacle to him during his missions."

The Second Deity didn't reply, and Bai Lingmiao could feel her leaving. Soon, a faint sobbing echoed from the darkest corner of the ancestral hall.

Bai Lingmiao rolled her eyes and continued looking around the dark room. After looking around for a while, Bai Lingmiao ultimately fell to the temptation and casually picked up a book to read. Unfortunately, the characters were still a bit too complicated for her to read, and she struggled quite a bit.

As Bai Lingmiao frowned and pondered over the words on the manual, a faint glow from the side caught her attention. Bai Lingmiao turned and saw that the glow was coming from the giant lotus made from white jade on one of the cabinets.

However, the faint glow had become intermittent for some reason. She approached for a closer look, but she had no idea what was going on. Of course, she also had no idea why there was a giant lotus on one of the cabinets.

However, the fact that it was here meant that it was valuable.

Bai Lingmiao thought that it might be related to the so-called Heavenly Mater. From what she had learned, the supernatural powers of the Bai Lian Sect had been bestowed upon them by the Heavenly Mater.

Why is the light flashing? Is something wrong?

A hand landed on Bai Lingmiao's shoulder just then, startling her. She turned around and saw the Second Deity staring at a mural on the wall.

Bai Lingmiao looked up, and her eyes widened slightly. The lotus flower that was being carried by six white donkeys on the mural overlapped with the lotus' petals, and the petals had become so thick that the lotus looked more like a hollow onion rather than a lotus.

Just then, a strange chanting came from their left and inundated them.

"Great Thousand Nectar Realm, Qinghua Chang Le Gate, Eastern Extreme Wonderful Strict Palace. Within the ten million circles, on the nine-colored lotus seat, a hundred billion auspicious lights surround the Jade Pure Spirit Treasure, helping in the great calamity. Seven treasured horses in the forest responding to the origin of Xuan Yuan."

The chanting was a cacophonous din of a variety of voices including men, women, elderly, and youngsters. The voices overlapped incessantly, creating a jarring melody.

Bai Lingmiao trembled all over upon hearing the chanting, and the killing intent in her heart was on the verge of getting dispelled.

No, it's not just my killing intent... it's affecting my Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings! A variety of emotions suffused Bai Lingmiao's face as she struggled against the chanting.

Bai Lingmiao instinctively reached out to the lotus made from white jade, and she felt a bit better when the flickering light enveloped her.

Fortunately, the chanting soon disappeared. Bai Lingmiao looked back at the mural in shock and found that the lotus flower that was being carried by six white donkeys had become a conjoined lotus.

Chapter 423 - Returning To Shangjing

Li Sui popped out of Li Huowang's navel and looked around with his eyes. He was certain that he had heard voices just now, but no one was around.

“Dad, how come I can hear voices when there's no one around? Who is chanting?” Li Sui asked, but his question remained unanswered. He couldn't help but worry as he asked, “Dad, are you mad at me?”

Li Sui felt that he hadn't made any mistakes. After all, he couldn't have known that he'd have two fathers—a headless father and a father with a head. Upon hearing not even a single command from his headless father, Li Sui entered the navel of his father with a head.

Li Huowang had no time to pay any attention to Li Sui. He stared in the direction of the capital, as he could hear the strange chanting as well. At first, he thought it was just his hallucination, but he saw some civilians rolling on the floor in pain while holding their heads.

Li Huowang realized instantly that he wasn't hallucinating. The chanting was real, and he could hear it, even though it was coming from the distant capital. Li Huowang reckoned that a large-scale incident was happening.

Something major must be happening; I can't wait any longer. I must hurry back. Has the Surveillance Bureau surrounded the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Li Huowang moved as fast as possible, but he failed to reach the capital even after nightfall. It was inevitable, as he left empty-handed but was coming back with a heavy corpse.

His corpse had no head, but he hadn't forgotten that he was a Strayed One.

Li Huowang reckoned that his corpse would definitely be useful, so he drained the blood out of the corpse and filled it with coarse salt inside before covering it with the same salt on the outside.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and wiped away the sweat on his face as he stared at the night sky. Li Huowang eventually put the corpse down and decided to gather firewood to call it a night.

It hadn't been that long since the New Year's celebration, so the weather was still quite chilly. He had to sleep with a campfire, or he would end up getting sick, While Li Huowang was cutting branches with the purple-tassel sword, snowflakes fell slowly from the sky. It was snowing, and it was Li Huowang's first snowfall in this world.

Li Huowang exhaled while staring at the moon hanging in the sky. Sensing that tonight would be an unusually cold night, Li Huowang decided to pick up the pace and gather more firewood.

Soon, sparks flew out when he used his flint, but the sparks failed to ignite the wood.

Li Huowang tried for a while, but he stopped upon recalling something. He rummaged through his pockets and took out an old almanac. Li Huowang used the flint a few times before the old almanac caught fire. Li Huowang then threw the old almanac into the pile of firewood, and that was it—the campfire was done.

Li Huowang immediately felt comfortable the moment the heat from the flames illuminated him. Li Huowang moved closer to the fire and closed his eyes while leaning on the back of his headless corpse.

"Hey Daoist, I have something I want to ask you," the old monk's illusion asked.

"I'm tired. I have many things to do in the capital tomorrow.

Let's talk another day," Li Huowang replied.

"No, it's about that guy named Hong Zhong. Do you remember him? He told me that you can turn lies into truth. Is that true?" the old monk rubbed his hands in anticipation before asking, "What if... you can turn a few of us into real people?"

"What?" Li Huowang asked, sounding astonished. His drowsiness was no more as he sat up abruptly and swept his gaze across the illusions—Peng Longteng, Hong Zhong, Jinshan, and the old monk.

Li Huowang's eyes sharpened, focusing on Hong Zhong's skinless face. "Are you using the old monk to probe me? What do you want?"

"Hehe, nothing special. I'm just curious. Think about it, isn't it fun if you can turn me back into a real person, even though you've already killed me?" Hong Zhong asked, sounding excited.

"In your dreams—you can do everything in your dreams."

"How ruthless. We've endured so many hardships that we can already be considered family, you know? We should be able to help you if we have real bodies. Don't worry; I'm not going to harm you if you ever allow me to obtain a real body.

"I find you particularly interesting, actually. It was amazing how you disguised yourself as Hong Zhong. You instigated both parties so flawlessly—you were like a true Sitting Oblivion Dao member!" Hong Zhong exclaimed.

Li Huowang ignored Hong Zong and closed his eyes to sleep. Li Huowang felt both warm and cold. He had no idea when he fell asleep, but Li Huowang found himself buried in snow the next morning.

Li Huowang took a deep breath of the dry air and grabbed a handful of white snow to chew. Then, he dragged his stiff corpse and walked toward the capital, one step at a time.

The capital had many informants, and he'd instantly catch a ton of attention if he were to drag a corpse all the way into the capital. Moreover, he had no idea how to explain that to the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang decided to dig a hole and bury his headless corpse on a hill. Fortunately, it was cold, and his corpse had been salted as well, so it wouldn't decay that quickly.

Li Huowang stared at the desolate city gate and took a deep breath before walking toward it. At first, Li Huowang thought that the peculiar chanting would cause chaos in the capital, but the capital was still business as usual.

The only strange thing was that the streets weren't as bustling as usual, but Li Huowang chalked it up to the heavy snow.

Li Huowang's assumption was correct. The capital was indeed sprawling with the Surveillance Bureau's informants. He had only taken a few steps into the capital, but the Surveillance Bureau had already surrounded him.

Li Huowang's expression was extremely solemn as he stared at Nangong. "Senior Nangong, the Sitting Oblivion Dao has deceived me."

Nangong looked at Li Huowang with a complicated expression and sighed. "Follow me. I'm sure you can't even imagine what the Sitting Oblivion Dao did with your identity."

Li Huowang returned to the Surveillance Bureau under Nangong's lead. They walked through the wooden corridors and soon arrived at a room. For some reason, the air in the room was dense and heavy.

However, Li Huowang soon found the answer to his question.

A head twisted into the appearance of Hong Zhong was on a table with three incense sticks in front of it. A Daoist clad in a yellow Daoist robe and wearing a hat with the Yin and Yang symbol embroidered on it was standing next to the head.

The yellow-robed Daoist brandished a bronze coin sword in a ritual.

"Lord Jian Zheng, Er Jiu has returned."

The yellow-robed Daoist looked up.

Li Huowang saw two Nascent Souls on the left side of the yellow-robed Daois's neck.

This Jian Zheng has two Nascent Souls. He must be a disciple of Luoism. Li Huowang instantly became wary.

Meanwhile, Daoist Jian Zheng stopped his ritual and examined Li Huowang from top to bottom. Then, he grabbed Hong Zhong's head and hurled it at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang examined the rectangular head and exclaimed, "What?! The Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao is a Strayed One?!" [1]

1. MC is an amazing actor lmao 🤔

Chapter 424 - Task

Li Huowang held Hong Zhong's head while listening to Nangong's explanation.

"What's this Hong Zhong's origin? He managed to escape without his head?!" Li Huowang exclaimed in amazement.

Just then, Li Huowang paused slightly as if he had recalled something. "Lord Jian Zheng, I once saw a general in the Hou Shu with a similar ability to survive a beheading. Perhaps this Hong Zhong had learned it from there."

Jian Zheng gestured, and the head in Li Huowang's arms flew back to him.

Jian Zheng held it carefully and opened his mouth, revealing a set of uneven rotten teeth, which diffused a foul smell to the surroundings.

"He doesn't have to deceive away a technique from the military. A Strayed One running without his head isn't surprising at all. Strangely, his soul is not responding to me, even though he's already dead. Strange, is he still alive?"

Is that one of a Strayed One's abilities? I'll never die so long as I believe that I'm still alive? Li Huowang thought. However, he felt that such an ability was a bit useless. He'd instantly die upon getting reminded that he was dead, after all.

While Li Huowang was pondering over the burning questions in his mind, Daoist Jian Zheng waved his hand and said, "Forget it, he's already dead. Let's not bother whether he's a Strayed One or not. As for you, I want you to explain in detail just how Hong Zhong managed to deceive you."

Li Huowang immediately snapped back to reality at the remark, and he recounted the events with extreme focus, knowing that he needed to get the story right.

Fortunately, Li Huowang's story didn't need many lies. He simply changed a few details while explaining the method that a Sitting Oblivion Dao member had used on him while he was on Xing Island.

The only difference was that the Sitting Oblivion Dao member had succeeded rather than the opposite.

"So... the one who followed Zhuge Yuan was actually Hong Zhong?"

"Yes, that's correct. I got lost in the bamboo forest, and I couldn't figure out what Hong Zhong had told Zhuge Yuan, which allowed him to stay by his side," Li Huowang said, deliberately making the story longer with some half-truths.

Li Huowang realized just then that being a Sitting Oblivion Dao member was pretty useful.

Daoist Jian Zheng nodded slowly at the story. Meanwhile, the tiny head jutting out on his neck said, "Hehe, are you sure you're not trying to deceive us? What if you're also a Sitting Oblivion Dao member?"

Li Huowang's expression froze. Moments later, he pulled out a knife and cut open his jaw without any hesitation. Li Huowang revealed half of his face and displayed the layers of his skin, flesh, and bones underneath.

"All right, all right. We believe that you're not a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Ah, disciples of the Ao Jing Sect are truly decisive," said the other Nascent Soul to defuse the tension.

"Enough, all of you be quiet!" Daoist Jian Zheng said sternly. The two Nascent Souls jutting out of his neck shrank into his body and became what looked like two red moles.

Daoist Jian Zheng approached Li Huowang with Hong Zhong's head in his hand.

Daoist Jian Zheng slowly walked around Li Huowang, and his voice softened slightly as he said, "Rest assured, Hong Zhong's head is here. The Surveillance Bureau isn't going to suspect that you're a Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

"However, since you've returned in one piece, I'll have to give you a task."

"Understood, Lord Jian Zheng! Please tell me what to do, and I will do my best!"

Daoist Jian Zheng placed the head on the table and said, "The Surveillance Bureau wants you to get close to Zhuge Yuan. We probed and found that Zhuge Yuan still has the Six Divinations Almanac.

"Fortunately, Hong Zhong ended up taking away a fake almanac. If the Sitting Oblivion Dao had obtained that item, it would have caused significant unrest."

"Understood, Lord Jian Zheng," Li Huowang said, "However, Hong Zhong stole Zhuge Yuan's almanac using my identity, so we could be considered enemies right now. At this point, I think I'll die if I approach him."

Li Huowang made it a point to tell them that he wasn't familiar with Zhuge Yuan at all.

After all, his story was that he didn't become friends with Zhuge Yuan.

"Hong Zhong has succeeded in using your identity, so you should be able to do the same."

"But..." Li Huowang trailed off. The turn of events was beyond his expectations. He thought the Surveillance Bureau would go and kill the Sitting Oblivion Dao members, so how come they wanted him to get close to Zhuge Yuan once again?

Li Huowang had to redirect the Surveillance Bureau's attention to the Sitting Oblivion Dao so that he could use them to find the right Bei Feng.

"Are you saying you don't want to go?" asked Daoist Jian Zheng in a cold tone of voice. The eyes of his two Nascent Souls opened slightly just then, emitting a dim black light.

"No, I dare not." Li Huowang lowered his head. Daoist Jian Zheng was just testing the waters, and he didn't care about Li Huowang's life at all.

"Go on, then. No matter what, it's better to try it out first before anything else. You're dismissed." Daoist Jian Zheng with rotten teeth sat on a stool and shooed Li Huowang away.

Li Huowang was stunned. Is that it? What about the aftermath of the Sitting Oblivion Dao member killing Jian Zheng? Why does it seem like Jian Zheng's death isn't that impactful?

However, Li Huowang knew that this wasn't the right time to ask questions, so he decisively left.

Walking down the silent wooden corridor, Li Huowang turned to Nangong next to him, and he sounded frustrated as he asked.

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao has killed Lord Jian Zheng. How come it feels like the Surveillance Bureau isn't going to do anything about it?"

A long silence ensued. Just as Li Huowang was considering whether to fan the flames a bit more or not, Nangong responded, "It's not that simple. The Surveillance Bureau has already drawn personnel from the Six Divisions of Great Liang.

"Once everyone is here, we're planning on catching all of them in one fell swoop."

Nangong Yun's expression became cold just then as he added, "Hmph! Those scammers are actually thinking that they can do just about anything while the Imperial Preceptor is too busy in the palace.

"They're truly underestimating the Surveillance Bureau!"

Li Huowang was relieved upon hearing Nangong Yun's. Fortunately, his efforts weren't in vain. The Sitting Oblivion Dao had finally caught the eyes of the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang needed this conflict to reap profits from the sidelines.

"Er Jiu, the Bureau wants you to approach Zhuge Yuan. I want you to think that it's not that troublesome of a task. After all, the Sitting Oblivion Dao had used your identity to kill Lord Jian Zheng," Nangong Yun warned.

"If we were to go by the rules of the Bureau, you'd be severely punished. However, we need manpower more than ever in the capital. Regardless of the result, the Bureau will let you go for now."

Li Huowang instantly understood what was going on, and it was all thanks to Nangong Yun's explanation.

"I see. Thank you for the explanation, Senior Nangong," Li Huowang said. Then, the two seemed to transition from strangers to acquaintances as they talked to each other in the winding, wooden corridors.

Chapter 425 - Friend

Under Nangong Yun's lead, Li Huowang soon arrived outside the Liang residence where Zhuge Yuan was located. Li Huowang's excellent vision allowed him to see Zhuge Yuan painting on the second floor. There was no sign of anyone from the Great Qi, and it seemed that they were either in the other rooms or outside.

"Senior Nangong, isn't Zhuge Yuan wanted by the Surveillance Bureau? Why was he still allowed to stay here? Why don't we just capture him and take his powerful artifact?" Li Huowang asked. It was one of his burning questions.

Nangong Yun furrowed his brows slightly and shook his head. "Now is not the time to provoke him. According to the imperial decree, the members of the Bureau at the first to fourth rank have to enter the palace.

"We're lacking in manpower, and dealing with Zhuge Yuan right now would be a huge headache to us. The Sitting Oblivion Dao might seize the opportunity to strike, too if we were to do that. We should deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao first.

"Fortunately, the Storyteller won't help those liars."

Having finished his explanation, Nangong Yun turned around to leave. "Er Jiu, good luck. You'll probably make it out alive so long as you don't provoke Zhuge Yuan. As long as you don't show any hostility toward him, he shouldn't treat you badly. You must remember not to show even a hint of killing intent."

"Thank you, Senior Nangong!" Li Huowang said. Then, he turned around and started walking toward the Liang residence in the distance with a grim look. Just as Li Huowang passed through the large doors, the doors slammed shut behind him.

Li Huowang took a deep breath. Then, he walked across the courtyard with heavy steps. Soon, Li Huowang reached the mansion. Upon entering the mansion, the doors and the windows were slammed shut by Zhuge Yuan with a wave of his brush.

The two men looked at each other and smiled.

"How was it?" Zhuge Yuan asked while painting. He was painting a beautiful landscape.

"Thank you, Senior Zhuge. The mission is done. It won't be long before they start fighting. I'm just afraid that the Sitting Oblivion Dao will hear the news and leave the capital early."

"Rest assured, Junior Li. They aren't afraid of death, let alone something like this. They've already assembled here, so they won't leave unless something extraordinary happens."

"True." Li Huowang picked up the tea on the side and took a sip. He didn't care what the Sitting Oblivion Dao would do next. The Surveillance Bureau was behind him, so he would be fine as long as he wasn't their target.

"Senior Zhuge, the two of us might not meet again tomorrow. There are too many eyes in the city, and the Surveillance Bureau will start suspecting us as well."

"It doesn't matter. I can handle the issues in Great Qi by myself. How about you? Can you handle the Strayed One Bei Feng by yourself?"

"Don't worry; I'm not going to be fighting by myself. The Surveillance Bureau's main force will fight the Sitting Oblivion Dao. I just need to take advantage of Bei Feng's injuries to ambush and capture him."

"All right. Give me your hand, and I'll help you conceal your identity. It will be easier for you to move around then."

"Hmm? How will you conceal my identity?" Li Huowang asked, but he still raised his hand.

Zhuce Yuan pointed at Li Huowang's palm with his brush, and Li Huowang's name appeared on his hand written in black ink.

With a few quick strokes of the brush, Zhuge Yuan added a horizontal stroke to "Li," turning it into "Ji," and swiftly modified "Huo" into "Zai." [1]

Finally, Zhuge Yuan wiped away the character "Wang," removing it.

However, the ink simply landed on a piece of paper rather than vanishing.

"Done. Just keep your face covered, and no one will recognize you as Li Huowang."

Li Huowang was amazed. He had never seen such a technique.

Li Huowang stared at the character "Ji Zai" in his hand and nodded gratefully. "I won't forget this favor, Senior Zhuge. Rest assured, once I find Bei Feng, I will definitely come back to help you!"

Zhuce Yuan looked up and stared at Li Huowang. "Junior Li, my issues are not important. If you encounter any issues here in the capital, you can just use your divination to find me. I'll instantly discover if you've cast your divination on me, and I'll eventually find you as long as you're still alive."

Li Huowang stood still and looked at Zhuge Yuan with a complicated expression.

Then, Li Huowang sat down on the cushion and confessed, "Senior Zhuge, to be fair I actually do have an issue, but you don't have to do anything about it. I just want you to listen as a friend, and then you can help me analyze it."

"Oh?" Zhuge Yuan muttered in surprise. This was the first time Li Huowang had spoken to him in such a tone of voice.

Li Huowang clenched and unclenched his fist before sighing. "Senior Zhuge, what do you think of the world in my hallucination? Do you think it's real or not?"

Li Huowang then wasted no time, telling everything to Zhuge Yuan—the hallucination, his confusion, and how he had materialized gold in the world in his hallucination.

Li Huowang wanted to know what others thought of his hallucination.

Would they think of it as real?

Of course, Li Huowang didn't really expect Zhuge Yuan to say anything about it.

He just wanted to vent to a friend. He couldn't tell anyone about it, as everyone would think that Li Huowang was a lunatic.

However, Zhuge Yuan would never think that way.

Once Li Huowang was done recounting, a deafening silence descended upon the room.

Zhuce Yuan remained quiet for a long time, seemingly in deep contemplation. In the end, he eventually stared at Li Huowang and asked, "Junior Li, do you know that I have a really close female friend in the Liang Kingdom?

"However, she was just a lowly concubine in the Qi Kingdom. I tried to change myself and force myself to think that the Great Qi was false and the Liang Kingdom was real," Zhuge Yuan said with a trembling voice as his gaze landed on a painting that depicted a beautiful lady.

"However, it didn't work. In the end, she still left me behind. The Qi Kingdom is real, and there's no way the fake one can be the real one."

"But what if? What if it's real as well?" Li Huowang asked, clenching his fists tightly.

"I want the fish, and I want the bear paw, too. However, I cannot have both," Zhuge Yuan said. Then, he lifted his brush once more and continued with his drawing.

"Junior Li, as the scholars of the past have said, we cannot get everything. It applies to everyone. As for me, it's with the Great Qi and the Great Liang. As for you, it's your reality and your hallucination. It applies to the Siming up there as well.

"One cannot obtain everything without sacrificing something."

Li Huowang stood up and clasped his hands together. "Thank you, Senior Zhuge. Your words have made me feel better. I really found it frustrating that I had no choice but to bottle up my feelings until now."

Li Huowang then walked down the stairs and said, "Once everything is over, I really hope that we'll still be friends, Senior Zhuge. I'd really like to drink tea and play Go at your bamboo house again."

Zhuge Yuan's voice echoed from the second floor. "Tea is fine, but forget about Go. I think even calling you a bad player is a compliment."

1. From 李 to 季, and from 火 to 灾. It means seasonal disaster lmao 🤔

Chapter 426 - Deputy Chief

Li Huowang soon found himself in the small courtyard of the house that Ji Xiang had decided to give to him. Having a house in Shangjing proved to be quite convenient, as he didn't have to stay in an inn. He could also allow Black Taisui to have fun in the courtyard, which was away from prying eyes.

Li Huowang stood by the window with his hands behind his back and furrowed brows. He was staring at the desolate snowy streets outside. There weren't many people on the streets, as the curfew in the capital was brought forward today.

Li Huowang remained silent by the window as if he was waiting for something.

Clip, clop, clop.

The sound of horse hooves echoed just then, and a group of large-framed men in fur coats rode their horses into the capital.

They were the third batch of people from the Surveillance Bureau that had arrived in the capital over the past few days. The badges at their waists made it clear that they were personnel from the Surveillance Bureau stationed throughout the Six Divisions of the Great Liang.

After receiving transfer orders, they all came to the capital. It was still dusk, but the overcast and snowy sky made it seem like it was already night. The desolate streets and the solemn atmosphere of the capital made it seem as though there was an approaching storm, which weighed heavily on Li Huowang's heart.

Just then, a black bird streaked across the air. It circled in the distance before gracefully landing on the windowsill in front of Li Huowang. Li Huowang instantly recognized the bird, and it belonged to Sima Lan from the Mo Family.

A folded piece of paper was in between the bird's beak. Li Huowang opened the piece of paper and was delighted by the text inside of it. "At last, it's about to begin!"

Bun heard Li Huowang descending the stairs in a hurry. It perked up and crawled out beneath the chair. Bun then rushed toward Li Huowang downstairs, but the latter pushed it away, saying, "Stay here and guard the house! Regardless of what you hear later, I want you to stay here without taking a peek outside!"

Li Huowang hopped onto his in the courtyard and rushed in the direction of the Surveillance Bureau. He passed through the gate guarded by two stone lions, and then he soon arrived at the grand hall filled with screens.

However, the screens had been taken down, and there were people standing where the screens were supposed to be. Li Huowang was unsure whether it was intentional or not, but the oil lamps on the walls hadn't been ignited, which made the hall extremely dark.

Li Huowang had exceptional night vision, but he could only make out a few blurry figures in the darkness. He had to get close to them to get a clear view of their faces.

Li Huowang squeezed through the crowd, and he felt like he was standing inside a classroom rather than a grand hall. However, the crowd was markedly different from students, and they were also emitting an ominous aura that made Li Huowang feel uneasy. The majority of them were squatting on the floor as well.

The low and muffled whispers from the crowd coupled with the oppressive atmosphere in the grand hall made everyone present feel a little breathless.

Li Huowang wasn't familiar with the people of Shangjing's Surveillance Bureau. He looked around and saw Sima Lan. He walked over to Sima Lan and saw that the black bird that had delivered a message to him was perched on Sima Lan's shoulder.

The black bird was the reason Li Huowang had no issues spotting Sima Lan amidst the crowd.

"So you're finally here." The black bird turned around and nodded at Li Huowang.

"Brother Sima, are these people from the Six Divisions?" Li Huowang asked, sweeping his gaze across the crowd.

"Yes, but I heard that they borrowed some talents from the Qing Qiu Surveillance Bureau as well. Hehe, it seems that the Surveillance Bureau is truly going all out."

Qing Qiu? Li Huowang suddenly recalled the old Lama with a flock of black sheep. Li Huowang looked around and spotted a person in a Lama headdress in the distance, but he wasn't sure whether they were the same in Li Huowang's memories or not.

"Everyone is here, so what are we waiting for?" Li Huowang asked.

"We're waiting for the Deputy Chief of the Surveillance Bureau. He's in charge of all this."

"Oh? Are they the highest official in the Surveillance Bureau? My apologies. I've been outside for a long time, so I'm not quite clear on these matters."

"No problem. I was like you when I first arrived in the capital. It took me quite a while to figure it out. Anyway, there are five Deputy Chiefs, and none of them is the highest official. The highest official is the Chief[1]."

"The Chief..." Li Huowang muttered, memorizing the word. Afterward, Li Huowang asked, "Since we're going to deal with the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao, will the Chief and the other four Deputy Chiefs come here?"

"In theory, they should come here. However, they're all in the palace; I'm sure they're dealing with an urgent matter there."

Gong!

A gong echoed loudly just then, attracting everyone's attention. Everyone turned around and saw a majestic-looking chair being illuminated by a moonlight-like beam of light from somewhere.

An elderly man with a bed of white hair was seated in the chair. The wide sleeves of his robe slid down elegantly right beside his feet. His earlobes were also quite large, resembling earrings as they hung above his shoulders.

The elderly man was just sitting silently in his chair, but the commanding aura he exuded silenced the majority of the people in the grand hall.

Li Huowang's eyes narrowed into slits, and he managed to make out the row of people standing behind the majestic-looking chair. Unfortunately, it was too dark; he couldn't see their appearances.

"I believe there is no need for me to explain as to why the Surveillance Bureau has summoned everyone here," the Deputy Chief said. A terrifying aura seeped out of him, making everyone feel as if they were carrying an entire mountain on their shoulders.

The remaining murmurs vanished at once, and silence descended upon the grand hall.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

Dull thuds echoed just then as some people in the crowd collapsed to the ground.

At first, Li Huowang thought that they fainted out of fear, but he was quickly proven incorrect when someone approached those who had fainted and lifted their skin with an iron hook. The mahjong patterns on the faces of those who had fainted confirmed their identities as members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The people here had gathered to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao, but it turned out that five members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had already infiltrated them. However, it didn't come as a surprise to everyone, as they knew that the Sitting Oblivion Dao would definitely attempt to infiltrate the ranks of the Surveillance Bureau.

The Deputy Chief swept a nonchalant gaze across the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

“It is not that difficult to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao members. The challenge lies in these swindlers hiding among the common people. However, it doesn’t matter. After all, Shangjing is our capital, not their capital.

“They think they're seamless, but they're simply lying to themselves. They even dared to openly assassinate an official of the Bureau! Hmph! Do they really think that we do not have the resources to deal with them?”

Chapter 427 - Rather Kill A Thousand By Mistake

The Deputy Chief waved his hand, and the people standing in a row behind him stepped forward, distributing a few pieces of paper to everyone.

Li Huowang skimmed through the pieces of paper and saw that it contained quite a few addresses.

“We suspect that the Sitting Oblivion Dao members are living at those addresses. I want you to bring them here, dead or alive. Verify their identity and you will receive fifty lifespan pills for each ordinary member, and you will be promoted by half a rank, too.

“Any of the three Officials or Four Joys are worth three hundred lifespan pills, and you will be promoted by three ranks! Those with the most kills will be rewarded personally by the Chief, and they'll receive three sexagenary-cycle pure lifespan pills[1]!”

The grand hall was instantly abuzz with discussions. It couldn't be helped. After all, the Surveillance Bureau had never offered such generous rewards before.

Three sexagenary cycles meant one hundred and eighty years! Who wouldn't want to live for an extra one hundred and eighty years? Moreover, the lifespan pills of the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau wouldn't transform them into Human Xiaos!

There were some who had been planning on hiding their strength, but they threw all caution to the wind upon hearing of the rewards. In fact, they could barely wait to start hunting down the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

“Go, I wish you all swift success and promotion! Remember, the Sitting Oblivion Dao is evil, and they deserve to be eradicated.

Your efforts in rounding up the Sitting Oblivion Dao is a heroic act for the sake of the people and the world! We'd rather kill a thousand by mistake than let one of them escape!"

Boom!

A thunderous boom echoed as the four city gates of Shangjing were slammed shut. The war drums were sounded, and soldiers clad in heavy armor ascended the city walls.

They stood ramrod straight atop the city walls, giving off a murderous aura.

Shangjing's walls were already formidable, but they became even more formidable and terrifying as the soldiers in heavy armor towered over everyone inside the city, preventing them from leaving Shangjing.

The giant crossbows and weapons atop the city walls turned slowly and faced the city rather than outside.

Snow fell incessantly from the heavens, blanketing the capital in a thin layer of snow.

A group of black dots that resembled ants spread gradually from the Surveillance Bureau. Li Huowang was one of those black dots, and he was frowning while riding his horse. He constantly swung the reins, guiding the horse to move toward the eastern part of the city. Five members of the Surveillance Bureau were behind him, and they were pieces of paper containing the same information as Li Huowang's papers.

A cacophony of shrill screams and cries echoed from the nearby houses. Li Huowang turned and saw a wooden door covered in talismans getting kicked open from the outside.

Soon, a frail-looking woman with a baby in her arms stumbled outside the house. A whistling noise pierced Li Huowang's ears, and he watched as a saber flew out of the house, rushing toward the woman.

Just then, the baby in the woman's arms smirked. A grotesque cracking noise echoed as the baby's bones contracted, and he slipped out of his swaddle. Then, he lifted his tiny feet and kicked his own mother toward the oncoming saber while somersaulting away from the woman's arms.

The saber pierced the woman's heart, and her warm blood melted the white snow, revealing the dark tiles underneath.

Moments later, a woman with two scars on her face rushed out of the house and pulled out the saber forcefully from the woman's chest. Then, she chased after the fleeing baby while shouting, "Damn it, Sitting Oblivion Dao! Face me if you have the guts!"

No one paid any attention to the woman's corpse on the snowy ground except for Li Huowang. Many people are going to die tonight.

Li Huowang's cheeks swelled as he gnashed his teeth. Bloody scenes unfolded throughout Shangjing Li as the Surveillance Bureau and the Sitting Oblivion Dao went all out, fighting each other with their lives on the line.

Shangjing soon became chaotic. There were people fighting one-on-one, and there were also those fighting the Sitting Oblivion Dao with the other members of the Surveillance Bureau.

The entire capital seemed to be on fire and was boiling from the inside out.

Li Huowang quietly observed the changes, and he unknowingly found himself at his destination. Wasting no time, Li Huowang jumped down his horse and crashed against the paper window of the house.

Li Huowang looked around and saw a family of three huddled together in fear. He raised his purple-tassel sword, but he couldn't bring himself to strike them down.

Swoosh!

A cold light shot into the house through the broken window.

Clang!

Sparks flew as Li Huowang smacked the object away with his sword.

"This is mine! Get the hell out of here!" Li Huowang shouted with bloodshot eyes. Then, he turned around and looked at the wife of the family. He put away his sword and took out a dagger from his bag of torture tools.

"Don't worry; I'm not going to kill you. However, I need to see what's beneath your face to make sure that you're not a Sitting Oblivion Dao member. I'm going to heal you afterward, so don't worry."

A heart-wrenching scream echoed. Afterward, Li Huowang put down a piece of silver on the table and stepped out of the house. There was both good news and bad news—the good news was that the woman wasn't a Sitting Oblivion Dao member, while the bad news was that the woman wasn't a Sitting Oblivion Dao member!

Wooden planks creaked as Li Huowang somersaulted onto a snow-covered roof. He soon found himself at the highest point of the roof, and he looked around, sweeping his gaze across the chaotic Shangjing.

If hell had eighteen levels, then the current Shangjing would be at the bottom of it. The members of the Surveillance Bureau and the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao darting across the rooftops spared not even a glance at the commoners.

Why would they spare a glance to mere commoners when the latter were uninvolved in the fight? The commoners' actions wouldn't matter at this point, as whatever they would do or not do were predetermined.

Perhaps they were obstructing the way of both the Surveillance Bureau and Sitting Oblivion Dao members, but many civilians were losing their lives at the moment.

Li Huowang was supposed to look for the Strayed One Bei Feng, but his mind was abuzz from the heart-wrenching screams and scenes all over him, and he couldn't quite silence his mind.

Boom!

A towering building abruptly erupted into flames. It resembled a massive torch and had replaced the missing moon in the sky, illuminating everything around it.

“What is human life to you?! What exactly is human life to you?! Though civilians, they're all living humans!” Li Huowang roared while pointing at the capital. He thought he had become quite ruthless and indifferent to life, but he still couldn't quite turn a blind eye to the massacre before him.

Li Huowang cursed for quite a while before going silent. A deep sense of powerlessness overwhelmed his heart. He couldn't even control himself, so how could he dare to even attempt to control the actions of others?

“Sob...!” A sobbing noise echoed next to Li Huowang. He turned around and saw that the voice had come from Jin Shanzhao, who was missing half of his body. He was pointing with an indignant look at the massacre, and bloody tears were streaming down his face. His mouth fluttered open as well, saying indecipherable words.

Another sobbing noise rang out just then. Li Huowang turned and saw the monk crying with his hands clasped together while chanting “Amitabha.”

“Hey! What are you doing, Boss Hong Zhong?! Time is of the essence! Forget about the rest; let's go find Boss Bei Feng!” Hong Zhong said.

Li Huowang cast a cold gaze upon Hong Zhong before casting his gaze on the headless Peng Longteng. Peng Longteng stood quietly like a statue while facing the city walls in the distance.

Li Huowang clenched his fists and punched himself twice to calm his tumultuous heart.

Swoosh!

Just then, three figures rushed toward Li Huowang. They were two women and a man, and their attire indicated that each of them was from different walks of life. Seven people were chasing after them, and their eyes gleamed upon seeing Li Huowang.

“Boss Hong Zhong, so you were here?! Hurry up and leave! We’ll cover you from behind!”

The three Sitting Oblivion Dao members came to a screeching halt. Then, they turned around to glare at the oncoming Surveillance Bureau members with resolute expressions.

Chapter 428 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Li Huowang snapped back to reality and stared dumbstruck at the three figures. The next moment, blood surged to his brain, and he roared, "This is all your fault, you bastards!"

Clang!

Li Huowang gripped his sword with one hand and kicked off of the roof tiles to rush toward the three Sitting Oblivion Dao members with their backs facing him.

A whistling noise echoed from behind them, and the Sitting Oblivion Dao member that Li Huowang had chosen to attack dodged to his left by dividing his body into two, narrowly avoiding the attack.

He looked at Li Huowang in astonishment with his head upside-down. "Boss Hong Zhong, stop fooling around, will you?! They're not going to believe you anymore. Hurry up and leave! We'll cover you!"

The illusion Hong Zhong approached Li Huowang as well, and he sounded serious as he said, "He's right. This isn't the time for fooling around. It's more important for you to retreat."

"Yeah, right!" Li Huowang slashed out. The sharp sword streaked across the bloodied face of the Sitting Oblivion Dao member, which had no visible skin on it. However, nothing strange happened.

Just then, the members of the Surveillance Bureau finally caught up. A purple-robed Daoist took out two fist-sized triangular banners and inserted them into his neck. Then, his mouth fluttered open as he chanted an incantation.

He also drew a massive Bagua array in the air with his fingers. A wave of transparent ripple would spread outward every time the purple-robed Daoist's fingers stroked the air.

The purple-robed Daoist slapped the array on the roof tiles and exclaimed, "Raise your heads and witness! Bow down and listen! Above are the upper trigrams; below are the lower trigrams! The Three Pure Ones have vested me with authority to execute orders!"

Immediately afterward, loud cracking noises erupted as the tiles and the beams of the house where everyone was standing broke apart. Moments later, everyone fell down the house and landed on the ground.

A huge inky black Five Elements Bagua appeared beneath everyone, trapping the three Sitting Oblivion Dao members and Li Huowang. The masked members of the Surveillance Bureau appeared and stood around the array, staring at them vigilantly.

A Sitting Oblivion Dao member gnashed his teeth. He stomped and rushed toward Li Huowang. "Boss Hong Zhong! Leave quickly!"

Swoosh!

Li Huowang lifted his sword and severed his hands. Under the dumbstruck gaze of the Sitting Oblivion Dao member, a black tentacle wrapped around Li Huowang's bronze coin sword and chopped off his head.

The remaining two members landed right next to Li Huowang before they could do anything else. The Five Elements Bagua array sprang into action, rising like a net and trapping them inside of it.

Li Huowang was furious upon realizing that the Surveillance Bureau had trapped him along with the Sitting Oblivion Dao members. He couldn't help but chide them inwardly for being so incompetent.

"What the hell are you doing?! I said I'm not a Sitting Oblivion Dao member!" Li Huowang roared. He used his left fingernail and tore open his entire face by the chin.

Unfortunately, the Surveillance Bureau didn't believe Li Huowang's action to establish his innocence. Instead, the disturbed Surveillance Bureau members attacked Li Huowang with renewed vigor.

The purple-robed Daoist reached behind him and pulled out a yellow banner from his neck. Then, he hurled the yellow banner at Li Huowang. The pole grew longer in the air, and it moved as agilely as a snake as it pierced the three Sitting Oblivion Dao Members, stringing them together as if it were a skewer

A Surveillance Bureau member gestured, and several dark green talismans flew over and landed on the foreheads of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members, immobilizing them completely.

The seven members of the Surveillance Bureau relaxed at the sight. The Sitting Oblivion Dao members had finally been suppressed.

A hunchbacked Surveillance Bureau member holding a banner was about to speak, but the meatballs that had been strung together abruptly stirred.

“How many times must I repeat myself?! I’m not from the Sitting Oblivion Dao!” Li Huowang roared.

Under their astonished gazes, black and sticky tentacles burrowed out from Li Huowang and lifted them up. A breeze lifted the talisman on Li Huowang’s forehead, revealing a bloodthirsty gaze underneath.

“Kill!” A surge of hot blood rushed from Li Huowang to Li Sui’s tentacles, and Li Sui’s tentacles swelled significantly in an instant. The meatball was raised up high, and it swept toward the Surveillance Bureau members.

The Surveillance Bureau members ran to retreat, but Li Sui shattered Li Huowang's ribs and thrust them into the latter's lungs.

The Surveillance Bureau members clutched their chests, revealing agonized looks along with Li Huowang. Just as they were recovering from the excruciating pain, Li Sui flew toward the temples of two Surveillance Bureau members.

The purple-robed Daoist died instantly, and the Bagua on the ground dimmed.

Li Huowang could move once again. Li Huowang ignored the two people who had been strung up with him. He tore off the talisman on his forehead and glared murderously at the Surveillance Bureau members. He silently endured the intense pain and rushed toward them.

“How many times do I have to repeat myself?! I’m not from the damned Sitting Oblivion Dao!”

They weren't Li Huowang's match even without the Bagua, so without the Bagua, Li Huowang made quick work of the Surveillance Bureau members. Of course, Li Sui had contributed massively to that as well along with the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

The hunchbacked Surveillance Bureau member staggered backward as the white banner in his hand split into a thousand pieces.

“A-All right! I believe you! You’re not from the Sitting Oblivion Dao!” the hunchbacked Surveillance Bureau member exclaimed.

There was a flash of white light, and a sword pierced the hunchback's mouth. The sword emerged from his nape and pinned him to the wall behind him.

Li Huowang stared at the desperate eyes of the hunchback. He gripped the sword tightly and put all of his strength into the sword hilt before tearing open a hole in the wall. The hunchback’s eyes glazed over, and he collapsed powerlessly to the ground while holding the hilt of Li Huowang's sword.

The Surveillance Bureau members had been annihilated by Li Huowang.

“Boss Hong Zhong is so powerful!”

“Of course, he would be powerful! Otherwise, why are we calling him 'Boss Hong Zhong,' while we're mere pawns?”

Li Huowang ignored the cheers behind him and pulled out his sword from the hunchback's mouth. Then, he sheathed the sword behind him. Afterward, he grabbed the banner sticking out of him and pulled it out slowly.

The remaining two Sitting Oblivion Dao members finally regained their freedom, and they took turns complimenting Li Huowang.

However, Li Huowang drew his sword once again and pointed it at them.

“Where is the Strayed One Bei Feng?!”

Chapter 429 - Bei Feng

“Ah? Strayed One Bei Feng? Boss Hong Zhong, why are you looking for him?” asked a Sitting Oblivion Dao member, who was dressed like a beggar.

“Where is Bei Feng right now?!” Li Huowang asked. The purple-tassel sword blurred briefly before approaching the neck of the beggar-looking Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

“Ah, we’re all from the same family here; why resort to violence? Boss Hong Zhong, I can answer you. Bei Feng and the others should be at the eastern gate of the imperial palace. Their plan is to go and see what the Liang Kingdom’s emperor is up to. The Three Officials and Four Joys are there as well.”

The eastern gate of the imperial palace. Li Huowang thought. Then, he flicked his wrist, and the head of the beggar-like Sitting Oblivion Dao member fell to the ground. A dull thud echoed afterward as the headless corpse fell with a dull thud.

Li Huowang stared at the last remaining Sitting Oblivion Dao member among the three and asked, “I’ll ask you one more time. Where is Bei Feng right now?”

The woman stared wide-eyed at her fallen comrade, and tears welled up in her eyes as she cried out, “Boss Hong Zhong, why are you doing this? We... had no intentions of harming you at all!”

Li Huowang grew furious upon seeing her tearful and pitiful visage. He kicked her down, and the sharp sword sliced open her face from her chin, revealing a bloody mess underneath that resembled an orchid flower^[1].

“Ha, a flower tile? All right, let’s see what tricks you have up your sleeve, Sitting Oblivion Dao! Let me ask you again—where is Bei Feng right now?!” Li Huowang roared and squeezed the woman's neck with both hands.

"Boss Bei Feng.. and the others.. are really at the eastern gate of the imperial palace. I..." Lan Hua stammered, gasping for air.

Li Huowang squeezed even harder, and Lan Hua struggled violently.

Her struggle eventually weakened, but she refused to beg for mercy. Just as she took her last breath, she brushed her head gently against the bulging veins on Li Huowang's hand.

Her grotesque face showed nary a trace of fear or despair. Instead, she seemed to admire Li Huowang. Lan Hua then used her final breath to mutter, "Mountains have trees, and trees have branches... My heart celebrates you, but you do not know..."

Lan Hua went limp, and her grotesque flower face withered gradually.

"Huff.. huff.. huff..." Li Huowang breathed in ragged pants. Li Sui's tentacles tore a fabric from the clothes of a nearby corpse to wipe away the blood from Li Huowang's face. The Sitting Oblivion Dao members are really annoying. Do they have to make me feel so disgusted, even in their final moments? They know how to perform a convincing act as well. It was so convincing that I... I-I almost wavered!

Li Huowang took a deep breath. He was still somewhat skeptical of Lan Hua's words. Still, he decided to see for himself whether the Strayed One Bei Feng was at the eastern gate of the imperial palace.

Things were getting chaotic outside, and he needed to pick up the pace. He had to reach the Strayed One Bei Feng before the latter escaped or was killed.

Li Huowang bent down to pick up a human face from the ground. He was planning on sticking it onto his face when he suddenly stopped. Hold on, is it even a good idea to keep wearing Er Jiu's face?

Li Huowang looked around. Then, he bent down and picked up

Lan Hua's face. The next moment, he applied it over his face as if it were a face mask. Afterward, Li Huowang secured the edges with some nails from his bag of torture tools.

In the blink of an eye, Li Huowang's appearance changed into that of another person. Since he was going to act like someone else, then he had to do it thoroughly. Li Huowang burned his red Daoist robe and wore the clothes of a nearby corpse.

Li Huowang scavenged a total of six swords from the nearby corpses before pushing open the wooden door of the house. After getting his bearings, Li Huowang jumped onto a terrified horse on the street and led it toward the palace.

The emperor of Great Liang resides in the palace, so the palace is definitely the most heavily guarded place throughout the Liang Kingdom. Li Huowang captured two Sitting Oblivion Dao members while he was on his way to the palace. He asked them questions to confirm the information that he had obtained. One of the two was unwilling to speak, while the other confirmed the legitimacy of Li Huowang's information.

Once Li Huowang was close enough to the palace, he jumped onto a roof and observed the eastern gate in the distance. It seemed that a great battle had broken out over there, as there were people falling to the snowy ground.

Li Huowang approached cautiously with his head lowered. The people fighting in the distance varied in strength, but it was obvious that the ones inside the palace were the imperial guards, while those outside were the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

These Sitting Oblivion Dao members had different appearances and attires, making it difficult to differentiate them from each other, much less guess whether the Strayed One Bei Feng was among them or not.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao members sat down to chant an incantation, but an unbelievably accurate arrow struck them in the forehead, forcing the others to stand up and retreat.

Li Huowang remained calm in the face of the tense situation, and he swept his gaze across the Sitting Oblivion Dao, looking for his target.

Is it him? No, no... Li Huowang could still remember the information he had obtained from the Surveillance Bureau before. The Strayed One Bei Feng could swap bodies with someone else. With that in mind, Li Huowang shifted his gaze away from the Sitting Oblivion Dao and stared at the palace.

The imperial guards fought valiantly, and they were being assisted by figures wearing green masks. Overall, there wasn't anything unusual.

Li Huowang observed silently, waiting for any changes to the situation.

Soon, the gates of the palace swung open, and an imperial guard wearing a helmet emerged. He was waving at the Sitting Dao Oblivion members outside. The Sitting Oblivion Dao members were overjoyed at the sight, and they barged into the palace.

The situation quickly became even more chaotic.

Is that him? Is that the Strayed One Bei Feng? Li Huowang's heart pounded as he stared intently at the imperial guard, who had opened the palace gates and allowed the Sitting Oblivion Dao members entry into the palace grounds.

The imperial guard seemed to have sensed something, and he glanced in Li Huowang's direction before turning around and walking into the palace grounds.

Boom!

The snow around Li Huowang flew high into the air as he projected his illusion out of sight. Then, he stepped on the roof tiles and jumped roof after roof. Li Huowang eventually found himself at the eastern gates, and he discovered that the skirmish had ended in favor of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The ajar gate covered in blood was proof of the deadly battle.

Bei Feng is definitely inside! Li Huowang picked up the pace and made his way into the palace grounds. Many people had noticed the commotion here, and they'd rushed down the blood-stained path to reach the palace grounds. Unfortunately, it was impossible to tell whether they were from the Sitting Oblivion Dao or the Surveillance Bureau.

Li Huowang followed closely behind them and entered the palace. The palace had a complicated layout with many winding paths. However, Li Huowang didn't need a map, as the bloodstains and the signs of struggle on the ground guided him to the right path.

Li Huowang would sometimes stumble upon giant faces on the crimson walls of the corridor, and the faces were similar to those outside the palace. They seemed made out of bronze, and some of them were even adorned with verdigris[2].

The faces were square with hollowed eyes, triangular nose bridges, and large ears. The entire palace appeared particularly solemn and majestic beneath their solemn, quiet gazes.

Li Huowang discovered that the bloodstains, signs of struggle, and bloody footprints were becoming fewer and fewer as he went deeper into the palace. Soon, he caught a glimpse of a golden light shining in the distant corner up ahead.

Li Huowang cautiously turned the corner and was stupefied.

He saw nothing but gold. The distant hall was literally made out of gold. The bricks, the ceiling, the walls, the statue of beasts, the furniture, and even the ornaments were made out of gold.

1. a tile in mahjong 📖

2. a bright bluish-green encrustation formed by atmospheric oxidation 📖

Chapter 430 - Golden Palace

Li Huowang stood still, staring wide-eyed at everything in front of him. He had always held an indifferent attitude toward wealth. However, he still couldn't help but feel incredibly shocked upon seeing a golden palace—a palace made out of gold.

Despite the lavishness, the golden palace still looked solemn and sacred.

The falling snowflakes disappeared slowly as they landed on the palace.

They're all inside... Li Huowang stared at the bloodstains on the distant golden bricks. Li Huowang walked in that direction with his illusion.

Li Huowang stepped on the golden bricks and stared intently at the golden palace as he walked by himself in the palace of gold. The sight was extremely surreal, making Li Huowang feel as if he were dreaming. He couldn't help but wonder how much gold they had to use to build such a huge golden palace in the Liang Kingdom.

Li Huowang soon found himself standing at the entrance of the golden palace. There was a couplet written on the left side of the entrance that said, "The imperial decree has been established in the nine regions, yet it remains difficult. How can it not be respected?"

Li Huowang turned to the right and saw a couplet that said, "May the heavens' heart bless one with virtue. May one always be under the heaven's protection. May one seek peace."

Li Huowang looked up at the huge plaque above and saw shimmering golden characters that said, "Golden Throne Room."

The Golden Throne Room? Li Huowang frowned and stepped forward. He couldn't care less about the palace's name. His top priority was to find the Strayed One Bei Feng.

The Golden Throne Room's interior was spacious, and it was desolate except for the giant columns adorned with six-clawed golden dragons. It was so quiet that even Li Huowang's low footsteps echoed quite loudly in the space.

How did those Sitting Oblivion Dao members come here so fast? Also, why did they even decide to come to the Liang Kingdom's palace? Li Huowang wondered as he hurried toward the six doors at the back of the hall.

Soon, he arrived at his destination, but the six doors had vanished inexplicably!

Huh? Am I getting lost? I'm getting lost in the imperial palace? Li Huowang's heart skipped a beat.

"Dad..." Li Sui said suddenly.

"What's wrong? This isn't the time to speak about random things."

"Dad, there are words written on your arm."

Li Huowang raised his arms and saw words carved with a knife on his left arm's underside that said, "This is a bizarre place where you'll end up losing your memories over time. Carve your thoughts with a knife!"

There was no way Li Huowang would mistake his own handwriting for someone else's handwriting. However, he couldn't remember when he had carved such words on his own arm.

Hold on! This isn't my first rodeo! Li Huowang was about to take the knife to carve the words "Muddled One," but he was stunned upon realizing that it had already been carved on his arm.

There were more words written next to the word "Muddled One," and they said, "He's nearby! Hurry up and find him! I've been here for half an hour now!"

Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine. It had only been a few minutes since he entered the Golden Throne Room, so why were the words saying that he had been here for thirty minutes rather than just a few minutes?

Just then, Li Huowang felt a sharp pain coming from his thigh. He looked down and saw a wound that was so deep that he could see his bone through the wound.

I'm injured? When did I get injured? Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and tore open his flesh. Then, he found a chunk of his thigh bone missing. It seemed that he had used that part to divine.

Obviously, Li Huowang had used divination to find the Muddled One, but Li Huowang had no idea when he had done that. Li Huowang observed the bone closely and memorized the twisted shapes on the chunk that had been carved out.

He carved those shapes on his hand and began his search throughout the Golden Throne Room.

Li Huowang saw more and more writing on his arms.

"The southeast corner has nothing."

"Nothing behind the dragon pillar on the east; no need to search it again."

After a few laps, Li Huowang stopped in the middle of the Golden Throne Room.

The center of the Golden Throne Room had remained without any writings about it. Li Huowang looked at the familiar patterns on the golden bricks and tightened his grip on his sword hilt before thrusting the purple-tassel sword into the ground.

Gold was precious, but it was relatively softer than other metals. It was as soft as mud against the purple-tassel sword. Li Huowang pried open the golden brick and peeked inside to see that the compact soil had been pushed over to one side. Then, he saw a building with red tiles through the crack.

The buried building was small; it was about the same height as a person, and it seemed to be made out of clay. Li Huowang decisively raised the bronze coin sword in his hand and shook it before chanting a quick incantation.

The roof of the small temple was lifted, and a familiar face appeared in front of Li Huowang. It was the Muddled One that Ji Xiang and the rest of them had captured after much difficulty!

The Muddled One's limbs were bent and stitched together with gold threads. No, it wasn't just his eyes. His mouth and his orifices had been stitched with golden threads, and he became a Muddled One stick.

The Muddled One was covered with intertwining golden words except for his head and chest. Overall, the Muddled One looked as if he were wearing a golden robe riddled with swastikas. The swastikas seemed to have seeped out of the Muddled One, as everything around the Muddled One had been riddled with swastikas.

Li Huowang gestured with his bronze coin sword again. The bronze coin sword wrapped around the Muddled One, and Li Huowang pulled hard.

The corpse flew away from the small temple, and the entire Golden Throne Room seemed to dim slightly as the Muddled One was removed from the swastikas.

Li Huowang looked down at himself and sighed in relief upon realizing that there weren't any new words on himself. Clearly, the crisis had passed. Unfortunately, Li Huowang had already wasted a lot of time, so he couldn't afford to waste any more time.

He stared deeply at the Muddled One before walking toward the distant exit.

Li Huowang no longer encountered any issues, and he successfully walked out of the golden palace. He was about to sigh in relief when he clapped his eyes on the golden palaces in the distance. Wait a minute, why are there multiple golden palaces? And could there be a Muddled One in every golden palace?

"There are Muddled Ones in those palaces, but not all of them have one," Hong Zhong said, breaking his long silence. "These golden palaces have been arranged to form a constellation array. I can't tell which specific constellation, though. Hehe, it seems that the Muddled One you worked so hard to find ended up becoming a part of an array."

Li Huowang's expression became ugly at Hong Zhong's words. A dangerous Muddled One ended up becoming a part of a mere array. What exactly were they planning to do?

Li Huowang ignored everything else and picked up the pace. Things were getting troublesome now. The imperial palace was teeming with danger, and Bei Feng would most likely lose his life. Li Huowang couldn't let anything happen to Bei Feng!

Li Huowang used his experience to avoid the nearby golden palaces. He walked only along the empty areas. In the face of a dead end, he'd dig a hole in the golden wall. It was unknown whether Li Huowang's method was working or if the people ahead of him had cleared a path for him, but Li Huowang didn't encounter anything bizarre for a while.

Li Huowang continued moving north while following the bloodstains on the ground. He soon walked past a high wall, and his keen ears immediately heard chanting and sounds of metal clashing against metal from behind the golden walls in the distance.

That's it! Li Huowang exclaimed inwardly. He couldn't contain his excitement as he hurried toward the noises. Li Huowang made holes in the golden walls ahead of him, and Li Huowang soon carved open a hole in the final golden wall and walked through it.

The first thing that caught his attention was a black and white vertical pupil in the extremely low clouds in the sky. The black and white vertical pupil had been surrounded by a bronze hexagram, and there were sixty-four trigrams orbiting it.

Chapter 431 - Mahjong Tiles

Li Huowang stared at the black and white vertical pupil in the sky.

As the trigrams shifted, the colossal black-and-white vertical pupil looked left and right. It descended slowly amidst the dark clouds. The eye contained no emotions, and it emitted an oppressive aura reminiscent of chaos.

Chaos wasn't supposed to be tangible nor visible, but Li Huowang was certain that the eye was one of the eyes of "Chaos."

A strange chanting echoed from the eye.

Li Huowang grimaced in pain upon hearing it, and he immediately covered his ears. The chanting was familiar, and he managed to hear it even though he was a hundred Li away from Shangjing at the time. It turned out that the chanting was coming from the colossal black-and-white vertical pupil!

At the time, Li Huowang heard light chanting, but now that he was standing right in front of the eye, the chanting had grown louder by several orders of magnitude.

Li Huowang looked around and saw quite a few corpses with their hands covering their ears as they died.

What is that eye? Is that a Siming? No, if it were a Siming, I would've seen it at Baiyu Capital! What is that?! Did the Liang Kingdom's emperor summon it? Is that the true nature of the arrays? What is he thinking of doing with that?!

No, this is none of my business! I need to find the Strayed One Bei Feng first!

Li Huowang covered his ears and looked up ahead.

A massive golden tree stood in the distance. The golden tree was skinny, but its towering size made it seem as though it was capable of holding up the heavens itself.

There was a group of people fighting around the golden tree. Li Huowang only managed to stare at them briefly, as he had to stop due to the throbbing headache.

The chanting was so oppressive that he couldn't focus on anything.

This can't keep going! I won't be able to get close to them at this rate.

Li Huowang took out a small pike and thrust it into his left ear. Then, he gave it a quick twist, destroying his left eardrum. Afterward, he tore off a chunk of his robes and stuffed the fabric into his right ear.

it was a gruesome method, but it worked. The chanting was no longer as loud as earlier. It was still loud, but Li Huowang could finally function properly, and he could focus better than earlier.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and walked up to the golden tree. The figures in the distance became clearer as he approached, and he realized that rather than leaves, the trees were covered in tiny golden dragons.

The dragons weren't living beings, but they appeared to be in distress. Their scales were torn outwards while twisted spikes grew outwards from within them. The twisted spikes sticking out of the dragons were riddled with reverse swastikas.[\[1\]](#)

The golden dragons intertwined chaotically, and each dragon head donned a mask that had the same design as the colossal faces on the palace walls.

The masks allowed the dragons to have human faces, which was a bizarre sight. An observatory was near the top of the tree, and the branches seemed to be diverging from the tree from that point onward.

Li Huowang could see a few people in the observatory. Li Huowang ignored the eunuchs holding the horsetail whisks and focused on the man wearing yellow robes.

Li Huowang instantly deduced him to be the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom.

The emperor was staring quietly at the enemies down below

The emperor's face was obscured by the tassels[2] of his crown, so Li Huowang couldn't see the former's face. The tassels were made from golden beads, and they completely blocked the emperor's face from any prying eyes outside.

Where is Bei Feng? Li Huowang's eyes landed on the base of the golden tree.

The people below were trying their best to climb up to the observatory using the golden dragon as footholds.

Just then, a group of eunuchs clad in black jumped down and used their weapons to fight the encroaching enemies. The eunuch's feet were tied with a rope, which anchored them to the tree.

The faces of the people trying to climb the tree would distort from time to time, all thanks to the strange chanting, and the distortion revealed the mahjong tiles on their faces.

At the sight, Li Huowang confirmed they were Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

For some reason, the two sides seemed wary of going all out. They seemed to be waiting for something.

Li Huowang sat on the ground and concentrated on finding Bei Feng. He could still remember how the Strayed One Bei Feng was capable of changing bodies. With that in mind, Li Huowang dared not to act rashly. He bid his time and endured the chanting to search for the Strayed One Bei Feng among the crowd of Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the crowd and soon found the four Bei Fengs.

Wait, four Bei Fengs? Li Huowang thought that he had made a mistake during his counting, so he counted once more and saw that there were indeed four Bei Fengs, whose faces were distorted due to the strange chanting.

Fine, it doesn't matter even if there are four of them. But... how am I supposed to find the correct one? Li Huowang was bewildered. The two parties were holding back, so Li Huowang knew he'd simply die if he were to go there right now.

What should I do? Should I ask Zhuge Yuan for help?

Zhuge Yuan's face popped up in Li Huowang's mind, and he instantly hesitated. He couldn't push his friend into the flames for his own interest. Moreover, this place was just too dangerous.

I should keep waiting... Li Huowang decided.

Meanwhile, the emperor's voice echoed from the observatory.

“You fools are not satisfied yet? Do you really think that I would have no idea that you're here? I've seen through your movements. Even if the two Shai Zi were here along with the rest of my enemies, my plan would remain unstoppable!”

The emperor's voice boomed like thunder, and everyone reacted in their own way to it. Some cowered and quivered, while the weaker ones among the crowd retreated immediately. However, the Sitting Oblivion Dao members weren't afraid. They even laughed and taunted the emperor.

Some of them even copied the emperor's voice but in a jeering tone.

“Hmph!” A cold snort echoed, and a shockwave erupted from the golden tree.

The Emperor of the Liang Kingdom moved aside and said, “Thank you, Imperial Preceptor.”

The Imperial Preceptor was an old man, and he was holding a sword carved with the Twenty-Eight Mansions. [3] The golden walls on the west started trembling as he stood in the observatory.

Li Huowang heard a low rumbling and turned around to see that the golden walls on the west had crumbled. Soon, Zhuge Yuan appeared in front of everyone else.

Zhuce Yuan's expression was grim as he held his brush, and he was running swiftly as if he were chasing someone from the Qi Kingdom.

Just then, people appeared out of thin air in front of Zhuge Yuan.

Shockingly, the people had mahjong tiles as faces; they were Sitting Oblivion Dao members!

To make matters worse, more and more people materialized in front of Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang's heart sank at the sight. Wait! This is impossible! There are too many of them! These mahjong tiles are more numerous than the mahjong tiles I've known for so long!

Some of the mahjong tiles were weird; mahjong patterns depicting the plum, orchid, bamboo, chrysanthemum, spring, summer, autumn, and winter were already weird, but there were even tiles resembling the God of Prosperity as well as cats and mice.

Those tiles didn't exist among the mahjong tiles that Li Huowang had known for so long!

“Hehehe. Why do you think they don't exist? They don't exist in the Liang Kingdom, but they do exist in the Qi Kingdom,” Hong Zhong's illusion said, chuckling.

So here's an image of an Emperor's Crown. Notice the tassels on the front and back used to hide the Emperor's face to a certain extent. I guess the crown in this world has more tassels to completely block the Emperor's face

Chapter 432 - Both Sides

"Hehehe. Why do you think they don't exist? They don't exist in the Liang Kingdom, but they do exist in the Qi Kingdom."

As soon as Hong Zhong's words fell, an old woman tumbled out in front of Zhuge Yuan.

Li Huowang's pupils constricted upon seeing her as she was familiar to him. The old woman was the Bei Feng whom Zhuge Yuan had sent over to the Great Qi.

The old woman stared blankly into space. Moments later, her eyes sharpened, shining brightly at the sight before her. Then, her wrinkles disappeared as her face distorted.

At first, her head transformed into a Bei Feng mahjong tile, but the distortion continued until her rectangular transformed into a square made out of flesh—a die made out of flesh!

The Bei Feng had become a legendary Shai Zi[1]!

Shai Zi looked around with his singular red eye. His gaze soon landed on the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom standing in the observatory at the crown of the golden tree.

Shai Zi sounded condescending as he said, "Do you really think that you've seen through all our movements? How about this? Have you ever thought that I'd use a Twisted One to bring the entire Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Great Qi over here?"

"I'm sure you're capable of fighting an entire mahjong set, but what about two?"

Li Huowang's pupils constricted in horror. The other Sitting Oblivion Dao members and the Bei Feng at the time had simply been putting up an act!

Li Huowang was no longer so sure whether Zhuge Yuan had defeated them or if they had decided to lose on purpose.

It turned out that they had only one goal—to make Zhuge Yuan transform them into the people of the Qi Kingdom! Once they became people of the Great Qi, it wouldn't be difficult for them to contact the Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Great Qi.

The Great Qi was real; it wasn't fake at all.

Li Huowang was in awe of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's plan.

Meanwhile, the black-and-white vertical pupil trembled and split into three as the trigrams around it spun even faster. The emperor and his group dared not to waste any time upon seeing two mahjong sets down below.

The chanting became stronger and louder. Moreover, it was no longer just chanting; it contained howls and bellows, which reverberated loudly throughout the battlefield.

Li Huowang's head throbbed, and it was so painful that he felt like his face was going to melt away. Soon, the chanting reached a crescendo becoming an inscrutable chanting forbidden for mortals to hear!

Everyone's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings were on the verge of collapse!

Bai Lingmiao's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings had been slightly influenced by the killing intent of the purple-tassel sword, and her behavior had changed completely.

Li Huowang couldn't imagine what would happen to someone like Bai Lingmiao under the strange, inscrutable chanting.

The battle was about to begin, and Li Huowang started to get anxious. He gnashed his teeth, forcefully enduring the new pain as he focused on finding the Strayed One Bei Feng. Unfortunately, Li Huowang had to sift through eight Bei Fengs to find the Strayed One Bei Feng, which meant his task had gotten even harder.

Loud thuds echoed as the Sitting Oblivion Dao members sat in a circle around the golden tree. Moments later, they started chanting.

The four Shai Zis sat on the four cardinal directions.

Their faces had the following numbers—four, two, five, and one.

“Sit in Oblivion and forget the worldly desires to obtain the ultimate Dao! Real beings must cultivate their inner-self through Sitting in Oblivion; follow the flow and nurture oneself; follow the flow and cultivate naturally. Abandon the forms and attain truth.”

The Sitting Oblivion’s voices dispersed the guttural chanting that echoed loudly overhead. The two voices intertwined, and the space around them quivered ever so slightly. Both people and the golden tree started distorting a well.

The golden bricks of the crumbled walls floated and arranged themselves into a golden statue with a side profile of a smiling Yang Na. The sight made Li Huowang gnash his teeth. Shit! It’s going to be dangerous, but... I must find that Strayed One Bei Feng and capture him alive!

Li Huowang soon came up with a good idea and took out his dagger. He opened his robes and cut open his torso to retrieve his collarbone. Then, he used a talisman paper and started drawing on the talisman.

Casting divination on stronger cultivators was extremely dangerous. In addition to being useless, the target could reverse the divination and track down the caster as well.

However, Li Huowang needed that effect right now.

Li Huowang pressed the yellow talisman on his bloody collarbone, and someone reacted in the distance even before the bone had cracked open. One of the female Bei Fengs raised her head and stared in Li Huowang’s direction.

Found her! Li Huowang became invisible and started walking on the floating golden bricks. He looked as if he were walking on water as he closed in slowly on the Strayed One Bei Feng.

The others did not notice Li Huowang closing in on them because both parties were already fighting each other. The Surveillance Bureau and the Sitting Oblivion Dao couldn't spare any effort to care about Li Huowang.

Li Huowang saw the wizened Imperial Preceptor swinging his sword. The Imperial Preceptor's robes billowed even in the absence of wind. Just then, several stars manifested amidst the low-hanging dark clouds.

A man clad in red robes walked out from the crowd, and three people stuck closely to him.

Li Huowang assumed that the three were the Deputy Chiefs of the Surveillance Bureau while the red-robed man had to be the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau.

Six wrinkled arms extended from the man's red robes. The wrinkled arms had long fingernails, and they seemed capable of moving by themselves. The topmost pair was making finger gestures for a chant, the middle pair was drawing runes, and the bottom pair was making seals.

The markedly distinct voices echoed from beneath the red robes, and they chanted an incantation harmoniously. The three voices were the voice of an old man, a grown man, and a young man.

"A day represents a world, with each world unfolding a white lotus. The lotus represents not the Buddha, nor is it a worldly treasure. One rides the phoenix and plucks its petals, but the hands become smoke. Unaware of one's body, one may find themselves atop the lotus leaf."

The Sitting Oblivion chanting became weaker once the Chief started chanting. The gold bricks stopped moving, and the strange chanting became dominant once again.

The black-and-white vertical pupil in the sky descended slightly. Under the gaze of the massive eye, some of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members seated at the edges exploded into a flurry of lotus leaves before their fleshly bodies returned to Chaos.

Just as Li Huowang thought that another round of fighting would start, a deafening noise echoed. Li Huowang turned and saw the collapse of the golden tree.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao chuckled and laughed at the sight. Then, they swarmed the tree in droves and ran toward the observatory.

Thunderous booms echoed from the observatory, and the dark clouds up above filled slowly with lightning bolts. The battlefield instantly became chaotic as lightning rained down on the Sitting Oblivion Dao members.

This is my chance! Li Huowang didn't hesitate and ran toward the Strayed One Bei Feng.

The two factions fought each other with their lives at stake as the skies changed rapidly above them. One moment it was evening, and the next it was noon.

Li Huowang felt that he would eventually lose control of himself at this rate, and it was all thanks to the strange chanting. Truthfully speaking, however, Li Huowang had no idea who had the advantage in this fight.

Regardless, his determination remained firm, and his eyes never left the Strayed One Bei Feng.

The Strayed One Bei Feng was staring intently at the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom while the emperor himself was under the protection of the Surveillance Bureau's three deputy chiefs.

The next moment, the Strayed One Bei Feng collapsed on her knees and covered her distorted face in agony. A dark golden fluid was flowing out of her eyes. Just as a lightning bolt was about to hit her, a hand missing two fingers pulled her away.

"Are you fine?! Wait, you're injured!" Li Huowang shouted as he pulled Bei Feng away from the battlefield.

Chapter 433 - Bei Feng

Li Huowang's heart pounded madly against his chest at the softness that filled his arms. The Strayed One Bei Feng was finally in his arms, and she was the key to getting rid of his hallucination. Li Huowang had been dreaming of this day since he discovered the Strayed One Bei Feng's existence.

Li Huowang's mind was filled with many wild thoughts, but he remained calm on the outside.

The Shai Zis didn't have any time to pay attention to what Li Huowang was doing, as they were too busy fighting the Imperial Preceptor and the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau.

When they were at the edge of the battlefield, the Strayed One Bei Feng finally realized that something was wrong.

"Wait, who are you?! Why are there nine Hong Zhongs?"

Li Huowang was about to explain when Bei Feng looked up and stared into his eyes.

"Please hear me out," Li Huowang said and was shocked to realize that his voice had become feminine. He looked up and saw himself holding his own arm. He had exchanged bodies with Bei Feng!

Upon seeing that Li Huowang had been trapped in her previous body, Bei Feng chuckled and playfully remarked, "Aiyaya~ So you're Hong Zhong? What's wrong? Did you get bored of playing as Hong Zhong and wanted to become Bei Feng for a few days? Sure, let me make your wish come true."

Li Huowang's body had just gotten stolen away from him, but he wasn't anxious at all as he said, "Do you really think that I didn't know about that ability of yours? My body doesn't belong to me alone. Suisui! Do it! She has taken my body away!"

Bei Feng was shocked. She was about to do something when a heart-wrenching pain shot up from her chest. Her sense of pain seemed to have been multiplied, as the pain coming from her chest was too much even for her to bear.

However, the changes weren't over just yet. Moments later, Li Sui's tentacles burst out of the orifices of Li Huowang's body including his eyes, mouth, nose, and ears.

Li Huowang had told Li Sui about his plan to seal Bei Feng's senses as soon as possible the moment she swapped bodies with Li Huowang. Li Huowang had learned of Bei Feng's ability from the documents in the Surveillance Bureau, so it wasn't strange that she had prepared a countermeasure against it.

Crackle!

Thunder crackled, and a stray lightning bolt almost struck Li Huowang. In response, he carried Bei Feng with him and ran away from the battlefield.

No one noticed their escape amidst the chaos, and Li Huowang was soon out of the battlefield. The battle became more intense, but Li Huowang didn't have the luxury to care about the ongoing battle. After all, he had already obtained what he wanted.

Li Huowang turned a corner and stopped to catch his breath. He looked at Bei Feng, who had stolen his body, and said, "All right. Suisui, remove your tentacles from her ears and mouth. I have to talk to her."

The tentacles sticking out of Bei Feng's mouth retracted.

Li Huowang stared at Bei Feng and calmed himself down before saying, "I don't care about the Sitting Oblivion Dao's plans. I will let you go as long as you give me what I want."

Bei Feng was not worried but impressed instead. "That's amazing. I didn't expect that you'd take advantage of the chaotic battle between us and the Surveillance Bureau. You truly deserve the name, Hong Zhong."

Li Huowang took a small flat needle from his bag of torture tools. Then, he grabbed Bei Feng's hand and thrust the needle in between Bei Feng's fingernail and finger.

Li Huowang flicked his wrist, and a grotesque noise echoed as the thin fingernail was torn away from the finger. Bei Feng bit her lips to withstand the pain, but her forehead was covered in beaded cold sweat.

"I've executed the Cang-Qiong Ascension three times, so my sense of pain has been heightened to the limits. Even a small scratch would hurt as much as losing an arm. I'm sure your time is as precious as mine, and I'm sure you don't want to experience an even stronger pain than that, do you?"

Li Huowang placed his finger on the belly button of his original body. Then, he thrust his finger into the belly button before pulling out something tubular and smooth.

"Haha..." Bei Feng was trembling from the pain, but she was smiling as she muttered, "These methods are reminiscent of the Ao Jing Sect. Are you from the Ao Jing Sect? Why have you come for us instead of looking for your god?"

Li Huowang gulped a mouthful of his saliva with great difficulty. His voice was even trembling as he said, "You're a Strayed One, right? I need to know how you got rid of your hallucination."

"Hm?" Bei Feng's voice was filled with confusion. "You went through all the trouble to ask me that? You could have just told me outright! I thought it was something serious, but you just wanted the cultivation method to cultivate the 'Truth'?"

"There was no need for you to go this far, as I would have told you if you had just asked me outright."

"What?" Li Huowang frowned in confusion.

"Sigh." Bei Feng sighed, and her voice was filled with sadness. "I'm a Strayed One, so I know a Strayed One's pain. The pain of being unable to differentiate between the two worlds. I'm more than happy to help a Strayed One escape that pain.

"It's just a shame that Strayed Ones are hard to come by."

Li Huowang's face twitched, and he refused to believe Bei Feng.

"You better tell me the cultivation method without lying. Otherwise, you're going to suffer!"

"Fine, fine. I'll tell you. Stop pulling me. This is your body, you know that, right? You'll have to get this back later. Anyway, you need to know some things first before you can start cultivating. First of all, you have to know why we have a hallucination."

"I already know that. It's because of the primordial breath."

"Oh? You know quite a bit about it. Then, I will continue my explanation. To get rid of your hallucination, you need to control your primordial breath first.

"However, you can't do it on your own. You need the help of the primordial breath's owner, Doulao."

"Wait!" Li Huowang exclaimed and glared at Bei Feng. "Why did you mention the Siming of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Don't you dare attempt to fool me! Doulao Taiyin is the Siming that controls 'Lies'!"

Bei Feng sighed and explained, "What is the truth? What is a lie? Can you differentiate it? Everyone says that the Sitting Oblivion Dao cultivates 'Lies,' but it seems that they've forgotten to tell you that we cultivate the 'Truth' as well.

"Doulao is different from the other Simings. It's like a conjoined lotus in a pond. Doulao Taiyin controls 'Lies' while Doulao Taiyang controls 'Truth.'

"The Heavenly Dao of Yin and Yang are markedly different from the other Daos. The other Daos either exist or they don't exist at all.

"However, the Dao of 'Truth' and the Dao of 'Lies' exist as one.

The other side of 'Truth' is 'Lies.' The opposite is true as well. Without 'Truth' there are no 'Lies,' and without 'Lies,' there is no 'Truth.' Do you understand?"

Chapter 434 - Key

Li Huowang stared blankly at Bei Feng, who was still inside his body. All of a sudden, Li Huowang felt a bit lost. The Sitting Oblivion Dao's Siming actually governs both 'Lies' and 'Truth'? Do I have to seek help from the Siming of the Sitting Oblivion Dao if I want to get rid of my hallucination?

Li Huowang hesitated, but his experience in dealing with the Sitting Oblivion Dao members swiftly pulled him back to reality. "No, I don't trust you! You're lying! You just want to convert me into a Sitting Oblivion Dao member by making me make contact with Doulao Taiyin!"

Li Huowang trusted his gut feelings and mind more than Bei Feng's words.

"Why can't you believe me?" Bei Feng sighed and said, "There are fifty Heavenly Daos, and the Simings have already taken forty-three of them. The Simings with two Heavenly Daos aren't limited to our Doulao Taiyin and Doulao Taiyang.

"Have you not heard of that? It seems that your master has failed his duty."

Bei Feng was the captive, but she had the initiative.

Li Huowang frowned and stared at Bei Feng, contemplating who was the captive one between the two of them.

Could it be that she allowed herself to get captured just to tell me such lies?

Li Huowang really hated the feeling of not having the initiative. He had to seize the initiative, and he soon came up with an idea of how he could do that. He picked up a saw covered in dried blood and walked over to Bei Feng.

Li Huowang stared coldly at his own body as he dismantled it slowly into smaller pieces amidst Bei Feng's incessant heart-wrenching screams.

Bei Feng fainted numerous times throughout the ordeal, but Li Huowang would always bring her back.

Li Huowang cycled through his torture tools a few times before putting down the saw and the hook covered in his own blood and flesh. Li Huowang started his questioning once again.

"Tell me how to get rid of the hallucination!" Li Huowang exclaimed, enunciating each word as clearly as possible.

Bei Feng was utterly exhausted from the torture, and she looked helpless as she muttered, "What do you want me to say? I told you the truth!"

Li Huowang didn't respond and rummaged through his bag of torture tools once again.

Bei Feng's expression changed, and she hurriedly cried out, "Wait, wait, wait! Since you can't believe my words, and you don't want to cultivate the 'Truth' as well, let's think about another idea. Why don't you just go ahead and leave with my body?

"The hallucination will not torture you, as that is my body. It's still a young body as well, so it's definitely better than this old body of yours, which is riddled with holes and wounds!"

Li Huowang looked down at his body and roared, "This is a female body! And I don't want anyone else's body as well! I want to live in my own body!"

"What's the difference between a man and a woman? The only difference between the two is sex! Stop being so stubborn. Your sex should be the least of your issues, considering how you're still under the influence of your hallucination."

Li Huowang smiled at Bei Feng's chiding. He glared coldly at her and said, "You're lying, aren't you? The Heavenly Dao and Yin Yang are fake, right? You don't have the cultivation method to cultivate the 'Truth'!

"Otherwise, you could've used your primordial breath against me! You could've easily fought back while I was torturing you. You used another method to suppress the hallucination instead of cultivating the "Truth"!"

Bei Feng was speechless. "What are you saying? Who told you that I'd become invincible upon cultivating the "Truth"? Do you really think there's free lunch in this world? The one who told you that had lied to you!"

Li Huowang no longer wanted to waste time. It was extremely difficult to extract information from Bei Feng. To make matters worse, the information was riddled with lies as well, so Li Huowang's efforts were useless here.

However, the Bei Feng in front of Li Huowang was indeed a Strayed One who had managed to suppress her hallucination. Li Huowang believed that she had another method.

Li Huowang had a treasure chest, and all he needed was the key to open it.

Li Huowang took out the gourd of wine that he always carried with him and opened it. Then, he shoved the alcohol into Bei Feng's throat.

"What are—" Bei Feng slumped to the ground mid-sentence.

Li Huowang knew himself the best. His sense of pain had been heightened to extreme heights, while his alcohol tolerance had plummeted to the abyss. The gourd contained wine with a high alcohol content, and it was strong enough to render Bei Feng unconscious for a long time.

Before Bei Feng could hit the ground, she trembled and stood up shakily. It was a weird sight, and it was like she had become a puppet being controlled by invisible threads.

Two eyeballs popped out of Bei Feng's belly button just then.

Bei Feng was asleep, so Li Sui took over the body. Li Sui's tentacles were all over Li Huowang, so he had no issues moving Li Huowang's body. More accurately, it was a part of the process for Li Sui to take over Li Huowang's body.

“Suisui, follow me!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He prepared the Profound Records and his other weapons before moving slowly to somewhere.

“Dad, where are we going?”

“We need to find Zhuge Yuan! He has a treasure capable of forcing Bei Feng to tell nothing but the truth. We also need to save Zhuge Yuan. I really don't feel comfortable leaving him on this chaotic battlefield!”

Li Huowang crossed over the golden wall and returned to his original hiding spot. He looked around and was stunned to see a mighty conflagration in the distance. The golden tree had been set ablaze, and there was a river of gold on the floor.

The entire floor was filled with molten gold, and there was a large hole in the middle of the battlefield. Li Huowang looked closely and realized that the hole was originally a flat ground paved with golden tiles!

Heavily armored men were sprawled out in the hole. It seems that the imperial guard has rushed here to protect the emperor.

The black-and-white vertical pupil in the sky had descended even farther; the rolling clouds were like the brain of the colossal eye, which hovered just a few meters away from the ground!

Li Huowang stared at the distant figures and took a deep breath. Moments later, he rushed forward and soon saw Zhuge Yuan fighting effortlessly with his brush on the battlefield.

Li Huowang sighed in relief. Fortunately, Zhuge Yuan was extremely strong, or he would have died on the battlefield long ago. Zhuge Yuan's position also played an important role in his survival, as Zhuge Yuan was on the edge of the battlefield rather than in the middle of it.

Zhugue Yuan's position was great news to Li Huowang.

He wouldn't attract anyone's attention even if he were to drag Zhuge Yuan away.

Li Huowang dodged rocks, lightning, fire, poker cards, and mahjong tiles before finally getting close to Zhuge Yuan. Everything became calm the moment he got close enough to Zhuge Yuan—Li Huowang had arrived at the Great Qi.

Zhuge Yuan brandished his brush at the newcomer. “Bei Feng?!”

Chapter 435 - History

“Senior Zhuge, it’s me! Li Huowang!” Li Huowang pointed at his original body which was under Li Sui's control and recounted everything that happened.

Zhuge Yuan soon understood what was going on.

Li Huowang then urged, “Senior Zhuge, let's go ahead and leave! We cannot stay here for too long! The fight between the Surveillance Bureau of the Liang Kingdom and the two Sitting Oblivion Daos is too intense! You'll die here if you stay!”

Zhuge Yuan shook his head and pointed at the palace in front of him. “No. We're already halfway through the coup. We cannot stop now.”

Li Huowang's experience differed greatly compared to Zhuge Yuan. From Zhuge Yuan's point of view, he and the others had just entered the palace. They were about to force the undead emperor of the Qi Kingdom to step down.

Zhuge Yuan looked around him and saw soldiers clad in heavy armor as well as the officials of the palace. They were all staring at Zhuge Yuan; clearly, they thought of Zhuge Yuan as their leader.

Li Huowang was extremely distressed, but Zhuge Yuan remained calm. He even sounded confident as he said, “Don’t worry. Everything is going to be fine. I’m here, after all.”

Li Huowang looked around and saw a different scenery. The Liang Kingdom palace was coated in gold, but the Qi Kingdom was covered in snow. The difference was so huge that it was unmistakable.

Even the strange chanting from the Liang Kingdom had disappeared, and it seemed unable to pierce the boundary of the white snow and gold. To think that a Twisted One can stop even the influence of a Siming.

“How much longer do I have to wait?” Li Huowang was impatient.

“Fifteen more minutes. The study room is just ahead of us, and it's where the empress recites sutras. The young undead emperor should be inside, too. We just need to force him to step down, and everything will be settled by then.”

Li Huowang looked down at his body under Li Sui's control and gnashed his teeth.

“Fine! I will help you! We need to settle this as soon as possible!”

Zhugue Yuan rushed forward, and the scenery peeled away.

Some of the people from the Liang Kingdom were whisked away into the Qi Kingdom. Fortunately, the Sitting Oblivion Dao and the Surveillance Bureau were so busy fighting each other that neither of them wanted to fight Zhugue Yuan.

Zhugue Yuan frowned. The people running past him were turning into courtesans and eunuchs running for their lives. His frown deepened at the sight, and he seemed to have recalled something.

The door burst open, and low chanting echoed from the study room accompanied by knocks on a wooden fish. “The Four Arhats Protects Us, Praise The Sacred Self, Love and Protect the Cultivator.”

A group of monks and abbots in yellow had filled the entirety of the study room.

They sat in a circle of six rings.

An old abbot with his back facing toward them sat in the middle of the circle. The abbot was using a razor to shave off the hair of a child. Li Huowang saw that the child's face was ashen gray—the child was deceased.

Li Huowang recognized the child instantly. He was the same child that a Sitting Oblivion Dao member had impersonated at the time—the young undead emperor of the Qi Kingdom!

“You’re shaving him? Are you monks from the Righteous Monastery mad? You’re allowing a zombie to become a Buddhist?!” someone unknown roared, but the monks ignored them completely.

The razor moved, and the final strand of hair on the child’s scalp was finally shaved off. “Amitabha. The three thousand worries of the mortal realm are finally undone.

“From now on, your name is Jie Tan. You’re a disciple of the Righteous Monastery. If someone were to wish harm against you, they would be wishing harm against all of us, too.”

The old abbot turned around slowly.

Li Huowang was stunned to see the old abbot’s identity. “Old monk?!”

There was no way he wouldn’t recognize the old abbot, as he was the very same old monk standing next to him as an illusion.

The old monk was actually the abbot of the Righteous Monastery in the Great Qi rather than just a mere nobody.

Li Huowang finally realized what was wrong.

Zhuguo Yuan hadn’t transported him back in time to the Great Qi that existed thousands of years ago. Instead, Zhuguo Yuan was living in an alternate dimension with its own separate timeline!

Zhuguo Yuan wasn’t a time machine—he was a gateway to alternate dimensions and timelines!

Li Huowang stared at Zhuguo Yuan, and he finally realized why Zhuguo Yuan was called the “Storyteller.” He also realized why the Surveillance Bureau meted out severe punishment to those who had altered calendars and history books.

It was all for Zhuguo Yuan, who was in the Great Qi of another dimension!

Li Huowang looked as if he had been struck by a hammer from out of nowhere upon realizing what was going on. The Twisted Ones' identities were clear to him now—they were doors to alternate dimensions and timelines!

In other words, the Sitting Oblivion Dao from the Great Qi was from a separate timeline. In this particular timeline, the old monk was the abbot of the Righteous Monastery.

While Li Huowang was sorting out his thoughts, Zhuge Yuan said something just then.

The monks of the Righteous Monastery stood up at the same time. The next moment, they clapped their hands and several eyes of varying sizes on the scars on their heads blinked at the same time.

The monks' mouths fluttered open as they chanted an inscrutable incantation. The chanting became louder and louder as the massive lips of the Buddha motif on the wall parted into a smile.

“Dear Sirs! You are monks dedicated to cultivating and shaking off all temptations. I don’t think it’s wise to cling on to the mortal realm like this!” Zhuge Yuan exclaimed and unfurled his scroll.

Some of the monks in the room vanished into thin air. Zhuge Yuan had just spirited away some of them using the Muddled One’s painting.

“Tai!” Some of the monks clapped, and their eyes bulged out of anger. They grew larger, while several arms extended from their backs, making them look like peacocks unfurling their tail feathers.

The two groups were about to start fighting, but a violent tremor abruptly shook the room. The strange chanting capable of dispersing the Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings echoed just then.

Zhuce Yuan and everyone around him collapsed to the ground.

Some even started fading as their fleshly bodies returned to "Chaos."

“What’s going on?!” Li Huowang turned around and saw the colossal vertical pupil that was supposed to exist only in the Liang Kingdom.

“Senior Zhuge!” Li Huowang covered his ears and shouted, “We can’t stay here any longer! I don’t know what that is, but it’s affecting even the Great Qi!”

However, Zhuge Yuan didn’t believe the sight at all and coldly snorted. “Hmph! How dare you try to fool me! So what if you’re big? You’re still fake!”

Zhuce Yuan took out his almanac and brandished his brush.

Before he could finish writing, however, the colossal pupil glared at Zhuge Yuan.

Zhuce Yuan was struck by excruciating pain, which forced him on his knees.

A transparent barrier flickered to life around Zhuge Yuan, protecting him as the clouds housing the colossal vertical pupil rolled closer to him.

Li Huowang struggled to move. He had to do something, or Zhuge Yuan would die!

In the end, Li Huowang decided to go all out. He took out a dagger and thrust it into his neck before slicing it all the way downward his mid-section. Then, he unfurled the Profound Records and laid it on the ground. “Wooden Liver! Earth Spleen! Metal Lungs! Water Kidneys! Fire Heart! Five Elements Intercalation!”

Li Huowang sacrificed his organs^[1] and his five senses merged, allowing him to perceive Ba-Hui’s presence.

The red bamboo slips of the Profound Records transformed into maggots that burrowed into him. They nibbled on his flesh and multiplied rapidly. Soon, the maggots filled up every single cavity in Li Huowang’s fleshly body, and they soon leaked out of his orifices.

However, Li Huowang felt great. He was no longer in pain, and his mind was as calm as a placid lake. The colossal vertical pupil was still glaring at him from above, but it could no longer affect him, much less the strange chanting.

Unfortunately, Li Huowang couldn't cast the Five Elements Intercalation so easily. He could only use it whenever he was on the brink of death. Thankfully, he was in Bei Feng's fleshly body rather than in his own fleshly body.

1. more like Bei Feng's lol 🤔

Chapter 436 - Stone Tablet

Li Huowang had lost his sense of pain, so he could afford to stare at the colossal vertical pupil in front of him without any hesitation. He hoisted his fleshly body onto his shoulders and rushed to Zhuge Yuan's side. He carried Zhuge Yuan in the same manner and retreated backward. This place was too dangerous, and it was definitely not a place for ordinary people. He had to take Zhuge Yuan with him and leave!

Li Huowang was about to leave the battlefield when he came to an abrupt halt. He felt as if a mountain was boring down on his shoulders. Moreover, a mysterious intangible force had wrapped around him, pulling him back to the battlefield.

Writhing tentacles rushed out of his chest and wrapped around his legs. The tentacles moved desperately, dragging Li Huowang forward. As Li Huowang moved inch by inch, the maggots on him perished rapidly as if they were fighting something unseen.

When most of the maggots perished, the mysterious intangible force vanished abruptly, allowing him to break free. Having recovered his freedom, Li Huowang was about to take Zhuge Yuan away when flame abruptly engulfed him, singeing his hair.

Li Huowang retreated rapidly and saw the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, the Imperial Preceptor, and the members of the Surveillance Bureau. It seemed that all of them had gone all out with a variety of artifacts in hand.

Li Huowang even saw one of the Deputy Chiefs holding a square stone tablet while performing a ritual. Li Huowang was familiar with the stone tablet, as it was the same stone tablet that Dan Yangzi had used in his attempt to ascend to immortality.

It seemed that the Deputy Chief had obtained one as well.

So it's supposed to be held upside-down? Li Huowang muttered to himself, seemingly bewildered. Then, he shook his head vigorously and thought, this isn't the time to think about this!

Li Huowang looked up and saw a burning golden tree. He turned to Zhuge Yuan on his shoulder in astonishment and asked, "What's going on? Where's your Great Qi?"

They were supposed to be in the Great Qi, as Zhuge Yuan was on his shoulder.

However, the Great Qi had disappeared inexplicably. This was bad news for Li Huowang, as he suddenly found himself in the middle of a battlefield.

Zhuce Yuan woke up and rolled down Li Huowang's shoulders. His expression was ugly as he looked at everything around him and roared, "Where are we?!"

"Where do you think we are?! We're in Great Liang! Anyway, we should escape first and figure out what's going on later!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He grabbed Zhuge Yuan's sleeves and ran away.

A peal of laughter echoed just then, attracting Li Huowang's attention. He turned to look at the Emperor of the Great Liang standing right in front of the colossal golden tree. As the emperor's laughter echoed, the crown on his head vibrated rapidly.

The emperor waved his hand and pointed at the colossal vertical pupil in the distance, shouting, "Sitting Oblivion Dao! The Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye has risen! You're finished! This is the golden opportunity to capture all of you!"

The golden bricks on the ground softened before flying toward the colossal vertical pupil in a stream of golden light. The golden palace in the distance and the golden bricks converged to form a colossal golden mask.

The mask had the ears of a beast and a mouth as wide as its ears. Its lips were in three layers, and the corners of its mouth were curled up in a smile. Li Huowang was familiar with the mask, as it was the same mask at the Surveillance Bureau.

The mask outside the Surveillance Bureau had cylindrical eyes that protruded outward, while this one had an empty left eye socket. However, even though the empty eye socket was on the left, the colossal vertical pupil floated over to the right eye socket!

A violent tremor ran across Li Huowang at the terrifying sight. The so-called "Sacred Mountain Ghost" that the Emperor of the Great Liang had mentioned was unknown to Li Huowang.

However, one thing was for sure: something big was about to happen!

To make matters worse, the strange chanting that Li Huowang's Five Elements Intercalation had forcefully dispersed had returned with vengeance.

The remaining maggots on Li Huowang's chest wriggled incessantly, transforming into a pair of extra legs, which allowed Li Huowang to run even faster.

Under the oppressive air, the Shai Zis remained calm, staring at the golden mask overhead. Soon, the numbers that represented their faces turned into sixes.

"Very good! You must have put a lot of effort into finding this eye of the Siming, which has been dead for thousands of years. Since that's the case, then we'll accept it," said one of the Shai Zis. There wasn't a trace of worry in his voice, and he even sounded excited in the face of such danger.

"Hmph! Do you really think that I will believe your lies? Regardless of what you do, you will not disrupt the plan I've been working on for ten years!"

"Lies? Hehe, do you really think we're lying? Take a guess: why do you think the four of us have come here today? You've been preparing for a long time, but we've been preparing for way longer than you," said the four Shai Zis in unison.

They crossed their legs again, and their overlapping voices echoed even louder as they chanted, "True void's wonderful appearance, supreme mysterious mother. Where the golden light shines, the hidden brilliance of the sun and moon. When the treasured pestle rotates, the ghosts and gods lose color, showing their traces in the mortal world, guarding the saint's chariot..."

The voices weren't loud, but they spread far and wide. The stone tablet in the hands of a deputy chief cracked open the moment the Emperor of the Great Liang heard the chanting.

"Hahaha! How was it?" A voice filled thick with extreme ridicule from the cracks of the stone tablet. "Was it good practice? Actually, it's all fake! This is all for the sake of making fun of you, you fool!"

The voice had yet to finish echoing in the air when the stone tablet split apart, transforming into a chaotic hodgepodge of fragmented mahjong tiles.

"What?! How is this possible?!" The Deputy Chief exclaimed in disbelief while staring at the stone tablet in his hands. Before he could recover from the shock of being deceived, a dim purple light rushed out his brow and burrowed into Shai Zi's number.

This was just the beginning...

The Sitting Oblivion Dao's voice spread farther, reaching Cowheart Village.

The sleeping Gao Zhijian woke up and instantly went on high alert upon hearing strange voices in the room. He grabbed a sharp weapon and dashed into the side room. The stone tablet that Senior Li had given to him had cracked open.

Gao Zhijian could still remember that Senior Li had obtained the stone tablet from the Zephyr Temple, more specifically, from their master, Dan Yangzi.

“ Haha! You really want to become immortal?! How dare you dream of becoming immortal when you can't recognize even a single character word on it! My condolences, but you've been fooled! You've been bamboozled!

"This cultivation method to immortality is fake! Pfft! Hahaha! "

Chapter 437 - Doulao

Hou Shu, Qing Qiu, Si Qi, and the Emperor of the Great Liang. Those who had been deceived by the stone tablet started giving off a faint purple light from their glabella.

They hadn't lost anything tangible, but it could be said that they had "lost" by getting deceived. The purple lights gathered, converging toward Shangjing's palace, attracting the attention of many different organizations at the same time.

The faint purple light pierced the black dots on the four Shai Zis. The square heads of the four Shai Zis became larger and more purplish. Their bodies began to fade away as if they had always been fake.

The chanting of the Shai Zis grew louder as they vanished until no noises could be heard except for the Shai Zis' chants.

"They want to withstand the Siming with their mortal bodies? That is impossible!" exclaimed the Emperor of the Great Liang. He looked up at the unfinished mask, and his expression became solemn. It was unlikely, but he dared not ignore the possibility.

He waved his hands adorned with reversed dragon scales, and the black clouds in the sky rolled in the direction of the Shai Zis.

The members of the Great Liang's camp jumped into the fray, and the battle that had cooled down erupted once again. Meanwhile, the Sitting Oblivion Dao members threw themselves recklessly against the enemies to stop the black clouds' encroachment.

The chanting of the Shai Zis ceased just then.

"When beings are in distress, invoke the name; the great beings will come to alleviate suffering. Great compassion, great vows, great saints, great benevolence, Holy Spirit, giant light, Heavenly Empress, Maricideva, and the Great Saint.

"Doulao—Celestial Sovereign!"

When the final word was uttered, the six dots on the Shai Zis' faces detached from their bodies. A purple light engulfed them, and they disappeared into the dense clouds overhead.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao members looked up and shouted, "Sovereign Doulao! Come here, quick! Da Nuo is about to awaken!"

Boom!

The thick clouds dissipated as if they were bubbles that had collided with something solid.

Li Huowang decided to leave. He stepped forward but almost keeled over as the solid ground had transformed into some kind of special liquid. No, it wasn't just the ground; even Li Huowang's fleshly body became soft and sagged.

If it weren't for the maggots inside of him, he would have melted into the ground.

What is this? Li Huowang looked up and saw a yin-yang taiji fish in the distance. It was so far and radiant as if it had become a sun in the sky. No, there were two suns—No, there were four suns!

Li Huowang stared closely at the four suns and saw that his vision had split into four as well. Just as Li Huowang's thoughts were about to split into six, the triumphant laughter of the Shai Zis in the distance echoed in his ears.

"Hahaha, you got bamboozled! Da Nuo has yet to awaken, so how come you look so scared?" A deafening noise echoed just then. The Shai Zis' laughter continued as they stared unabashedly at the sky, showing zero respect for their Siming. "Look at what I've brought you. Weren't you missing an eye? I found one for you!"

Swish!

The huge yin-yang taiji fish expanded, and it became like a lid that blotted out the entire sky in an instant. Shangjing became extremely unstable; those in existence had vanished, while those that were not supposed to exist had materialized into existence.

Li Huowang was struggling as well. His Five Elements Intercalation was still active, but he still seemed as insignificant as a mere ant in the face of the entity before him.

Li Huowang looked up again and saw that he hadn't been staring at a yin-yang taiji fish.

He had been staring at two intertwined seas!

What's that under the black-and-white seafloor? Li Huowang saw something, and he grabbed his head in pain. Dark red blood flowed out of his seven orifices, and his head swelled up in the blink of an eye. Li Huowang had just seen a Siming for the first time, and he had finally realized just how powerful Simings were.

A glance was enough for Li Huowang to understand many things.

Li Huowang's existence itself seemed to be under corrosion, but an extremely sharp pain brought him back to reality.

A grotesque noise echoed as Li Huowang's fleshly body cracked open; scars appeared out of nowhere, bringing a seemingly endless agony to Li Huowang. However, the pain had also forced his consciousness to remain grounded.

When he came back to his senses, Li Huowang found himself on a scroll. The scroll was under Zhuge Yuan's control. Li Huowang looked up at Zhuge Yuan and saw that the latter's face was incredibly solemn as they moved on the undulating ground.

The scroll was like a wooden boat carrying them away from danger.

"Brother Li, sit tight; let's leave first before talking about anything," Zhuge Yuan said as he stared at the discolored skies, but he wasn't panicking at all.

Zhuge Yuan's composure allowed Li Huowang to relax a bit. He had come here to find the Strayed One Bei Feng, so he didn't expect that he'd get involved in such a big incident.

Was that the Siming Doulao of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? What were they trying to achieve?

Li Huowang stared at the colossal vertical pupil and saw that it had been covered with a golden mask and was flying toward the yin-yang taiji symbol in the sky. The colossal vertical pupil struggled, and it fell into the sea overhead.

The sea boiled instantly when the eye plunged into it, but a mere eye was no match for what lay beneath the sea.

“Brother Li, I hope I’m just overthinking, but if not...” Zhuge Yuan trailed off, staring at the sea overhead.

“What?”

Zhuce Yuan took out his brush and wrote the character "Swift" in the air.

The scroll beneath them moved even faster.

An unknown amount of time passed until they saw the gates of the imperial palace. Li Huowang’s heart thumped wildly at the sight. He couldn’t care less about what was happening; all he knew was that he would soon be free from the Strayed One’s hallucination..

“Brother Zhuge, can I borrow your old almanac once we’re out of here? I want to question—” Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence and trembled as he stared at the taiji sea overhead.

The same colossal vertical pupil behind the golden mask was floating in the white circle of the taiji sea, and it was staring at Li Huowang!

Chapter 438 - Sitting Oblivion Dao

Is it looking at me? Why is it looking at me? thought Li Huowang. He trembled as he looked up at the eyeball within the yin-yang Taiji diagram. There was no answer to his question. The only thing Li Huowang knew was that Doulao was staring at him.

Li Huowang decisively lunged toward the liquid-like ground. Li Huowang would rather sink into the ground rather than be devoured by Doulao like the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye!

In no time, Li Huowang sunk halfway into the soil. The next moment, he felt the world turn upside down. The surface of the mud became the ceiling, while the black-and-white sea in the distance became the ground.

Li Huowang was inverted in midair, and he couldn't stop himself from falling toward the yin-yang Doulao beneath him.

I refuse to accept this! I was just about to obtain the cultivation method against the hallucination! I was about to become an ordinary person! Li Huowang roared inwardly. He gnashed his teeth and shook his right hand.

The maggots inside of him burst out, entangling each other and transforming into a rope. The rope made out of maggots wrapped around a stone wall that was on the verge of collapse.

Li Huowang barely managed to stabilize himself, and he wasn't in the best situation as well. He was still falling toward the yin-yang Doulao, and the pulling force on him was getting stronger every second.

Soon, invisible threads appeared above Li Huowang's head. The black-and-white sea churned, and some of the threads attached to Li Huowang were severed. Some threads inside Li Huowang were pulled out, while the threads outside were spirited away.

A few threads became entangled with each other. At first, Li Huowang thought that he would get stuck here forever, but the scenery around him peeled away, and he suddenly found himself staring at a giant ox several times taller than himself.

It took Li Huowang a moment to realize it, but the fear in his heart was the same fear he had felt when he first saw a water buffalo at the young age of six. The scenery peeled away once more, and Li Huowang found himself in front of a counter at a pawnshop.

The counter was tall, and Li Huowang found it scary. The distinct fear reminded him of the time when he became an apprentice at a pawnshop somewhere in town.

The next moment, he saw a skinny man crying bitterly. He was the owner of the pawnshop and was Li Huowang's master. He had fallen into a trap set by a group of swindlers and had lost everything.

Li Huowang lost his source of livelihood and had to fend for himself.

In the end, he made contact with the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

The scenery peeled away slowly at first, and then it began to pick up speed as more and more sceneries flashed before Li Huowang's eyes. Some vague sceneries eventually became clear, and some of them were sceneries of special moments.

Some sceneries depicted his lies, while some depicted his own experience learning supernatural powers in the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

“Boss Hong Zhong, what are you doing? Seriously? How come you've decided to play in the big leagues? You're actually playing with the Strayed Ones? Are you not afraid of going too far?”

“Ah, the realm of the Three Officials is too high for me to reach or understand.”

The memories that became clearer as time went on made Li Huowang feel an unprecedented fear. His pale lips trembled like an aspen tree.

“I’m not Hong Zhong; I’m Li Huowang; I’m not Hong Zhong; I am Li Huowang...” Li Huowang muttered to himself, but his repeated muttering wouldn’t be able to convince anyone, much less himself.

If people were incapable of imagining scenes of such clarity, then what were these memories?!

Li Huowang’s grip on the wall loosened as he was inundated by more and more memories. If everything about Li Huowang was fabricated by Hong Zhong to deceive himself, was it really necessary for him to struggle so desperately just to stay alive?

Zhuguo Yuan noticed something amiss with Li Huowang. He frowned and reached for his waist, pulling out a slender soft sword. Zhuguo Yuan stomped resolutely on the scroll with both feet before stomping on his right foot.

A figure in white clothes flew past Li Huowang at breakneck speeds. The figure charged at Douluo blotting out the sky. Once Li Huowang was no longer in Douluo’s line of sight, the pulling force vanished, and Li Huowang crashed heavily into the wall.

The sceneries in his mind had vanished, but the memories had become unprecedentedly vivid as if they had truly happened.

“No, no, no...!” Li Huowang trembled. He reached for his face and noticed that his facial features, flesh, and even his bones were changing rapidly, transforming into Hong Zhong. Li Sui’s tentacles weren’t the reason for this change; his appearance was changing according to his subconscious thoughts.

The cogs in Li Huowang’s mind turned frantically, and his appearance changed into Puppy, Lu Zhuangyuan, Gao Zhijian, Bai Lingmiao, Zhao Wu, and Chun Xiaoman. His face changed rapidly as Li Huowang was slowly forgetting his own appearance.

Boom!

A thunderous boom echoed, prompting Li Huowang to look up.

He saw Zhuge Yuan's soft sword shattering into pieces, and he saw a sword wave flying toward Doulao in the sky. The sword wave was as tiny as an ant in comparison to Doulao's enormous size.

Doulao's gaze swept toward Li Huowang once again.

Zhuce Yuan moved quickly and somersaulted to land in front of Li Huowang.

Zhuce Yuan showed no fear even when facing the gargantuan Doulao. His left hand was behind his back, while his right hand gripped his brush tightly. An audible cracking noise echoed as he pointed at Doulao's one and only eye in the sky.

"Brother Li! Go ahead and leave! I'll block this one for you. Don't worry, the other Simings are watching, so it can't descend upon the mortal world! Everything will be fine once we're out of the capital!"

Li Huowang's appearance had become that of a stranger in Zhuge Yuan's eyes, but the latter had treated Li Huowang the same.

Li Huowang stared at Zhuge Yuan's upright figure with a complicated expression.

"Brother Zhuge, that's a Siming. Why are you doing this for me?"

"It is important to know the hearts of people! I just want to do it, that's all!"

Swoosh !

The pale old almanac flew up and expanded, blotting out the sky.

Zhuce Yuan floated and flew toward the old almanac. Then, using the earth as his inkstone and the sky as his canvas. He waved his brush and wrote, "In the year of Yi Hai, the earth element descends today! Beware the Siming's appearance in the world!"

The pale old almanac burst into flames with a deafening explosion. The pages—engulfed in flames—were like yellow talismans that drifted toward Doulao. The entire world became brighter just then, and the black-and-white Doulao dimmed.

Li Huowang was confused. He gnashed his teeth and clenched his fists. I can't go ahead and leave. How can I abandon my friends and escape by myself?

“Don’t be a fool! That’s the Doulao’s true body! How can you possibly fight that? It’s rare to encounter someone so foolish as to attempt to fight it, so hurry up and escape with your life,” an illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member advised.

“Nonsense! Who are you trying to fool here?! The Shai Zis can only use their false decrees to summon an incarnation of Doulao; they cannot summon Doulao's true body!”

Chapter 439 - Zhuge Yuan

Zhuge Yuan was fighting so desperately for him, so Li Huowang knew that he couldn't remain confused about his identity. Regardless of his identity, he owed Zhuge Yuan his life, and he couldn't just run away without repaying his debt.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and looked around. He saw that the Emperor of the Great Liang and the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau were busy fighting with the Shai Zis, so he made a beeline for them.

Before his shoe could touch the ground, a playing card would fly out of his hand to provide a foothold for him like a lotus leaf on water. Li Huowang approached them swiftly as if he were a dragonfly skimming over a lake.

The few Shai Zis obviously had no intentions of fighting to the death and were simply toying with them. They seemed to be waiting for Doulao to intervene and deal with them all at once.

"Is there a living Muddled One inside the array?!" Li Huowang roared upon entering the battlefield. He didn't expect an answer, but he noticed a subtle change in the expression of one of the Deputy Chiefs. Li Huowang used his years of experience in deceiving others and quickly analyzed the Deputy Chief's expression.

He had shown alertness in the face of Li Huowang's question rather than confusion or bewilderment. In other words, there was a high chance that there was a living Muddled One inside the array.

It made sense as well. Yin and Yang belonged to the same scale; if one wanted to balance the scales, then one had to use a living and deceased Muddled One at the same time.

Li Huowang decisively rushed away while under the Sitting Oblivion Dao members' close surveillance.

One of the Shai Zis was surprised to see Li Huowang. He turned to the Shai Zi next to him and asked, "Hey, why did you let that Hong Zhong go?"

"I have no idea. That's obviously a Hong Zhong of the Great Liang. In other words, it's one of your people. Why are you asking me?"

"Nonsense! Are you blind? That's obviously a Hong Zhong of your Great Qi!"

While they argued, Li Huowang soon found himself inside a side hall in the eastern region. There was supposed to be a golden hall here, but the gold had become the Sacred Mountain Ghost's mask, so Li Huowang couldn't see anything other than some debris and wooden pillars.

Li Huowang rushed into the center of the hall and saw a translucent white fox that had died in the middle of the array. Li Huowang instantly deduced that the fox was the eye of the array here. Li Huowang moved fast, flinging out Yao Ji mahjong tiles in all directions.

The eyes on these mahjong tiles blinked as if the tiles were living creatures. Every single piece of information that the Yao Ji tiles' eyes had clapped on was transmitted into Li Huowang's brain, so he soon discovered the location of the other array eyes in the other halls.

After a while, Li Huowang found himself standing on a floating piece of wood. He looked down and saw a rotting man in the soil. The man resembled the Muddled One from back then with golden threads sewing shut his seven orifices.

The only difference was that there was a swastika on his chest.

Li Huowang glanced at Zhuge Yuan falling from the sky and took a deep breath. Then, he moved quickly and scooped out the living Muddled One from the soil. Li Huowang dared not hesitate and immediately opened his right hand, revealing four Bai[1] Ban.

Li Huowang slapped it on his back. “Kong!” [2]

The tiles entered the Muddled One’s body, and it abruptly took to the sky.

However, the ordeal wasn't over yet.

While the living Muddled One was flying toward Doulao, Li Huowang quickly located the dead Muddled One that he had seen when he first entered the palace. It was the same Muddled One that he and Ji Xiang had discovered.

When the two pairs of tiles entered him, Li Huowang sent a bicycle kick at the back of the Muddled One.

The dead Muddled One took to the sky at breakneck speeds. It moved so fast that it left behind an afterimage as it made a beeline for the living Muddled One in mid-air.

Li Huowang's plan was to use the formidable power of the living Muddled One and the dead Muddled One against Doulao’s avatar. Li Huowang had no other cards up his sleeve except for this and Zhuge Yuan himself.

“Brother Zhuge, move aside! The living Muddled One and the dead Muddled One are about to collide!” Li Huowang roared.

Zhuge Yuan's veins bulged as he struggled non-stop, and he heaved a sigh of relief upon hearing Li Huowang's roar. Immediately afterward, he hurled his brush into the air with all his strength before falling toward the ground, utterly exhausted.

The nervous Li Huowang caught the falling Zhuge Yuan.

Just then, a jet-black light erupted as the living Muddled One and the dead Muddled One collided, becoming one. Fortunately, the jet-black light disappeared as fast as it appeared.

Li Huowang looked up to see a huge hole in Doulao’s body. No, it wasn't just Doulao; even the sky had a huge hole in it as if a massive circle had been carved out of the sky.

Doulao became unstable after losing a huge chunk of its body,

Doulao became unstable, flickering intermittently.

Li Huowang could feel Doulao watching him, but Doulao couldn't even maintain its form, much less attack the former.

Doulao cast a deep gaze upon Li Huowang before disappearing.

The skies cleared up instantly as Doulao vanished.

"Brother Zhuge, we did it!" Li Huowang shouted in excitement, "We succeeded! We—"

Li Huowang stopped mid-sentence upon seeing Zhuge Yuan's condition. The latter had aged significantly, and his fleshly body had cracked open, seemingly on the brink of collapse.

And it wasn't just Zhuge Yuan's fleshly body...

The Sitting Oblivion Dao's innate abilities allowed Li Huowang to see Zhuge Yuan's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings. Zhuge Yuan's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings were in dire condition; they stuck together as they slowly took on a deathly gray color.

Li Huowang was helpless at the sight. The cogs in his mind turned desperately as he searched through Hong Zhong and his own memories to find a glimmer of hope amidst the sea of memories, but...

Li Huowang's mind was telling him that Zhuge Yuan was beyond saving.

Zhuge Yuan was like a bowl with a hole at the bottom, and everything in the bowl was leaking outside. Zhuge Yuan had utterly exhausted himself to resist Doulao's avatar for an extended period of time.

Li Huowang anxiously looked around for turmeric paper. He wanted to use talismans as a last resort, but Zhuge Yuan stopped him.

"Brother Li, don't bother. I'm not afraid of death, and you don't need to blame yourself. I didn't do this for you; I did this for the people of this world as well."

Tears streamed down Li Huowang's eyes as Zhuge Yuan grew weaker and weaker in the face of death.

Li Huowang gasped for breath as he spoke frantically, "Why did you bother being so noble in this crazy world? What's the point of being so noble? Who would dare to say anything even if you had run away? And did I ask you to save me? I'm from the Sitting Oblivion Dao! Why did you save me?!"

Zhuce Yuan revealed a magnanimous smile and said, "This isn't about being noble. I've simply read many books about sages—more books than others that I know what should be done and what should not be done. Although I dare not claim to be a gentleman, I cannot abandon a friend in need and flee by myself."

Chapter 440 - Libation

Li Huowang felt a heart-wrenching pain in his heart as the light in Zhuge Yuan's eyes faded away. His mind was in turmoil, and he felt like someone had stabbed him in the chest. He wanted to say something, but he couldn't bring himself to speak in the face of his dying friend.

"Brother Li, you only have a few maggots left alive inside of you. Are you really okay?" Zhuge Yuan asked, staring at the hole in Li Huowang's chest. Even though he was breathing his final few breaths, he still asked such a question with concern in his tone.

Li Huowang revealed an ugly smile, making him look even worse than crying. Li Huowang shook his head vigorously and said, "Brother Zhuge, d-do... do you have any final wishes? Tell me, and I'll fulfill them no matter what!"

Zhuge Yuan exhaled slowly, and he stammered, "N-No, I've lived a life true to my desires... I don't have... any regrets..."

Snowfall had inexplicably vanished during the battle, but the fighting had ceased, so snow began falling once more. The snowflakes landed slowly on Zhuge Yuan's dilated pupils.

Li Huowang watched in grief as Zhuge Yuan slowly became cold and lifeless in his eyes. However, an idea struck him from out of nowhere, and he roared excitedly, "I can save you, Brother Zhuge! I've just come up with a way to save you!"

Li Huowang raised his arm covered in bulging veins, and he grabbed Zhuge Yuan's neck. He immediately tightened his grip, but Zhuge Yuan didn't respond and merely stared at him with his glazed, dead eyes.

Li Huowang squeezed with all his might, and his voice trembled as he whispered, "Brother Zhuge, I've killed some people in the past... no, perhaps they're people who died around me, but... they became illusions around me!

"Perhaps you can become one of them! You just have to become an illusion, and I can definitely make you real once I've achieved mastery over my powers as a Strayed One!"

Li Huowang squeezed frantically before tearing Zhuge Yuan's head off from his shoulders. He hugged Zhuge Yuan's head and knelt on the ground. Moments later, he looked around in confusion.

Jin Shanzhao, the old monk, Hong Zhong, and Peng Longteng. He saw only four illusions; Zhuge Yuan was missing.

Zhuce Yuan's failure to become an illusion meant that he was truly dead.

Li Huowang's trembling lips turned pale as he hugged Zhuge Yuan's head. He leaned forward and balled his left hand into a fist before smashing it on the ground. The solid earth cracked open, and it was stained crimson by Li Huowang's wounds from the stump of his two missing left fingers.

He slammed the ground over and over again to no avail. Zhuge Yuan was dead, and there was no way he would come back to life. Tears fell down Li Huowang's eyes and pelted Zhuge Yuan's hair.

Why? How come everyone kind to him had ended up meeting such horrible fates?

Perhaps there was something wrong with the world itself? Was it really true that those who were good would die young, while those evil would live long lives?

Li Huowang felt wronged, and he felt indignant.

This is wrong! This world is wrong! The world should not be like this! Li Huowang roared to himself as he slammed his bloody hand on the ground. Eventually, his hand came to a halt, but it wasn't because he had chosen to stop; it was simply because he could no longer lift his hand.

The Five Elements Intercalation would soon be over, and he would die soon if he didn't do anything about his current predicament.

Hesitation fled across Li Huowang's eyes, and he felt like dying wasn't so bad. He truly couldn't care less whether he would live or die today.

Li Huowang lowered his head slowly and smacked his forehead on the ground.

A grotesque noise echoed as his skull fractured upon contact. A sharp pain inundated Li Huowang, sobering him up. Zhuge Yuan had risked everything to save your life! Do you even have the right to die?! How can you live up to what he has done for you if you die?

Zhuge Yuan's sacrifice would become a joke if you were to die! You are not allowed to die! You have to live on! Li Huowang smacked his head on the ground several times, and he only stopped when the flesh on his forehead had been reduced to minced meat, revealing his white skull.

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and staggered to his feet.

Li Sui took control of Li Huowang's original body and walked up to him.

Li Huowang stared at the darkening skies and shook his head vigorously. He raised the sword in his hand and slashed his own forearm. "Stop pretending! How dare you try to set up a trap for me at this point! Li Sui, retract your tentacles!"

The eyes of the "drunk" Bei Feng snapped wide open.

"Your body is about to break down. We have to swap. I absolutely cannot die right now. I must live on!" Li Huowang urged.

Bei Feng stared at Li Huowang and endured the pain to show some disdain.

"Why should I swap?" Bei Feng asked.

"Five years ago, you owe me a favor at Women's Mountain! Are you thinking of going back on your word?" Li Huowang asked.

Bei Feng examined Li Huowang from top to bottom. Then, he put both hands together and said, "Boss Hong Zhong, congratulations on your return! You've played a really big role in this incident; I even thought that you wouldn't be able to come back."

Li Huowang blinked, and he found himself in his original body.

Meanwhile, Bei Feng examined herself and saw the cavity in her chest.

"Ah, my body is completely unusable now..." Bei Feng grumbled. She looked around and found a Great Liang guard in the distance, hopping around with a severed leg.

Bei Feng blinked, and she found herself hopping around with a severed leg.

Meanwhile, the stupefied guard had yet to realize that he had swapped bodies with Bei Feng when he stiffened and fell to the ground, dying from his injuries.

Bei Feng hopped over to Li Huowang with her remaining leg.

"Boss Hong Zhong, what are you doing kneeling there? Let's go and help our bosses, the Shai Zis. Look! They're about to smash each other's heads!"

However, Bei Feng received no response.

Li Huowang was crying while staring at the empty space to his left.

Bei Feng reached out in confusion, but she couldn't feel anything.

"Brother Zhuge, how are you?" Li Huowang asked in a trembling voice. Li Huowang's heart raced, and he couldn't contain his excitement as he stared at Zhuge Yuan.

As usual, Zhuge Yuan was dressed in white, and his expression was still the epitome of composure. He was holding a folding fan and was fanning himself gently.

The other illusions cast curious gazes at the newcomer.

Zhuge Yuan closed his fan and pointed at the other illusions.
“Brother Li, can you introduce me to these people?”

Li Huowang was so excited that he had no idea what to say. His hands trembled incessantly, and it took him a long time to speak as he stammered, “G-goodness! I did it! I succeeded! You really became an illusion!”

It seemed that the reason Zhuge Yuan didn’t appear immediately was that Li Huowang wasn’t in his original body.

Chapter 441 - Past

Li Huowang had never turned an illusion into a real human being; he had only ever done the other way around. In other words, he had no idea how long it would take him to transform an illusion into a real human being.

However, he had succeeded in transforming Zhuge Yuan into an illusion, so there was a sliver of hope. Zhuge Yuan just had to stay alive, and Li Huowang would surely resurrect him in the future.

Li Huowang unconsciously reached out for Zhuge Yuan, but his hands passed by Zhuge Yuan's figure. Even though he couldn't touch Zhuge Yuan, the fact that he was here still gave Li Huowang a motivation boost.

The past few hours had been extremely stressful for Li Huowang to the point that he almost collapsed from exhaustion. In fact, his face was red and covered in beaded sweat at the moment.

“Hong Zhong, what are you doing? Are you not going to leave? If you're not going to leave with me, then I'm leaving first,” Bei Feng said, staring at the chaotic battlefield; she was excited to jump back into the fray.

Li Huowang took a moment to compose himself. Then, he looked up at Bei Feng before looking around the battlefield. Doulao had vanished, but the Sitting Oblivion Dao and the Surveillance Bureau had no intention of stopping the fight.

In fact, they fought even fiercer. Li Huowang saw a pair of dragon horns protruding from behind the veil of the emperor. Meanwhile, the four Shai Zis were sitting cross-legged on the ground, setting up another array.

Li Huowang retracted his gaze and sank his body illusion into the ground to become invisible. Then, he retreated slowly out of the ruined palace.

“Daoist, why are you leaving? Are you not interested in the cultivation method to cultivate the ‘Truth’?”

Li Huowang smiled coldly and said, “She doesn’t have it. It was just a rumor to lure in unsuspecting Strayed Ones.”

The entire Shangjing had been devastated by Doulao's appearance. The sight reminded Li Huowang of a violent earthquake's aftermath. Li Huowang grabbed a horse that belonged to no one and traveled to his own home.

His house had tilted, but Bun was outside the house and was sitting next to the crooked tree in the courtyard.

Li Huowang entered the house, gathered his belongings, and ran out of the city with Bun. They ran nonstop, running for tens of Lis before stopping in front of a waterfall somewhere in the deep forest.

Zhuguo Yuan couldn't admire the scenery as he frowned. “Sigh. I wonder if the people of the Great Qi have succeeded even without my lead.”

“Leave it be, Zhuguo Yuan. You should have prioritized yourself more than others. I’m not sure if you managed to hear my plan before you died, so let me tell you my plan again.”

Li Huowang explained his plan to revive Zhuguo Yuan.

Zhuguo Yuan pondered over it before sighing and shaking his head. “Junior Li, I think it's impossible.”

“Why not?”

“A Strayed One can indeed turn truths into reality, but I am a living being. I’m not just a normal human being but a Twisted One as well.

“I have certain unique properties that are going to be difficult to reproduce, and it's all because I'm a Twisted One. I don’t think your primordial breath has enough power to do such a thing.”

"I can do it!" Li Huowang roared, attracting the attention of the other illusions.

"You have no idea just how powerful the Strayed Ones are, Brother Zhuge!

"Bei Feng had not told me everything. Indeed, the primordial breath of the Strayed Ones does come from Doulao Taiyang, but what she didn't say was that the Heavenly Daos under Doulao's control wasn't innate to it!"

Li Huowang clenched his fist and continued, "The Heavenly Daos are stronger than the Siming! I reckon that I can create even a whole new universe once I'm strong enough, much less give you a mortal body."

Zhugue Yuan was worried about Li Huowang, and he couldn't help but ask, "Where did you hear that from?"

Zhugue Yuan was certain that Li Huowang didn't learn that information when he was on Xing Island.

Li Huowang was taken aback by the question, and he calmed down slowly as he replied, "I just recalled my past. I remembered my life as Hong Zhong."

"Hm?" Zhugue Yuan was surprised.

Li Huowang smiled bitterly and said, "I don't want to accept it, but it's the truth. I am Hong Zhong. It was one thing to be tricked by Bei Feng, but how could I explain my memories? How can I explain my powers as Hong Zhong?"

Li Huowang's face changed rapidly, transforming into the Hong Zhong mahjong tile.

Indeed, he was Hong Zhong, and the fact made Li Huowang's head hurt. After all, it meant that he had never been a high school student. The other side was indeed just a mere hallucination.

The Abbess of the Benevolent Nunnery was right—Li Huowang was from this world, and the random scenes in his mind were fake memories that he had implanted in himself when he was still Hong Zhong.

Li Huowang felt like someone had stabbed a knife into his heart when he realized that Yang Na and his mother on the other side were fake all this while.

“Wait, Junior Li. Something’s not right. Let me think about this,” Zhuge Yuan said, placing his hands behind his back and pacing back and forth. After some time, Zhuge Yuan looked at Li Huowang and said, “Junior Li, let’s not speak in absolutes and say that you’re Hong Zhong.”

Li Huowang frowned and replied, “Setting aside the memories, how do I explain my Sitting Oblivion Dao powers? Also...”

Li Huowang looked around to get his bearings. Then, he got on the horse and traveled again until he saw a roadside restaurant selling noodles. He walked inside and revealed his mahjong tile face without talking to the owner.

The owner’s smiling demeanor shifted when he saw the Hong Zhong mahjong tile on Li Huowang’s face. He immediately took out a small mahjong tile with the Hong Zhong pattern on it and presented it to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang placed his palm together and split it in half. He presented the top part to Zhuge Yuan and showed him the five words the size of flies inside of the tile, “Hong Zhong, Li Huowang.”

“See that? This was one of the verifications I made for myself six years ago. I know that this is a hard-to-accept truth, but this is the truth. I am Hong Zhong, and I cannot run away from my true identity.”

“No, that’s not right.” Zhuge Yuan shook his head and said, “You’re not Hong Zhong... your identity was swapped with someone else.

“It’s just like the Qi Kingdom and the Liang Kingdom.

“At first, the Qi Kingdom ruled over the lands, while the Liang Kingdom was the fake one. However, just like how they got swapped, your timeline and past have been swapped as well.”

Chapter 442 - Hong Zhong

“Past? Timeline? Great Qi? Great Liang?”

Li Huowang was stunned by Zhuge Yuan’s explanation. Zhuge Yuan's words were even more weird than the fact that he was Hong Zhong all along. “That doesn't make sense at all. How can something that has been set in stone be swapped?”

“Why not? If the history of the Qi Kingdom can be swapped to that of the Liang Kingdom's history, then why can’t your history be swapped with someone else?”

Li Huowang was worried about the accuracy of Zhuge Yuan's words.

Zhugue Yuan had never harmed him, but Zhuge Yuan's words were often just partially correct.

Li Huowang wanted to say something, but he still ended up pondering the possibility that Zhuge Yuan was true.

If Zhuge Yuan's words was true, then he wasn't Hong Zhong...

But... Li Huowang felt a headache coming as he thought, If I'm Hong Zhong, then the other side is fake. Yes, that's right... I wasn't Hong Zhong before, so does that mean that the other side was real back then?

“Junior Li, are you okay?” Zhuge Yuan asked, sounding worried.

“Don’t worry. Let him sit there and think over your words,” said Hong Zhong's illusion. "You're a newcomer, so I'm sure you don't know that he does that often. He just sits there and thinks about many things."

Li Huowang turned to Zhuge Yuan just then and asked, “Senior Zhuge, are you sure about what you said? Can someone's past truly be swapped for someone else's past?”

Zhugue Yuan's words were just too surreal.

What entity was capable of changing someone's entire past?

Zhuge Yuan nodded and explained, "Ordinary entities can't do it, but we just fought against Doulao."

As the Siming that controlled two Heavenly Daos, it wasn't strange that it was capable of doing such a thing.

However, Li Huowang wasn't sure of its motives for doing so. "Senior Zhuge, why? I'd understand it if it had killed me immediately, but why did it have to go through all the trouble to swap my past with a Hong Zhong's past?"

Even a Siming needs a reason to do something. What if the Siming is like the Sitting Oblivion Dao members, who will do anything for no rhyme or reason other than for the sake of fun. Wait, is this even fun?

Even Zhuge Yuan didn't know how to answer that question and shook his head. "I don't know. I do know that you're not a Hong Zhong. If you really were Hong Zhong, I would've discovered it back in Buddha's Skeleton Temple."

Zhuge Yuan could truly figure out the identity of a disguised Sitting Oblivion Dao member just by getting close enough to them. Li Huowang dived into his memories and found no techniques that he could use to hide his identity from Zhuge Yuan.

"Junior Li," Zhuge Yuan said, and his expression became serious as he continued, "I want you to put aside the matter of reviving me for now. Your substituted past as Hong Zhong is a pressing matter that needs your immediate attention before anything else."

"There must be a reason behind Doulao's decision, and I think there's more than meets the eye here."

"No, no, no. I think we can just ignore my past. I mean, we already know that my identity as Hong Zhong is fake," Li Huowang said. His eyes twinkled in excitement as he got onto the horse and continued, "I managed to find the method to cultivate the 'Truth' through Hong Zhong's memories! I have to obtain that first!"

“Really? Does this Hong Zhong know about it? Where is it?”
Zhuge Yuan asked, sounding shocked.

“It’s hidden somewhere in a special way, but I just have to go and retrieve it.”

Hong Zhong had hidden it somewhere to make sure that no one else would get their hands on it. Li Huowang traveled for more than a hundred Li to reach his destination, which was a small town south of the Liang Kingdom.

It was a cold day, and it was already nighttime, but there were still many people on the streets. They were burning papers which were inside circles drawn on the floor, and most of them were burning pieces of paper near crossroads.

Li Huowang saw that and realized that it was Qingming^[1] once again. He had been living here for an entire year now.

Li Huowang walked until someone's roars caught his attention.

“I’m hitting your head so that you’ll be out of breath every day. I’m hitting your face until your family goes crazy, and they’ll despise you for all your life. I’m hitting your eyes until you are blind, and you’ll end up injuring your hands every day. I’m hitting your ears until they’re filled with filth that you have to dig out with your fingers. I’m hitting your mouth until your breath smells like crap!”

Li Huowang followed the roars and saw an old lady. The old lady was sitting on a wooden stool and was using her shoes to beat a human-shaped paper. ^[2]

The old woman didn’t even raise her head despite hearing the sound of horse hooves next to her. “Two hundred coins to beat the person you hate. My technique is effective, so don’t think that it’s effective! Don’t believe me? Go and ask someone else!”

Li Huowang looked at the mole on her chin and said, “How about we play mahjong? You, me, and your daughter-in-law—the three of us will play.”

The old woman was stunned. Finally, she looked up, and her expression shifted intermittently as she stared at Li Huowang for a while.

Eventually, the old lady smiled and exclaimed, “Sure! Let’s go! Let’s go and play right now!”

The old woman was all smiles as she led the way for Li Huowang. Soon, they arrived at a room with a mahjong table. The old lady's chubby daughter-in-law was already sitting there in front of the mahjong table.

The three stared at the last remaining empty seat. A fourth person was supposed to sit there, so the three stared at the seat, seemingly waiting for the fourth person.

Tap.

Eventually, Li Huowang placed a Hong Zhong mahjong tile on the center of the table and said, “It seems that we're missing one person. Why don't you write them out?”

“Sure!” The two ladies said in unison and whipped out writing implements. They hung a massive piece of paper in the room and wrote in sync—one from the front and one from the back.

The ink from both sides glued to each other and transformed into legible words.

The words depicted the cultivation method to cultivate the "Truth" that Hong Zhong had decided to hide. A physical scroll was risky to store, so Hong Zhong decided to hide the cultivation method in the memories of other people.

“Sit down and silence the heart. Be relaxed. Relax the teeth and lips. Then, breathe deeply and slowly. The hands must be clenched naturally, while the eyes must be focused. Gather the light and be one with the surroundings.”

Li Huowang's hands trembled as he stared at the words on the paper.

The paper was light, but Li Huowang knew that it was far more expensive than gold.

Li Huowang was trembling, as he truly didn't expect that he'd finally obtain the cultivation method that he had been looking for all this while. Li Huowang didn't even hesitate to follow the instructions on the paper.

"Junior Li, wait," Zhuge Yuan said, "This might be Doulao's trap. The fact that Doulao managed to place this method in your memories means that it might be waiting for you to cultivate it."

Li Huowang stopped and looked down at the paper in his hands.

"You mean it's risky to cultivate this?" Li Huowang asked.

"Not necessarily. You just need to think first before acting. Don't forget that you're not Hong Zhong. You're Li Huowang, and your memories aren't supposed to be yours."

Chapter 443 - Cultivating The "Truth"

Li Huowang looked at the paper in his hands and recalled everything regarding the cultivation method. Hong Zhong's memories told him that this method was the correct one.

However, those memories embedded in Li Huowang's mind were fake. Could they be trusted? What if there were side effects?

Li Huowang hesitated before placing the paper down. It seems that I need to find another Strayed One to verify the method.

Previously, he'd tested the method for getting rid of the murderous aura entering someone's body before using it on Bai Lingmiao. Likewise, Li Huowang needed a test subject for the cultivation method. This was the simplest and most straightforward method to test it.

"Who should I use?" Li Huowang wondered.

He looked through his memories and remembered Bei Feng. Bei Feng was also a Strayed One and had been looking for the cultivation method too.

As a Sitting Oblivion Dao, Bei Feng could cultivate "Lies" and get rid of the hallucination, but Li Huowang was certain that she would still be drawn to a cultivation method that could allow her to use her primordial breath.

With a plan in mind, Li Huowang didn't hesitate. He left the house, leaving the old woman and her sister-in-law in the room as they continued to play mahjong.

Several days later, Li Huowang found Bei Feng in a brothel. She was soaking in a hot tub filled with petals.

Bei Feng smiled as she lifted her left leg out of the water, revealing her fair skin.

“Oh, it’s Hong Zhong. It’s my honor to have such an esteemed guest,” she said.

“Do you want the cultivation method to cultivate the ‘Truth’?” Li Huowang asked, showing her the sheet of paper with the cultivation method.

Bei Feng’s eyes lit up, and she walked out of the hot tub. Water dripped down her body as she walked towards Li Huowang.

Bei Feng remarked, “I knew you had it. You even lied to me and said you didn’t! You are so bad~”

Now that Bei Feng had taken over the body of the best prostitute in the brothel, her tone became coquettish and seductive.

She extended her arms towards Li Huowang, but she was puzzled by Li Huowang's actions. “Why are you so good? Do you want to lie to me again? I won’t get tricked by you again.”

“Then don’t take it.”

Li Huowang put the scroll away and walked out.

“Ai! Wait! I didn’t say I don’t want it.” Bei Feng extended her manicured hands and took it. “Fine. I’m willing to get tricked by you if it’s for the sake of this cultivation method.”

Her body was still wet when she put on a see-through shawl, sat down on the bed covered in red sheets, and started cultivating.

Li Huowang frowned and looked at her, as if waiting for something to happen.

Before long, several things were levitating around Bei Feng. One of the pink pillows circled around Bei Feng before it slowly transformed into a green brick.

Bei Feng opened her eyes in shock. “Hong Zhong! This is the real deal!”

But there was no one else there. Li Huowang was gone. Bei Feng was stunned.

Nevertheless, she ran out of the window with the scroll in her hand, smiling cheekily.

One month later, Bei Feng had already changed her body to that of an old man.

The old man was sitting in a cave and looked like an Immortal as he looked at the youth in front of him.

He said, "My disciple, since you are a Strayed One, I can't teach you much. It's now time for me to teach you the final technique, the method to cultivate 'Truth'! Once you've finished cultivating it, not only will you be able to command the heavens and earth but also remove those hallucination completely!"

The youth felt excited. He kept kowtowing and kneeling on the ground in front of the old man.

The old man was like a father to the youth. He'd save the youth from evil people and even taught the youth such an incredible technique!

Bei Feng squinted as she looked at the Strayed One in front of her. Hmph! Hong Zhong, do you think I'm an idiot that would just do what I'm told? You told me to try, so you thought I would try it myself? Of course, I will test it on another Strayed One instead. I don't know if you managed to cultivate it since you are so rash, but that's your issue, not mine, hehehe~

As the youth inhaled, the space around him twisted like it was going to be sucked into his body.

Everything in the cave started to change. The scene changed rapidly, going from a cave to a bedroom before changing to a prison.

When the youth started sinking into the ground, he opened his eyes and looked around him in astonishment. "Master! This method is useful!"

"Don't stop! Keep cultivating!" said the old man.

Li Huowang was currently invisible as he watched on from behind Bei Feng. He was clenching his fist hard.

He knew what kind of person Bei Feng was. That was why he'd set the trap. He only needed someone to test the method, and he didn't care who it was.

Li Huowang looked at the youth for a very long time until the moment he succeeded.

After verifying that everything was alright with the youth, Li Huowang slowly left the cave. He looked like he was in a horrible state. Li Sui's black tentacles covered his veins, extending all over his body. Li Huowang could see the tentacles wriggling and pushing outwards from beneath his skin.

He found a quiet place in the forest and sat down cross-legged. Then he closed his eyes and hands and started cultivating according to the method recorded on the paper.

Li Huowang turned his sight inwards into his body to find the formless primordial breath.

It was not an easy thing to do, especially since he was trying to cultivate the "Truth." It was a cultivation method that cultivated a concept.

Nevertheless, he was not greedy. His initial goal was to suppress the hallucination.

According to the cultivation method, as long as he used his inner sight to cover the primordial breath, he could stop the hallucination from occurring again.

Li Huowang cultivated for three nights straight before he took a deep breath. His voice was already shaking by then.

He said, "Li Sui. Come out. Let me try."

Tentacles spilled forth from his mouth before they pooled together into a ball. Two curious eyes peeked at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and clenched his fist tighter. He waited. He kept waiting and nothing happened. Fifteen minutes passed, and he was not dragged into the hallucination!

Li Huowang looked at the illusion at his side to share the good news. “Senior Zhuge! This thing is real! It’s useful! And I succeeded in using it!”

The illusion replied, “This is good. At the very least you don’t have to eat the Black Taisui anymore. You are no longer at risk of losing your body.”

“With this cultivation method, I can now suppress my hallucination and even control when it appears!”

Li Huowang revealed a part of the primordial breath that was covered in his inner sight, and everything shifted around him.

When he woke up, he found himself tied to a cold machine, and his temples were pulsing. He looked around and saw there were numerous people around him, including his mother. Li Huowang looked around in confusion, and everyone clapped.

Sun Xiaoqin was so happy that tears flowed out as she almost kneeled to one of the doctors, but the doctor stopped her.

The doctor said, “Madam Sun, no need to be so agitated. Since electroconvulsive therapy can wake your son up, he has a chance to recover as long as he eats his medicine and undergoes therapy at the same time.”

Li Huowang looked around and thought to himself. If the hallucination was caused by the primordial breath leaking out inside of me, that means this is fake...

Sun Xiaoqin hugged her son tightly and kept his head in her embrace.

She finally saw a chance for her son to recover. This was more important than anything else!

Li Huowang looked around as he basked in the warmth of his mother's embrace. He looked at the doctors and nurses around him, and his gaze became resolute.

“Mom, don’t worry. I’m not stuck in the hallucination anymore. I’m fine. A Strayed One’s body contains the primordial breath, which is part of the Heavenly Dao. I can use it now! Even if this place is fake, I will turn everyone here into reality one day!”

Chapter 444 - Li Jiancheng

Tied down in two straitjackets, Li Huowang looked around silently at the white walls, LED lights, and the dull green color of the shock-resistant glass.

The place was empty and was furnished simply, but Li Huowang was not bored. In fact, he looked around as if everything was a shade brighter than it was.

That was because these were real, not fake.

Li Huowang looked through Hong Zhong's memories and learned how strong Strayed Ones were. It was all due to the primordial breath hidden within them. The primordial breath was a part of the Heavenly Dao.

Just as how the Muddled Ones would rend the heavens, Strayed Ones could turn "Lies" into "Truth" as long as they mastered it.

The confusion in his mind dissipated once he learned about it. He didn't need to figure out what was real or fake because he could just turn everything into reality.

The metal door creaked open and Li Huowang turned to see who it was.

Two massive-looking prison guards dressed in protective clothing walked into the room and stood guard by the door.

Sun Xiaoqin appeared between them and walked into the room with a container of food, ignoring the two prison guards.

She said, "These youngsters. Sigh ... I already told them that nothing would happen to me here, yet they were still adamant on following me in. And there are even two of them! Is being a prison guard that boring?”

One of the prison guards grumbled, “Madam Sun, please don’t blame us. This is an order from our superior. Even though we work hard and do a lot of things, we only earn a few thousand per month. Look at how expensive houses are nowadays. We wouldn’t dare to risk our lives just for fun to deal with your son. We aren’t getting paid enough for it anyways.”

Sun Xiaoqin wanted to continue complaining, but she walked hurriedly when she saw Li Huowang looking at her.

She called out, “Son? Are you awake? Come, have a meal! I’ve made your favorite—wintermelon and pork rib soup!”

Li Huowang looked at the familiar and friendly face. Sun Xiaoqin used a short plastic spoon to scoop up some rice, pieces of rib, and wintermelon before placing it in front of Li Huowang’s mouth.

It was a simple but delicious meal. He enjoyed it slowly, no longer worrying about whether he was eating the real food or chewing on dirt and nails.

When he saw the wrinkles around Sun Xiaoqin’s eyes, Li Huowang said gently, “Mom, there’s no reason for you to come visit me so often. You need to rest a lot too. I will gradually recover.”

“What are you saying? You are in the critical stage of recovery. You need to have someone accompanying you!”

Li Huowang stopped trying to persuade his mother because he knew it was useless.

He continued eating and finished his meal peacefully; nothing strange happened.

The two prison guards sighed in relief when they saw one of their colleagues bringing in a middle-aged man.

Their colleague told them, “Don’t worry. He is the patient’s father.”

The three prison guards watched the man bring a bag of oranges towards the bed of the martial maniac.

“Dad,” Li Huowang said, looking at the man in front of him.

He rarely saw his father even in his hallucination previously.

Sun Xiaoqin pulled her husband outside. “Why are you here without informing me?”

Through the glass window, Li Huowang saw his parents discuss something while looking at him from time to time.

Li Huowang stared at them with complicated emotions. His parents' clothes were looser than before, indicating they had lost a lot of weight.

Five minutes later, Li Huowang saw his father entering the room again while his mother took the finished food container outside.

“Do you want some oranges?” his father offered.

His rough hands reached into the bag of oranges and took two out.

Li Huowang shook his head, but his father peeled an orange anyway and placed it on the table beside the bed.

“How’s everything recently?” his father asked.

Li Huowang answered, “Not bad. This place is quite good.”

“How’s your sickness?”

“I’m recovering soon. I’m telling the truth.”

“Oh. That’s good.”

Their conversation stopped there. This was normal in Li Huowang's household. Compared to his openly loving mother, his father was more reserved.

Li Huowang looked at his father and saw that he had dark eye bags and bloodshot eyes, a sign of a lack of sleep. His collar was turning yellow, and his sleeves were a bit oily. He hadn’t changed his clothes in a while. There were more white hairs on the balding head than there used to be, and the stubble on his chin showed he hadn’t shaved in a while too.

Li Huowang's father's name was Li Jiancheng.

Li Jiancheng stared at his son, who was tied to the bed, and the scar running across his face.

Taking a deep breath, Li Jiancheng reached into his pocket and took out a crumpled box of cigarettes. He lit it up with a green lighter. Li Jiancheng took a deep breath and exhaled the smoke out. His eyes were wet as if they were irritated by the smoke.

“Sir, I’m sorry, but the entire place is a non-smoking area. Please comply,” one of the guards said.

Li Jiancheng wanted to snuff out his cigarette, but he couldn’t find an ashtray. In the end, he used the discarded pieces of orange skin to snuff out his cigarette.

“Dad, I thought you quit? Why did you start smoking again?”

Li Jiancheng smiled and put the lighter away. “Because I’m feeling irritated. Don’t worry, this is a cheap brand of cigarette. It doesn’t cost me much.”

“I’m not worried about money but your health.”

Li Jiancheng remained quiet for a long time before he sighed. “It’s my fault. I didn’t realize you were sick early on. I’ve checked online and saw that illnesses related to the mental state had a higher chance of being treated if found early on. If I’ve found out sooner, we might’ve—”

“Dad, this is not your fault!” Li Huowang interrupted his father. “This is an issue with my body. Since I’m a Strayed One, this is my life. I can’t escape it. You don’t have to blame yourself; I will deal with it myself. Please don’t worry.”

However, Li Huowang saw his father's lips quiver and realized he shouldn’t have said that.

His father would never understand the other world. In fact, hearing those words made him think his son was still seriously ill.

“Huowang...” Li Jiancheng’s voice was filled with bitterness and tiredness. “I know you can’t differentiate the two places. Don’t worry. I don't blame you. If you like the other place, then just stay there. If you think you can live much more comfortably there, then go. I will handle everything here. Your father is still here."

Hearing that made Li Huowang's heart ache. Afraid he would cry, he didn't say anything else.

The father and son sat there silently until the prison guard came and informed them that visitation hours were up. Li Jiancheng, who was tired and stressed out, patted Li Huowang's head before standing up and leaving the room.

Chapter 445 - Start

“Mom, I think I will return to my crazy self for a moment, but don’t worry. Everything will be fine in the end. I will wake up every three to five days. Don’t worry if I’m late. That just means that I’m being held up on the other end. No, Mom. I’m not ill. Don’t get agitated, please listen to me.”

Zhuge Yuan stared at Li Huowang in confusion as he was talking to a crooked tree in the forest.

“See that? This must be your first time seeing it. Not everyone gets the chance to see a Strayed One stuck in a hallucination,” Hong Zhong’s illusion explained to Zhuge Yuan.

“Has Junior Li always acted like this in the past?” Zhuge Yuan asked puzzledly.

“Yeah. I heard the old monk say that he got stuck in the hallucination quite frequently before he started eating the Black Taisui.”

Zhuge Yuan looked at Li Sui coiled around at the base of the tree, and then at Li Huowang who was speaking to himself. “Sigh. Junior Li had it rough. Being a Strayed One is much more difficult than being a Twisted One.”

The old monk said, “Yeah. The Daoist has it rough. My heart aches for him every time I see him acting like that. I really want to do something for him but I don’t know what I can do.”

“Thank you for trying to help him.”

Even though the old monk looked the same as the Abbott of the Righteous Monastery in the Great Qi, Zhuge Yuan knew they weren't the same person. The Abbott was still alive after all.

“Oh? No worries. I have to thank you too. Also, be careful of the faceless man. He’s a liar. He tricked me many times.”

Zhugue Yuan looked at Hong Zhong standing beside him and smiled. "I see. He's part of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Sir, who is that headless one then?"

The old monk introduced the other illusions to Zhugue Yuan, including how they'd died.

"You mean to say that Senior Jin Shanzhao was killed by Peng Longteng?" Zhugue Yuan asked.

"That's what the Daoist told me, but he doesn't like talking to me, so I'm not very sure either."

"Then why does Senior Jin not hold any animosity towards General Peng Longteng?"

"I don't know. I'm not a parasite in his body, so I don't know what he's thinking."

"Alright, then let me ask again. Are there any others aside from the five of us?"

"There are. I heard there was once a baldy and a woman. They were illusions that once accompanied the Daoist, but they disappeared after some time."

"Does that mean Junior Li had seven illusions in total?" Zhugue Yuan wondered, fanning himself as he thought about it.

"What are you thinking?" Hong Zhong glared at Zhugue Yuan. "We are all illusions accompanying Li Huowang now. What are you scheming?"

Zhugue Yuan chuckled but said nothing.

"Senior Zhugue," Li Huowang called out, shifting their attention to him.

He looked the same as before, but something seemed off.

"Senior Zhugue, have you ever encountered anyone, aside from the Great Qi and the Great Liang, whose past was changed?" Li Huowang asked.

"No. There are extremely few cases where people got into contact with a Siming. But most of those people either went crazy or died just from getting into contact with a Siming, let alone getting one to change their past.”

Li Huowang frowned. Doesn't that mean I'm one of the first cases where my past was changed?

He thought he would be in trouble once his past was changed, but it was not exactly a bad deal either.

Li Huowang had obtained a new identity, Hong Zhong, and numerous techniques belonging to the Sitting Oblivion Dao. He could even use them freely.

Moreover, he obtained the method to cultivate "Truth" from Hong Zhong's memories. No matter how Li Huowang looked at it, everything had been good so far. There wasn't anything bad.

However, Li Huowang suspected that Doulao had an ulterior motive for changing his past.

Why...?

Li Huowang sifted through Hong Zhong's memories for information on Doulao, but he found nothing.

As Hong Zhong, he learned that Doulao was not a deity that the Sitting Oblivion Dao worshiped, but rather they used each other. Both parties were trying to gain an advantage by lying to each other.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao knew that the Doulao controlled "Lies."

Everyone had a small wisp of Doulao's "Lies" in their body, which was why everyone would lie from time to time. This much was certain, and the Sitting Oblivion Dao obtained energy by tricking a person and taking away the small wisp of "Lies" in a person's body. They also took things from their target's body.

However, the Sitting Oblivion Dao wondered why they needed to do that. Some of them hypothesized that Doulao wanted them to trick the common people and obtain the wisp of "Lies" to achieve its own goal.

As for what the goal of Doulao was, the Sitting Oblivion Dao didn't know anything about it.

"Maybe Shai Zi knows something about it," Li Huowang murmured to himself.

"Junior Li, I think we should distance ourselves from the Sitting Oblivion Dao as much as possible, especially Shai Zi. Once he sets his sights on you, everything will become much more complicated. You know that the Sitting Oblivion Dao don't fight head-on. They always operate behind others' backs; the same goes for Shai Zi."

"Don't worry, I'm not crazy yet. I won't go find Shai Zi. I need to find a quiet place to cultivate first. Once I'm done, I can finally find peace in both worlds."

Li Huowang could increase his strength, turn Zhuge Yuan back into reality, and even turn the hallucination into reality. The cultivation method was the key to achieve all of this.

Zhuge Yuan nodded. "Then, where should we go now?"

"I ..." Li Huowang said hesitantly, "I want to go back to Cowheart Village. It's a quiet place that's suitable for cultivating. I'm worried about Miaomiao and the others now that everything is in chaos outside."

He had to fulfill his promise to Miaomiao — that he would return once he could control his hallucination. He had technically succeeded, so it was time to go back.

Li Huowang recalled the faces he hadn't seen in a long time and longed to see them. They were his attachment to this world.

He had always been a man that never hesitated, so he hopped onto his horse and started moving towards Cowheart Village.

Li Huowang was about to depart when he remembered something was missing. "Wait, where's Li Sui and Bun?"

"Li Sui! Bun!" Li Huowang shouted towards the forest.

Black tentacles quickly appeared from beside a bush, rolling out as a tangled ball. Li Sui held Bun up with his tentacles wrapped around Bun's mouth and feet.

“What are you doing?” Li Huowang asked.

Li Sui replied, “Playing with the dog.”

Chapter 446 - Cowheart Village

Li Huowang had his veil on as he held the reins of his horse and stood by the road, looking at Cowheart Village from afar.

He had stood here a few months before, thinking about how to explain to Bai Lingmiao that he had killed her entire family.

He was now standing in the same location, thinking about how to explain to the villagers what he had gone through during the past few months.

Li Huowang had accomplished his goal and was no longer plagued by his hallucination. He should be happy to meet the villagers again, but he felt hesitant instead.

Unlike in the stillness of winter the last time he was here, Cowheart Village was much livelier in spring. There were people and cows working in the fields around the village.

The people working in the fields looked young and clumsy, but they worked hard. They looked quite disheveled though.

“Woof! Woof!”

Bun’s barking tore Li Huowang’s attention away, and he looked at Bun. Bun was arching its back and growling at Li Sui hiding in the bushes.

Even though Li Huowang had reprimanded Bun many times, it still refused to acknowledge Li Sui as a companion and viewed him as an enemy.

Li Sui asked, “Father, why is it barking at me? I like playing with it, but it doesn’t like me.”

Li Huowang looked at Li Sui. Li Sui was covered tightly in a straw robe and wore a hat with a black veil too.

If someone were to see Li Sui, they would've thought he was a short, plump kid, rather than a bundle of tentacles.

Li Huowang answered, "Since it doesn't want to play with you, you should play with something else instead. Stop bothering Bun."

Li Sui had been instrumental in suppressing Li Huowang's hallucination in the past, but Li Huowang no longer needed him for that. So, Li Huowang didn't know what to do with Li Sui now.

Should I let him go? Li Huowang thought.

However, he really didn't want to. He had taught Li Sui how to speak one word at a time ever since he developed a consciousness. Li Huowang would be lying to himself if he said he didn't feel attached to Li Sui even though he was an evil being.

Still, Li Sui might look horrifying, but he was a pure-hearted evil being. It would be too easy for someone to manipulate him. A Black Taisui was technically also a pill ingredient, and Li Huowang was afraid that the moment he released Li Sui into the wild, someone would snatch him up.

Li Huowang decided to raise Li Sui like Bun instead. Thankfully he wasn't a handful.

"Once you enter the village, you mustn't take off your robe and veil. Also, do not extend your tentacle outside the veil; you'll scare the others."

"Father, I understand," Li Sui replied quietly.

As his tentacles continued to wiggle, he followed Li Huowang to the entrance of the village, leaving a trail of slime in its wake.

Two people, a horse, and a dog approached the village. It was clear to the villagers that they were not peddlers. The villagers in the field quickly took notice of them.

"Senior Li! Senior Li, you are back!" Yang Xiaohai yelled.

He ran out of the fields excitedly, and a plump lady followed him out of curiosity.

Bun wagged its tail excitedly when it saw familiar faces and ran over. It jumped into Yang Xiaohai's embrace.

Yang Xiaohai hugged Bun tightly and asked Li Huowang excitedly. "Senior Li, where have you been? We've been thinking of you! Are you alright?"

More and more people gathered around Li Huowang. By the time he arrived at the Bai Family's estate, almost everyone in the village had crowded around him.

Gao Zhijian appeared to have grown even taller, and he looked like a goose among chickens. He stammered as he tried to say something.

However, Puppy interrupted him. "Senior Li, look! This is my wife! Look at her belly! She's going to give birth soon! I'm becoming a father! Hahaha!"

Puppy's laughter didn't last long though.

Chun Xiaoman pushed him away and told Li Huowang, "Senior Li, you've finally returned. Miaomiao kept talking about you. She's worried."

Zhao Wu walked over with a cane and shared excitedly, "Senior Li, when you weren't here, I kept tabs on the finances of the entire Cowheart Village! We did not go bankrupt, and we even earned a lot of money!"

Everyone was chattering excitedly about what had happened to them during the time Li Huowang was gone. None of them remembered what Li Huowang had done before he left.

Li Huowang looked at the people around him and felt relieved. His heart was no longer as tense as before.

Maybe this is what having a home feels like.

"Hohoho~ Young Daoist, you've finally returned. Come, you've traveled far. You should step over the fire pot to remove your bad luck," Lu Zhuangyuan said, placing a pot of fire near the entrance.

[1]

He was happy now that Li Huowang was back. The villagers would feel more at ease too. Li Huowang strong, and he was also Lu Zhuangyuan's employer. It would be easier to justify why Lu Zhuangyuan should be staying in the village.

Once Li Huowang stepped over the pot of fire and entered the Bai Family's estate, he saw Bai Lingmiao looking down from the second-floor window. She was smiling at him as if it had been a different Li Huowang that left the village previously.

Bai Lingmiao called out, "You're back? Yang Xiaohai, go and slaughter a lamb and a pig. Tonight, we are having a feast."

"Alright!" Yang Xiaohai replied excitedly and let Bun down before running towards the kitchen.

Lu Zhuangyuan was very adept at reading the room. He shouted orders, and everyone got busy preparing for the feast. Some went to get the pigs while others looked to see what they could help with. Before long, no one else was in the Bai Family estate, and it fell quiet again.

"Is that Junior Li's wife? Should we stay outside then?" Zhuge Yuan suggested, seeing Li Huowang climb towards the second floor.

"Why should we stay outside? You are still new, so you don't know what happened between them. The next scene will be very interesting, and I've been waiting to see it," Hong Zhong replied excitedly.

He tried to follow Li Huowang but was pulled back by Zhuge Yuan.

"I think we shouldn't do that. This is not a gentlemanly way to conduct ourselves, my dear Sitting Oblivion Dao junior."

"I'm not a gentleman in the first place. I'm a trickster of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!"

No matter what Hong Zhong said, Zhuge Yuan did not let him go upstairs.

Li Huowang went up to the second floor, and Bai Lingmiao approached him. She acted like a wife and removed the weapons and the torture tool that Li Huowang carried.

Bai Lingmiao was about to say something when she glared at the dwarf following Li Huowang. Who is this guy? Why did they come into the room? What an idiot.

Li Huowang said, "This is Li Sui. Li Sui, greet your mother."

"Mother."

"Mother?!" Bai Lingmiao uttered in shock. She stared at the "boy" in the straw robe and veil. "Explain this to me! Why do you have a child? And the child is already so old! Did that bitch Yang Na birth him for you?!"

1. Usually seen in weddings, though I think some villages do it for non-wedding occasions too. Crossing a small fire burns off bad luck and turns them into good luck. 🙏

Chapter 447 - Anklet

Li Huowang was slightly speechless when he saw how big of a reaction Bai Lingmiao had. “What are you talking about? I’ve told you before that it’s the Black Taisui I ate previously to suppress my hallucination. I don’t need it anymore, so it came out of my body.”

Li Huowang lifted the veil and revealed Li Sui’s tentacles.

Catching onto the most important point, Bai Lingmiao beamed in happiness. “Oh! Does that mean you won’t get trapped in the hallucination anymore?”

“No, I still need to go. There are still things to do there, but I can more or less control it now.”

Bai Lingmiao was much happier than Li Huowang was. “That’s good! You are the first person I know who has treated their own disability!”

Li Huowang was ashamed when he looked at her radiant smile. It was clear that she cared for him more than he did for her.

Li Huowang took out a golden anklet wrapped with red thread from his robes. He bent down and carefully removed Bai Lingmiao’s shoes.

“I remember that you gave me the gold anklet when we first came out from Zephyr Temple and we didn’t have money to buy food. You melted it down and used the money to buy me a bun,” Li Huowang said.

Bai Lingmiao looked at the gold on her white leg in astonishment.

Li Huowang continued bitterly, “I said before that I would buy you a bigger one once I had the money to do so. I’m sorry. So many things happened during our journey before I finally had the time to buy you one.”

Bai Lingmiao's white lashes fluttered, and she said nothing before she sank into Li Huowang's embrace.

Li Huowang could now see the emotions of others thanks to Hong Zhong's memories. He saw Bai Lingmiao's feelings of happiness and love grow larger and cover her feelings of desire and disgust. Bai Lingmiao was now similar to how she had been before the murderous aura entered her body.

Li Huowang caressed Bai Lingmiao's hair and took in her scent, enjoying a rare moment of peace.

Right then, Li Sui climbed onto a table and stared at them with his two eyeballs.

He asked, "Father, what are you doing?"

Li Sui was curious. He had never seen people do that, and Li Huowang never told him about it before.

"Is your son stupid?" Bai Lingmiao's muffled voice reverberated against Li Huowang's chest.

Li Huowang chuckled and gently pushed Bai Lingmiao away. He whispered to Li Sui, who then crawled out of the window like an octopus to find Bun.

Once Li Huowang closed the window, Bai Lingmiao excitedly pounced into him. Li Huowang hugged her and was about to say something when she shut his mouth with something soft. He saw the emotion of desire flaring up in Bai Lingmiao.

Some time later, Li Huowang was lying on the bed and hugging Bai Lingmiao, who was in her inner wear^[1] that had a lotus motif. He was enjoying the peace after the storm and telling Bai Lingmiao about what had happened during the past few months.

Bai Lingmiao snuggled against him, listening to his story while playing with her new golden anklet.

When Li Huowang reached the part when he could cultivate "Truth," he paused and thought, If I can turn both sides into reality, doesn't that mean both Bai Lingmiao and Yang Na are real? How should I treat them both? Am I disloyal?

Li Huowang sank into a state of distress. He had never thought about it before. He'd always thought that one side was fake, so he'd never had to think about it.

"Keep talking. Why did you stop?" Bai Lingmiao asked, snuggling deeper and pressing her hair into his face.

"It's nothing. The hallucination is not a special place. How's Cowheart Village doing? Was everything fine while I was gone?"

"It's the same as usual. But I've recruited more people to work in the fields. There is too much land in the village, and we don't have enough manpower to deal with all of it. You think Puppy and Zhao Wu could work the fields?"

Li Huowang nodded and recalled the strangers working in the field.

"Even though they are technically slaves, they are officially known as our adopted children. They will call you Father, so I hope you don't mind."

"Father? Why call me that?"

"Apparently it's what people do in the Liang Kingdom. The emperor banned anyone from owning slaves, so the slave vendors just changed their official line of business but continued selling anyway. Li Huowang, even though you are still young, you are already an adoptive father and even a father. You are quite the elder now, hehe."

While the couple were whispering to each other, there was a knock at the door. "Miaomiao, it's time to eat dinner."

It was Chun Xiaoman, and she sounded embarrassed. She only gave them one reminder before running away. Naturally, she could tell what Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao were doing inside.

Bai Lingmiao said, "Let me tell you something funny. Recently both Zhao Wu and Gao Zhijian are awkward with each other because both of them wanted to marry Xiaoman. Chun Xiaoman, however, is feeling irritated because they keep swarming around her like flies.”

Li Huowang put on his clothes and pinched various parts of his body to feel his healing skin.

“Oh, let her just choose then. It’s their path after all and we shouldn’t interfere,” he replied.

After putting on their clothes, the couple left the room and sat at the table placed in the center of many tables. Lu Zhuangyuan had led the rest of the villagers over for dinner to celebrate Li Huowang’s return. There were now enough villagers to use ten tables for dinner.

Lu Zhuangyuan said loudly, “Come, let us toast to the young Daoist! We pray that the young Daoist will have smooth beginnings!”

Everyone cheered when Li Huowang downed his cup.

Li Huowang could even hear Puppy’s excited voice from several tables away, babbling on about him. “That’s my Senior Li! He’s like an Immortal! He can fly, burrow into the ground, and even summon soldiers out of nowhere! He’s capable of doing everything! That day, we met some water bandits...”

“How strong is this alcohol?” Li Huowang asked, frowning and scratching his head. His body was very sensitive, so he couldn’t drink strong alcohol.

“How strong is it? Troupe Leader Lu went ahead and bought some Scholar’s Red, so it should be a good wine. I should’ve changed your drink to tea. Just eat something and go to rest,” Bai Lingmiao said.

Li Huowang shook his head and left the Bai Family estate. He hunched over a tree and poked his finger into his mouth. He vomited all of the wine and food and felt much better.

Someone passed him a napkin, and Li Huowang took it to wipe his saliva away. He turned around and saw it was the Second Deity in her red veil.

Under the dim light from the estate, Li Huowang looked at the Second Deity with a complicated expression.

“Senior Li,” the Second Deity said.

Li Huowang saw the Second Deity’s Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings. The Second Deity looked just like Bai Lingmiao of the past.

Li Huowang hesitated before taking out a brand new gold anklet with red thread from his robes.

1. This is a dudou, ancient Chinese inner wear that was usually worn by women and children. It's a diamond-shaped piece of cloth that covers the torso, with strings tied around the neck and the back. <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dudou>

Chapter 448 - Shaman

The Second Deity looked at the golden anklet on her leg.

Her voice quivered as she called out to Li Huowang again.

“Senior Li.”

The red veil was wet with five streaks of tears. The Second Deity appeared excited and sad at the same time.

Li Huowang could not look at the Second Deity's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings; they were covered by a fog inside her body.

He looked at the Second Deity with a complicated expression. Then he slowly lifted the red veil.

Li Huowang had seen the true face of the Second Deity many times before, so he wasn't surprised to see it. However, the Second Deity looked a little different today.

Her beast-like features were less visible today. Most of what Li Huowang could see was her silver-white fox fur. The Second Deity flattened the fur as much as possible against her face to make herself look better.

Li Huowang looked at the other half of the Second Deity's face—the human part. He stared at the eyes of the Second Deity and noticed how similar she looked to Bai Lingmiao of the past. To him, the Second Deity was now the Bai Lingmiao who had run out of Zephyr Temple with him.

Li Huowang caressed the Second Deity's face unconsciously. The prickling pain he felt when his fingers touched the scales underneath the fur snapped him out of it.

No, the Second Deity is not Bai Lingmiao. Miaomiao would not forgive me if I treated the Second Deity like this.

Li Huowang's face fell, and he slowly lowered his hand. Right then, the Second Deity reached out with her hands and their characteristically sharp nails and grabbed Li Huowang's hands tightly.

The Second Deity opened her mouth, revealing her sharp teeth and forked tongue while she tried to speak. Nevertheless, she gave up in the end. The Second Deity covered her face with the red veil again and left with a sob.

Li Huowang did not chase after the Second Deity. He watched her disappear into the darkness before sighing in relief.

He knew the Second Deity was part of Bai Lingmiao; she was the manifestation of Bai Lingmiao's remaining Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings. However, he really didn't know how he should treat the Second Deity aside from getting her an anklet too.

Should he treat her as though she was Bai Lingmiao? Or should he treat them both as Bai Lingmiao? Li Huowang felt that there was no right answer to this problem.

When Li Huowang returned to the crowded dinner party, he was still thinking about the tears in the Second Deity's beast-like eyes. Then he looked at his bowl and realized there was a mountain of meat stacked in it.

Bai Lingmiao placed a piece of chive on the top of his bowl. "You finished talking? Eat first. This dinner is meant to celebrate your return."

Li Huowang extended his right hand, but rather than taking the chopsticks, he grabbed the pot of wine. He poured himself a full cup of wine and drank it in one go.

He felt drunk once more, and he felt a little better once a numbing sensation washed over him.

Li Huowang didn't have experience with matters like these. After all, before all these things happened, he'd only been a high school student.

"Why is it that the problems never stopped? Can't they just disappear for a moment?" Li Huowang mumbled as he poured himself another cup of wine.

Before he passed out, Li Huowang realized that he had actually been facing issues in his relationships. It's just that he was so busy trying to survive in this world and stop his hallucinations that he never stopped to think about these smaller issues.

When the dinner eventually ended, Li Huowang felt like he was floating; it was as if he was on a cloud. He was only half awake due to his drunkenness.

After some time, he lay down and felt the smooth silk bed sheets beneath him. He breathed in a familiar scent and understood that he was back in Bai Lingmiao's room.

Li Huowang unconsciously extended his arm and pulled a soft body towards him. He gently stroked the hair of the person and kissed the top of their head.

Bai Lingmiao was walking along the twisted path of Cowheart Village. Under the candlelight of the various houses, everyone was excitedly talking about how to ration the meat they'd taken from the dinner.

Chun Xiaoman smiled at Bai Lingmiao. "Miaomiao, everyone is having a better life than before. To think there are leftovers after dinner."

"You need to feed the horse if you want it to run," Bai Lingmiao said nonchalantly as she walked towards the ancestral hall of the Bai family. "Moreover, this didn't cost us much money. The money that Troupe Leader Lu earned from their show was more than enough to cover the dinner. I never thought they would pull through and earn so much money from performing their pink show in the Liang Kingdom."

"Yeah. They told me that there was an old man who wanted them to perform their pink show at his own funeral for three days! I wonder what that old man was thinking about."

Bai Lingmiao and Chun Xiaoman walked into the ancestral hall and twisted the monkey statue. Then they entered the hidden chamber.

The underground hidden chamber was lit up by oil lamps, and the sound of chanting rang out from its depths.

“The heavens are round, and the earth is square. May the gods descend and help the shaman. I implore the heavens and the earth, may the ancestors ride the clouds and come assist the shaman before the altar...”

When they walked into the underground hall, they saw Lu Xiucan wearing a belly band covered in runes. He was holding a triangular white flag and a short sword with two spikes. He was poking the spikes on his own head.

Lu Xiucan continued chanting, “The left eye transforms into the sun, and the right eye transforms into the moon. May the celestial bodies light the way and show the sincerity of my prayers.”

The sharp spikes of the short sword had already injured his head. Blood was flowing down from the wound and covering his face. Covered in his own blood, Lu Xiucan looked like a maniac.

“May the gods descend on me with haste! My body for the gods and the gods enter my body! Open the path through the rivers and mountains, and slowly guide me on the path. Hold me close, and guide me through! Shine me in your divine light, and show me!” Lu Xiucan shouted the last verse and stomped the ground hard three times.

Then silence fell over the hall.

Bai Lingmiao frowned when she saw how Lu Xiucan stood there like a statue with a menacing look on his face. She took Chun Xiaoman’s sword and slashed Lu Xiucan’s waist. But rather than cutting him down, the sword struck Lu Xiucan’s body, and a sharp metallic clang echoed.

Bai Lingmiao wasn’t satisfied and tried a few more times, but each time she cut him, she only managed to leave a shallow wound on him.

Chun Xiaoman's sword had been given to her by Li Huowang. Not only could it cut through evil beings, but it was also capable of slicing through steel like butter. Yet, a sharp sword like that could not leave a deep wound on Lu Xiucan; he was now essentially impenetrable.

Lu Xiucan looked at his own body with excitement.

He had suffered so many beatings just to learn this technique, but he felt every single wound that had been inflicted on him had been worth it.

Lu Xiucan snarled. As his hands trembled with rage, so did the short sword and the flag in his hands.

He shouted, "Damn old man! How dare you hang me up and beat me? Don't stop me! I will take revenge today! I will snap that old man's bones myself!"

"You—"

Chun Xiaoman was going to stop him, but Bai Lingmiao stopped her.

Bai Lingmiao said, "We won't stop you. Go now. Your father drank a lot tonight, so he should be sound asleep."

Lu Xiucan growled and raised his short sword as he ran towards the exit.

He was about to leave when he slowed his pace and bellowed even louder, "Don't stop me! I will kill that bastard today!"

Chapter 449 - Change

Chun Xiaoman was confused when she saw that all Lu Xiucan did was shout scolding remarks profusely; he didn't even attempt to leave the hidden chamber.

"Miaomiao, did you know that he would be like that?" Chu Xiaoman asked.

Seeing how indecisive Lu Xiucan was, Bai Lingmiao chuckled. "You think I was joking when I scolded him for being useless? He can't be a good guy, but he can't be a bad guy either. He's just a useless bum."

Right then, Puppy walked down the stairs with a bowl of rice. He was surprised when he saw Lu Xiucan cursing away.

Puppy placed the bowl of food on the ground before stopping Lu Xiucan. "Aiya, aiya. What are you trying to do? Stop, stop!"

Lu Xiucan became more agitated when Puppy got in his way. He raised the short sword and wanted to run out, but Puppy managed to stop him.

With Puppy comforting him, Lu Xiucan slowly calmed down. Puppy dragged him back down and gave him the bowl of food.

Taking the bowl, Lu Xiucan continued ranting, "Puppy, I will not forget what that old man did to me! I will remember it always! I'm going to slice him to bits one day!"

Puppy replied, "Aiya, you've already been starving for the entire day. Just eat your meal first. You can kill your dad anytime you want, but your food won't taste good once it's cold."

Lu Xiucan ate voraciously and only noticed halfway through that the meal was better than yesterday's. He stabbed a piece of pork the size of an egg and scooped up some rice, shoveling them all into his mouth. He munched on the food in delight.

As Lu Xiucan ate the delicious pork, he asked curiously, "Why is the meal so luxurious? Did we celebrate the New Year earlier?"

"No, Li Huowang came back! The entire village came together to have dinner to celebrate his return."

"Oh? My master is back?!"

Lu Xiucan was excited. He wanted to run out to greet his master before realizing that he should ask Bai Lingmiao for permission first.

But when he turned around, he saw that Bai Lingmiao and Chun Xiaoman were missing. A hidden door was left open at the side of the wall.

Bai Lingmiao was walking down the hidden corridor when she staggered and almost fell in the dark.

She complained, "This stupid place is so dark."

Chun Xiaoman gently held her arm. "It's not too dark. I will place a few more lanterns on the wall tomorrow. By the way, should we tell Senior Li about the techniques that the White Lotus Sect left for us?"

Bai Lingmiao felt irritated by that. "What can he do if we tell him about it? Do you think the techniques are so great? It's nothing compared to him. He's much stronger than you think."

"Really? Is Senior Li that strong? That's good news!" Chun Xiaoman remarked, feeling happy for Li Huowang.

"It's not good news. Do you think having a strong lunatic is good for us? Think about what he did in the past," Bai Lingmiao said as she walked until they reached the innermost chamber.

"But didn't Senior Li tell you that he won't relapse again?"

"And you trust him? If you do, you are even crazier than him. I think something is still wrong with him. He changed the subject the moment we were talking about his hallucination as if he was hiding something. Let's just wait and see instead. He probably won't run in the near future. Let's observe his condition first before we decide what to do.”

“Miaomiao, you are so kind to him.”

“What else can I do? I’m married to him. He never thought that I was dragging him down, so there’s no way I can leave him for being a lunatic now. We can only think of ways to treat him instead.”

The stone door opened, and Bai Lingmiao walked in. The room was bright thanks to the glowing jade lotus.

Bai Lingmiao used the light to stare at the mural. She looked at the six white donkeys dragging the conjoined lotus.

Ever since the strange chanting was first heard, the conjoined lotus in the mural had been becoming clearer instead of disappearing. She didn’t know what it meant.

Is this related to the Heavenly Mater of the White Lotus Sect?

It was a wild guess, but Bai Lingmiao had found nothing about the conjoined lotus even after reading through all the books of the hidden chamber. She didn’t know if it was a good sign or bad.

Bai Lingmiao was the sole survivor of the White Lotus Sect. Her future would be decided by what kind of phenomena the conjoined lotus would bring.

“If only we knew where the strange chanting came from. We might be able to get a clue,” Bai Lingmiao murmured.

However, it was impossible. She had tried asking the Immortal families when she’d worked as a shaman, but they hadn’t had an answer either.

The only thing they’d told her was that the chant was chaotic and disorderly. Bai Lingmiao didn’t know what it was, but she had a feeling that the Immortal families were scared of the chant.

Bai Lingmiao thought about it as she took three incense sticks. She lit it up, prayed to the conjoined lotus, and placed the incense sticks on the incense burner.

She didn’t know if it was effective, but she decided to try. At the very least, the books never said that the Heavenly Mater banned others from praying to it.

“Miaomiao, what should we do with the books at the edge of the room? They are talking about how to use humans as sacrifices to lay out a spell array.”

Chun Xiaoman’s voice snapped Bai Lingmiao back from her train of thought.

Bai Lingmiao looked at the corner of the room and replied, “What else? Burn them.”

“Burn them?”

Bai Lingmiao’s voice was filled with disgust. “Burn them! They’re such disgusting books. I feel irritated by just looking at them!”

She threw an oil lamp towards the stack of books and ignited it.

Under the glow of the fire, the conjoined lotus was flickering. It appeared to be floating in a small orb that was inverted on itself.

Nevertheless, both Bai Lingmiao and Chun Xiaoman failed to notice that.

Chapter 450 - Gao Zhijian

Li Huowang opened his eyes. He sat up in the messy bed and looked towards his right. He saw the sunlight entering through the window and knew he had slept in. It was already well into the morning.

“I overslept again?” Li Huowang muttered.

Ignoring the shallow cuts on his body, he put on his clothes and descended down the wooden stairs.

“Good morning Junior Li,” Zhuge Yuan said, greeting Li Huowang with a fan in hand.

“Good morning, Senior Zhuge.”

Seeing Zhuge Yuan, Li Huowang slapped the back of his head in regret. He had just returned to the village and already let his guard down. Zhuge Yuan was still an illusion, and he needed to save him! Cultivating the "Truth" was much more important than having sex!

Li Huowang ate a bun and pickled vegetables before downing a bowl of porridge in haste. After breakfast, he quickly found a quiet room in the estate and sat down to cultivate.

According to the complicated text on the scroll, once he had covered the primordial breath with his inner sight, he could start cultivating the next step to utilize it. He had to first circulate the primordial breath through his chakra points in the correct order: Root Chakra, Sacral Chakra, Solar Plexus Chakra, Heart Chakra, Throat Chakra, Third Eye Chakra, and finally the Crown Chakra.

He had to shroud his Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings with the formless primordial breath once. It was a difficult process, and Li Huowang felt like he was trying to push an elephant. He could not accomplish it even after half a day.

Nevertheless, he was not hasty. Cultivation requires persistence; one could not be impatient.

If the Strayed One that Bei Feng had tricked could do it, then Li Huowang could do it too.

Li Huowang didn't know how long he spent cultivating, but when he stopped due to fatigue and opened his eyes, he saw that it was already dark.

The entire room was warped beyond recognition. The floor and walls were either protruding or sunken.

Li Huowang frowned. It turned out that cultivating this technique would cause severe damage to the cultivator's surroundings.

I need to find somewhere more remote so I don't harm the others. I can't cultivate in Cowheart Village anymore.

Li Huowang stood up and walked towards the door, but when he opened it, he was surprised to see a youth standing on the ceiling.

The youth saw Li Huowang and stumbled backward out of shock and fear. The youth then crawled away.

Li Huowang was confused as to who the youth was. He then saw Gao Zhijian, with his large stature, hanging upside down on the ceiling and walking towards him.

That was when Li Huowang finally realized what was happening. They were not the ones that were upside down; he was!

The moment Li Huowang realized that, he suddenly fell.

He quickly turned his body and landed safely. He stood up and looked into the room he had been cultivating in.

The room had been twisted upside down. The floor had become the ceiling, and the ceiling had become the floor. He was confused as to why it had taken him so long to realize it. And why hadn't he fallen from the ceiling?

Li Huowang decided that he needed to quickly find a new place to cultivate. It was too dangerous and unpredictable for him to cultivate near other people.

“Li-Li-Li...” Gao Zhijian stammered.

Li Huowang looked up at Gao Zhijian and patted his arm.

“How old are you? Did you grow taller in the past few months?”

“Yes,” Gao Zhijian said before pointing outside.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure what Gao Zhijian wanted, but he decided to follow Gao Zhijian outside anyway.

Before Li Huowang left, the frightened youth from earlier stood up shakily and called out, “Father... Mother told me to bring you to dinner.”

“I will go in a while. Tell her to eat first,” Li Huowang replied.

It didn't take long for Li Huowang to get to Gao Zhijian's home. Gao Zhijian felt ashamed as he passed some broken pieces of stone to Li Huowang.

“This is...” Li Huowang muttered, realizing that it was the sacred text that he had given to Gao Zhijian. It was the same one that Dan Yangzi had treated as a treasure.

Gao Zhijian stammered as he explained that the sacred text had suddenly shattered one afternoon. After that, he heard a voice. It said a string of sentences, mocking the wielder of the sacred text.

Li Huowang explained, “No worries. You don’t have to be ashamed. This has nothing to do with you. The sacred text was something that the Sitting Oblivion Dao used to trick others.”

Even though he didn’t know when Dan Yangzi had obtained the sacred text, Li Huowang estimated that Dan Yangzi had likely possessed it for years, based on the number of people he had to find to refine his pills. That meant that the person who had given him the sacred text had been a member of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Dan Yangzi was not the only one who had been tricked; even the Human Xiaos and many others had been tricked. A scheme of such a large scale, in terms of how widespread it was and when it first began, could not have been concocted in a single day. It had likely taken the Sitting Oblivion Dao hundreds of years to do such a thing.

Only the Shai Zi were capable of plotting such a scheme. The Shai Zis spent so much time collecting the "Lies" from so many people for just one reason: to find the opportunity to summon Doulao so that they could take the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye from the emperor.

The Heavenly Dao on the dead Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye appeared to be one that governed chaos.

But this is strange. According to what I know, the Shai Zis should be finding methods to trick the Heavenly Dao away from Doulao so that they could ascend into godhood. Why are they helping Doulao? Or were they tricked by Doulao?

Gao Zhijian pulled on Li Huowang, bringing him back to reality.

"Sorry. I'm thinking about a lot of things. Is there anything else?" Li Huowang asked.

"Yes," Gao Zhijian replied simply and entered his house.

Soon after, he returned with a book.

Li Huowang recognized it as the book that he had taken from Peng Longteng.

"Th-th-this is... a... training manual for soldiers..." Gao Zhijian stammered.

Li Huowang was shocked. He took the book and quickly read through it. The book was indeed a training manual for soldiers. It taught the reader how to increase their murderous aura as well as how to control it.

"Did you learn it?" Li Huowang asked.

"Yes," Gao Zhijian answered with a nod.

He looked around and found Peng Longteng's halberd. Gripping it tightly, he took a deep breath and howled as he raised the heavy weapon.

A dense murderous aura spread out from Gao Zhijian. The headless Peng Longteng got excited, her large hands clenching and releasing in anticipation.

Gao Zhijian let out a furious roar, “HA!”

A strong wind blew through Li Huowang’s hair. Then the massive halberd was thrust into the ground in front of him. The earth shook, and cracks appeared on the ground. Li Huowang almost thought there was an earthquake.

Li Huowang was surprised that Gao Zhijian had become this powerful. If he were to grow a little taller, he would be the same height as Peng Longteng.

Was Gao Zhijian a genius, or was the training method for soldiers easy to learn?

Chapter 451 - Hospital

It was a cold day, and steam rose from the top of Gao Zhijian's head after his demonstration. He approached Li Huowang in excitement and gave him the book.

Gao Zhijian said, "Train."

Li Huowang understood what Gao Zhijian suggested. He wanted Li Huowang to train using the manual.

Li Huowang shook his head. "No need. You can train it yourself. It's useless to me."

If Li Huowang had obtained the book after they escaped from Zephyr Temple, he would've treated it like a treasure. However, compared to the "Truth" and the various techniques of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, the training method for soldiers was too weak for him to bother with. Li Huowang was now even capable of surviving without a head, as long as he didn't notice that he didn't have a head in the first place.

Li Huowang recalled Peng Longteng's behavior and felt worried.

He asked, "Did you experience any changes after you started cultivating it?"

"No," Gao Zhijian answered simply.

Nevertheless, Li Huowang still managed to detect changes in Gao Zhijian. Gao Zhijian had once been stupid enough to eat the food that people offered to the dead just because an old monk had invited Gao Zhijian to join him in making a meal out of it.

If Gao Zhijian of the past gave Li Huowang the feeling of someone aloof, then Gao Zhijian of the present gave off the vibe of someone who used his energy with careful deliberation.

"Fine, continue cultivating it. It's a good thing for you," Li Huowang said.

At the very least, developing the murderous aura of a soldier might make Gao Zhijian more assertive and aggressive, but it wasn't a serious issue.

After conversing with Gao Zhijian, Li Huowang returned to the Bai family estate for dinner.

As he stepped through the doorway, he recalled something. "The military's cultivation method isn't effective when it's just one person. It's more suited for a large group of people training at the same time. Don't we have many slaves now? You could try teaching them and choose the more talented ones to cultivate with you."

Li Huowang would be more relaxed if Cowheart Village had a small army guarding it.

Gao Zhijian had been feeling a little disappointed after Li Huowang turned down his offer to train with him. However, once he heard Li Huowang's suggestion, he perked up. Gao Zhijian gripped the book tightly and nodded.

Back in the Bai family estate, Li Huowang told Bai Lingmiao about his idea.

Bai Lingmiao remarked, "That's a great idea. At least they have something to do after they work in the field."

Li Huowang added, "We should pay them more too. We bought them, but we still need to win their hearts over."

With a bowl in hand, Bai Lingmiao rolled her eyes and said, "What are you talking about? They are our adopted children. Of course, we should treat them well."

She then scooped some rice into the bowl.

"What happened to your leg?" Li Huowang asked when he noticed something was off with how Bai Lingmiao was walking.

"Nothing. I stepped on a hole by accident and bruised it."

"You shouldn't be running around outside when you are blindfolded."

Li Huowang drank some soup. Then he stood up and walked out.

“Li Huowang, where are you going? Can’t you take a break for a little while?” Bai Lingmiao shouted at him.

“No need to wait for me. Just leave a window open for me later.”

Li Huowang jumped from roof to roof before heading to Cowheart Mountain at the back of the village.

When he jumped past a seemingly empty house, he yelled into it, “Li Sui, follow me!”

“Alright,” Li Sui replied.

He placed Bun down and then followed Li Huowang.

The two of them walked down a small path until they reached the middle of the mountain.

Li Huowang looked around at the crowded grave and remarked, “Why are there so many dead people?”

There were so many graves that they were placed side to side. The green glow of phosphorous fire ignited from time to time, giving the place a chilling look.

Nevertheless, Li Huowang was unbothered. He had seen many scary places, but he had never once seen a ghost.

He looked around and found a small piece of flat land. It appeared to be a space to bury more bodies if the need arises. Currently, it was still empty.

Li Huowang sat down and told Li Sui, “I’m going to the other side so you need to look out for me. If there are any strangers or dangers approaching me, you must burrow into my stomach and bring me back here.”

There weren’t as many troubles as before in this world, but there were still plenty left in the hallucination.

Li Sui raised its two eyeballs and revealed a fleshy grin. “Alright.”

Li Huowang took a deep breath, crossed his legs, and revealed the primordial breath ever so slightly by peeling off a little bit of his inner sight.

As his surroundings twisted, his pupils slowly lost focus, and he looked around at his surroundings in peace.

Li Sui was diligently scanning the area, and he suddenly heard footsteps. He raised his gaze in alarm but relaxed when he saw who it was.

“Mom, it’s already so late. Aren’t you going back to sleep?” Li Huowang said softly to a wooden grave marker.

A pair of fair hands slowly extended and caressed his face.

Bai Lingmiao stared at his face and sighed. “Li Huowang... didn’t you say you were in control of your hallucination?”

“Mom, I’m clean enough. No need to wipe my face anymore,” Li Huowang said before the wet towel was placed on his face again.

His mother replied, “What’s wrong with wiping a few more times? It’s not like your skin will fall off. It’s better now that you are coherent. Brush your teeth first.”

A soft plastic toothbrush was placed in his mouth.

Li Huowang grumbled, but both of them were smiling.

Then Li Huowang thought of something when he saw his mother wiping his hands.

“Mom, when did the doctor say I can leave?”

Even though on paper this place was a hospital, it was more like a prison used to hold people with mental disorders. Li Huowang barely had the freedom to move his fingers, much less walk around.

Since he had decided to turn this place into reality, he needed to prepare himself. If he wanted to live in this world, he needed to get out of the place, even if it meant entering a normal hospital.

Sun Xiaoqin looked at him. “Do you feel that this place is too oppressive?”

“No, I’m just worried about Yang Na. I’m not sure how sick she is.”

Sun Xiaoqin took the towel and walked out the door without a word.

The hospital was very quiet at night, so Li Huowang managed to hear his mother arguing with the guard.

“You think this is a joke?” the guard asked.

Sun Xiaoqin said, “Look. My son’s cured. We can transfer him to someplace nicer. It’s not auspicious to lock someone up like that.”

Footsteps rang out as two people approached them. The argument got more heated too.

Sun Xiaoqin yelled, “If you don’t let my son out, I won’t pay any more money! You will have to raise him yourself!”

“What are you talking about? This is a government-funded prison. We get money from the government, and I don’t even get paid much. Even if you don’t pay us, we can’t let him leave either! You have to think about other people too. We don’t know what your son is made of. It’s like he’s a robot that doesn’t feel pain. Normal people can’t even fight against him. If he goes crazy on the road again, the consequences will be serious! If your son can kill seven bandits, he can kill seven students too!”

“My son would never do that!”

Someone's massive hand pointed at Li Huowang from the other side of the window.

That person said, “He won’t do that? Look at him! Do you think he can differentiate reality from hallucination? Your son is mentally ill!”

The room fell silent.

Li Huowang lay on the bed and thought about it before asking the person, “What do I need to do to exit this place?”

However, the hands didn’t reply to Li Huowang. Instead, they brought Sun Xiaoqin towards the door, and their voices gradually became soft.

The room's lights went out.

Li Huowang frowned and looked at the flashing camera in a corner of the room. He thought about how he could get out of this mess.

Chapter 452 - Children

How do I prove to them I'm not crazy anymore? Pretend that I'm normal in front of the doctors? What if something happens in the other world while I'm under observation here? Or should I bring something from the other world here to prove that the other world is real? But If I do, I might not have any freedom in the future.

Li Huowang didn't know what to do. Both worlds were real to him, and both sides would say he was crazy to believe in the other world.

He realized that there was nothing he could do in this world to prove that he was sane. Since there was no way to do so in this world, he could only do it in the other world.

If he wanted to regain his freedom, he needed to finish his cultivation and then use it. It was the simplest and easiest method to prove that he was sane—or at the very least, it was easier to do that than playing a mental game with the doctors.

Li Huowang decided to concentrate on his cultivation. He was so focused on it that he forgot to even eat and sleep. This was the ticket to resurrect Zhuge Yuan and for Li Huowang to regain his freedom in the other world.

After the first time he cultivated in Cowheart Village, Li Huowang decided not to cultivate there anymore. Instead, he found a cave in the middle of Cowheart Mountain and decided that it was the perfect place for cultivation.

Li Huowang was not worried about how much he distorted the surroundings since there was nothing but trees and stones.

Within the darkness of the cave, he did something that he couldn't show to the others.

There was the sound of flesh being ripped apart. Li Sui used three tentacles to pour down a bowl of mercury onto Li Huowang's head.

After the flaying, shedding, and stuffing process was complete, Li Huowang's shout reverberated throughout the cave. "Heaven and Earth, the root of all energy! Broadly cultivated through eons! Within and beyond the three realms, I alone am honored. The golden radiance inside of me shall reflect on my body!"

His shed skin, which had been stuffed with straw, slowly shrank and turned into a small doll.

This was the second time doing the ritual, and it had gone much better than the first.

Zhuge Yuan's eyes almost popped out of his sockets when he saw what was happening. Li Huowang ignored him and grabbed the doll. He felt much more relieved with it in his hands. With it, he could now survive being decapitated.

More importantly, this was an artifact that he could produce multiple times. As long as he had time, he could continue to make it. He would no longer be afraid of people stronger than him with it.

Li Huowang used a small dagger and cut open a wound in his abdomen. He stuffed the small doll into his body.

After Li Huowang finished using the Fiery Scripture to treat his injuries, Li Sui asked curiously, "Father, what is that? Can I have it? Can you teach me?"

Li Huowang shook his head. "You can't use the method. You are not a Strayed One, so your skin is useless."

Li Huowang put on his red robes and walked towards the exit with his weapons.

"Father, I want to help you."

Li Sui did not give up, but Li Huowang ignored it. He did not think a small Black Taisui could help him.

"Just stay in the village next time and don't simply run away.

There are many evil people outside, and they will turn you into a pill if you get caught.”

“You're lying. I went outside before, and it's much more fun than the village. Everyone in the village is afraid of me, even Bun. I think it's much more fun cultivating with you. Father, can I not enter your stomach again?”

“No.”

“Why not?”

“If you do, you will take over my body.”

Nevertheless, Li Sui's eyes were filled with eagerness and yearning. Li Huowang thought about it and ultimately gave Li Sui a book.

Li Huowang said, “Read this if you are bored. If you don't know the words you can ask me.”

Li Huowang had given Li Sui the manual on talisman-making.

It would be bizarre yet surreal to see Li Sui drawing talismans and chanting. Still, it might be useful for Li Sui to learn it. It would be of great help if Li Sui succeeded.

“You need to remember that there are many restrictions to drawing the talismans.”

Li Huowang slowly taught it how to read and write while walking down the mountain and heading towards the village.

“Father, why are they afraid of me? Do you think they wouldn't be afraid of me if I took off my clothes and saw my real body?”

“No, absolutely not.”

“Why not? What if I treated them well and gave them money for food?”

“Where did you learn all of these? Do not show them your real appearance. You are different. You are not human.”

After hearing Li Sui's questions, Li Huowang regretted his decision to let Li Sui live with him.

It was nowhere near as simple as he had thought. It was like raising a real child.

Li Sui never asked that many questions before. I don't have the time to teach him. I need someone to teach him in my stead. Li Sui still doesn't understand a lot of basic things.

Before long, Li Huowang and Li Sui arrived near the fields. Li Huowang looked at his adopted children and his comrades working in the field.

“Senior Li, are you back from the mountain?” Yang Xiaohai asked, walking over excitedly with his legs caked in mud.

Li Huowang asked in return, “Aren’t you in charge of food? Why are you down in the fields? Who told you to work so much?”

“No one. I volunteered! Senior Li, look over there! Those two acres of land are all mine! Senior Bai told me that any food I grow in those lands is mine! That’s two whole acres of food! I no longer have to starve once I harvest them!” Yang Xiaohai said excitedly.

Then he felt something strange on his calves. He reached down and caught it. It was a massive leech roughly half the length of his arm. He threw it away into the field.

The leech was attracted to Li Huowang’s blood and slowly crawled towards it.

Li Huowang frowned. He was not afraid of most things, but he hated leeches.

Chills washed over him at the thought of hundreds of leeches all over him, burrowing into his body and chewing through his flesh with their sharp teeth...

Seeing Li Huowang stand there motionlessly, Yang Xiaohai asked puzzledly, “Senior Li, what’s wrong with you? Have you never seen a leech before? Did you not work in the fields in the past?”

Chapter 453 - Time

The leech slowly crawled towards Li Huowang. He stomped it to death before looking at Yang Xiaohai pitifully.

“Do you always get leeches on your legs?” Li Huowang asked.

“Of course. It’s pretty much impossible to protect yourself from leeches if you work in the fields. I’m fine with it as long as I’m not dealing with snakes. It’s okay if we get bit by leeches. We can always pull them off with our hands, but it’s another issue if they bite cows. Cows don’t have hands and can’t pull leeches off, so they have no choice but to let the leeches drink their blood. That’s why we also call leeches Rotten Cow Crotches. [1]”

Li Huowang looked at Yang Xiaohai, who still had the face of a child. He’s probably only a sixth grader in the modern world, but he’s already like an adult in this world.

Li Huowang patted Yang Xiaohai’s shoulder. “You don’t have to work in the fields anymore. You should be studying at this age instead of working in the fields. Leave the fieldwork to the serfs.”

After Li Huowang gave out some orders, Cowheart Village quickly acquired a teacher.

Cowheart Village was a rural area, but with the right amount of money, it had been easy enough to hire a teacher. Some scholars had to work as teachers for a living because they had failed to pass their exams and become officials.

Yang Xiaohai wasn't the only student. Li Huowang had instructed Li Sui to attend classes too. All Li Sui needed to do was to listen and say nothing while the teacher taught the lessons.

The other villagers would come and stand near the window of the classroom whenever they had free time. It was as if they would gain something just by eavesdropping.

Even Lu Zhuangyuan brought his grandson, who was barely a year old. He wanted his grandson to be surrounded by scholars and hopefully become an official once he was older.

Seeing this, Li Huowang decided to open the door to the classroom for everyone. Anyone could enter the classroom and listen to the lessons. He considered it as a social benefit for the people of Cowheart Village.

Li Huowang smiled as he watched the villagers listening to the teacher's lessons. His sour mood was gone, and he felt much happier these days.

"What are you smiling at?" Bai Lingmiao asked puzzledly.

Li Huowang answered, "Look at how well everyone is living now. No matter how much difficulty we faced during our travels, we managed to survive, and now everyone's life is improving day by day. Isn't this what everyone wanted?"

Bai Lingmiao extended her hands and held his skinless fingers, gently leaning against him. "Yes. Our lives will keep getting better. That's why you must not seek death even if you face difficulties in the future. Life will always get better again."

The teacher was currently giving a lecture in front of the class.

"You don't need to learn like a scholar, and I don't expect anyone here to be able to become an official in the future. You just need to learn what you need for everyday life, such as reading and counting! Once you are able to read, write, and count, you will not starve to death in the future! With these skills, you can consider other ways to make a living. Today, you shall learn how to count!" the teacher said, raising a small bamboo tube filled with chopsticks in the air.

The teacher continued, "There are eleven divisions in a day!"

He pulled out eleven chopsticks from the tube and laid them on the ground.

"If a peddler took five divisions to reach your village, how much time does he have left to sell his wares and sleep?” the teacher asked, picking up five chopsticks from the ground. [2] “Hm?” Li Huowang was confused.

Bai Lingmiao sensed his confusion and asked, “What’s wrong? The teacher is doing a good job.”

“There are twenty-four hours in a day. A single period consists of two hours, so instead of eleven, there should be twelve divisions in a day. What kind of teacher teaches others about a day having only eleven divisions? He can’t even count time. No wonder he can’t become an official. We should find an excuse to fire him. I don’t want the others to be taught the wrong information.”

Hearing that, Bai Lingmiao felt even more confused. “Li Huowang, what are you talking about? There are only eleven divisions in a single day. Why did you say there are twelve?”

“What?”

Li Huowang’s mind seemed to go numb as if he had been smacked senseless by something. He looked at her in shock before confirming it with her again.

Then he ran into the classroom and asked the teacher, “Are there only eleven divisions in a day?”

Seeing a man covered in bandages rush in and interrupt his lesson, the teacher retorted indignantly, “Of course. How many divisions do you think we have if not eleven? Do you have a problem with my lesson?”

Li Huowang turned around in shock and looked at the other students. “Are there really only eleven divisions in a day?”

Yang Xiaohai was curious as to why Li Huowang was acting this way. “Yeah. Senior Li, there are only eleven divisions in a day. What’s wrong with it?”

“Only eleven? That means a day only lasts for twenty-two hours...? What happened to the remaining two hours?”

Li Huowang suddenly had a feeling that his world had just turned unreal.

Bai Lingmiao entered the classroom with a frown and pulled Li Huowang outside.

She asked, "What are you doing? Isn't it normal to only have eleven divisions in a day?"

"No, that's not right." Li Huowang calmed down and decided to find the truth himself. "Miaomiao, do you have anything in the village that can be used to count the time? Bring it to me."

"Something to count the time? Is a water clock fine? That's all we have here."

"Yes!"

Soon, three wooden buckets of different heights were placed in front of Li Huowang. The tallest bucket was filled with water, and there was a small tube that dripped water consistently into the second bucket from the first.

A drop of water took around a second to reach the second bucket, but Li Huowang did not trust it. He decided to count the time himself.

But the result was not what he had expected. There were indeed only eleven divisions in a day.

Even though there might be a margin of error, it was impossible for Li Huowang to miscount two entire hours.

After staying up for the entire night, Li Huowang finally accepted this reality. There were indeed only twenty-two hours in this world.

He rubbed his tired eyes and mumbled, "No wonder I kept oversleeping. Guess it's because this world's missing two hours?"

Ever since Li Huowang escaped from Zephyr Temple, he'd always felt that he had overslept or didn't get enough sleep. It appeared to be because of the time in this world.

Bai Lingmiao stood behind him worriedly. "Li Huowang, are you going crazy again?"

Li Huowang had a much easier time accepting this reality than he had thought. It made sense that even time was different in this bizarre world.

He stood up and hugged Bai Lingmiao. “Does it mean that we only had eleven divisions in a day even while we were in the Zephyr Temple?”

“Of course.”

“Why didn’t you tell me?”

“Do I need to tell you this? I didn’t know that you were clueless about it.”

Meanwhile, Zhuge Yuan was listening to the faceless Hong Zhong illusion taunt him. “Do you see that? That’s the sense of confusion of a Strayed One! Did you learn anything today?”

1. It’s a literal translation here. I can’t find anything about it so most likely it’s a regional thing where people called it whatever they liked. Kinda like how Asian Koels are called uwu birds because their calls are literally “uwu” 🙌

2. One Division = Two Hours 🙌

Chapter 454 - Someone Familiar

“Cock-a-doodle-doo~”

The rooster crowed, and everyone in Cowheart Village gradually woke up and had breakfast.

Normally, farming families didn't eat breakfast unless it was harvest season when they needed the extra energy to work. Usually, most people only had two meals a day.

However, that wasn't the case in Cowheart Village. Everyone got to eat breakfast. This was also one of the reasons why everyone was grateful to Bai Lingmiao. She fed them and let them study for free, and she even granted them a portion of the crops that they planted. There was no better employer than her in the world.

Lu Zhuangyuan knocked on the door of his eldest son incessantly. “Wake up! The porridge at the top of the pot is the thickest! If you aren't fast even when it comes to eating, what else can you do?”

“Father, we have money now. We can cook our own breakfast,” Lu Juren's wife, Luo Juanhua, said.

She was dissatisfied that she couldn't sleep in even though they had money now.

“Do you think you're rich?! How dare you even say that you won't eat the free breakfast and want to use your own money to buy food! Preposterous. Get up!” Lu Zhuangyuan scolded his daughter-in-law.

Then he headed out to knock on the rooms of his disciples.

Naturally, he was not there to call them to eat breakfast but to wake them up to practice their basic performance skills.

Lu Zhuangyuan was strict to them just like how his master had taught him. If they didn't practice enough or their performance was subpar, they were not allowed to eat breakfast.

Most performers started training at a young age. Most of his disciples were already over ten years old, so they needed to practice even harder.

While his disciples worked on their dissonant singing, Lu Zhuangyuan brought his family to the Bai family estate.

Upon entering, they saw Yang Xiaohai ordering two people to carry a pot of porridge into the hall. Lu Zhuangyuan smiled and walked inside.

However, he then frowned when he saw his rebellious youngest son, Lu Xiucan.

He had done everything to educate Lu Xiucan. He beat and scolded his youngest son, but nothing had worked. Lu Xiucan continued to curse at Lu Zhuangyuan, saying stuff like "Just you wait" or "One day, I will kill you!"

As for Lu Xiucan's wife, Tao'er, she followed faithfully behind Lu Xiucan and kept quiet most of the time. She seemed to be lost in her thoughts.

"Aiya, aiya, everyone is here," Puppy said loudly in his jarring voice.

Everyone turned to look and saw him helping his pregnant wife into the hall.

Puppy beamed at Lu Xiucan. "She's going to give birth soon! It's almost time, and I think she will give birth in the next few days. My son is going to be born soon!"

Lu Xiucan scoffed. "Did I ask you anything about it? What a showoff."

"Hehehe," Puppy laughed. He helped his wife to sit down before whispering to Lu Xiucan, "How's your training going? Can you use the technique now?"

“It’s still the same. I can’t read so it’s hard for me to learn it. Why, do you want to learn it?”

Puppy smiled. “No, I don’t want to learn that. It’s too tiresome. I will just eat breakfast, go and take a rest, and then eat lunch. There are people working in my four-acre field. I just need to wait for harvest season; I don’t even have to do anything. To think I would get food for free almost every year! This is the freedom I’ve yearned for. I’ve endured so many hardships that it’s time for me to rest.”

He didn’t learn any techniques after traveling with Li Huowang for so long, but he had become more perceptive. Few things came without strings attached, especially cultivation techniques; there were always hidden side effects.

Puppy was actually waiting for Lu Xiucan to cultivate the technique first and then observe him for a few months. Then once Puppy confirmed that there were no side effects, he would cultivate the technique. He’d learned to do this from Li Huowang.

Lu Xiucan scoffed at Puppy. “Hmph! All you do when you’re not eating is sleep. What a loser.”

“Hey, I might be a loser, but I have a son. Do you?”

While they spoke, Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao walked down from the second floor. Everyone immediately became quiet and sat at their respective places.

Li Huowang was currently skinless and looked horrifying, but everyone was already used to it. After all, they’d seen worse.

Everyone in the hall waited till Li Huowang started eating before they too began eating breakfast.

Li Huowang ate some pickled vegetables, salted eggs, buns, and porridge. He ate a lot.

“Eat slower. Were you a hungry ghost in the past? No one is taking your food away,” Bai Lingmiao said.

Li Huowang ignored her grumbling and continued to eat his breakfast.

These days, he would cultivate for hours on end. The day would usually pass by the time he was finished. If he didn't eat enough now, he would be hungry by noon.

“Sigh. No one's going to harm you here, so why did you injure yourself like this? You're bloody all over,” Bai Lingmiao remarked as she tried scratching some of the scabs off Li Huowang's skin.

Li Huowang replied, “It's better to be prepared. Don't worry. I won't die.”

“You won't die, but doesn't it hurt? Are you addicted to pain now? I get frightened when I see you at night.”

Bai Lingmiao nagged at Li Huowang until he was done eating.

Li Huowang swiftly finished his breakfast and ran towards the back of the estate. Li Sui was already waiting there for him.

The two of them, one tall and the other short, walked up the path towards Cowheart Mountain.

Just as they left the village, white fog surrounded them in the forest. Li Huowang frowned and immediately unsheathed his purple-tasseled sword.

He called out, “Who's there? Come out!”

The murderous aura his sword emitted spread out in a wave and dispersed the white fog.

A man in a wooden mask appeared out of thin air.

He said, “Well, aren't you a familiar face? Is that you, Er Jiu?”

“Liu Zongyuan?” Li Huowang uttered.

He was surprised to see the man with the wooden mask. He remembered the man as one of the members that Tuoba Danqing had recruited to find the Muddled One.

The work of the Surveillance Bureau was very unpredictable. Out of the five people who had joined that mission, only two of them were still alive. Ji Xiang and Xinchu were dead, while Tuoba Danqing was stuck forever in the realm of the Muddled One.

Now, the two surviving members had reunited once again, and they felt much closer to each other than before.

Since Liu Zongyuan was here, Li Huowang could not go and cultivate today anymore. Instead, he brought Liu Zongyuan into the guest room and served some tea.

After taking a sip, Li Huowang asked Liu Zongyuan with curiosity, “Brother Liu, you're all the way out here... Do you have a mission around here today?”

Even though Liu Zongyuan was also in the Surveillance Bureau, Li Huowang was sure that Liu Zongyuan wasn't here because of the big mess that occurred in Shangjing. Li Huowang had used Bei Feng's body, so they shouldn't know that Li Huowang was the mastermind.

Liu Zongyuan's words confirmed Li Huowang's guess.

“Aiya~ I heard that there were people staying here again and thought it was probably another group from the White Lotus Sect. That's why I ran here to check it out, but to my surprise, it's you.”

Chapter 455 - Problem

“Yeah. It’s annoying to stay somewhere crowded, so I found a quiet place to settle down,” Li Huowang said.

Liu Zongyuan replied, “No worries. Since you're living here, I will just report that this village is yours. I don't think anyone else will come and trouble you after that. To be fair, you did burn to death the entire White Lotus Sect that was occupying this area. Since you’ve killed them, their territory should belong to you too.”

Liu Zongyuan was trying to please Li Huowang, but those words were extremely painful for Li Huowang to hear.

Liu Zongyuan took a careful peek at the door before getting closer to Li Huowang and whispering, “Did you hear about Shangjing? Everyone in the bureau is treading lightly now.”

“Yeah. I’ve heard about it. It seems that the Sitting Oblivion Dao fooled us all.”

“That’s not all that happened! I’ve heard that they forced their way into the palace and fought for three days straight! Even the emperor was heavily wounded by them. I fear that we might not even have the time to finish building the tomb for the emperor. But the Sitting Oblivion Dao had many casualties too. Half of them are dead, and one of the Shai Zi is dead too!”

“Can this information be trusted?”

“Of course! Are you underestimating me? I’m from the Moongate, and our information is always the best!”

Li Huowang frowned. It seems that neither party stopped fighting even after I left Shangjing.

Seeing Li Huowang's expression, Liu Zongyuan tried to comfort him. “Don’t worry. It’s just the emperor that's dying. His sons are already waiting to get the throne. The moment he dies, one of the princes will ascend. We should just treat it as another day.”

“Brother Liu, you are mistaken. I’m not worried about them. I’m just thinking about how chaotic this world is,” Li Huowang said, pouring another cup of tea and drinking it.

“Yeah, the world is in chaos. Everything is due to humans too. Why can’t those in positions of power just think about living life peacefully? The moment they give orders we have to work like crazy. If it wasn’t because of the resources in the Surveillance Bureau, I would’ve quit! Er Jiu, I think you made the right choice by hiding in a rural area. You didn’t even take a mission nor did you even report yourself. The new Ji Xiang didn’t even know you existed.”

Li Huowang thought about it and decided that he still needed someone in the bureau to feed him information. It was good to have a friend.

“Brother Liu, I feel much happier knowing how many members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao have died. Don’t leave yet. We will have a toast to celebrate it! You cannot return until you are drunk!”

“Sure! My stomach is growling already. I was waiting for you to say that.”

After receiving Li Huowang's order, Yang Xiaohai used all of his culinary techniques to cook up a feast. He even brought out a good cask of wine so that Li Huowang could drink with Liu Zongyuan.

After their feast, Liu Zongyuan wrapped his arm around Li Huowang. He was drunk and almost made Li Huowang his sworn brother.

Nevertheless, Li Huowang was not fooled. He could see Liu Zongyuan’s Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings clearly and knew Liu Zongyuan was not being sincere.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao believed that everyone had different masks that they wore at different times.

Despite that, Li Huowang was unbothered by Liu Zongyuan's insincerity. After all, he was someone who hid his real emotions too.

Liu Zongyuan woke up early the next morning. He tried to give Li Huowang some advice just as he was leaving.

"Brother Er, it's fine for you to just send me up to this point. Are you sure you won't be accepting missions anymore? If you don't take any missions for a long time, you will get demoted."

Li Huowang shook his head. "Think about how many people have died recently. The outside world is still too chaotic. It's best to hide and wait for things to pass. Brother Liu, don't work too hard. Your life is your own, and there's nothing after death."

Liu Zongyuan heeded Li Huowang's advice seriously.

Before he left, Liu Zongyuan took out several bent bamboo strips with the different moon phases engraved onto them. They ranged from half-moon to full moon.

He said, "Brother Er, take these. If you need to find me, tie them onto the pigeon. They will be able to find me for sure. The fuller the moon, the faster it will take to get into contact with me."

"Sure. I will be staying in the village for quite some time. You can come and find me if you want."

Liu Zongyuan jumped into the forest and disappeared after bidding Li Huowang farewell.

Then Li Huowang took out the Surveillance Bureau identity token and looked at it.

It seems that I can't throw this identity away yet, or today's matters won't be resolved easily. But the emperor is dying soon...? If he dies, doesn't that make him the second emperor to die? They sure go through the emperors fast.

Li Huowang recalled the emperor that hid his face behind the veil. He thought the emperor was overbearing and regal, but it was unexpected that he was going to die so soon.

Li Huowang stopped thinking about Shangjing and turned around to head towards Cowheart Mountain.

He didn't care who died and who lived in this crazy world. All he wanted to do was live in a stable environment and protect the small village where everyone he cared for resided.

Li Huowang wasn't even interested in Immortality. As a Strayed One, he could consume an unlimited amount of Lifespan Pills without any side effects. However, his life would be filled with pain and misery. It was no different than Hell.

It was scary to think that he would continue living while everyone he loved would die.

Li Huowang had just left the area when Bai Lingmiao and the Second Deity peeked out from their room.

"Luckily Li Huowang is here. Otherwise, it might not be that simple to fool the Surveillance Bureau. It seems that he's got a high position within the Surveillance Bureau. Should we tell him about how the Immortal families are threatening me? Maybe he could find out the way to deal with them from inside the Surveillance Bureau. What do you think?" Bai Lingmiao asked the Second Deity.

The Second Deity shook her head.

Bai Lingmiao said, "Why? Are you thinking that it would be troublesome for him? It would be even worse if the issue became more serious without telling him. There are things we shouldn't hide from him."

"What about your eyes?"

The Second Deity's words shocked Bai Lingmiao.

Bai Lingmiao then raised her hand. Her white irises were dotted with white specks when she looked at her own hand. In her vision, she only saw three of her fingers. The rest of it was blocked by the white specks.

Bai Lingmiao replied in a calm voice, "My parents asked for me once. Those with my condition will lose their eyesight no matter what, and I'll have a relatively short life. They tried many things, but nothing worked. Maybe this is just how my life will be; there is nothing I can do about it. My life was doomed to be a sad one right from the start.”

Chapter 456 - Change

“It’s just being blind. I will find a way to change my eyeballs. If I can’t find a way, I will ask Li Huowang later on,” Bai Lingmiao said. “If I die one day, help me look after him. Don’t let him seek death like a damn girl. No, wait, I can’t die now. I need to give birth to a child for him. How many children do you think I should give birth to?”

There was a sudden commotion in the village, and Bai Lingmiao frowned. Then she took the Second Deity with her to find out what was going on.

They quickly found out what was happening. Puppy’s wife had given birth.

It was supposed to be happy news, but when the baby was brought out of the room, everyone stopped cheering and fell silent. Puppy was so stunned that he stood still like a rock.

Just like Puppy, there were white patches of various sizes on the baby’s skin. The baby had the same condition!

Luo Juanhua looked around before approaching Puppy and carefully placed the baby in his arms.

She told them, “It’s a girl.”

Puppy’s face turned even paler, and he almost collapsed. “Why is it a girl? Why? How could she get married next time?”

Chun Xiaoman was on the verge of tears.

She hugged Bai Lingmiao and said in a trembling voice, “Those with conditions like us are not only ugly, but our children will inherit our conditions too. If we have children, we’ll only continue on the chain of pain. I told Puppy that once, but he believed that he was different. Sigh. ”

Hearing that, Bai Lingmiao’s pale face turned ashen.

Li Huowang walked up the steep mountain path until he reached the cave he usually cultivated in. The flat cave was now heavily distorted.

It was twisted in ways that were impossible, and there were many sculptures too. Some of them were of Yang Na, Sun Xiaoqin, and even Li Jiancheng. Li Huowang had made them while cultivating. He had done it unconsciously and by chance. He couldn't replicate the results even if he cultivated again.

Li Huowang found a relatively flat piece of land in the cave and started cultivating while sitting down. He gathered his inner sight and slowly pushed the primordial breath to circulate around his seven chakra points.

After he worked hard on that for a while, the primordial breath finally started to move. He wanted to use this chance and do one cycle today.

Li Huowang started his cultivation fervently. He thought of nothing else except to move the primordial breath to the starting point. It was a slow process but the primordial breath was moving.

It was also a very dangerous process. Li Huowang had to focus on using his inner sight to move and cover the primordial breath at the same time. He accidentally let the primordial breath escape a number of times and let himself get strapped into the hospital bed in his hallucination.

Nevertheless, his hard work quickly paid off. Under his intense cultivation, he swiftly moved the primordial breath into the first chakra point, and a faint light emanated outwards from him. He suddenly felt his inner sight, which was covering the primordial breath, expand rapidly before being forced outwards through his limbs.

Li Huowang learned everything that the faint light touched, including the earthworms and the smaller bugs found inside the soil.

It was a mysterious feeling. In that instant, Li Huowang felt that he had numerous eyes. The eyes were both inside and outside him, and they merged together to form a sphere.

As long as he willed it, he could see everything in his vicinity.

However, the feeling came and went away quickly. When Li Huowang opened his eyes, his levitating ceased, and he fell towards the ground.

After landing safely, he looked around. He didn't know why, but for some reason, he felt everything was subtly different even though his surroundings looked the same.

Then he picked up a stone and suddenly realized something. He closed his eyes and focused on it.

"This is an apple."

It was not simply a sentence. Li Huowang wholeheartedly believed that he was holding an apple.

Veins bulged on his forehead, and there was an intense expression on his face. Even the hand holding the stone started to shake violently.

After a few moments, he opened his eyes and saw that he was holding an apple!

He excitedly bit into the apple and tasted its sweet and tangy juice!

As he ate more of it, more juices spilled into his mouth. But the taste of the juice gradually changed and was replaced with the taste of iron.

He opened his mouth and spat out blood along with bits of rocks that had cut into his mouth.

Li Huowang looked at the stone apple in his hand that was missing a chunk and told Zhuge Yuan, "Senior Zhuge, look. I've only cultivated for a few days, but I can do this already. One day, I will be able to resurrect you again."

“Junior Li, don’t rush your cultivation. Take it easy. You should probably go back and rest now. You’ve been cultivating for four days straight. Your body might not be able to hold out.”

“What? It’s been that long?”

Li Huowang stood up and felt dizzy all of a sudden. Fortunately, Li Sui rushed in and held Li Huowang up with his tentacles.

“Send me back home. I want to rest a little,” Li Huowang said right before passing out.

The next time he woke up, he found himself lying in a bed. He woke up because he was actually choking on some water that Bai Lingmiao was trying to get him to drink.

Bai Lingmiao asked, “Are you awake? Are you hungry? I’ve brought some food for you.”

She had a sullen expression, but Li Huowang didn’t notice that. The only thing on his mind was to eat. He was so hungry that he could eat an entire horse.

Li Huowang sat up and ate voraciously. A bowl of plain rice was akin to an exquisite plate of food to him in his current state.

He quickly finished his rice and started eating the dishes.

Based on how fast Li Huowang was eating, Bai Lingmiao noticed that the food might not be enough for him, so she went back down to get more.

Li Huowang kept eating until he noticed the pair of red shoes in front of him.

He raised his head and looked at the Second Deity. “Is something wrong?”

“Senior Li, can you help us?”

Li Huowang munched on the vegetables and then swallowed. “Tell me what’s wrong. There’s no need to hold back.”

The Second Deity stood there with her fingers intertwined in hesitation.

Li Huowang picked up a lot of unsaid information just from observing that.

He asked, "Is this something you want to talk about alone? Did Miaomiao not agree to it? I know both of you share the same senses, but you can act on your own too. Tell me what's wrong, and I will help you if I can."

The Second Deity was still hesitating when the bright room suddenly turned dark.

"Hm?" Li Huowang uttered in surprise.

He stood up and went to the window. The skies were incredibly dark.

"Is it nighttime already?" he asked.

"No." Zhuge Yuan wore a grave expression. "Junior Li, it's not nighttime. It's still afternoon. This is one of the Natural Disasters, the Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dog."

Chapter 457 - Natural Disaster

“Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dog?” Li Huowang frowned at Zhuge Yuan's words.

Isn't it just a solar eclipse?

However, Li Huowang knew it was not a normal solar eclipse. He had seen one in the other world when he was a primary school student.

A solar eclipse wouldn't blot out the sun completely and would always leave a ring of light.

Dum, dum, dum!

The rhythmic sound of rapid drumbeats echoed, and Lu Zhuangyuan used his trained voice as a performer to shout, “The Heavenly Dog has eaten the sun~! Beat the drums and make some noise to scare it away~!”

Everyone could no longer stay calm, and they started panicking at Lu Zhuangyuan's words.

Li Huowang opened the window and jumped down before heading toward the source of the sound. It didn't take him a long while to see Lu Zhuangyuan. He was with his group of disciples and was beating and playing instruments with lanterns in hand.

“Stop! Everyone stop!” Li Huowang snatched Lu Zhuangyuan's gong.

“Young Daoist, I know you're amazing, but you don't know what's happening right now! The Heavenly Dog has eaten the sun! The last time this happened, my third uncle brought along the entire village to beat the drums and play instruments to chase away the Heavenly Dog!”

Li Huowang frowned at Lu Zhuangyuan's nonsense. "What you're trying to do is useless! Hurry up and gather everyone in the village to hide in the Bai Family Estate! Don't forget to do a head count!"

"What are we going to do if the Heavenly Dog swallows the sun because we didn't chase it away with our instruments?"

"Just go! Say something stupid like that again, and I will burn your instruments!"

Lu Zhuangyuan wanted to argue but decided against it after seeing Li Huowang's stern look. He turned around and walked away with his disciples to gather everyone else. They brought their lanterns to the Bai Family Estate.

Li Huowang finally had the time to ask Zhuge Yuan.

"Senior Zhuge, is this really a Natural Disaster? Are you sure it's not something else?"

Li Huowang had experienced so many bizarre things in this crazy world that he could no longer feel surprised by anything.

Zhuge Yuan looked up and reminisced before replying, "It should be a Natural Disaster. I remember reading about it once, and there was one Natural Disaster that had the same phenomena where the skies have gone completely dark."

"Senior Zhuge, have you read anything about it? How about the Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dog?"

"No, but what matters isn't the details of the Natural Disaster. It's when they happened. Do you remember when was the last Natural Disaster?"

Li Huowang looked up at the dark skies and reminisced. "Last year."

Last year's Natural Disaster involved the disappearance of "Decay."

Everything in the world would no longer decay and rot. It was exactly why Li Huowang could still remain calm. It was a "Natural Disaster," but it didn't really affect Li Huowang and the others, except for the death of the Abbess, which was notably impactful.

"Correct, but Natural Disasters usually happen once every ten years. Why do we have two Natural Disasters in just two years? Junior Li, something is definitely wrong here."

Li Huowang's heart tightened at Zhuge Yuan's remark.

"Does that mean that in the Baiyu Capital—"

"Junior Li," Zhuge Yuan interrupted with a serious look. "You're a Strayed One that is already cultivating the "Truth." It's best if you don't talk about those things anymore, or..."

Li Huowang understood what Zhuge Yuan was trying to say, so he went silent. He stood quietly and thought about the many different possibilities until Lu Juren came running over with a lantern, informing him that everyone in the village had already gathered at the Bai Family Estate.

Li Huowang looked up at the empty space above him. "Senior Zhuge, I think we should focus on holding out through this Natural Disaster first, regardless of what's happening over there. There's no reason for me to think too much about it, as I can't really do anything."

"No, no. All of us should take responsibility for everyone's lives. Let me think about this for now," Zhuge Yuan said, tapping his head with his fan and sinking deep into his thoughts.

Lu Juren took a deep breath and cast a nervous look at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang didn't say anything and started walking toward the Bai Family Estate. Li Huowang saw that everyone was kneeling and praying toward the darkness. It wasn't exactly a strange sight, as ordinary people would seek salvation during moments of extreme fear, especially in the face of such a bizarre phenomenon.

"Xiaohai, do we have enough food?" Li Huowang asked. He concluded that they ought to bunker up in the Bai Family Estate and wait for the Natural Disaster to pass.

“Senior Li, don’t worry. We have enough food. We still have last year’s rice in the granary. We can last for two to three years. We also have a well in the estate to drink, so we’re going to be fine.”

Li Huowang nodded and took the bell from Chun Xiaoman’s waist.

He rang it loudly to get everyone’s attention.

“Everyone, don’t panic. It’s just a Natural Disaster. It’ll go away soon; we just need to wait for it to go away.”

Despite Li Huowang’s words, everyone was still afraid.

Fortunately, they looked slightly reassured by his words.

Li Huowang noticed their fear and instructed Yang Xiaohai to slaughter a cow for a meal. Everyone’s attention was instantly shifted to whether or not they should actually slaughter a cow for a meal, and they seemed to have forgotten their fear.

“Boss Hong Zhong is amazing! I didn’t expect that you’d be able to divert their attention so easily!”

Li Huowang ignored the taunting Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion and looked at Zhuge Yuan, asking, “Senior Zhuge, how much effort do you think the Surveillance Bureau had to use to repel Natural Disaster? They were established to repel Natural Disasters, but I still have my doubts on whether they could actually do that or not.”

The appearance of a Natural Disaster meant that the Simings were fighting over each other to take the Heavenly Daos.

Having witnessed Doulao’s incredible powers, Li Huowang doubted that an organization filled with normal people could repel Natural Disasters. Or maybe they were just lying?

“They do have their methods, but I’m not sure if they could do it in time. They must have used up a lot of their resources against the Sitting Oblivion Dao at the time.”

Li Huowang didn’t know what to say. He had hated how the Surveillance Bureau thought that the lives of others were meaningless, but at the same time, he was hoping that they'd soon resume operations.

They were evil and had killed many people, but they were indispensable to this world. Many people would die without them.

“Senior Zhuge, you said that something is definitely wrong because of the short interval between Natural Disasters. What do you think? Can the Surveillance Bureau handle this?”

“It should be fine, but the Liang Kingdom’s Surveillance Bureau is working together with the imperial family, so I don’t really trust them. Even if the Liang Kingdom is fake, ancient laws say that the Surveillance Bureau cannot collaborate with any factions or powers. They absolutely cannot help the imperial family to invade other countries and steal land. Those fall under the jurisdiction of the military, after all.”

Chapter 458 - Appearance

Li Huowang was no longer worried after hearing that someone would handle the Natural Disaster. If the Liang Kingdom's Surveillance Bureau couldn't handle it by themselves, there was still the Surveillance Bureau in Hou Shu and Si Qi.

It felt nice to have someone strong to deal with the Natural Disaster; Li Huowang didn't even need to do anything. Time ticked by, and everyone saw that nothing bizarre was happening except for the dark skies.

Actually, everyone's attention was on the delicious scent of beef, and they crowded around the entrance to the kitchen of the Bai Family Estate.

“Are we really going to eat beef? This is treason. I'm scared...”[\[1\]](#)

“Yeah. It's such a waste to kill a cow. It could've helped us in the field for a very long time.”

“Well, the cow is already dead, so there's no use crying over it. I've never eaten beef before, so I'm excited.”

Soon, everyone had their own bowl of rice topped with large pieces of beef. They muttered to each other, comparing beef slices to see who had the larger pieces before eating with jovial smiles.

“Just eat. Don't think about it too much about it. Who do you think you are? An immortal or something? You don't have to bother with that Natural Disaster.” Li Huowang received the massive cow heart that had been stewed with rock sugar.

“This is too big.” Li Huowang stared at the massive heart that weighed at least four catties. The only way to cook it was to stew it whole, or the insides of the heart would remain raw.

“Go ahead and eat it first. If you can't finish it, just give it to me. I have a big appetite.”

Bai Lingmiao picked up her chopsticks and dug out a gold bracelet from inside the heart before presenting the dish to Li Huowang.

“Why did you put a gold bracelet inside the heart of the cow?”

“I don’t know. My mother taught me that, and she said it’s good for the body.”

Li Huowang was actually pretty hungry after running around all morning dealing, trying to deal with the Natural Disaster. He poked his chopstick into the heart and ate it as if it were a massive dumpling.

A distinct fragrance exploded in his mouth, and he chewed on it with a smile.

Meanwhile, a dazed Puppy carrying his daughter walked over to Li Huowang.

For the first time in a while, Puppy had no appetite.

Just then, Puppy knelt on the ground and prostrated, kowtowing three times to Li Huowang amidst his frustration and sadness.

Li Huowang stopped chewing and looked at the baby in Puppy’s arms.

Before Puppy could say anything, Li Huowang said bluntly, “I can’t help you. Your daughter is not sick nor is she disabled. She was born with that. Even if I remove her skin, her skin would grow back in the same way.”

Li Huowang didn’t even consider using his primordial breath to try and cure Puppy’s daughter. It was just too risky. He had just managed to move his primordial breath to the Root Chakra. If he were to use it forcefully, he could end up changing Puppy’s daughter for the worse.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao did have some illusory techniques, but it would only address the symptom rather than the issue itself.

Puppy's face fell, and he walked away with his daughter. He had just taken two steps when he raised his arm and slapped himself hard. Tears had already fallen down his cheeks before his hand could land on his face.

"Sigh. Puppy really is pitiful. I wonder if his daughter would hate him once she grows up?" Bai Lingmiao mused.

Li Huowang turned to look at Bai Lingmiao and said in a deep tone, "If he's pitiful, what about you?"

"What?" Bai Lingmiao's pupils shrank into needle points.

"Do you really think that you can fool me? How long are you going to hide it from me?" Li Huowang placed the cow heart back into the bowl.

"Who told you that?!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed angrily, but she calmed down after meeting Li Huowang's gaze. "Don't worry. I'm not blind yet. As for my shorter lifespan, it is what it is. However, I have yet to celebrate my twentieth birthday, so I should have ten more years to live."

"That's not all," Li Huowang said, sounding indifferent as he stared at her face, seemingly looking for any change in her expression.

Bai Lingmiao was irritated. "I don't need your help to deal with the Immortal families. You should take better care of yourself first and recover your sanity. Who's the damned blabbermouth who told you everything? No one else but the Second Deity knows about that, so it was her?!"

"No, it wasn't her. It was you. You told me everything," Li Huowang replied. He picked up the cow heart and took a bite of it.

Bai Lingmiao was stunned. Then, she realized the meaning behind his words. She slapped the cow heart away, and it splattered on the ground. "You tricked me! You dare trick me?!"

"If I hadn't done that, would you have told me anything? What was your plan? Were you planning on telling me only after you've gone completely blind?" Li Huowang asked, staring at her pink irises covered in white specks.

Li Huowang had actually caught onto what the Second Deity was trying to say amidst her hesitation, and he realized by then that Bai Lingmiao was hiding something from him.

However, it was still astonishing that he managed to deceive so much information from her.

Bai Lingmiao's tone of voice rose as she exclaimed, "Fine! I admit that I've been hiding information from you, and since I've already admitted it. Isn't it fair for you to admit to the truth as well? You're hiding the fact that you're still a lunatic, right?"

"You've been running up Cowheart Mountain so you could somehow slip into your hallucination. Do you really think that I'm blind?!"

Li Huowang took a deep breath. He was about to explain when a dog's barking startled them out of their quarrel. Li Huowang instantly knew that Bun was the one barking, but it was Li Huowang's first time hearing such emotions in Bun's barks.

Li Huowang brought Bai Lingmiao into the yard, and they saw Bun's fur standing on end as it glared at the main gate.

The main gate was ajar, and it was creaking as it swayed in the wind.

"Huh? I thought I locked the gate. Why is it open?" Zhao Wu asked, running up to them.

And that was when Li Huowang felt a shiver down his spine upon realizing something: everyone in the village was currently inside the Bai Family Estate.

Li Huowang jumped up onto the wall and looked around until he eventually found something suspicious. A man wearing funeral clothes and a hat was standing in a dark corner of the village.

The man had a bizarre appearance; his head was massive, it was half as big as his entire body, and he was wearing a massive hat as well. The man's legs were short, but his arms were long.

It was a surreal sight.

If Li Huowang were asked about the one fact that he had learned while living in this bizarre world, he'd respond with the fact that only evil entities could be so deformed and bizarre, just like the girl who had summoned the God of Happiness.

1. In ancient China, eating beef was illegal because cows were important animals used to till the fields. It's also a sign of respect for the cows after they worked hard in the fields. 🙏

Chapter 459 - Evil Entity

Shwing!

The purple-tassel sword was unsheathed and was pointed at the evil entity at the corner of the wall. Li Huowang directed his killing intent at the evil entity. Evil entities had become a rare sight to Li Huowang since he arrived in the Liang Kingdom, so he didn't expect to see one here.

Li Huowang frowned and whispered, "Senior Zhuge, a Natural Disaster really isn't that simple. I think it's doing something to evil entities rather than just making the sky dark."

Zhugue Yuan was standing with his hands behind his back as he stared at the sky with a serious expression. He looked like he was trying to recall something. Zhugue Yuan didn't respond to Li Huowang, but the entity in the corner made a move.

The man turned around slowly, and Li Huowang finally saw the man's face.

The man had a pallid face filled with bloody holes. The man opened his bloody mouth, revealing rows of arms rather than teeth. The arms had patches on them, and they belonged to babies! The arms at the top and bottom of the mouth held hands, creating a grotesque and eerie smile.

Li Huowang snarled at the horrifying sight. He jumped down the wall and charged at the evil entity. Li Huowang had experienced so many bizarre events in this crazy world that such a horrifying sight could no longer faze him.

Li Huowang's sword reached the entity first. He followed up with a swing of his bronze coin sword, slashing at the evil entity's head as if the sword were a whip.

The evil entity thrust his long arms toward Li Huowang. It was trying to attack and defend itself at the same time.

Li Huowang waved his hand, and the bronze coin sword twisted. It let out a flash of light, and the evil entity cried out in pain. Moments later, his long arms were cut into three pieces.

The evil entity lost both of his arms, and he shrank into his head. His head shrank rapidly as well. Then, a dark shadow rushed out of the man's clothes and tunneled into the darkness.

Staring at the severed arms on the ground, Li Huowang decided not to chase after the evil entity. He was worried that the evil entity was trying to lure him away from everyone. He swung his sword to shake off the blood on it before heading back into the estate.

Li Huowang had just taken two steps when a paper window lit up from within a house at the end of the dark alley. An eerie green glow phased out from the window and hovered in mid-air. Something was moving in the darkness, and Li Huowang was certain that it wasn't human. After all, everyone was in the Bai Family Estate.

At first, it was just one house, but the same eerie glow soon appeared within the houses of more and more houses until the entire Cowheart Village emitted the same eerie green glow.

Li Huowang frowned at the sight, realizing what was happening. A single evil entity was nothing, but multiple entities were a whole new story. Most importantly, he couldn't say for sure whether things would turn for the worse or for the better if he were to fight them right now.

Li Huowang rushed to the Bai Family Estate and slammed the main gate shut before locking it. He took out a piece of yellow paper and drew a talisman using his blood to ward off evil spirits. Then, he placed the talisman on the main gate.

Staring at the faces in the estate, Li Huowang reassured them as best as he could, saying, "Don't worry about the outside world, everyone. Just stay here in the estate! No one is allowed to go outside until the Natural Disaster is gone!”

Li Huowang hopped onto the walls. He gripped his sword tightly upon seeing more and more houses emitting the same eerie green glow.

“It’s surprisingly difficult to encounter even a single evil entity, but all of them are popping out like mushrooms right now. Is it only Cowheart Village, or is this happening everywhere? If it’s the latter, then it’s going to be disastrous...” Li Huowang muttered, and his heart sank at the idea.

“If it’s the latter, then I’m afraid this Natural Disaster is going to live up to its name,” Zhuge Yuan said, sharing the same serious look as Li Huowang.

Zhuge Yuan raised his right hand and gestured with his fingers, seemingly calculating something in an attempt to make sense of what was happening.

“Sigh. What a shame that I can’t take part in something this interesting. I did not expect to die so early.” Hong Zhong was sighing in boredom despite the bizarre sight.

“Daoist, what’s going on? Are many people going to die this time as well?” the old monk asked, sounding worried.

Li Huowang ignored them and looked down at the village. The bizarre sight had a silver lining; even though the houses were giving off the same eerie green glow, there weren’t any hostile gazes on them.

Li Huowang wasn’t sure whether he managed to scare them or not, but at the very least the evil entities were too scared to open the windows and leave the houses.

“My heavens! What is that?! Master, behind you!”

Lu Xiucui’s urgent screams made Li Huowang turn around. Then, he saw that the windows on the second floor were emitting the same eerie green glow. They’re here!

To make matters worse, the glowing window was the window of Bai Lingmiao's room.

Li Huowang placed two talismans on his knees and gnashed his teeth.

Then, he took a massive leap and soared through the air before crashing into the glowing window.

Wooden debris flew everywhere as Li Huowang crashed into the room. Looking up, he saw two figures—a white and a red figure. They were hunched over the bed, seemingly eating something.

The figures were Bai Lingmiao and the Second Deity!

Li Huowang walked up to them and placed his arm on Bai Lingmiao's shoulder.

“Miaomiao?!” Li Huowang exclaimed as his heart jumped up to his throat. Bai Lingmiao's gentle features had vanished, and her face had been replaced by a bizarre face.

Bai Lingmiao's face was now covered in spikes, green scales, and black blood. Her mouth had rows of curved teeth; she had lost all human features and had become an amalgamation of beasts!

However, Bai Lingmiao was laughing despite her plight. Her mangled mouth stretched from ear to ear as she laughed. “

Hahaha~ Hahaha~ Li Huowang, I don't want to laugh, but I can't stop it! The Immortal families are so happy that they went crazy! They're affecting me, and I'm hungry as well!”

With that, Bai Lingmiao pounced on the bed and gnawed on the flesh of an unknown corpse, which clearly belonged to an evil entity.

Crack.

The Second Deity snapped the corpse's bone in half before munching on it with her gaping maw.

Bai Lingmiao had become an amalgamation of beasts and was munching on a corpse with the Second Deity. The horrifying sight was enough for Li Huowang to know that he had to find a way to stop them. He needed to calm them down at all costs.

Li Huowang waved his right hand, and a domino appeared in his palm.

Li Huowang gestured with his hands, making a seal with both hands before placing the domino on his forehead. "Break the bond and seal the heart!"

The next moment, he removed the domino, and his face fell off like a mask.

Li Huowang pressed his face on Bai Lingmiao's face.

"Secure, enlighten!" Li Huowang exclaimed.

Bai Lingmiao immediately stopped laughing.

Chapter 460 - Lotus Seat

Upon confirming that the technique hidden in Hong Zhong's memories was useful, Li Huowang did the same thing to the Second Deity.

The Second Deity immediately stopped laughing and eating.

"What's going on? They're fine not too long ago, but they've transformed into something vile!" Li Huowang's three faces said at the same time.

The technique that he had employed was from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and Li Huowang could see that the two were fighting back against the technique's suppression; it was evidenced by their violent trembling.

Li Huowang knew that the technique wouldn't last long. He needed to attack the issue at its roots.

Zhuguo Yuan shared his thoughts, saying, "Junior Li, the Immortal families have decent appearances, but they're still evil entities. The things that can affect evil entities would affect them, too. The sudden surge in the number of evil entities outside and the changes in the Immortal families have proven that the Natural Disaster is related to evil entities.

"In other words, the Natural Disaster is the source of this issue."

Zhuguo Yuan's information was helpful, but he couldn't do anything about it. He wasn't strong enough to deal with a Natural Disaster by himself. In fact, he didn't even know how to disperse a Natural Disaster.

Li Huowang looked up at the dark skies with gritted teeth. "What is the Surveillance Bureau doing? Are they not going to do anything but watch as a myriad of lives are about to be sacrificed?!"

"At this rate, everything is going to collapse!" Li Huowang popped his head out of the window with the bamboo slips that Liu Zongyuan had given him in hand. "Xiaohai, give me a homing pigeon!"

"Homing pigeons? We don't have any of that. However, I have a sparrow here that I'm going to grill later. Is that fine?"

"Yes!"

Li Huowang wanted to know what was going on with the Surveillance Bureau by asking Liu Zongyuan. He also wanted to know how long the Natural Disaster would last. Li Huowang swiftly composed his letter before tying it to the sparrow along with a bamboo slip engraved with a full moon.

The sparrow soon disappeared in the dark skies.

Li Huowang was still trying to catch his breath when he heard someone shouting in the yard. He rushed outside to find "something" peering over the walls from the outside. They barely looked human and were covered in dirt. Their figures were folded in half and distorted; they looked more like clumps of rotten meat.

However, they all had one thing in common: their smiling face. They looked just like the evil entity Li Huowang had fought earlier.

"Shit! They've become ghosts and are now trying to take Lady Bai's life! I told her to bury them farther away, but she insisted on burying them in the mountains behind the village!"

"Stop whining! Those corpses are being possessed by something. They're not scary at all! Also, ghosts do not exist!"

Bai Lingmiao and the Second Deity were wearing Li Huowang's face as they followed closely behind Li Huowang. Li Huowang whipped out his purple-tassel sword and the bronze coin sword before jumping onto the wall.

The three of them cut through the corpses as if the latter were vegetables. Ordinary evil entities were nothing before Li Huowang.

Soon, the situation was brought under control. Before Li Huowang could sigh in relief, however, he heard something snap in his heart—one of the two threads in his heart had snapped.

Li Huowang whipped around and saw that the face he had pressed onto the Second Deity's face had been torn in half for some reason.

“ Hahahaha~! ” The Second Deity laughed maniacally as she ran toward the ancestral hall of the Bai family on all fours.

“Senior Li, quick! Follow me!” exclaimed the Second Deity.

Li Huowang was anxious. There were still evil entities around the Bai Family Estate, and the Second Deity had just escaped, causing even more trouble.

While Li Huowang was pondering over what to do next, the Bai Family Estate's main gate was kicked open. Gao Zhijian emerged, sweeping his giant halberd around and spinning like a tornado. He killed almost all of the evil entities in one fell swoop!

Then, Gao Zhijian looked up at Li Huowang standing on the walls and roared, “Go!”

The immediate danger had been addressed, so Li Huowang grabbed Bai Lingmiao and chased after the Second Deity.

There were talismans on his knees, so he was lightning fast. In no time, he caught up to the Second Deity, who was running on foot.

Li Huowang lunged at the Second Deity, but the latter avoided it and jumped into the ancestral hall of the Bai Family through a hidden door.

Li Huowang walked into the hidden door, chasing after the Second Deity. He raced down the White Lotus Sect's hall before entering another secret room where the Second Deity had come to a halt.

The Second Deity was laughing as she stood frozen among the columns of books and scrolls. Tears spilled from her eyes the moment she saw Li Huowang. Then, she tried her best to suppress her laughter before shouting, “ Haha —Senior Li! We're going to die soon! The Immortal families feel that the mortal world is their own, and they are using our bodies to descend into the mortal realm!

" Haha —we can't leave much for you except for these scrolls. These scrolls contain the techniques of the White Lotus Sect, and you might be able to use them once you're dead! Hahaha! "

The Second Deity's beast-like face was stuck in between sorrow and happiness. It was an eerie sight to see, but Li Huowang could see a "kindness" in that expression, and it was a kind desire to take care of Li Huowang.

"What nonsense are you spouting?! The Natural Disaster will pass, and you are not going to die! Come, just sleep for now," Li Huowang said. He tried to press his face onto the Second Deity.

"Junior Li, that technique is useless. You should take the Twelve Merit Jade Lotus and put it on her head. Then, ask her to sit with her legs crossed and tell her to make the lotus seal with both hands," Zhuge Yuan said.

Li Huowang obeyed and saw a jade lotus emanating a soft white glow.

"Junior Li, hurry up! It will be too late once the evil entity has taken over your wife's body!"

Li Huowang hesitated no longer and quickly placed the lotus on the head of the Second Deity. Her laughter grew softer and softer before eventually being replaced by crying.

"Stop crying! Make the lotus seal!"

The Second Deity obeyed and made the lotus seal with her hands. The seal was large and exaggerated due to her sharp fingernails. However, it was effective; the white glow from the jade lotus condensed and formed a lotus seat before melting into the Second Deity.

The soft energy was like spring water, cleansing her from the inside. Everything that belonged to the Immortal families was suppressed.

Soon, the Second Deity became more and more like Bai Lingmiao.

However, Li Huowang was soon anxious; the Second Deity was becoming transparent. Li Huowang snatched the jade lotus away from her head, and the Second Deity had become tangible once more.

Li Huowang sighed in relief. Clearly, the jade lotus was an incredible artifact, but it was going to be dangerous if the user had no idea how to use it correctly.

The Second Deity had returned to normal; Li Huowang proceeded to do the same thing to Bai Lingmiao and placed the jade lotus on her head.

The soft, white glow melted into her, and Li Huowang's faux face was the first thing that left her. The intertwined energy of the Immortal families followed suit, and in the end, the murderous aura in her heart was expelled as well.

Chapter 461 - Someone Stronger

Li Huowang removed the jade lotus upon seeing Bai Lingmiao returning to normal.

He then shook her vigorously, shouting, "Miaomiao! Miaomiao!"

Li Huowang only relaxed when Bai Lingmiao opened her eyes.

"Senior Li ..." Bai Lingmiao's pink irises revealed sadness and indignance.

"As long as you're fine... as long as you're fine..." Li Huowang hugged her tightly and patted her back. Li Huowang looked up, quietly thanking Zhuge Yuan.

If Zhuge Yuan hadn't told him what to do with the jade lotus, he could have lost Bai Lingmiao.

"Junior Li, no need to thank me. I decided to help because I can help. Anyway, I didn't expect that the Twelve Merits Jade Lotus have been here all this while. I've been looking for it for a very long time."

Li Huowang took a deep breath and slipped his arms behind Bai Lingmiao before carrying her out of the dark room. The Second Deity followed closely behind them.

Li Huowang lowered his head and took in the fragrance of her hair before whispering, "I know that you're upset, but right now, we need to deal with the urgent matters first. Let's talk after we've overcome the Natural Disaster, all right?"

Listening to Li Huowang's beating heart, Li Huowang burrowed her head deeper into the former's chest and nodded. Compared to her previous self, she had become much more quiet and meek.

The tunnels made by the White Lotus Sect weren't that long, so Li Huowang soon made it out, walking into the ancestral hall.

Once he was outside, Li Huowang immediately heard the sound of fighting coming from the entrance of the Bai Family Estate. Li Huowang picked up his pace and ran toward the noises to reinforce them.

Li Huowang had taken just a few steps when his expression froze, and he came to a screeching halt. He had picked up something with his keen senses; something was watching him.

Li Huowang shivered. He had no idea why, but his body was no longer under his control. His shivering became even more intense as time ticked by; soon, he trembled visibly.

“That’s...” Li Huowang looked up while trembling, and his gaze pierced the dark skies.

The dark skies parted, revealing unknown horrors. Li Huowang saw the profound energy of the universe rolling around, the intertwining Heavenly Daos, and the shining capital filled with crimson mansions with the royal palace hidden at the top.

A bead of cold sweat slid down Li Huowang's face and landed on Bai Lingmiao's hand. Li Huowang looked up from his chest and saw Li Huowang staring at the skies without moving.

Bai Lingmiao looked up as well but saw nothing.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong?” Bai Lingmiao asked, sounding uneasy.

She tugged lightly at his red robes, and that was when Li Huowang's mouth parted until it reached his ears. His lower jaw was dislocated with a crack, and an urgent scream escaped from the depths of his throat.

He sounded like a crane crowing loudly.

When his scream rang out, it pervaded and overwhelmed everything. Every noise nearby became Li Huowang's cry. Black tentacles surged from Li Huowang's shadow amidst his strange scream.

Bai Lingmiao felt something tugging on her shoes, and she cried out, “Senior Li!”

Bai Lingmiao cried loudly, and Li Huowang tried desperately to close his eyes to stop the entities up above in the Heavens from affecting him. However, he couldn’t do it. He felt like he had lost all control over his eyes.

Just then, Li Huowang hoisted Bai Lingmiao over his shoulder before gouging his own eyes with his fingers, but it was useless! His bloody eyeballs were still staring at the entities hidden behind in the dark skies!

Li Huowang clenched both hands tightly and destroyed his eyeballs.

And that was when he finally stopped screaming—everything had returned to normal.

Li Huowang slumped to the ground with Bai Lingmiao in his arms.

The Second Deity and Bai Lingmiao hurriedly helped Li Huowang up.

Li Huowang looked haggard and was drenched in his own blood. His lower jaw was completely dislocated, so his mouth was agape. He panted deeply as both saliva and blood flowed out of his mouth.

Li Huowang looked incredibly weak as if his soul had been taken away from him.

Bai Lingmiao was about to beat the drums, but Li Huowang raised a hand to stop her. He forcefully set his jaw in position before saying, “Don’t call upon the Immortal families! The evil entities in the world have gone crazy! The Immortal families might not listen to you anymore, and they might not leave you alone the moment you summon them here!”

Bai Lingmiao's tear-stricken face appeared before Li Huowang, and she reached out a trembling hand to touch Li Huowang's bloody eye socket.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong with you? Why did you gouge out your eyeballs?” Bai Lingmiao asked, sobbing.

A tremor ran across Li Huowang at Bai Lingmiao's remark, and he opened his mouth wide once again.

Li Huowang covered his eye sockets with both hands and mumbled, “No, I'm not going to think about it. I'm not going to think about the suffering of the masses and the suffering of all living beings. Suffering cannot be born nor die; they are neither dirty nor clean, and they will remain eternal.”

The scenes that Li Huowang had witnessed were threatening to reappear in his memories. He tried his best to calm down by chanting a mantra. He lowered his hands but found that the scabs had glued them to his face.

Li Huowang tugged at his arms, and blood sprayed out of his eye sockets. Li Huowang listened to his surroundings and endured the pain to ask, “Where are we?”

“Master, you're in the yard of the Bai Family Estate. Please get ready to endure the pain; I will scatter some medicine into your eye sockets.”

Hearing Lu Xiucui's voice, Li Huowang tried to stand up and walk outside with his sword in hand.

“Master, you don’t have to go anymore, as you are heavily injured. Miss Bai, Simpleton, and Xiaoman have killed most of the evil entities. If they need reinforcements, I can simply go there to help him.”

Lu Xiucui's words had yet to finish echoing in the air when the others arrived to check on Li Huowang. They told him the same thing, allowing Li Huowang to know that they really weren’t in danger.

Thus, Li Huowang sat down and took out the Fiery Scripture to heal himself.

The sizzling wax moved across his face and stopped the bleeding in his eye sockets.

Lu Zhuangyuan wrapped some bandages across his eyes, and Li Huowang sat quietly, listening to the situation outside with his keen ears while trying to come out with contingency plans.

Just then, his arm and face felt warm.

Before he could ask any questions, cheers erupted all around him.

“What’s happening?!” Li Huowang held his sword tightly and stood up.

“Young Daoist, the sun is back! Hahaha! Looks like someone managed to scare the Heavenly Dog away with the gongs!”

Chapter 462 - Missing

Li Huowang sighed in relief when he heard Lu Zhuangyuan and his superstitious nonsense. He sat back down and muttered to himself, "Looks like the sun is back. It's a good thing that we've warded off that Natural Disaster."

Li Huowang's heart relaxed, and he lost consciousness the moment he lost all tension. When he woke up, he found his mouth filled with a warm liquid. The liquid was tasty—it was soup!

The familiar softness pressing against his nape, and the familiar fragrance told him that his head was on Bai Lingmiao's lap. "Miaomiao."

Bai Lingmiao said nothing; she was focused solely on feeding him chicken soup.

"I'm not disabled. I can do it myself. I'm just tired." Li Huowang sat up with much effort and drank the soup from the bowl in big gulps. Li Huowang didn't really suffer any severe injuries except for becoming blind. His exhaustion stemmed from his mind rather than his body.

Li Huowang felt like the cogs in his head had rusted. He tried thinking hard and long about something, but the back of his head throbbed in pain.

Li Huowang knew why this was happening.

It was because he had seen something he was not supposed to see.

The entity that had appeared out of the darkness during the Natural Disaster and the entities that couldn't be mentioned neither in words nor recollections—he had seen them all.

It seemed that the recent Natural Disaster involved the addition of something rather than deletion.

When Li Huowang stared at the entity, the entity stared back at him. There were no "lies" in the entity's figure, and it was like a massive bronze cauldron with inscriptions of all the major events that happened in the past.

Every recollection renders it invalid, and it changes every time it's forgotten. Every time it's mentioned, it'll move itself to the past while bringing its other self to the present.

Li Huowang knew what it meant at the time, but he had forgotten it.

The entity was not a Siming. Li Huowang had never seen it in the Baiyu Capital. In fact, Li Huowang didn't even know where it came from or just what exactly it was. Of course, Li Huowang had no intentions of learning more about it.

"Senior Li, what's wrong?" Bai Lingmiao asked, stroking Li Huowang's furrowed brows with her pale fingers in order to soothe him.

"No worries. I'm fine. I shouldn't be thinking about something like this; dealing with it is the Surveillance Bureau's job," Li Huowang said. His face was pale as he repeated his words again and again to stop thinking about it.

Li Huowang grabbed Bai Lingmiao's hand, and his voice had a hint of anticipation in it as he said, "Miaomiao, are you really okay? Do you really not need the murderous aura anymore?"

Without eyes, Li Huowang couldn't see her expression.

However, he could feel Bai Lingmiao's other hand covering the back of his hand.

Li Huowang's expression fell at Bai Lingmiao's silence. In the end, he decided to just enjoy the silence.

Perhaps I shouldn't talk about that anymore and forget about it. Maybe this is for the best.

"Did we lose anyone in the village?" Li Huowang asked.

"None, but someone's missing. However, I'm not sure whether he is 'someone.' or not.”

“Hmm?”

“Li Sui is missing. Remember the thing that called you 'father' and crawled out of your belly button?”

“What?! Li Sui is missing?!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He jumped up instinctively and rushed toward the window before shouting, “Li Sui! Come back!”

Li Huowang shouted numerous times, but there wasn't any response.

He reckoned that something was wrong.

Li Sui was a naive creature. He'd always stick close to Li Huowang if he could help it, and it was the result of them living together for so long. In other words, there was no way Li Sui wouldn't respond to Li Huowang's shouts.

“Miaomiao, ask the villagers to look for Li Sui! Prioritize it!” Li Huowang ordered.

“All right,” Bai Lingmiao responded and headed downstairs.

Left all alone, Li Huowang thought about the many different possibilities.

Li Sui wouldn't possibly leave his side for no reason.

“Senior Li, it's best if you think about the worst-case scenario. The Black Taisui is an evil entity as well, after all. The Natural Disaster must've affected him as well, and I don't know what happened to him.”

Li Huowang's expression became sour at Zhuge Yuan's remark. Now that he thought about it, Li Sui had gone missing upon the Natural Disaster's appearance.

“Master! Master!” Lu Xiucan exclaimed.

Li Huowang stood up instantly and hurriedly turned to Lu Xiucan. “Did you find him?”

“No, I just came here to tell you that even Bun has disappeared.”

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and smashed the table with his fist.

The table and his fist split in half at the same time.

Caught off guard, Lu Xiucan retreated to the stairs and hoped that Li Huowang couldn't see him near the stairs.

“Go and keep searching for them! If you can't find them in the village, try searching around the village in a radius of ten Li!” [1]

“All right, I will pass down your orders!”

Time ticked by, and night soon fell.

Their chances of getting found were dwindling slowly as time went on. They continued their search until the second section of the night arrived. Li Huowang finally calmed down enough and told everyone to go back and rest.

A soft pair of hands placed a bowl of noodles on the cracked wooden table before Li Huowang. A pair of chopsticks was placed in Li Huowang's hands afterward.

“Go ahead and eat first. I don't really have the appetite., Li Huowang said in a sullen voice.

Two days ago, he thought everything was heading in a good direction, but the unfortunate news that he had been hearing these days was making Li Huowang feel that things weren't going swimmingly at all.

“Tsk. Look at you. You're acting as if you had really lost a son. He was an evil entity. Do you really think that he's your son, as he came out of your stomach? If I were in your shoes, I would be glad about his disappearance.

“After all, I've just gotten rid of a nuisance.”

Li Huowang looked up at the faceless Sitting Oblivion Dao member, who had just taunted him. Li Huowang turned to an empty space and said, “Senior Zhuge, can you help me and give him a slap?”

Smack!

“Thanks.”

Bai Lingmiao was instantly worried upon seeing Li Huowang talking to himself. She was heading to the bed when she walked back to the table, picked up the chopsticks there, and slowly fed Li Huowang.

“I’m not hungry. You should go and eat first.” Li Huowang pushed it away, but Bai Lingmiao insisted.

The two argued for a while until Li Huowang finally opened his mouth and ate the noodles. Two figures—one eating and one feeding—sat quietly in the room.

Li Huowang was just about to obliterate the bowl of noodles when a familiar voice echoed from the window. “Father, were you looking for me?”

“Li Sui?!” Li Huowang stood up in surprise and rushed toward where the voice had come from.

However, the Second Deity stopped him, explaining, “Senior Li, that’s not Li Sui. It’s a dog that has been skinned and stripped of its flesh. It’s baring its fangs at you while smiling.”

1. One Li = 500m. So around 5km 🐾

Chapter 463 - Li Sui

“A skinned dog? And it's smiling at me?”

Hearing Bai Lingmiao's words, Li Huowang imagined a horrible image in his mind.

After all, he couldn't see what was happening.

Li Huowang swallowed hard before he asked, “Bun?”

“Woof woof!” A familiar barking echoed.

Li Huowang had taken care of Bun for more than a year and would never mistake Bun's barking for someone else's barking. The barking had indeed come from Bun.

Bun's barking was filled with excitement rather than pain and fear.

Li Huowang frowned and focused his hearing in the same direction. “Li Sui?”

A voice superimposed on the barking echoed from the same direction. “Father, I'm here.”

Li Sui tried to crawl in from the window when rapid drumbeats echoed, stopping him.

“Father! Mother won't let me in,” Li Sui said, sounding emotionally distressed.

Li Huowang massaged his throbbing temples. He had no idea what to do. In fact, he didn't even know what to call the entity in front of him. What did Li Sui do during the Natural Disaster?

“Father, do you not want me anymore?” Li Sui asked, his voice filled with sadness and even resembled sobbing. Bun's howling echoed along with Li Sui's words.

Li Huowang patted the Second Deity's shoulder. “Don't worry. It can't harm me even if I was blind.”

Li Huowang walked past the Second Deity and approached the noises.

He couldn't see, but he could still feel people's gazes. Soon, he stopped just a few meters away from Li Sui.

"Come inside. Don't stay outside the window."

Two dull thuds echoed as Li Sui stepped into the room.

Li Huowang caught a whiff of blood.

Li Sui—or Bun, was standing just in front of him.

The scent of blood did not belong to that of a human but a dog.

Li Huowang had an inkling of what had happened, and he extended his arms to touch the entity before him. The first sensation he felt was Bun's rough tongue extending out from behind its sharp fangs.

The tongue licked the scab off Li Huowang's hands. "Father, you're injured."

Li Huowang moved his hands upwards and felt the skinless face of the beast. There were still some tendons and muscles left, but the beast had become mostly bones from its injuries.

Li Huowang managed to find what remained of the veil and straw coat above the beast's head. It had been damaged so badly that it could no longer hide anything.

Li Huowang slowly moved his hands toward the body of the beast and started exploring every inch of its figure.

Li Huowang soon discovered a bloody, mangled mess, which was what remained of Bun. However, the entity was standing upright on two legs, unlike how a dog would walk.

Bun's fleshly body had become extremely unfamiliar to Li Huowang. There were tentacles pulsating beneath Bun's skin and flesh; it was supposed to have the body of a dog, but it had grown to an impossible size.

The joints had been dislocated, allowing the figure to contort, becoming like a large-framed figure wearing a skinny shirt.

Li Huowang knew what was underneath the skin—Li Sui's tentacles.

When Li Huowang caressed the back of the being, tentacles burst from its back and carefully wrapped themselves around his fingers. Some of the tentacles were exposed to the air as they burst out.

Bun's four limbs had grown as well, and they seemed capable of twisting at impossible angles. It was the reason Bun was slightly taller than Li Huowang at the moment.

Li Huowang slowly made a mental image of what he was touching, and he eventually saw a tentacled monster using the husk of a dog as its fleshly body.

Li Huowang sighed and asked, "What are you? Are you Bun or Li Sui?"

"Father, I'm Li Sui. Woof! Woof!" Li Sui's hot breath was filled with the stench of blood.

"What happened last night? Where did you go, and what happened to you?"

"Father, I don't know either. I was looking for Bun to play, but I don't know what happened next. I think I fell asleep. When I woke up, I couldn't find Bun anymore. Then, I heard you calling for me, so I ran over here."

Li Huowang took a deep breath and muttered in disbelief, "How could this be?"

He knew that the Black Taisui was capable of snatching bodies away, but Li Huowang had never really thought that this day would come so soon.

Was he staring at Li Sui or Bun? Was it both? How was he supposed to treat the entity before him?

Seemingly sensing Li Huowang's tumultuous emotions, the beast buried its face into Li Huowang's body. Its hard skull dug into his chest, and it licked Li Huowang's jaw.

The broken veil fell to the ground just then.

Li Huowang hugged it tightly; he could sense the beast's longing for him. He patted the mangled figure in front of him and said, "Fine, it is what it is, I guess. It's great that no one died, and I'm not going to ask for more than that."

An ordinary person would be afraid and horrified at the bloody creature in front of them, but not Li Huowang. He knew he was living in a bizarre, crazy world. Most importantly, he knew that he looked almost as bad as the current Li Sui.

Li Huowang turned around and looked at Bai Lingmiao.

"Miaomiao, she's our daughter now."

"Dau—Daughter? Her?"

"Yes. Li Sui is genderless, but Bun is female. We'll call her 'daughter' from now on, and I hope you're not going to hate her."

While Bai Lingmiao was hesitating, the Second Deity walked over and patted Li Sui's skull.

The Natural Disaster had passed; everyone was still having nightmares over the ordeal, but everyone knew that they still had lives to live, so they soon resumed their own tasks.

The intense discussions soon faded to peace as they worked on their own tasks.

"Dear, please wake up. It's time to wake up."

When Sir Wu woke up from his afternoon nap, he immediately saw his wife.

"What time is it?" Sir Wu sat up slowly and stretched both of his legs as if waiting for someone to put on his shoes.

"It's already the ninth division. Any later and you'd need a lantern to navigate. It's best to leave now so you won't waste your money on one." [1]

Upon getting hired to teach in Cowheart Village, Sir Wu found himself with two choices: either teach in the morning or teach in the evening.

However, his students needed to work in the fields during the day, so he had no choice but to start his lessons at night. Even Yang Xiaohai needed time to cook meals.

“All right! Time to change.” Sir Wu stretched lazily.

“Aiya! I don’t have time to serve you. I still need to put away the dried radishes on the roof. I’ve placed dinner on the table. Just eat and wash the plates in the kitchen.”

Sir Wu glared at her and roared, “I’m a scholar! How can I work in the kitchen?!”

Chapter 464 - Origin

Sir Wu's wife ignored him and walked outside. She carried a basket with her as she climbed up the bamboo ladders to collect the dried radishes on the roof.

Sir Wu changed clothes with a spiteful look and proceeded to eat his dinner. Upon seeing chicken in his noodles, Sir Wu's face beamed. He ate with relish and left the dishes on the table.

It was sunset, and the evening glow made his face look even yellower than usual.

A radish fell from the roof and slid into his back from his nape.

“Wash the dishes! What are you doing standing there?!”

Sir Wu straightened his clothes and turned around before getting startled by a wrinkled face.

“Hehehe~ Sir Wu, are you heading to the lecture? Let’s go together,” Lu Zhuangyuan said, chuckling while holding his grandson.

Sir Wu looked down at Lu Zhuangyuan before heading to the classroom.

“Lecture? Hmph! You are overestimating them. I’m just trying to enlighten them! Each and every one of them is so stupid that I feel like I’m wasting my time here.”

“Hehehe, that’s true. They are already quite old, and it is past the prime time for them to study and become a scholar. However, our Tongsheng is different. This is the perfect time for him to study!” Lu Zhuangyuan happily raised his grandson up in the air.

“I’ve told you many times that a baby that’s not even a year old will not be able to understand what I’m talking about! Don’t bring him into the classroom!”

“ Sigh, Sir Wu. This is the perfect time for the baby to learn how to speak by listening to its surroundings. It’s not a bad thing for a baby to listen to lectures. What if he learns something?”

“ Sigh. I really am wasting my time here; everyone's so dumb,” Sir Wu said, shaking his head as he walked toward his classroom.

It turned out that everyone had already been waiting for him. Everyone went silent upon witnessing Sir Wu's arrival.

Sir Wu looked at the figure wearing the black veil standing in the corner of the classroom and frowned in dissatisfaction.

After the Natural Disaster, the person underneath the veil had grown considerably taller. They stood silently, but they somehow made Sir Wu feel oppressed. Sir Wu had long decided to steer clear of them.

Sir Wu was not a stupid man, after all. He had seen the techniques that the others in the village had used during the Natural Disaster.

Sir Wu didn’t even dare to think about the identity of the individual beneath the black veil. The ancient scholars had said that scholars had to distance themselves from the supernatural.

Sir Wu actually wanted to leave but he didn’t dare do so. He was afraid that something bad would happen to him if he didn’t listen to them.

He was already old and had read a lot about people with supernatural powers through books. He knew that upon obtaining powers, they would do whatever they liked and treat normal people as insignificant beings.

Sir Wu trembled upon recalling the horrifying images drawn in that book.

He had no other choice but to do as he was told. Luckily, he was getting paid on time, and the villagers were treating him well. Sir Wu swept his gaze across the classroom and noticed something amiss.

“Hm? Why are there so few people here today?”

“Sir, Gao Zhijian is recruiting for a militia. He said that the chosen ones would receive candy, so most of the people here decided to go there. However, Gao Zhijian is very strict, so I’m sure most of them would fail and would return soon.”

Looking at the smarter Zhao Wu, Sir Wu’s tone became noticeably better. “Is that so? Why didn’t you go then?”

Zhao Wu patted his legs out of bitterness. “Surely, you jest, sir. There’s no way I can pass with this body of mine.”

Sir Wu nodded and coughed lightly before starting his lecture.

People came and went during his lecture, and Sir Wu didn’t really care whether they were bored or frustrated. All he cared about was doing his job.

Soon, it was midnight. Sir Wu looked at the yawning students and waved his hands, dismissing them. His mouth was feeling quite parched as well.

“We will stop here today. Remember to study what you’ve learned today so you’ll memorize them. I will test you randomly tomorrow.”

Sir Wu walked out of the classroom with a lantern in hand, which illuminated the path to his house. It was midnight, so the streets were empty. Sir Wu felt nervous, especially after what he had seen during the Natural Disaster.

However, he didn’t dare to show his nervousness on his face. He didn’t want his stupid students to see that he was terrified.

He walked and soon saw the Bai Family’s Ancestral Hall. His footsteps unconsciously became lighter as he picked up the pace upon seeing the ancestral hall.

He had heard many rumors throughout the village about how many people had died in the ancestral hall.

I'm a scholar. I exude the aura of justice. Those of the supernatural will avoid me! Sir Wu walked carefully while reassuring himself repeatedly.

When he finally walked past the Bai Family's Ancestral Hall, Sir Wu sighed in relief.

And that was when a wooden mask suddenly appeared in front of him in the dark.

Sir Wu yelped, but a wooden hand covered his mouth before his scream could echo in the air. "Don't make any noises. I don't want to kill you. I'm here to find someone. Do you know where Er Jiu is?"

Staring at the old man standing motionlessly like a log, Liu Zongyuan asked, "You don't know Er Jiu? He's always wearing his signature red Daoist robe, and he always has two swords on his back."

Sir Wu extended a trembling finger, pointing in a certain direction. Liu Zongyuan stared disdainfully at Sir Wu upon noticing that the latter had pissed himself. Then, he turned around to leave, rushing toward the direction Sir Wu had pointed out for him.

Liu Zongyuan had just arrived at a remarkable estate, but he immediately noticed that a window to the second floor of the estate was open.

"Brother Liu, I can't move much right now. Come in and talk."

Liu Zongyuan leaped up like a monkey and climbed up the window using his right arm before throwing himself into the room.

Liu Zongyuan saw the Daoist in red robes sitting like a king with a horrifying beast sitting quietly on his left. The beast had been skinned, and its empty eye sockets stared at Liu Zongyuan without moving.

"Brother Liu, are you okay?" Er Jiu asked.

Liu Zongyuan snapped out of it and realized that Er Jiu's eyes were covered in white bandages.

"What happened to your eyes?"

"Something happened during the Natural Disaster, and I ended up getting blinded. Don't worry; it's just a minor wound. Anyway, I'm surprised that you actually came here so fast."

"Of course. I rushed over here as fast as I could the moment I received your letter. You're hiding in a rural area, so I'm sure you have no idea what's happening, but it's chaotic outside."

"Yeah, I can see that. Do you have any information about the recent Natural Disaster? I think the fact that it's been happening every year over the past two years is a bad omen."

"Sigh." Liu Zongyuan sighed and sat beside the Daoist in red robes. "You don't have to mention that. Anyone with eyes would be able to see something strange. I heard that the Surveillance Bureau had known that the Natural Disaster would appear ahead of time."

"They knew that it'd appear ahead of time? Then, why didn't they stop it? Weren't they supposed to keep watch of it and deal with it? Or could it be that there's a limit to their power?"

Liu Zongyuan clenched his fists out of frustration. "Do you really think that they didn't want to stop it? Did you think that their expansive formation in Shangjing is just for show? Sigh. It's the Sitting Oblivion Dao's fault! They destroyed the formation, so the Surveillance Bureau lost a huge chunk of their power!"

Chapter 465 - List

Li Huowang wasn't exactly knowledgeable when it came to Natural Disasters, so he frowned upon hearing Liu Zongyuan's words. "You mean the Surveillance Bureau had laid out that massive golden formation in Shangjing as a means to combat the Natural Disaster?"

At the time, he was inside the golden formation, but he was too focused on Bei Feng to even think about why the emperor was working with the Surveillance Bureau. Once the dust settled, Li Huowang assumed that the emperor was trying to ascend and become an Immortal by recruiting the Surveillance Bureau.

However, it seemed that his assumption was wrong. The Surveillance Bureau and the Liang Kingdom's emperor had been planning to use the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye to combat the Natural Disaster of the Sun-Devouring Heavenly Dog.

Li Huowang finally had a clear picture of what was happening in the Liang Kingdom, and he couldn't help but feel a bit regretful about his actions. He hadn't played a righteous role during the incident at Shangjing.

However, he couldn't really be blamed, as he had no idea that the Surveillance Bureau was going to help the masses against Natural Disasters using the massive golden formation.

Of course, this was mostly because of the Surveillance Bureau's strict information control. However, Li Huowang wouldn't have thought that they were the good guys at the time, and it was all thanks to their actions.

"No, Junior Li, this is my fault, not yours," Zhuge Yuan said.

"The Sitting Oblivion Dao managed to deceive me," Zhuge Yuan added in a voice filled with sorrow and self-loathing. "It all started from the moment I killed Bai Ban. It was then that I fell into the Sitting Oblivion Dao's trap.

"Perhaps the Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Qi Kingdom was also responsible for pushing the undead emperor to rule the kingdom. The Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Qi Kingdom was working together with the Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Liang Kingdom.

"They did it not because they wanted to avenge the dead Bai Ban but to use my powers as the Twisted One to travel between two different timelines in order to trick Doulao and take away the Sacred Mountain Ghost Eye."

Liu Zongyuan's exposition taught Zhuge Yuan more than Li Huowang, and Zhuge Yuan realized that he had indeed gotten tricked by the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

"Don't worry about it too much. You've done your best. Blame the Sitting Oblivion Dao," Li Huowang said unconsciously.

Liu Zongyuan thought that Li Huowang was talking to him and responded, "Brother Er is too kind, but I'm not sad. After all, I deliberately did not assign myself to Shangjing. I'm not crazy enough to risk my life. I was hiding in Qing Qiu on that day."

Since they were already on the topic, Liu Zongyuan added, "Sigh. It's only been decades since we killed so many members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and I didn't expect that it would be time to do so again.

"They really are like maggots; they'd pop out of nowhere and in such large numbers. It doesn't matter even if you kill one of them, as three of them would pop up the next time. Anyway, Brother Er, I hope you won't tell anyone what I'm going to tell you today.

"I've heard that the Sitting Oblivion Dao has truly angered our superior this time. I'm sure they'd issue a kill order for every single Sitting Oblivion Dao member once the Natural Disaster is over. Many members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao had perished in Shangjing, and I think they're finally going to kill all of them once and for all.”

Li Huowang stood up and clenched his fists in excitement. “That’s great news! I hate the Sitting Oblivion Dao! The Surveillance Bureau should have annihilated them long ago.”

“Yeah. Brother Er, I know you hate the Sitting Oblivion Dao, so I came here to ask you to follow me to Shangjing. However, I didn’t expect that you’d end up becoming blind.”

“No worries,” Li Huowang said decisively. “I’m already blind, but I can still kill! Let’s go!”

“Ah, it’s fine, Brother Er. It’s best if you just stay here and recuperate. Don’t force yourself. The Surveillance Bureau still has many people, and it’s not like we’ll become useless without you.”

Li Huowang knew that Liu Zongyuan wouldn’t let a blind man follow him on his missions. He was just putting up an act for the sake of Li Huowang’s dignity. Li Huowang himself still had many issues to handle, so he wasn’t really in the mood to go on missions.

The two enjoyed some small talk and exchanged pieces of information.

Eventually, Liu Zongyuan made remarks about the horrifying Li Sui.

“Erm, Brother Er, it’s one thing for the members of the Ao Jing Sect to skin themselves, but why are you skinning dogs as well? Don’t you think that’s taking it a bit too far?”

Li Huowang stretched out his hand and patted Li Sui’s tough skull. “She’s not a dog but a spiritual beast. I’m blind, so she’s here to defend me. She looks horrifying, but she’s more dependable than a human.”

“Is that so? I guess you had an auspicious meeting with it, then. People wouldn’t even dare to attempt to rear a spiritual beast! Are you selling it?” Liu Zongyuan asked.

Li Sui growled deeply and flashed her white fangs.

“Quiet now. Brother Liu was just joking,” Li Huowang said, patting Li Sui's neck.

Li Sui quickly calmed down and stopped growling at Liu Zongyuan.

Somehow, Li Sui had become more animalistic after taking over Bun's body.

"All right, then, I should take my leave now. You should recover and stop being so reckless in the meantime."

Liu Zongyuan stood up and turned around to leave.

"Brother Liu, wait a minute," said Li Huowang, stopping Liu Zongyuan from leaving. "Since you know many things, do you know of any sects capable of replacing someone's eyes so that they can regain their vision? I mean, as you can see..."

"Erm... there are some sects capable of doing so, but I don't think there's any reason for you to go and look for them. We're strangers to them, so they could easily trick us.

"Moreover, we have our own methods. You've completed so many missions for the the Surveillance Bureau, so you definitely have many rewards to be claimed.

"Just go to the headquarters and exchange your rewards, which are lifespan pills, for something that will restore your vision," said Liu Zongyuan. Then, he wasted no time and left.

Left all alone, Li Huowang sat quietly in the dark room and pondered over his next course of action while patting Li Sui's back. Too many things were happening at the same time, and Li Huowang knew that he needed to act now. "Li Sui, bring me a charcoal and a piece of paper."

"Okay, Father."

A piece of paper was soon laid in front of Li Huowang.

Li Sui then gave Li Huowang a piece of charcoal. Li Huowang took the charcoal and used its pointed end to write out all of the issues he had at the moment.

First of all, Bai Lingmiao is on the cusp of becoming blind, as the sunlight has burned off her retina. She's extremely weak at the moment, and her lifespan has become shorter than normal.

Secondly, the Natural Disasters are too unpredictable. The Surveillance Bureau's plan to deal with Natural Disasters was destroyed by the Sitting Oblivion Dao. I'm not afraid of Natural Disasters, but how can I ensure the survival of Cowheart Village in these chaotic times?

Thirdly, Doulao has changed my past. My memories as Hong Zhong are a hidden danger that I must remove once I get the opportunity to do so.

Lastly, I have to keep cultivating the "Truth." It concerns not just Zhuge Yuan's revival but my strength and even the reality of both worlds.

Chapter 466 - Bai Lingmiao

Li Huowang felt the tactile feedback of his own writing using his sensitive fingers, and he started brainstorming ways to tackle every single issue on his list.

First of all, I need to treat Bai Lingmiao's eyes. Her vision is getting worse, and I have to address that issue as soon as possible. Since Liu Zhongyuan said the Surveillance Bureau in Shangjing had the solution to issues related to the eyes, I should head there before going anywhere else.

He's right. I've completed a ton of missions for the Surveillance Bureau. Moreover, I was a spendthrift. Aside from the bribe I gave to Hong Da so that I can kill Xinchu, the rest of my lifespan pills are in the gourd. It's a good time to exchange them right now. As for her lifespan... I'm not sure if the pills are going to be effective on her.

That said, where is she? I haven't seen her for the entire night.

"Li Sui, where is your mother?"

"She went to the room with black wooden slates."

Li Huowang's face fell. Bai Lingmiao was at the ancestral hall.

"It's fine, then. You should go ahead and sleep. It's late now."

Li Sui nodded and obediently left the room. Li Sui was wearing Li Huowang's veil, and she headed to the stable. The stable was her temporary residence, as it was mostly empty aside from the carriages and a few horses.

Li Sui walked towards the deepest part of the stable, where there was a thick pile of hay. Li Sui dove into the hay and stretched with satisfaction before curling up and sleeping. However, Li Sui didn't manage to sleep for a long time, as she was awakened by something. She walked outside and looked at the ancestral hall with curiosity before heading toward it.

Soon, Li Sui reached the ancestral hall and saw that the door to the hidden chamber was open. Li Sui pondered briefly before entering the hidden chamber, and she soon found herself in the hall of the White Lotus Sect.

Li Sui looked around with awe and curiosity; she sniffed around, taking in the scent of the white flags hanging from the ceiling as well as using her paws to scratch at the murals from time to time.

Li Sui eventually stopped looking around and turned toward a door that was slightly ajar. There was a familiar scent beyond that door. Li Sui hesitated before entering it. The room was dark, but the familiar scent had gotten thicker.

It was the scent of her mother.

Soon, Li Sui heard sobbing. It appeared that her mom was crying.

"We've been together for so long, and I know that Senior Li truly takes good care of me. I don't want to make him sad either, but... I don't know what to do.

"I can't stop having this nightmare about my parents cursing and scolding me for being so inconsiderate. I'd always have that nightmare as long as I'm with him. I really am tired of living.

"Should I just leave him? I can't... I'm torn; I just want to give up and die, but I can't even die thanks to the Immortal family. Oh Heavenly Mater, what do I do? Every single choice before me seems to be the wrong choice."

The sobbing stopped. Li Sui wanted to move closer to her but a red figure blocked her.

"Mother?" Li Sui asked, staring at the Second Deity in front of her. "Mother, it's already late. Why are you still awake? Father told me to sleep."

The Second Deity extended her right hand, which had razor-sharp nails. She took Li Sui's black tentacle and guided her gently toward the depths of the tunnel. Upon walking into another door, Li Sui saw a frail and pallid woman kneeling in front of a conjoined lotus. The woman was none other than her mother.

Bai Lingmiao was holding three incense sticks while staring at the conjoined lotus in front of the mural. "Heavenly Mater... The books say that you exist, but do you really exist? Are you really almighty? If you do exist and you're almighty, then why did you not save the Bai Family members when Li Huowang was killing them?

"They've been worshiping you for so long; why did you not save them?"

Li Sui stood quietly, listening to Bai Lingmiao. It wasn't until when Li Sui finally felt sleepy that she saw her mother stand up with red eyes before bowing three times toward the conjoined lotus.

"Heavenly Mater, if you are as kind as the book has said, please help me escape my predicament. Grant me this request, and I will forge a statue out of gold in your motif. I will stay in the White Lotus Sect and serve you forever."

Bai Lingmiao raised her head and looked up at the conjoined lotus, but there weren't any changes. Bai Lingmiao knew that nothing would happen, but she was still disappointed. Finally, she turned around and saw Li Sui standing behind her along with the Second Deity.

Bai Lingmiao merely wiped her tears away and walked outside.

The Second Deity and Li Sui followed closely behind her.

Soon, they arrived at the door of the ancestral hall.

Bai Lingmiao abruptly stopped walking, but she did not even turn around as she asked, "Are you looking down on me? For praying to a false god?"

"If you're tired, let me swap in." An eerie voice echoed from the Second Deity's red veil.

Bai Lingmiao bit her lips and shook her head. "No. The murderous aura cannot enter me once again. Senior Li would be sad if that ended up happening."

The Second Deity extended her arms and covered Li Sui's tattered ears. "You don't even have the courage to keep living, so why do you even care about him? Bun is more human-like than you."

"You!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed.

The red veil slid down, revealing the snarling face of a beast.

"You're the type to give all of your heart to someone who's remotely kind to you. You deserve what you tolerate. Following the laws of the jungle, and if you want to be a filial daughter, then you should kill Li Huowang! He's your father's murderer, after all. However, I know that you are not going to do that. You do not have the guts to do that.

"You think Li Huowang's survival is more important than your family. You want to become an official couple with him and marry him, but you can't even get over the wound in your heart.

"Whenever something untoward happens, you place your hopes on the Heavenly Mater, which probably doesn't even exist, instead of thinking about ways to deal with the issue at hand.

"You pray for the gods to show up and fix your own issues for you instead of doing it yourself. You're weak—utterly useless. Wake up! You can wish for as many times as you want, but no one is going to make your wishes come true.

"You have to understand that only you can help yourself."

Bai Lingmiao couldn't argue against the Second Deity and turned around.

The Second Deity removed her hands from Li Sui's ears and continued, "You must not depend on Li Huowang every time you need help. Our lives are more important than his life. You should prioritize yourself before anyone else. I mean, look at yourself—you're going to become blind at this rate.”

Bai Lingmiao placed both hands on her chest and sobbed. She walked slowly to the Bai Family Estate and muttered, “I just want to live happily ever after with the person I love. Is there anything wrong with that?”

Chapter 467 - Happiness

"Mom, is everything fine?" Li Huowang asked Sun Xiaoqin after swallowing the smooth egg soup.

"Everything is fine, and I'm going to be fine as long as you're fine," Sun Xiaoqin said, smiling while staring at Li Huowang.

However, Li Huowang noticed something amiss in her body language. Moreover, her smile was fake. Also, her words just now only served to console him and make sure that he wouldn't be worried about her.

"Mom, don't worry. The treatment is effective. I just need more time to recover."

"Aiya. I'm not worried at all. I know my son will get better," Sun Xiaoqin said, smiling.

Li Huowang sighed in his heart. Cultivating the "Truth" was much harder than he initially thought, and it was clear that he would have to spend more time on it if he wanted to escape the hospital.

Li Huowang had already waited for so long, so he didn't mind waiting for a bit longer.

Unfortunately, his mother's suffering would not stop until Li Huowang was no longer stuck in a hallucination.

Should I spend more time with her? Should I pretend that I'm getting better? Li Huowang thought about it before immediately scrapping that idea. It was a waste of time, and it would make his goal even more difficult to achieve. He ought to spend more time cultivating rather than in something else.

Realizing that his mother was forcing herself to be happy, Li Huowang thought about what he could say to cheer her up and said, "Mom, I want to play games once I'm discharged. I want to play for an entire year. Can I do that?"

Sun Xiaoqin's eyes lit up, and she exclaimed, "Of course! I will even cut some fruits for you to eat while you're playing! If you ever get bored playing by yourself, I will ask your father to play with you! He can play with you for as long as you like!"

Li Huowang smiled and nodded. "We should travel the world once I'm discharged and do things we never got to do, like bungee jumping or skydiving."

"Ah, I don't want to bungee jump. You can go with your father. I've seen videos of people going for a bungee jump, and I don't want to do it."

Li Huowang distracted her by talking about many different topics, and Sun Xiaoqin's mood improved as time ticked by. Eventually, her smile became natural as the two talked for a while.

Li Huowang sighed in relief upon seeing his mother's smile. He couldn't do much for her at the moment. The only thing he could do was use the Sitting Oblivion Dao's techniques to make her happy.

"Do you want to play games? Should I bring the console here for you?"

"No need, Mom. I can't play right now."

"Oh, that's true. What about anime? Didn't you like watching anime? I've heard there are some interesting ones these days. I can play them for you on my phone."

Li Huowang smiled bitterly when he saw his mom rummaging around her bag to find her phone. He was no longer the same high-schooler Li Huowang, and he was no longer interested in anime.

Li Huowang suddenly noticed something amiss. He was supposed to be just around eighteen years old, so how come he was already thinking like an adult? It seemed that he had gotten much more used to his mature body on the other side.

Is it because there's a missing two hours in the other world, and that is why my body over there is more mature? Wait, does this mean that both worlds are real? Li Huowang thought, frowning. Ultimately, he knew that a baseless thought was useless. Nevermind. There's no need for me to think too much about it. I just need to cultivate the "Truth" and transform this world into a real one.

Sun Xiaoqin had finally found her broken old phone and was in the middle of paying for a paid streaming service.

Li Huowang immediately stopped her, saying, “Mom, no need to subscribe to anything. It's just going to be a waste of money. I feel like I'm heading back there soon.”

Sun Xiaoqin's smile disappeared. “You're heading back soon? You just ate lunch, and you're already about to lose yourself in your hallucination. Son, can you really control it now? Is this a sign that you're recovering?”

“Probably. I'll go back and eat dinner in three days. I'll accompany you by then.”

Sun Xiaoqin placed her phone back into her bag and said, “All right, then. I will wait for you. Don't you forget to come back, okay?”

“I won't forget, Mom. Ah, one more thing. Do you have any news about Nana? Is she getting better?” Li Huowang asked upon recalling the cute girl who always smiled at him.

“Nana is doing well. She didn't get admitted to the hospital, and the doctor also prescribed some medicine for her. Sigh, if it weren't for your illness, I would be more than happy to have Nana as my daughter-in-law. I've always liked her.”

“Mom, don't worry. Once I'm healed, I'll marry Nana and let her be your daughter-in-law!”

“Oh? To think my son can actually speak like that now. All right, then! I'll wait for you to marry her so we can have a great wedding dinner together!” Sun Xiaoqin exclaimed with a bright face.

The scenery slowly peeled away into darkness. It had been a while since he became blind, but he still hadn't gotten used to the pitch-black world before him.

"Li Sui?" Li Huowang extended his arms. Soon, he felt a thin, bony paw.

"Father, I'm here."

"Come, bring me back to the village."

"Father, you picked up something on the ground just now and —"

"I was drinking egg soup!" Li Huowang interrupted her and repeated, "I was drinking egg soup!"

Li Sui thought about it and asked, "Is that so? Where is it? I want to eat, too."

"All right, let's go back to the village and let Yang Xiaohai make some for you. Mom, no need to look at me anymore. I have something to do, so I can't stay here. I'll be back in three days for dinner."

With Li Sui's help, Li Huowang managed to go down the mountain and return to the Bai Family Estate.

Upon returning to his room, Li Huowang sat carefully on a stool and turned to Li Sui, who was heading toward the kitchen, and shouted, "Come here and remove the bandages on my face! I want to know how my eyes are doing."

Li Sui gently removed the bandage on Li Huowang's face, and a ray of light vanquished the darkness in Li Huowang's pitch-black world. However, he was forced to close his eyes again—it was too bright.

A few moments later, he opened his eyes slowly and saw that he could see once again. He had recovered his vision. Li Huowang looked outside the window and stared at the black roof tiles before turning to look at Li Sui.

Li Sui proceeded to remove her veil and straw robe, allowing Li Huowang to finally take a good look at her for the first time ever since the Natural Disaster.

Chapter 468 - Solution

Li Sui looked much more terrifying than before. Her organs were not compressed, and there were multiple cavities inside her. To make matters worse, some of her organs were even hanging outside her body.

Clearly, Bun's body could not contain Li Sui. The broken parts were forcefully connected to each other by Li Sui's black tentacles. It was rude to say bad things about his daughter, but Li Sui truly looked horrifying.

Li Sui's chest was beating visibly as well, and Li Huowang saw a piece of paper protruding from the tiny gaps in her body. Li Huowang instantly identified the piece of paper, as it was the talisman that he had given to Li Sui.

"Father, what's wrong?" Li Sui asked. She had no idea why Li Huowang was staring at her like that.

"Nothing. I'm just looking at you." Li Huowang patted her head and said, "Go tell Yang Xiaohai to make you an egg soup for you. Also, call some of the guys over here."

After dinner was free time for everyone in the village, so Li Huowang managed to gather the people he needed in no time.

The tall Gao Zhijian, the hairy Chun Xiaoman, the asymmetrical-looking Zhao Wu, and Puppy suffering from vitiligo—they were the comrades who had risked their lives with him, and they had gathered at Li Huowang's call.

Yang Xiaohai, who was much shorter than the rest, had arrived as well.

Li Huowang stared at Yang Xiaohai, who was the cook of Cowheart Village, and said, "I didn't tell you to come here, so why are you here?"

“Hehe, I just got curious upon seeing everyone coming here, so I thought about checking it out. If you want me to leave, I can leave, though...” Yang Xiaohai scratched his head out of embarrassment. He was on more friendlier terms with them, as they had spent a lot of time together at this point. Otherwise, he wouldn’t have dared to do something like this.

Li Huowang ignored Yang Xiaohai and stared at Gao Zhijian. “How’s the militia recruitment going? How long will it take for you to form a group that can fend off external threats?”

Gao Zhijian scratched his nose and shook his head in disappointment. “A long time.”

Gao Zhijian then told Li Huowang that the village only had a few people talented enough to become soldiers. If someone wasn’t disabled, then they had a chronic illness.

Gao Zhijian screened quite a few people before picking out two people who were barely adequate. However, this wasn’t really strange, as Bai Lingmiao had bought slaves that the slave trader couldn’t quite sell.

However, it wasn’t to Li Huowang’s expectations, and he knew that he needed to speed things up.

“Zhao Wu, remember the gold that Sun Baolu’s mom gave us in Qing Qiu? Take them and go buy a few qualified people with Gao Zhijian. You can spend some extra money as long as they’ll be loyal to us.

“We need to form a militia as soon as possible so you guys can protect yourself the next time there’s a Natural Disaster or whenever I’m not here.”

“Yes, Senior Li.” Zhao Wu nodded and asked, “Senior Li, are you heading out again?”

“Yeah, there’s something I need to do outside. If everything goes well, I should be able to return soon,” Li Huowang responded. Then, he looked at Chun Xiaoman and asked, “Are you trying to learn the techniques of the White Lotus Sect beneath the ancestral hall?"

"Yes, I am."

"Then, do it secretly. Don't let the others know about it. You can teach it to someone else, but make sure that they are loyal to us. Those techniques aren't as strong as the techniques in the military, but they are worth spending some time on.

"Unfortunately, the White Lotus Sect was once quite famous, so someone might recognize their techniques. Use those techniques sparingly, as we can't let the Surveillance Bureau know that we have access to the White Lotus Sect's techniques."

Li Huowang then proceeded to tell Chun Xiaoman more about the Surveillance Bureau and what had happened to Bai Lingmiao's family.

Chun Xiaoman felt as if she were carrying a massive weight on her shoulders once Li Huowang's explanation was over.

Li Huowang then looked at Puppy. The latter had become much quieter than his rowdy self before his daughter was born.

"Puppy, are you okay?" Li Huowang asked.

Puppy beamed and said, "It's fine. What else can I do? I'll just eat and sleep as usual. Senior Li, don't worry. The village is safe, as I will be protecting it."

Li Huowang nodded before pointing at the wishwood on the table. "That's yours from now on. It's an artifact capable of confounding people. You can use it with your needles."

It was the artifact that Ji Xiang had given to him, and a Strayed One's tongue was used to create this artifact, which was capable of confounding others. Li Huowang had never used it even once, so he decided to give it to Puppy.

"Ah! An artifact?! Senior Li, you're too kind! To think that you'd give me an artifact!" Puppy exclaimed. He took the artifact and admired it for a while.

“I also made a copy of a few pill recipes. This contains the recipes for Blood Nourishing Pills and Spirit Reinforcement Pills, along with a few other pill recipes that I had learned from Baldy back in Zephyr Temple.

“There are also instructions on how to draw talismans capable of healing others. We don’t have a doctor here, so I want all of you to find someone who can read and let them practice these techniques. By then, we’ll have a quasi-doctor, at the very least.”

“Me, me, me! I know how to read! Sir Wu also said that I’m a fast learner! I can recognize thirty words now!” Yang Xiaohai exclaimed. He took the book to try and read it.

Li Huowang frowned. “You’re holding it upside down.”

“Oh...”

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the five people before him and said, “Everyone, we’ve survived a deadly disaster, and a peaceful life is ahead of us. However, the world outside is chaotic, and I feel unsafe to rely on others for our safety.

“In the end, we can only rely on ourselves.”

“Haha, it will be fine. We still have you, Senior Li. You’re extremely strong, so there’s no way we’re going to die under your protection,” Puppy said, complimenting Li Huowang.

However, Puppy’s compliment was met with Li Huowang’s cold gaze.

“But what if I ended up dying? What if I went crazy? What would you do, then?”

Li Huowang’s cold words made the air around them feel heavy.

Puppy’s mouth fluttered open, but no words came out of it.

“I want everyone to leave except for Gao Zhijian.”

The four glanced at Gao Zhijian before leaving with the items Li Huowang had given to them.

Li Huowang looked at the tall Gao Zhijian and said, “Zhijian, I know that you have a complicated past. They’ve been saying that you're dumb and slow-witted, but I feel like you are not what they say at all."

Gao Zhijian nodded.

"Do you want to return?" Li Huowang asked.

Gao Zhijian shook his head.

"Fine. Since you don't want to go back, I won't ask you about it anymore. From now on, this place is your home. Except for me and Bai Lingmiao, you are the strongest person in this village, so you must protect this place whenever I'm not here."

Li Huowang sliced open his stomach and took out a doll made out of human skin.

"Take this. It will take a lethal attack for you."

Gao Zhijian wanted to decline the offer after knowing its effects.

"I told you to take it, so just take it!" Li Huowang exclaimed, shoving the doll into Gao Zhijian's hands. Li Huowang also told Gao Zhijian that his skin would soon be fully healed.

Li Huowang patted Gao Zhijian's shoulder and said, "We're comrades, so don't be so distant."

Gao Zhijian put away the doll. Then, he reached into Li Huowang's bag of torture tools and took out a dagger. Gao Zhijian cut open his palm before doing the same for Li Huowang.

Afterward, he gripped Li Huowang's bloody palm.

Li Huowang stared at his palm, which was slowly being glued to Gao Zhijian's palm due to the coagulating blood.

"What kind of tradition is this?" Li Huowang asked.

However, Gao Zhijian did not reply and simply turned around to leave.

Li Huowang did not mind it and took out a piece of paper.

The piece of paper contained the list of issues that he had to tackle as soon as possible.

"This one is considered solved!" Li Huowang's trembling finger glided past the second paragraph on the list, and the paragraph disappeared.

Secondly, the Natural Disasters are too unpredictable. The Surveillance Bureau's plan to deal with Natural Disasters was destroyed by the Sitting Oblivion Dao. I'm not afraid of Natural Disasters, but how can I ensure the survival of Cowheart Village in these chaotic times?

Chapter 469 - Village

Creak, creak, creak~

The creaking wheels of the carriage left two narrow lines on the road. Li Huowang sat in front of the carriage with the reins in his hands. Li Sui was sitting next to him and was covered in a veil and straw robe.

Li Sui cast a curious gaze at the sparrows above the nearby trees.

Li Huowang knocked on the carriage behind him and said, "Miaomiao, you don't have to stay inside every day. Isn't it suffocating in there? It's already sunset, so you can come out now."

Bai Lingmiao opened the tarp and sat next to Li Huowang.

She removed the white cloth on her eyes and looked around.

Li Huowang looked at her face and saw that her eyes had changed.

Her eyes were pink, but they had become pinkish white.

Li Huowang knew what it meant.

Li Huowang squeezed her hands gently and said, "Don't worry. We're almost in Shangjing. We'll definitely find a way to heal your eyes."

Li Huowang had already resolved the issue concerning the village's security, and he was on his way to heal Bai Lingmiao's eyes. It was an urgent issue, but it was a good thing that it wasn't too hard.

The sights he had seen during the grand battle between the Surveillance Bureau and the Sitting Oblivion Dao convinced Li Huowang that getting another pair of eyes wasn't that hard in this crazy world.

"Senior Li, why do I need to follow you?" Bai Lingmiao asked weakly.

“Of course, you have to follow me so I can treat your eyes. How else can I do that?”

“Oh...” Bai Lingmiao muttered and lowered her head.

“Are you tired? There's a village in front of us. We can ask them and see if we can sleep in one of the houses there so we don't have to sleep in the carriage.

"Don't worry; we reach Shangjing by tomorrow night based on our speed. By then, not only would you be able to see the world clearly, but you'd be able to open your eyes even during the day.”

“All right, Senior Li. I'll listen to you.”

Li Huowang had already become familiar with the paths to Shangjing, as this wasn't his first time going to Shangjing. They finally reached the distant village just as the sun was about to disappear into the horizon.

However, Bai Lingmiao was getting more and more worried as they approached the village. “Senior Li, I think this village is the same as the other villages...”

The village looked fine from afar, but the houses were actually skewed and were on the verge of collapse. Weeds and spider webs had shrouded everything, which meant that it had been a while since someone stayed here.

Li Huowang's face was grim, but he knew this would happen. After all, this wasn't the first village he had encountered that had met the same horrible fate. The Natural Disaster lasted for only a short while, but many villages lost a ton of people.

Only a few villages were lucky enough to survive the ordeal. To make matters worse, there had to be more villages out there that had suffered the same feat. Li Huowang truly had no idea just how many people had perished during the Natural Disaster.

“Who are you looking for?” An aged voice echoed.

Li Huowang immediately gripped his sword. He let go of his sword upon seeing that the voice had come from an old man walking with a cane. The old man only had a few teeth left in his mouth, and there was a black cloth tied to his right wrist, which meant that someone in his family had passed away recently.

“Old man, it’s me. Do you still remember me? I once asked for your help to stay in this village,” Li Huowang said, showing his face to the old man.

The old man stared at him for a while before realizing that he was indeed the same young man whom he had encountered long ago. “Ah~ It’s you! Come inside!

“There are many empty houses in this village, so you can stay as long as you want, wherever you want.”

Bai Lingmiao walked up to Li Huowang and whispered, “Senior Li, have you really met him before?”

“No, that was just a trick. Old people have bad memories, you see.”

The two walked deeper into the village.

Soon, Li Huowang finally saw the other villagers.

There were men and women holding large bowls while sitting or standing beneath a giant tree. It seemed that they had chosen to eat before nightfall.

They stared alternately between Li Huowang’s carriage, Li Huowang, and the old man before asking, “Old Man Zhao, did your family come here?”

The villagers looked normal, but they all had a black cloth tied to their wrists.

This village had the most casualties among the villages that Li Huowang had seen so far.

In no time, Li Huowang found himself before a clean house. “This used to be my youngest son’s house, but he passed away two years ago. You can stay here.”

“Thank you, Sir Zhao. Sorry for the trouble.”

“No need to say that. You're just going to stay here for the night, so don't worry about it.”

Bai Lingmiao stared at the old man and found the latter's desolate back profile to be quite pitiful. “It seems that the Natural Disaster has claimed the lives of many people here.”

Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan's illusion at Bai Lingmiao's remark. Zhuge Yuan was in mid-air and had his back facing Li Huowang. Li Huowang felt like Zhuge Yuan was blaming himself for the villagers' death.

“It's fine. It's all in the past now. I'll go take some water so we can cook something to eat.”

They were traveling again tomorrow, so they ate only a simple dinner and washed up before sleeping. Li Huowang thought that nothing would happen today, as it was already late in the night. However, he was proven wrong when Li Sui woke him up during the third division of the night.

Li Huowang glanced at Bai Lingmiao sleeping soundly beside him and turned to Li Sui, asking, “What's wrong?”

“Father, they're performing outside.”

“Hm?” Li Huowang glanced at Bai Lingmiao one more before standing up. He pushed open the door and exited the house. He soon found himself near the large tree and saw the villagers holding their hands together in a large circle.

They were singing and dancing. The old man who served as Li Huowang's guide in the village was among those who were dancing.

“Father, what are they doing?”

“Shh, be quiet. I'm observing them,” Li Huowang said, frowning. It had been a while since he encountered members of a sect.

However, Li Huowang was confused. He had checked the old man's Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings upon entering the village, and he saw that the old man held no ill will toward him.

Maybe they're barely considered as good guys like the Abbess? Li Huowang thought. In the end, he decided to observe them in the meantime.

Regardless of whether they had ill intentions toward Li Huowang or not, Li Huowang was not afraid of them.

Li Huowang was close enough to hear their chanting.

“We've suffered a misfortune all thanks to the carelessness of God Yu'er. Our money and food are gone, and God Yu'er has lost all of our belongings...”

Chapter 470 - God Yu'Er

“God Yu'er? Which god is it?”

Li Huowang repeated the strange name in his mind, but even the fake Hong Zhong's memories didn't contain any information about God Yu'er.

While Li Huowang was still engrossed in his thoughts, the villagers did something unexpected. They became quiet and extinguished all of their light. They knelt on the ground and prayed silently amidst the darkness.

“Why are they kneeling?” Li Huowang sent his body projection into the ground and became invisible. He carefully approached the villagers.

Li Huowang thought they were praying to the large tree but saw that it was not the case. There was nothing but darkness up there.

Wait, darkness?! Li Huowang looked at the black cloth that everyone had on their wrist. He realized that it carried a different meaning.

“God Yu'er!” the villagers roared in unison and raised their arms while staring at the dark sky.

A violent tremor ran through the ground.

Li Huowang gulped nervously. He pushed Li Sui down to suppress both of their presence. The tremors became stronger as time ticked by. When Li Huowang saw the panicked look on the villagers' faces, he realized that the ground wasn't trembling because of God Yu'er's influence.

“KILL!” A thunderous roar echoed.

Li Huowang saw a burst of white light come from the darkness to his left, and he felt a sharp pain in his eyes as if they were being sliced apart by swords.

Li Huowang took a step back and rubbed his eyes. When he opened them again, he saw rows of troops wearing black armor, and they were charging at the villagers on their war horses.

Li Huowang finally knew why the ground was trembling. It was due to the approaching soldiers on horseback.

When the final wave of soldiers on horseback swept across the villagers, not even a single scrap of clothing remained on the ground. The villagers had become minced meat beneath the soldiers' stampede.

There were only thirty war horses, but Li Huowang felt like he had just witnessed the charge of thousands of men on horseback.

Shockingly, the soldiers pointed their weapons at Li Huowang once they were done trampling on the villagers.

Li Huowang looked at Li Sui, and his heart fell. "We've been found!"

The ground rumbled once again as the troops approached Li Huowang at breakneck speeds. Li Huowang wanted to run, but he had a feeling that he had been marked and that there was nowhere for him to run.

Just as the soldiers reached Li Huowang, the latter raised his identity plate as a Surveillance Bureau member. A fierce gust of wind swept past Li Huowang from both sides as the troops split into two and ran past him.

Li Huowang turned around and saw a man standing before him. The man was tall, and there was a colossal halberd in his hand. He was giving off an oppressive air that made him appear as if he were a mountain.

Li Huowang couldn't see the man's face from beneath due to the man's helmet, but Li Huowang saw white steam coming out from within the man's helmet.

While Li Huowang was thinking about what to do, the soldier placed his weapon on the back of his horse before taking out a piece of yellow silk fabric.

The man then unfurled the fabric and shouted, "Listen to the imperial decree! The world is in chaos, and His Majesty has acknowledged it!

"Numerous evil sects have formed in the Liang Kingdom in the aftermath of the Natural Disaster. They trick, lie, and they pray to a Natural Disaster! They are responsible for the misfortune of the world, and they must be executed!

"Spread this imperial decree throughout the world!"

The man rolled the yellow silk fabric and left on horseback before Li Huowang could ask any questions.

Soon, Li Huowang and Li Sui were left all by themselves. Li Huowang turned around and looked at the steaming pile of minced meat. "Evil sect? They're praying to a Natural Disaster? Is the so-called God Yu'er—"

Li Huowang stopped mid-way; his expression became pale, and he noticed his voice sounding similar to a crying crane.

"Father, are you okay?" Li Sui asked worriedly while tugging at Li Huowang's robe.

Li Huowang shook his head. He finally understood why the Liang Kingdom was using the military to deal with these minor sects. It wasn't because the sect itself was strong; the issue was with the sect's object of devotion.

"It hasn't been that long since the Natural Disaster, and there are already sects worshipping that thing? It's too fast. Why are they worshipping it? No, wait, I can't think of it that way. What does God Yu'er want from them?"

Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan. "Senior Zhuge, why do I feel anxious? Do you have any clues as to what is about to happen?"

Zhuce Yuan looked at the pile of minced flesh in the distance and clenched his fan tightly. “Junior Li, I don't know. I am but an ordinary man. I can only hope that the Natural Disaster isn't the beginning of something .”

It would have been fine if Zhuge Yuan had said nothing, but Zhuge Yuan just had to express his worry, which made Li Huowang feel a burden on his shoulders.

“Senior Zhuge, God Yu'er—” Li Huowang felt a searing pain in his left ear, forcing him to stop mid-sentence and instinctively cover his ears.

“Junior Li, it's best if you don't ask any questions related to it. You will not be able to change anything even if you learn about those beings. Also, you'll become a part of them the moment you learn more about them. Their karma is going to cling to you.”

“I can't say this... I can't learn that. What can I do?” Li Huowang asked, irritated.

“There are things you can talk about. Take the fifty Heavenly Daos for example. The heavens control forty-nine of them, while humanity controls one. The only thing I can tell you is that even though some Simings had perished, the ones controlling the Heavenly Daos are still doing fine.

“If a Siming controlling one of the Heavenly Daos had somehow perished, you'd learn about it faster than me.”

Chaotic scenes flashed in Li Huowang's mind just then, and his face scrunched up from the extreme pain radiating throughout his head. “This crazy world really isn't a world fit for humans!”

“Senior Li, what's wrong?” Bai Lingmiao's voice echoed just then. She was wearing a robe as she walked over to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang looked at the pile of meat on the ground before turning around to meet Bai Lingmiao.

“Nothing. I was just using the toilet,” Li Huowang said.

Li Huowang could feel that something was amiss; he felt as if the current calm was the calm before the storm.

The Surveillance Bureau was there to protect the world, but Li Huowang wasn't sure whether the Surveillance Bureau could withstand what was about to happen or not.

However, Li Huowang himself knew that the only thing he could do was speed up his cultivation. At the very least, he'd be able to protect his beloved ones by then.

Li Huowang couldn't help but give Bai Lingmiao a tight hug.

Chapter 471 - Double Third Festival

Lanterns lit up Shangjing amidst the darkness of the night...

The denizens of Shangjing seemed to be competing against each other as the more popular shops had more elaborate lanterns. In addition to drawings of nature on the lanterns, there were even some lanterns with riddles on them, which provided entertainment to those walking on the street. Many people surrounded some of the lanterns with riddles to try and decipher the answer. The ones who managed to answer the riddle correctly would often shout in joy, as it meant that they had the right to take the lantern back home. Those who got the wrong answer were taunted and teased for their wrong answers.

Shangjing was crowded and lively tonight.

Li Huowang dodged a young boy running toward him as he slowly guided the carriage along the street. The girls were carrying lanterns while the boys were riding bamboo horses. The children were happy as they played around.

It has only been a few months since Doulao destroyed the city, but it's already this lively. Is this what they call the "Surveillance Bureau method?"

Li Huowang looked around before turning to Bai Lingmiao and asking, "Shangjing shouldn't have a curfew right now. Anyway, do you know what festival is going on?"

"Senior Li, it's the Double Third Festival," Bai Lingmiao answered in a soft voice. Her eyes were transfixed on the book in her hands.

"Double Third Festival?" Li Huowang looked into Hong Zhong's memories and learned that the festival was to celebrate the girls' coming of age.

Parents would dress up their daughters, who were at least fifteen years old, every single time on this day of the year. They'd eat pancakes, black glutinous rice, and drink floral tea.

Afterward, they'd come out and play while wearing pomegranate flowers in their hair before praying to the God of Prosperity for an auspicious marriage later down the road in their life.

The girls celebrating the festival had to separate themselves from the males. They couldn't show themselves on the streets as well. The matchmakers would seek them out as well to pair them with a groom.

Li Huowang mumbled while walking toward the house that Ji Xiang had given to him.

Just as they were about to reach the alleyway where the house was located, Zhuge Yuan's illusion stood before Li Huowang.

"Hm? What's wrong? Is there an ambush?!" Li Huowang tensed up, and his eyes became filled with killing intent.

Zhuge Yuan sighed and shook his head. Then, he pointed at Bai Lingmiao, who was sitting in the carriage.

Li Huowang finally understood what Zhuge Yuan was trying to say upon seeing the forlorn look on Bai Lingmiao's face.

"Miaomiao, have you never celebrated this festival before?"

Bai Lingmiao shook her head. "No, I was supposed to join, but Dan Yangzi had already kidnapped me."

Li Huowang saw Zhuge Yuan pointing somewhere. He was pointing at a stall selling pomegranate flowers. Li Huowang bought one and placed the vivid red flower on Bai Lingmiao's white hair.

"It's fine. We can just celebrate it now," Li Huowang said. He did not wait for her answer as he pulled her into one of the nicer-looking clothing shops in the distance.

Li Sui wanted to follow them, but Li Huowang stopped her and said, "Li Sui, bring the carriage back home."

Bai Lingmiao's demeanor and looks had changed completely with her new clothes, which were a nice pastel skirt, a pale blue veil, and a bluish-purple dress.

Bai Lingmiao looked so great in her clothes that she attracted everyone's eyes as she walked down the streets. The clothing shop was clearly ready for the festival and had made several dresses in advance.

Bai Lingmiao discovered that the dress was perfectly suitable for her body type, but she wasn't used to feeling so many stares at her. She picked at the flower embroidery on the sleeves of her dress.

"Senior Li, why are they staring at me?" Bai Lingmiao asked.

"Because you're the most beautiful girl in Shangjing! Why else would they stare at you? Anyway, what are we supposed to do during this festival? Ah! We need to eat pancakes, drink floral tea, and eat black glutinous rice as well!

"Don't worry about anything tonight; just focus on enjoying the festival! This night belongs to you!" Li Huowang exclaimed.

At first, Bai Lingmiao was quite reserved, but the joyous mood soon influenced her.

Li Huowang led the way for her as well, and Bai Lingmiao was eventually all smiles as she walked down the streets.

They walked around the prosperous city and took in the scenic view. They also challenged a few riddles and ate a few pancakes.

Bai Lingmiao truly enjoyed every single second of the festival, especially the good food and her new set of clothes. Li Huowang and Zhuge Yuan were standing behind Bai Lingmiao and were staring at her with a smile.

Swoosh!

Zhuge Yuan opened his fan with a swing and fanned himself.

“Junior Li, I feel that your wife has something hidden in her heart.”

Li Huowang nodded. “I know, I know...”

“Do you want me to help?”

“Senior Zhuge, I know you are knowledgeable, but it isn't quite appropriate for you to help in something like this. Anyway, I don't really know the answer. We can only hope that time will eventually heal what has been plaguing her.”

The two engaged in some small talk until Li Huowang noticed a young boy holding a jade cat doll. The boy had pale skin but had great looks; there was also an air of elegance to him.

There were many girls on the street, so it wasn't strange to find many boys, too, but Li Huowang was surprised by how he couldn't see the Ten Emotions and Eight Sufferings of the boy before him.

The boy was accompanied by several tall servants.

Li Huowang was also astounded to see that he couldn't gauge their strength.

Li Huowang was flustered upon realizing that they were walking toward him. Who are they? Why are they approaching me in casual clothes? Have they discovered my true identity?

Li Huowang was thinking about what to do when the boy entered a jade shop at the side of the street. Li Huowang was worried and carefully approached the shop.

It turned out that the boy had entered the shop to have his jade cat appraised.

The owner complimented the jade cat in the boy's hand, and the boy was clearly happy with his compliments. “Haha. I knew it! My eyes have always been great! To think that what I bought for five hundred taels was actually worth five thousand!”

His servants complimented him even while exiting the shop.

They ignored him and walked away, making Li Huowang just a bit. Still, he was a bit confused. What happened just now? Are they really just passing by? Am I too tense?

Just then, Li Huowang noticed that the boy was walking toward Bai Lingmiao. Li Huowang ran over with his bronze coin sword. He was ready to brandish it at a moment's notice.

“Sorry for bothering you, kind miss,” said the boy while staring at Bai Lingmiao’s white hair with admiration in his eyes.

Chapter 472 - Official Business

Bai Lingmiao was shocked by the boy's actions, and she hurriedly hid behind Li Huowang.

"I'm married," said Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the tall servants and got ready to fight.

However, the boy's reaction caught him off guard.

"Oh, I'm sorry for startling you, then. I hope you're not offended," the boy said, sounding slightly disappointed as he bowed toward Bai Lingmiao before turning around to leave.

The boy walked past a nest of beggars; he gave them some silver before he turned and bowed to another girl. He was so flippant that there was no way he was going to attract any girls, but the boy did not get frustrated by the multiple rejections.

He simply moved on to greet other girls.

Li Huowang stared at the boy's back profile for quite a while before shouting, "The jade cat in your hand is fake. It's made out of three broken pieces of jade!"

"Oh?" The boy turned around in shock with the jade cat in hand. "Sir, I think you're mistaken. A jade shop owner even told me that the cat is worth five thousand."

"It was a lie. Look at the left leg of the cat; there are three vertical lines and two horizontal lines. A seller who has touched the mark will know that they have to tell you that it's worth five thousand, even though it's not.

"In reality, no one would buy the jade cat even for two thousand taels."

“Really?!” The boy was outraged. He carried the jade cat with him and rushed back to the shop.

Li Huowang held Bai Lingmiao's hand and left the scene. “Let’s go. I think they’re going to fight soon.”

Once they were some distance away, Bai Lingmiao looked at Li Huowang in shock, asking, “Senior Li, how did you know that it was fake even without taking a closer look at it?”

LI Huowang didn't answer her. The majority of scams were similar to each other, and the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao even often used the same technique. They'd leave a mark on someone so that another Sitting Oblivion Dao member would know what to do upon meeting the marked victim.

Every marked victim had a scam technique that was the most suitable for them, and the Sitting Oblivion Dao member would adjust their techniques accordingly.

In the boy's example, one would think that someone was a liar if only one person had determined the price, but if everyone else said the same thing, then it'd be a different story.

It was just like how a Sitting Oblivion Dao member told Li Huowang that they were Hong Zhong, even though both the individual in question and Li Huowang had never met each other before.

However, Li Huowang didn't expect that he'd become Hong Zhong for real.

Soon, both Li Huowang and Bai Lingmiao ended up forgetting the boy as they immersed themselves in the festival.

Bai Lingmiao was so happy that she even drank some wine.

It was only when the lanterns were slowly snuffed out on the streets did Li Huowang carry the drunk Bai Lingmiao back home. Bai Lingmiao was limp in Li Huowang's arms, and Her eyes were closed as she drew circles on Li Huowang's back.

“Senior Li. The festival is fun. I really wish that the Double Third Festival comes every day."

"Yes, we can celebrate it every day if you want," Li Huowang said, pampering her.

Li Huowang quietly walked down the streets when he felt water on his back. The next moment, he heard Bai Lingmiao's sobs. Her sobbing eventually became crying, and Bai Lingmiao tried to stop herself from crying by covering her mouth, but her cries only got louder as time ticked by.

In the end, tears and snot covered her face as she cried like a child on Li Huowang's back. Bai Lingmiao pounded on Li Huowang's back with both hands.

Even though he slept late last night to accompany Bai Lingmiao, Li Huowang woke up very early in the morning. However, he didn't leave immediately and gouged out his left eye first with a fierce tug.

"Once she wakes up later, tell her that I'm looking for ways to heal her eyes," said Li Huowang while catching his breath. He placed his eyeball in the Second Deity's hand.

The Second Deity nodded quietly.

Li Huowang hugged her before taking his two swords with him. It was still too early in the morning, and the people had just woken up to put away their lanterns. Many of them were yawning, as they had stayed up late.

Li Huowang ate a simple breakfast on the way to the Surveillance Bureau. He reached the place just as he was finishing his meal. He wiped his oily hands on the stone lion statue on the right side of the entrance before walking inside.

Today's guard was Sima Lan with his signature black bird, and he was surprised to see Li Huowang.

"Er Jiu, to think that you're still alive! I really thought that the Sitting Oblivion Dao managed to kill you. It's been a while since you last appeared, after all,” said Sima Lan’s black bird.

“I guess my time isn’t up yet. I hope you’ve been doing great, Senior Sima.”

Li Huowang had gotten closer to Sima Lan after meeting the latter a few times. The two of them chatted and cursed at the Sitting Oblivion Dao for a while before Li Huowang finally told Sima Lan the reason for his visit.

Li Huowang pointed at his empty left eye socket and said, “Does the Surveillance Bureau have anything that can heal my eye?”

“Your eye?” Sima Lan shook his head and explained, “I’m not sure about that, Brother Er Jiu. The Surveillance Bureau’s vault is massive. I don’t know whether they have something like that or not, but you should go ahead and look for it yourself.

“Anyway, haven’t you visited that place before?”

Li Huowang shook his head.

Sima Lan then told him where the vault was located.

Li Huowang walked down the extensive maze-like hidden corridor before finally finding the vault. After showing his identity plate, Li Huowang was granted entrance into the vault.

For some reason, Li Huowang felt like a rat that had entered an apothecary. The vault was vast and massive, containing rows after rows of wooden drawers. There were so many of them that they reached all the way to the ceiling.

Every wooden drawer had its own unique items inside of it. Some wooden drawers had talismans attached to them, while some wooden drawers were covered in chains.

Clearly, the Surveillance Bureau’s treasures were in this vault, and their treasure stash was the reason behind everyone’s decision to work for the Surveillance Bureau.

However, not everything was in drawers; there were some items sprawled haphazardly all over a long table. There were so many weird things, and Li Huowang had no idea what they were or what to do with them “Wait, isn’t this mine?” Li Huowang saw a bronze coin veil on the table and picked it up. The veil had fallen into the Surveillance Bureau's hands when they had decapitated him during that encounter.

Li Huowang had the black spindle, but he wouldn't say "no" to an extra layer of protection. Having made up his mind, Li Huowang was about to make a move when a eunuch approached him from the side.

The eunuch in the vault was different from the eunuch outside. He was all smiles, but he had no eyes. However, his eye sockets weren't empty and had been replaced by bronze coins, which were sewn directly into his bones.

Chapter 473 - Relic

"Do you want that, sir? It's a new item here," asked the eunuch while staring at Li Huowang with his bronze coin eyes. The eunuch's voice wasn't androgynous but was like a confused mixture of a male and female voice.

"Yes. How many lifespan pills do I need to exchange for it?"

The eunuch's smile widened, "Yo~ You are very discerning, sir. You just need thirty pills for it."

"It's that expensive?" Li Huowang was shocked. He was aware of just how precious lifespan pills were.

"Haha, that's why I said that you are very discerning, sir. This veil is rare even in Si Qi. Let me tell you its effects. Upon putting it on—"

"It's fine. No need to explain it to me. I want it." Li Huowang detached the gourd hanging from his waist and poured out thirty lifespan pills for the eunuch to take.

"Thank you for your patronage~! This is yours," the eunuch said, accepting the pills graciously with both hands. His eyes were shining and were evidently filled with greed.

Li Huowang wore it and felt safer with the weight on his face. Then, he looked at the eunuch's face and remarked, "Those coins... are you praying to the God of Wealth? Does the Bureau not care about that at all?"

"Hehehe~ surely, you jest, sir. Who doesn't pray to the God of Wealth? Who would decline more money? Hehehe~"

Li Huowang decided to drop it, as it seemed like the eunuch would not answer his question. Moreover, he was here for something more important.

"Hm~ You want something that will heal a blind? I'm sure we have that, but... follow me. I will let my subordinates search for you.”

Li Huowang followed the eunuch into the depths of the vault. Rows and rows of drawers stretched into the distant darkness; the sight gave Li Huowang the creeps. The deeper they went, the older the drawers became; some of them were even moldy. Li Huowang didn't know whether it was a false alarm or not, but he felt like someone was watching him as he walked past the moldy area of the vault.

Under the guidance of the eunuch, Li Huowang soon found himself standing before a moldy wall on the left side of the vault. There were numerous holes in the moldy wall.

Li Huowang was about to start asking questions when the eunuch took out a brush and wrote something on a piece of paper. Then, he rolled it and placed it in a bamboo tube before throwing it into the hole in the wall.

“Please wait a moment, sir. We should be able to find the things that you need. The Surveillance Bureau has gathered many treasures over the past hundreds of years, so we definitely have what you need.”

“I'm not in a rush,” Li Huowang said. After some time, Li Huowang felt uncomfortable in the silence and decided to ask, “Do you have any clues about what happened to the Natural Disaster? What was happening inside the Bureau at the time?”

“Sir, I know everything there is to know about the vault, but I can't help you with anything unrelated to it, as I've never stepped out of the vault.”

Li Huowang went cold and numb at the remark. He found it scary how the Liang Kingdom thought of some people as objects rather than a fellow human being. A eunuch who could never leave the vault would never steal.

The fact that there were such eunuchs made Li Huowang feel a shiver down his spine.

Soon, a bamboo tube emerged from the hole.

The eunuch read the written text and was overjoyed. "Sir, there's more than one method to regain one's eyesight!"

"Oh really? Quick, tell me what to do," Li Huowang said. He had guessed right. The Surveillance Bureau truly had methods to heal the blind.

"The first method is called the Sacred Eye Bead. You need to insert the eye bead, which is roughly the size of one's fist, into your forehead. The Sacred Eye Bead will not only allow you to see better, but you can even disperse evil beings with it."

"There's only one eye; it's roughly the size of a fist, and you need to insert it into your forehead?" Li Huowang muttered. He imagined how scary Bai Lingmiao would look with a third eye.

"Isn't one eye enough, sir? I thought you're missing just one eyeball?" the eunuch asked, staring at Li Huowang's empty eye socket.

"Unfortunately, my circulation technique passed through the forehead, so I can't really use that one. Next."

"Oh, the second treasure is the Golden Bridge Sutra. Upon obtaining a deep enough understanding of the sutra, you'd be able to regrow your eyeball. However, you have to be able to read and understand it. Moreover, you have to keep chanting it for several years."

"Next."

The eunuch listed out every single treasure they had available but Li Huowang rejected all of them. They were either too hard to use, had side effects, or they didn't meet Li Huowang's criteria.

Eventually, only a few treasures remained. Li Huowang was hesitating whether or not he should just use the Sacred Eye Bead when the eunuch suddenly said something interesting.

"The eighth one is a piece of relic from the body of a monk who lived during the Great Qi. The monk had gathered a ton of merit, so his relic is extremely powerful. Swallow it with some ungrounded water, and you'll obtain the Mind's Eye.

"In other words, you'd still be able to see despite being blind."

"That's interesting," Li Huowang remarked. Li Huowang thought that he had encountered a dead end, but Bai Lingmiao didn't actually need an eye. She just had to be able to "see" her surroundings to be able to work properly.

The Mind's Eye was great, as it seemed to be able to see through invisibility and illusions.

Bai Lingmiao would actually become even stronger upon cultivating her Mind's Eye.

"I want that."

"I'm not done explaining, kind sir. It's not something that anyone can do. It can only be used by someone kind. The kinder they are, the stronger their Mind's Eye. They have to be kind, or they might get exorcized by the relic."

"Kind? No problem. I want that." Bai Lingmiao was definitely one of the kindest people Li Huowang had met so far.

The eunuch was puzzled, and he cast a doubtful gaze at Li Huowang. He sized up Li Huowang and took note of his bloody Daoist robes as well as his bag of torture tools before asking, "Sir, are you really kind?"

The eunuch was convinced that Li Huowang would try and use it for himself.

"Why can't I be kind? I want it, so stop the nonsense and get it for me," Li Huowang said, frowning.

The eunuch went silent and turned around to guide Li Huowang into the forest of drawers again.

They had taken just a few steps before the eunuch turned around and looked at Li Huowang. "I forgot to tell you something, sir. The relic costs four hundred lifespan pills. Can you afford it?"

Chapter 474 - Spiritual Sin

“Four hundred?!” Li Huowang was shocked. He didn’t even need to check his gourd to know that he didn’t have that many lifespan pills.

“Please don’t think that it’s too expensive. It’s a great item from thousands of years ago; it’s from the Great Qi! Do you really think there are any monks left today that’ll generate relics upon self-immolation?”

Li Huowang didn’t mind the price, but he couldn’t afford it. He had been so busy dealing with his hallucination that he hadn’t been able to earn lifespan pills.

“How much is the Sacred Eye Bead?” Li Huowang asked. He decided not to care even if Bai Lingmiao would look bizarre—it didn’t matter as long as she could see.

“Five hundred,” said the eunuch, dashing Li Huowang’s hopes of using a cheaper item. He didn’t expect that the Sacred Eye Bead was more expensive than the relic.

Li Huowang finally realized that the Surveillance Bureau was the greediest organization in existence. He had worked hard and had risked his life to earn lifespan pills outside, but he couldn’t even afford what he needed right now.

Without the lifespan pills, he wouldn’t be able to obtain the relic for Bai Lingmiao; without the relic, Bai Lingmiao would be blind, and Li Huowang couldn’t let that happen.

When Li Huowang obtained Li Zhi’s gourd, it contained only four lifespan pills, but Li Huowang needed four hundred to buy the relic! It was a mind-boggling amount that made Li Huowang feel dizzy. Who was he supposed to rob to earn that many pills?

No, this is a small price to pay compared to killing her entire family. I must get it for her! Li Huowang vowed as he walked out of the vault.

He then went to the hall with numerous screens rather than leaving the building, as he could take on some missions there. Li Huowang saw a few familiar faces, but he was rather calm rather than hostile toward them.

The Surveillance Bureau treated the lives of others lightly, but the Surveillance Bureau's existence was vital to the world.

"Er Jiu?! You're alive?! I thought you were dead." Nangong exclaimed

Nangong said the same thing as Sima Lan and Li Huowang couldn't be bothered with him at all as he immediately went straight to the point, asking, "I want to take on the mission, and I want the highest paying one."

Nangong put two and two together and went silent. He took out a book and handed it over to Li Huowang. "Check it for yourself. It's on the final page."

Li Huowang opened it and saw the mission details.

[Wanted: Sitting Oblivion Dao Hong Zhong, dead or alive.]

Li Huowang skimmed through the pages.

Sitting Oblivion Dao Fa Cai, Sitting Oblivion Dao Xi Feng, Sitting Oblivion Dao Bai Ban, Sitting Oblivion Dao, Sitting Oblivion Dao. The missions were related to the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Liu Zongyuan was right. The Surveillance Bureau was indeed going after them.

The rewards were attractive, but Li Huowang decided not to take them because he didn't want to get into contact with those tricksters.

The Three Officials and Four Joys were like a glue trap. If he killed one of them, he could expect to see them all the time, just like how Zhuge Yuan had fallen into their trap.

“Brother Er Jiu. I thought you had a grudge against the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Why don't you accept missions related to them?”

“I paid the price with one of my eyes and settled the score. I've killed the Sitting Oblivion Dao member who killed the elders of my sect,” Li Huowang replied. He flipped over some pages and stopped.

“The spiritual sin?”

The reward for the mission titled "The Spiritual Sin" was four hundred and thirty lifespan pills and five pure lifespans. Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan standing beside Nangong and asked, “The Spiritual Sin? What is it? Is it like a spiritual beast?”

“No. Even though it has the word 'spiritual' in it, it's not a spiritual beast at all,” Zhuge Yuan replied. He revealed a look of disgust upon seeing the words "Spiritual Sin."

“Yep. The Spiritual Sin,” Nangong answered, “But are you sure you want to accept that mission? I hope you didn't become crazy after seeing the reward, which includes five pure lifespans. It's more dangerous than the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

“What is it? Why is it dangerous?”

“It's not as dangerous as the Muddled Ones, Strayed Ones, and the Twisted Ones, but it's very tiresome to handle. The difficulty depends on the entity that it has possessed. It would be fine if it possessed a normal human, as it would at most be as strong as a crazed half-Immortal, but the story is different if it possessed an evil entity.”

“So it's like a parasite?” Li Huowang asked, deducing some information himself.

The crux of the matter here was the fact that the Spiritual Sin's powers would change depending on the entity that it possessed. In other words, it was capable of using a variety of techniques.

Li Huowang read some recorded encounters about the Spiritual Sin and quietly compared his own strength to it to see if he could handle it.

After a few moments of hesitation, Li Huowang made up his mind. He was as strong as a Hong Zhong, so he was not weak at all. There was no reason for him to be afraid of it. Moreover, it wasn't like he wouldn't be able to escape if he couldn't win.

There was also a chance that the Spiritual Sin wasn't that strong. One of the recorded encounters stated that a monk was lucky enough to find a Spiritual Sin that had possessed a blade of grass. The monk was overjoyed with the discovery and made quick work of it

"I'll take this one," Li Huowang said, pressing his thumb on the red paste and accepting the mission by marking it with his thumbprint.

"Sure. These are the locations where it might appear according to our investigations. You can go ahead and look for it yourself."

"I need to find it myself?!"

"Of course. Do you really think that it's that easy to obtain such bountiful rewards? Fortunately, your rank is high enough, so you can find some people to help you carry some of that risk."

Li Huowang didn't want to recruit people like what Ji Xiang had done in the past, so he took the map away and walked out of the building. Li Huowang knew that he'd have to give up a few lifespan pills if he wanted helpers, and he needed as many lifespan pills as he could to afford the relic, so he decided not to recruit anyone.

Li Huowang stayed only a single night in the house before bringing Bai Lingmiao with him on a journey to hunt a Spiritual Sin. He thought he'd find one in the blink of an eye, but the first two locations turned out to be worthless.

He didn't receive even a hint from those two locations.

Just like that, a month and a half passed by.

Smack, smack, smack!

Bai Lingmiao was smacking Li Huowang's Daoist robes, which she had drenched in the water. Bai Lingmiao smacked it for a while before washing and scrubbing it against the stones in the river.

They didn't have a washing board, so Bai Lingmiao had to make do with stones.

After washing Li Huowang's robes, she washed her dress carefully—the same dress that Li Huowang had purchased for her at Shangjing. It was a pretty dress, and she loved it. Soon, she was done with the laundry, and she placed the clothes into a wooden bucket before standing up to leave.

Bai Lingmiao picked up a bamboo pole roughly the width of her thumb and used it as a cane. She then used the bamboo pole to make her way toward the carriage with a bucket of wet clothes in her other hand.

Chapter 475 - Doctor

After washing her clothes, Bai Lingmiao walked toward carefully the carriage and felt someone holding her cane. She saw a hazy red color before her, so she said, "I can still see a little."

The Second Deity said nothing and guided her to the carriage.

Once she was back at the carriage, Bai Lingmiao placed the laundry on top of the carriage with Li Sui's help.

"Li Sui, where is your father?" Bai Lingmiao could see a blurry patch of yellow in front of her. It was Li Sui's yellow straw robe.

Bai Lingmiao had spent such a long time with Li Sui that she had already gotten used to Li Sui's scary look. However, she couldn't treat Li Sui as her daughter like how Li Huowang could do so. Of course, she still treated Li Sui fairly.

"Father went into the forest. He said he'd be back in two hours," Li Sui replied. She was in the middle of reading a book.

"Oh, I see. All right, let's start a fire and cook something," Bai Lingmiao said. She rummaged through the carriage and found the flint. Then, she turned around and walked toward the firewood.

Starting a fire, placing the pot on top of the flames, and boiling some water were actions that Bai Lingmiao had done many in the past, but today, she somehow made a mistake and accidentally placed her hand in the flames.

She retracted her hand quickly, but her hand still ended up getting burned. The Second Deity pushed her away and started cooking in her stead. Bai Lingmiao's face was bitter when she saw the figure working hard in front of her.

Then, she started crying. She wasn't crying out of pain; she was crying at the fact that she was being a hindrance. Once Bai Lingmiao had caught a whiff of the delicious cooked food, she stood up and walked into the forest with her cane.

Bai Lingmiao grazed the ground using the cane. Just then, Bai Lingmiao saw a hazy red color amidst her blurry world. The red figure was definitely Li Huowang.

“Senior Li, food is ready!” Bai Lingmiao shouted.

Li Huowang turned to Bai Lingmiao and smiled. “Thank you, Mom.”

“What are you talking about? No need to thank me,” said Sun Xiaoqin. She was sitting on a stool by the bedside and was opening a meal box for Li Huowang.

Today’s meal consisted of braised ribs, stir-fried spinach, and carrot soup with bits of mutton. Overall, it was a balanced meal.

“I know that you don’t like carrots, but you can’t afford to be picky right now. You need as much vitamins as you can eat.”

“Mom, I’m not a picky eater at all.” Li Huowang drank the soup and chewed on the bits of carrots.

“Great. It’s bad to be a picky eater. It seems you’re recovering steadily.” Sun Xiaoqin nodded with satisfaction. She was happy to see that Li Huowang’s condition had stabilized.

“Mom, I forgot to ask where you’re staying right now. You’re not living in this prison, are you?”

“I actually told your father to buy me a foldable bed so I can sleep here and stay with you around the clock, but he refused. I had no choice but to rent a room nearby.”

Li Huowang nodded. “That’s good.”

“Are you really cured, Senior Li? Are you?” Bai Lingmiao asked while staring sadly at Li Huowang along with the Second Deity. “Why did you lie to me? You said that you’re cured, but that clearly isn’t the case...”

Bai Lingmiao sighed with a downtrodden loon. “But I don’t blame you. I’ve never told you that I haven’t been able to let it go as well... Senior Li, should we part ways? But... I really can’t let you go like this...”

“I’m fine. Don’t worry about me. My condition has been stabilizing over these past two months.”

“Ah, you can’t say that, son. Your condition is indeed improving, but you’re still hallucinating. You should not let your guard down, even if you’re recovering steadily.”

Li Huowang patiently listened to his mother’s nagging. He was enjoying it now, as he thought that he had lost it once, which made him understand how precious it was to him all this while.

“It’s fine. One day... I will be free from this illness!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

The metal gates abruptly opened just then.

Li Huowang looked toward the entrance and saw two doctors walking into the room. The two doctors had three wardens with them for their safety while a nurse was pushing in a wheelchair.

Li Huowang was alarmed, and he probed, “Miaomiao? Li Sui? Is that you? Leave me alone for now; I’ll come back soon.”

Sun Xiaoqin stood up anxiously and stood before the doctors. “Hey, who are you people? Who said you can come here?”

“Madam Sun, please calm down. We’re bringing your son away for therapy. He needs to move his muscles around, or they’ll become atrophied to the point where he’ll have to stay in his bed for the rest of his life.”

The doctors, wardens, and the nurse moved. They opened Li Huowang’s straitjacket, revealing his pale skin. Li Huowang had become much skinnier, and his limbs looked as thin as chopsticks.

Li Huowang couldn’t stand up even though the nurse was supporting him. The prison wardens sighed in relief at the sight. There was no way the martial lunatic could defeat them, considering his condition.

“What’s happening? Why is he so thin?” Sun Xiaoqin asked, sounding flustered.

“Madam Sun, please calm down. It’s all because he hadn’t been able to move for a very long time; his muscles had wasted. He’ll recover via physiotherapy.

“With that said, it’s actually surprising that your son actually doesn’t have any bedsores. You’ve been doing a great job taking care of him.”

Sun Xiaoqin relaxed at that remark and exclaimed, “I flip him over every few hours. I watched a video online on how to take care of bedridden elders, and I learned that technique from that video.”

The doctors gave a few instructions. The nurse and the wardens placed Li Huowang in a wheelchair and started rolling him away.

“Wait, where are you taking me?! I can’t leave right now!” Li Huowang exclaimed. He but the nurse and the wardens held him down tightly.

Li Huowang was afraid of leaving the room. Who could say what would happen if he were to leave the room right now?

One of the doctors cast a curious gaze at him. “Why can’t you leave the room right now? Can you tell me why?”

Li Huowang looked at the doctor and replied, “Just give me a few moments.”

“Why can’t you leave right now ? You’ve been lucid all this while, so why can’t you leave the room right now? Are you afraid of something?”

Li Huowang immediately got suspicious at the remark. How did the doctor know that he had been lucid all this while?

Chapter 476 - Chat

“Student, since you're lucid, you should be capable of logical thinking. I know you understand what I'm talking about. We just want to help you. Do you really want to lie in bed for the rest of your life and make your mother take care of you forever?”

“Your mother's old. Can she really take care of you for the rest of her life? Can you withstand seeing her hair becoming white? Can you really envision yourself making your mother flip you over and clean you up by the time you're fifty or maybe sixty years old?”

It doesn't matter. One day, I'll become an immortal myself. Li Huowang's expression was firm as he made sure that his mouth would remain shut.

The two doctors glanced at each other, and then they took out their notebook from their white coats to jot down something on it. They moved a bit farther away to discuss something for a while before walking back up to Li Huowang.

“Student Li, I think you can be exempted from rehab, but... can we talk more about that? Don't be nervous; it's just going to be a casual chat between friends,” said the younger doctor.

Upon hearing that, the nurse, the wardens, and the other doctor turned around to leave.

The doctor took off his white coat and put it aside, revealing his casual clothes underneath.

“Let me introduce myself. My name is Yi Donglai,” Yi Donglai said. He reached out with his hand and shook Li Huowang's thin and emaciated right hand.

“You've become famous online. The story about how you rushed into school to rescue your girlfriend from several robbers has gone viral online. Many people admire you, and there are many beautiful girls among them,” said Yi Donglai.

Li Huowang’s lips trembled but he didn’t speak. He was busy counting down to his return.

“Do you play League of Legends? I do. They just released a limited skin for the Barbarian King, and it's a skin based on you. It went viral, and I even spent ninety-nine dollars just to get it.”

“Huh?” Li Huowang looked up with a complex expression and asked, “Am I a fool in your eyes?”

“Hehehe, just kidding. Don’t take it too seriously, but... I did see the surveillance footage. Wow, you looked so cool, just like the powerful Barbarian King! If your figure at the time were rendered into a skin, it would definitely sell like hotcakes!”

“Which champions do you like to play? I like to play the Jester, but Rito Games has just nerfed him recently! They actually nerfed Jester! Like, it's absurd, right? Why would they even target him...”

Li Huowang stared deeply at Yi Donglai as the latter blabbered. Of course, Li Huowang ignored Yi Donglai's nonsense and saw through the latter's intentions. Yi Donglai was probably planning on using gaming to build a rapport with Li Huowang, and then he'd start treatment once Li Huowang had let his guard down.

Perhaps... I don't have to resist openly. Maybe I can use him to get out of my current predicament. It's a hassle being monitored around the clock, Li Huowang thought. Then, he asked, "Have they released any new champions recently?"

Yi Donglai was delighted to hear Li Huowang's question. Finally, he received a decent response from Li Huowang, a patient of Bed 13. With feedback, psychological intervention and treatment could proceed.

“Yes! Yes, yes, yes!” Yi Donglai exclaimed, "Two new champions were released while you're here.”

“Are they jungle champions? I like playing jungle[1].”

The two chatted about the game for twenty minutes, and the two were satisfied with each other's responses.

"I've got to go. Let's chat again the next time we have time," Li Huowang said.

Yi Donglai had many questions. He especially wanted to know how Li Huowang could control the timing of his flare-up, but Yi Donglai knew that the matter couldn't be rushed.

"Sure! Pick a time."

"Then, let's have dinner in five days. See you later, Donglai," Li Huowang said, smiling.

"Hey, don't leave yet. We still haven't eaten dinner." Sun Xiaoqin's voice echoed in Li Huowang's ears as the scenery around him peeled away.

When Li Huowang came back to his senses, he saw Bai Lingmiao, Li Sui, and the Second Deity staring at him in a circle.

"Senior Li... dinner is ready." Bai Lingmiao muttered weakly.

"Ah, okay," Li Huowang said. He turned around and walked toward the carriage. He then picked up a bowl of stew and said, "Mom, I want to eat. Can you feed me some rice from the meal box?"

Li Huowang opened his mouth wide. Then, he paused for a while with his mouth agape before taking a spoonful of the stew from his bowl and chewing on it. After swallowing, he opened his mouth wide again and waited patiently.

Bai Lingmiao, Li Sui, and the Second Deity saw Li Huowang behaving strangely.

"Come here and eat. What are you guys doing standing there? We still have a journey to continue," Li Huowang said.

The trio walked over to him.

Bai Lingmiao cast a complicated gaze at Li Huowang while holding a bowl of stew. She looked like she wanted to say something to him, but she merely smiled and ate with relish upon seeing his gaze on her.

There was a strange atmosphere above everyone as they ate their meal. Once the dishes were washed, the carriage set off once again.

Li Huowang thought hard and long about it before finally talking to Bai Lingmiao, saying, "You don't need to worry about me at all. I can see things clearly. It's just going to take some time for things to become even better."

"All right, Senior Li. I believe you." Bai Lingmiao nodded slightly.

"I really—Ah, forget it. You'll understand eventually," Li Huowang said. Then, he took out a piece of turmeric paper and bit his finger before writing a talisman.

He stuck it onto the back of the horse, which made it gallop almost immediately.

The carriage moved swiftly, and the group soon found themselves before a peach blossom forest by dusk. The red sunset cast its hue on the pink peach blossoms, making them look particularly enchanting.

Li Huowang spread out the detailed map that he had obtained from the Surveillance Bureau. He compared it with their surroundings and muttered, "This should be the place. I just don't know whether we'll have a stroke of better luck this time or not."

The unsuccessful attempts made Li Huowang feel a bit less confident about this third attempt.

"I'll go in first to check. You guys wait outside. If there are any unusual noises, bring the carriage back to where we had lunch earlier and wait for me there."

"Okay, Senior Li. Go on."

Li Huowang felt a pang of pain in his heart when he saw Bai Lingmiao's unfocused eyes. Moments later, he turned around and finally started walking toward the peach blossom forest. He bent down slightly, projecting his image into the ground before continuing his journey into the peach blossom forest.

The greenery within the forest was thick, and the fragrance of blossoms filled the air.

However, the tree trunks were covered with sticky amber peach gum, which made the entire forest feel eerie.

Just as Li Huowang had walked ten meters into the forest, he realized that the lush peach tree forest was unusually quiet. There wasn't any chirping of birds, and he couldn't hear the distinct noises of insects.

Li Huowang was thrilled. Could there be something this time around?

“Brother Zhuge, you’ve seen a lot. I’m sure you’ve encountered an evil spirit or two, am I right?”

“Yeah. An evil spirit once disturbed a close friend of mine. He was living a life worse than death, tortured during every waking moment. In the end, he begged me to grant him release.”

Chapter 477 - Spiritual Sin

Li Huowang was convinced that Zhuge Yuan had deep feelings for that good friend of his the moment he saw the latter's exceptionally sorrowful expression. Zhuge Yuan was a righteous person, and he was always willing to go to great lengths for his friends.

One could only imagine just how much he had suffered after being forced to kill a friend with his own hands.

Zhuce Yuan added, "The spiritual sin who took away my good friend became capable of using the techniques and powers of my friend. It also grew even stronger.

"Brother Li, I know that the Surveillance Bureau has always been talking about just how formidable spirits can be, but you must be careful against a spiritual sin. You might be fighting a spiritual sin, but you might be fighting something else the next moment."

"Spiritual Sins are capable of changing hosts, which is the reason they're both troublesome and dangerous to handle. The best way to take one down is to ambush it."

"Once you encounter a spiritual sin, you must be absolutely certain of success before you make a move against it. Otherwise, you'll suffer a fate worse than death if it manages to capture you. They're all about sin and less about the spirit, after all."

Zhuce Yuan was about to say something, but he paused. There was a monkey carcass lying by his feet. The carcass was dry, and the monkey's mouth was agape. Its limbs were twisted, and its belly was split open. Its rotten innards had splattered all over the ground, creating what looked like a flower.

“If we go by what you said, Brother Zhuge, does that mean we've just found the culprit behind this guy's death?” Li Huowang asked.

Zhuge Yuan nodded solemnly in reply.

Li Huowang became extremely cautious as he moved slowly into the depths of the peach blossom forest. The number of twisted and deformed corpses increased as Li Huowang walked deeper and deeper into the forest.

Eventually, he saw not just animal carcasses but human corpses twisted in bizarre shapes as well.

“Shh! Quiet! I think I heard something just now,” Li Huowang exclaimed at the monk. The monk was chanting a mantra for the deceased. Li Huowang fell on all fours and pressed his ear on the earth, listening intently. What are these noises? Breathing?

Whooo, whooo, whooo...

Rhythmic noises of what sounded like someone's breathing reached Li Huowang's ears through the ground. Li Huowang gripped his sword tightly and moved slowly toward where the sound was coming from.

As the noises grew louder, Li Huowang picked up the pace as the noises grew louder. A thicket of branches stood before him, and Li Huowang jumped into it. Upon landing, the scene unfolding before him made his pupils quiver.

A massive pile of flesh, bones, and organs was on a large clearing up ahead. There were too many of them that a tiny lake of gore had been created from the flesh, bones, and innards.

Whooo, whooo, whooo... The pile of flesh expanded and contracted as it breathed. Streams of red light fell from up above, piercing the crevices of the flesh.

Li Huowang looked up and saw that the red light was coming from the setting sun. The entity before him was actually feasting on the sunset itself.

Am I staring at a spiritual sin? Li Huowang thought.

Squeak!

A mouse ran toward the pile of flesh in the distance and gnawed on a shriveled corpse.

The pile of flesh trembled just then. It converged at one point before assembling itself into a doe that was as huge as a one-story house. The deer had six legs and large antlers that looked like two large peach trees. It had fur similar to the colors of a rotting rainbow—dull yet colorful.

Li Huowang instantly realized that it was a doe, as a deceased fawn was hanging out of its nether region. The fawn seemed to have died during birth.

“Brother Zhuge, what is the spiritual sin parasitizing on?” Li Huowang asked in a low voice as he stared at the massive deer in the distance.

“Yingzhao. The common folk call it a Nine-Colored Deer.”

Nine-Colored Deer? Li Huowang turned and saw the deer's rainbow-colored fur.

The spiritual sin suddenly made a move. It left afterimages in the air as it dashed toward the shriveled corpse where the mouse was located. It would have crushed the mouse with just a step, but it chose not to do so. Instead, it trapped the mouse's tail with its plum-shaped hooves, and then it pressed down on the mouse's hind legs with its other hoof before moving its hoof back and forth.

The mouse shrieked in pain, but the Nine-Colored Deer showed no intention of stopping. It raised its head and neighed with delight. Once the mouse's four limbs had been crushed into meat paste, the Nine-Colored Deer lifted one hoof and pressed hard on the mouse, slowly crushing the mouse beneath its hoof.

The Nine-Colored Deer did not stop pressing down on the mouse until the mouse had vomited its innards. Upon seeing the gory sight, the Nine-Colored Deer seemed to reveal a satisfied look before transforming into the same pile of flesh, blood, and innards.

Li Huowang's expression was ugly as he struggled to maintain his composure from the revolting sight. Then, he spoke in a low voice, "Brother Zhuge, has that entity gone mad, or does it simply enjoy killing?"

"It's a spiritual sin. Heaven and earth are indifferent to all living beings, and you are staring at the sin from both heaven and earth. Its birth itself is a kind of mistake." Zhuge Yuan seemed to have recalled something, and his expression became ugly.

"Brother Zhuge, what's the best strategy against that Nine-Colored Deer?" Li Huowang asked. He was getting ready to make a move.

"It consumes and uses the rosy light of the sunset[1]. Take a closer look at its body. Locate where the light of the sunset is leaking out of its body."

"Okay," Li Huowang said. He gnashed his teeth as his figure arched slightly as if he were a leopard.

The spiritual sin in the distance seemed to have sensed something. The pile of flesh, blood, and innards transformed once again into the figure of a deer. Then, it looked around and scanned the peach forest.

A Hong Zhong mahjong tile tumbled through the air, landing steadily on a peach tree.

The spiritual sin turned to look at where the noise had come from, and that was when Li Huowang rushed out from behind a tree. He whipped out his bronze coin sword and slashed out at the spiritual sin.

A crisp noise echoed, and the flesh that took the brunt of Li Huowang's attack sizzled. It emitted a plume of black smoke and withered like dead flowers. The attack from the evil-banishing sword was effective, but it failed to deliver a fatal blow.

The spiritual sin let out a cry. It returned to its original form and charged at Li Huowang.

A sea of flesh, blood, and innards shrouded Li Huowang in an instant, but he emerged unscathed. He had just switched positions with his illusion.

“Kill!” Li Huowang roared, and the purple-tassel sword slashed fiercely at the Nine-Colored Deer, carving open a massive wound.

However, the laceration healed rapidly. Zhuge Yuan saw that and said, “Brother Li, this is not going to work. Its body is just its shell. You need to attack the spiritual sin directly inside of it for your attacks to be effective!”

A red light burst out of the Nine-Colored Deer.

Li Huowang deflected it with his sword in mid-air. The red light ricocheted off Li Huowang's sword and struck down quite a few peach trees.

“What does it look like?” Li Huowang asked while retreating to create some distance between them.

“You can’t see it. Living humans with the ten emotions and eight sufferings cannot see what it really looks like.”

“Since we can't see it, then so be it!” Li Huowang exclaimed. His expression turned fierce as he removed his red Daoist robes. Then, he whipped out his flint and slashed at himself.

1. more specifically, it's the rosy-tinted light/clouds of sunrise/sunset 🤔

Well, good to know what the deer looks like.

Chapter 478 - Counter

Sparks flew and landed on Li Huowang, creating a mighty conflagration that dealt extreme pain to Li Huowang—pain that almost made him faint. The extremely high temperature distorted the air around him, and his figure was instantly scorched.

When Li Huowang saw that the Nine-Colored Deer before him was emitting a plume of black smoke, he grinned menacingly with his lipless mouth and charged at it.

Engulfed in flames, Li Huowang collided heavily against the amalgamation of flesh, blood, and innards. The gory hill burst open and was engulfed by the raging flames.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief as he stared at the raging flames before him. It seemed that he had made the right choice by not choosing to transform his skin into a life-saving talisman.

The writhing flesh eventually stopped moving, but Li Huowang sensed something amiss. He rushed into the fire with his purple-tassel sword in hand and slashed at the charred mass. However, the spiritual sin was missing.

It escaped! Li Huowang's face turned ugly. This spiritual sin was far more cunning than he had imagined.

Where do you think you can run? Li Huowang surveyed the surroundings. Then, he squatted and pressed his hand on the dry weeds and dead wood on the ground. Flames rushed out of him from all directions, and they climbed up the peach trees like living creatures. Each flaming peach tree was like a plague, and the nearby region quickly transformed into a sea of fire.

Li Huowang stood in the middle of the flames, looking for any abnormalities. However, he did not see anything unusual. The spiritual sin hadn't been forced out by the fire. It seemed like dealing with it was going to be more difficult than Li Huowang thought.

What am I supposed to do now? If it manages to escape, it's going to be really troublesome to find it again. After pondering for a moment, Li Huowang decided to divine the spiritual sin's location.

Just as Li Huowang was about to cut himself using his sword, a fireball abruptly manifested over the back of his hand and dove into his wound. Damn it! The spiritual sin has possessed the flames!

Li Huowang had realized it too late. The flames that had engulfed him and the peach trees were extinguished instantly, and his fleshly body began to collapse like the Nine-Colored Deer from earlier. His flesh, blood, bones, skin, and hair separated and formed a pile of gore.

To make matters worse, Li Huowang was conscious throughout the ordeal. He felt his flesh being torn apart, and the pain was so extreme that he wished to die.

However, Li Huowang couldn't even die, as the spiritual sin was about to take full control of him! Li Huowang could feel its pure malice, which had pervaded everything within him as it tried to take over his consciousness.

It turned out that spiritual sins weren't living creatures but were embodiments of sin themselves! They were perfectly capable of triumphing over just about anyone, as even the most virtuous person could not be devoid of sin.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth and clenched his fists. Half of his face slid off and fell to the ground. I am virtuous, and I don't have even a single sin!

Just then, Li Huowang's melted fleshly body had converged, transforming into his original figure. Even the skin that he had sacrificed to Ba-Hui had returned, and it allowed him to understand that he was in a mere illusion.

He couldn't be fooled!

Li Huowang took advantage of that opportunity to run to the edge of the peach forest.

Li Huowang's figure collapsed to the ground like tofu when he saw the carriage up ahead. Just as his face was about to separate from his head, he looked up at the carriage and roared, "Li Sui! There's something in my body! Help me drive it out!"

His words had just echoed into the air when his fleshly body separated, transforming into a wriggling mass of flesh that rushed toward the depths of the peach forest.

Step, step, step!

Frantic footsteps sounded, and a pair of eyes turned to see a skinless dog running toward them on all fours.

"Dad, I'm coming!" Li Sui exclaimed, and her body disintegrated in mid-air. Her flesh and tentacles converged at one point, becoming a massive clump of flesh that landed heavily on Li Huowang. The two clumps of flesh intertwined and created a massive pile of gore covered in tentacles. Then, it rolled violently around the burning peach forest.

Li Huowang and Li Sui's faces would appear intermittently amidst the rolling ball of meat, and their conditions appeared rather unstable. The spiritual sin had decided to become a bit greedy and take control over Li Sui's body as well, but it was having a hard time, as the Black Taisui itself was born to devour.

Moreover, Li Huowang was working hard to regain some control over his body as well.

The spiritual sin finally gave in, as it was fighting two enemies by itself. Li Huowang's body converged at one point, transforming into a bloated humanoid figure. However, his abdomen burst open, and something rushed out of his stomach.

Li Huowang looked up but saw nothing except for strange footprints in the ashes, which vanished quickly as it turned to a corner. Li Huowang was convinced that the footprints had to have belonged to the spiritual sin. After all, spiritual sins could never be seen by someone with the ten emotions and eight sufferings.

“Dad, are you okay?” Li Sui asked. Then, she rushed out of Li Huowang’s abdomen, allowing Li Huowang's bloated figure to return to normal.

Li Huowang's organs were in a mess, and there were some organs that had shifted, but the good thing was that he had full control over his body once more.

Li Huowang glared resentfully at the footprints. He quickly bandaged his wound. He had overcome all sorts of hardships, and he couldn't fall to something so minor. Li Huowang did not even groan as he withstood the burning sensation all over his skin.

Once Li Huowang was done bandaging his wound, he wasted no time and rushed toward where the footprints had vanished.

“Li Sui, wait outside for me, and rush in once I call you! Stay with Miaomiao for now!”

Li Huowang slowed down and became fully aware of his surroundings. He listened to every single noise around him. He couldn't see, so he had to use his ears to track down the enemy!

The spiritual sin was far more cunning than he had imagined, but he had to outsmart it.

Rustle, rustle.

Li Huowang heard faint rustling noises behind him, but he did not react. He moved forward slowly until he saw a hollowed-out tree with what looked like a tunnel in it. He bent down and entered the tunnel, seemingly searching inside for the spiritual sin.

Just then, a series of footprints moved rapidly toward Li Huowang's feet. Then, the footprints disappeared as soon as they reached Li Huowang's wounded feet. The moment the spiritual sin burrowed its way into Li Huowang's body through his feet, it realized something amiss.

Li Huowang's upper half was missing; it turned out that the spiritual sin had burrowed into Li Huowang's lower body.

“ Hehe... Gotcha. I'm sure you didn't expect me to use my lower body as bait, did you?”

Chapter 479 - Someone's Coming

The spiritual sin felt wronged as it had been deceived. It tried to take control of Li Huowang's lower half and flee. However, Li Huowang's lower half had no eyes and no ears to perceive its surroundings, so the spiritual sin stumbled over a tree root and fell hard to the ground, just a few steps away from the hollowed-out tree.

The spiritual sin decisively attempted to escape. It had recognized that it was in danger, but before it could even make a move, Li Huowang's bronze coin sword left behind a trail of cold light as it descended and nailed the spiritual sin to the ground.

A plume of black smoke emerged as the spiritual sin cried in agony. However, it couldn't do anything at all, and its cries eventually weakened.

When the spiritual sin ceased all movement, Li Huowang finally emerged from concealment. No, it was more like his upper half crawled out of hiding, and he crawled toward his frozen lower half.

Once a scammer became aware of what the customer desired, then it'd be easier for them to scam the customer. Li Huowang knew that the spiritual sin wanted his body so badly, so he separated himself into two and tossed his lower half aside as bait to lure it out.

Li Huowang sprawled out on the ground, gasping for air. He had endured excruciating pain tonight—the pain of being burned alive, the pain of getting lacerated, and the pain of getting cut in half. The ordeal was so painful that he almost fainted. He would have fainted long ago if it hadn't been for his willpower.

At least there's some profit.... Li Huowang glanced at the bronze coin sword. The bronze coin sword had pinned the carcass of the spiritual sin to the ground, which was still emitting wisps of black smoke.

Li Huowang grabbed the smoke with his charred fingers, and he felt his negative emotions being agitated. The desire to kill and hate filled him up in the blink of an eye. Li Huowang retracted his hand and tried to touch the source of the smoke, but his hand touched nothing but air. For some reason, he couldn't touch the spiritual sin, and he couldn't see anything beneath the plume of black smoke.

Li Huowang tested it and found that he could touch other things. However, he could not touch the spiritual sin itself. Spiritual sins truly are dangerous and bizarre. I wonder why the Surveillance Bureau is willing to pay such a high price to obtain one.

Li Huowang rested for a while and recovered a bit of strength. Then, he started crawling toward his lower half, but he stopped as soon as he started crawling, as there were oncoming footsteps.

Someone's coming? Li Huowang's expression stiffened. Miaomiaomiao? No, those footsteps do not belong to her!

Li Huowang peered into the winding forest path to his left, and he saw a chubby woman walking toward him with steady steps.

The chubby woman's getup was strange; she was wearing a red paper belly band, and a small golden crown embroidered with red threads was sitting on her head. The strange part about her getup was that lit purple incense sticks were sticking out of her head, making her appear like a hedgehog. Moreover, two miniature, triangular banners with red curse patterns were hanging from her earlobes.

Li Huowang would have thought that he was staring at another spiritual sin if it weren't for the mace on her shoulder.

The chubby woman raised her mace and pointed it at Li Huowang. “Hey! Ascend to the heavens and travel the lands up above. Safeguard the wind and clouds in the four directions. Seize the demons and capture evil!”

Li Huowang frowned. He reached for his badge at his waist and showed it to the chubby woman. “Back off! I’m in the middle of official business on behalf of the Surveillance Bureau!”

“Huh?” the chubby woman was surprised. Then, she took out an identical badge from her belly band. She was from the Surveillance Bureau as well.

“Oh? You’re from the Surveillance Bureau? I don’t think so. Toss over your badge for me to take a closer look!”

The chubby woman dared not let her guard down in the face of a living human being with no lower half and was charred black. Li Huowang obliged and hurled his badge over to the chubby woman. Then, he pieced together his upper and lower halves.

Li Huowang waited patiently for the nerves in his lower half to connect to each other.

The plump woman walked up to Li Huowang and placed the badge next to him.

“I didn’t expect that you were saying the truth. I thought you were a spiritual sin. Which sect are you from?”

“Ao Jing Sect.”

The plump woman scrutinized Li Huowang up and down. Then, she nodded and said, “I guess that makes sense.”

The plump woman then pulled out the incense sticks sticking out of her face. “What a mess. We’re on the same side, but we almost fought each other. Anyway, your clone technique is impressive, young man. Where did you learn it?”

Li Huowang couldn’t be bothered to make small talk with the plump woman. After all, the Surveillance Bureau had never been a place to find comrades.

Meanwhile, the plump woman's true appearance was finally revealed when there were no more incense sticks sticking out of her head. If she was judged solely on appearance, she appeared to be an ordinary peasant woman.

Without waiting for a response from Li Huowang, the plump woman asked, "I came here to find a spiritual sin. What about you?"

"Hmm?" Li Huowang sat up and asked, "You took on that task as well? Can two people take on the same job?"

"How naive. Several people can take on one task, but of course, the one who gets it down first will obtain the reward. I guess you can say that it's skill based."

"Oh." Li Huowang with much difficulty. Then, he pressed on his lower body, which was beginning to recover. "Well, you're too late. I already killed the spiritual sin."

"What?! You killed it by yourself?" the chubby woman exclaimed, revealing extreme shock.

However, Li Huowang could see that the chubby woman's ten emotions and eight sufferings did not seem as shocked as she appeared on the outside. It seemed that the chubby woman was a hypocrite.

However, it wasn't strange at all. Everyone would be wary of strangers, and Li Huowang was wary of the chubby woman as well. It was proven by how he had never let go of his purple-tassel sword since he saw the chubby woman.

"You're right when you said that the tasks are skill based, Sis. Anyway, please excuse me." Li Huowang curled up his calves and them down slowly. He had healed enough to stand up.

"Indeed, but..." the chubby woman trailed off, seemingly anxious.

Li Huowang couldn't be bothered with her at all. He exerted all his strength to propel himself off of the ground. Then, he took away the bronze coin sword, which had pierced the spiritual sin, before walking slowly toward the edge of the peach forest.

“Wait!” the chubby woman exclaimed.

Li Huowang turned around, and the tip of his sword pointed directly at the chubby woman's nose.

“What? Are you trying to snatch it away from me?” Li Huowang asked, his voice instantly becoming cold.

The plump woman revealed a shy smile. She took a few steps back until she was out of his attack range before explaining, “We’re all from the Surveillance Bureau. How could I do such a thing?”

Li Huowang responded with a cold laugh. He knew too well the methods of his colleagues in the Surveillance Bureau. If he had shown even a hint of fear, the chubby woman would have ambushed him to snatch the spiritual sin away and claim the reward for herself.

Hundreds of lifespan pills were worth a small fortune in this chaotic world. Moreover, the task was to capture a spiritual sin, and the Surveillance Bureau wouldn't ask where it had come from.

“Sounds great. Let’s go our separate ways, then. You definitely wouldn’t want to get a taste of the Ao Jing Sect's techniques,” Li Huowang threatened. Then, he retreated slowly with his loot in hand.

Chapter 480 - Retreat

The peach forest was filled with the smell of charcoal. Li Huowang did not dare to walk too fast. The flesh around his waist was still moving, and it seemed like it would fall to the ground at any moment.

The chubby woman's face couldn't help but become anxious as Li Huowang got farther and farther away from her.

"Hey, young man, I'm not going to ask you for anything else except for the five-year pure lifespan! Name your price! I'll buy it from you!"

"Not selling!" Li Huowang decisively refused. Pure lifespan had no side effects, and he was planning on using it to prolong Bai Lingmiao's life.

The chubby woman seemed rather unwilling to give up, and she followed Li Huowang from a certain distance away. However, she stopped in her tracks when Li Sui appeared and growled at her with her pearly whites.

"S-Senior Li?" Bai Lingmiao's gentle voice was tinged with hesitation. Bai Lingmiao stared at the blurry black mess in the distance. Bai Lingmiao was certain that Li Huowang's figure was red, so how come he had become scorched black?

Li Huowang mounted his horse while enduring the intense pain. He urged the horse forward and exclaimed, "I'll explain later! Someone is watching us, so we have to leave now."

The carriage rushed down the dirt road in the dead of night. The horse ran until noon the next day, and Li Huowang only made the horse stop when it started foaming at the mouth.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief when he saw that nobody was behind them. Regardless of whether that woman was avoiding him or not, at least she hadn't decided to actually follow them.

Li Huowang felt all the tension inside of him go, and he collapsed behind the curtain.

"Miaomiao, I'll rest for a while. Don't touch the bronze coin sword," Li Huowang said. He fell asleep the moment his nape touched his soft pillow.

Li Huowang slept for a long time. When he opened his eyes again, he saw Bai Lingmiao brushing something on his charred body. Li Huowang sniffed lightly, and the unique smell of the liquid told him that it was badger oil.

"How long was I asleep?" Li Huowang asked.

Bai Lingmiao finally noticed that he was awake.

"Senior Li, you've been sleeping for three days. I stitched up the wounds on your chest and waist," Bai Lingmiao responded.

"Ah." Li Huowang recalled something and sat up abruptly. He ignored the pain coming from his wounds and reached for the bronze coin sword beside him. His heart sank when he saw that it was no longer emitting a plume of black smoke.

"Senior Li, are you looking for that invisible thing? I bought a wooden box from a passing peddler and put it in there for you."

Li Huowang opened the box and used the other end of his chopsticks to prod inside of it. Upon sensing something pressing on his chopsticks, Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief. The spiritual sin was still there.

"Senior Li, are you hungry? I'm going to get some broth for you," Bai Lingmiao said. She lifted the curtain and turned around to leave.

"No, I'll go and take it myself," Li Huowang said, stopping Bai Lingmiao in her tracks. "You should avoid working on anything that involves hot temperatures, or you might get into an accident again."

When Li Huowang got off the carriage, his scabbed wounds opened and oozed blood. It was painful, but Li Huowang had been through so many hardships that he had long gotten used to extreme pain.

It was dark outside, and Li Sui was squatted by the campfire. Li Sui was drawing something in the air with a book beneath one of her paws.

“Dad? You're finally awake?” Li Sui asked, looking up at Li Huowang.

“Learning to draw talismans? Not bad, keep it up.” Li Huowang reached out and patted Li Sui's head gently. Then, he picked up a bowl from the side to scoop out some broth from the pot.

Just as he was about to ladle out a bowl of broth for himself, Li Sui stuck her tongue over and devoured the broth.

“What was that?” Li Huowang curled his scorched fingers and flicked Li Sui's forehead.

“Dad, can't I have some? I always ate first, you know.”

Li Sui's words made Li Huowang do a double take at her. It seemed that Bun's memories and thoughts had been assimilated by Li Sui.

“It's okay, go ahead and eat,” Li Huowang said, placing a bowl of broth before Li Sui.

Li Huowang watched as Li Sui devoured the hot broth. “Li Sui, I'm severely injured, and your mother can barely see. You must help us out on the road up ahead.”

“All right, what can I do?”

“Help us wash clothes and wash dishes. Help us start fires as well, and if you can't do that, then collect some firewood for us instead.”

“Second Mom is already doing those, though. Won't Second Mom have nothing to do if I take over those tasks?”

“Second Mom?”

“Yeah, she likes to wear a red hat. I like her, and we often chat. We even go out to catch some games. We caught a big piece of game once, and we split it in half.”

Is she talking about the Second Deity? When did they become so close? Li Huowang thought it through, and he realized that it wasn’t a bad thing at all.

“All right, just help her out in her tasks, then.”

“All right.”

Li Huowang looked at Li Sui's gaping maw and her black tentacle tongue. Li Huowang smiled knowingly, and then he reached out with his left arm to pull Li Sui into his arms.

Then, he patted Li Sui's head and said, “Thank you for your help back in the peach forest. If it hadn't been for you, things would have gotten a bit dangerous.”

Before Li Sui could respond, she caught a whiff of Li Huowang's familiar scent. She stuck her tongue out and licked Li Huowang's charred figure.

“Sui Sui, is there anything you want to do?” Li Huowang asked softly.

“I want to stay by Dad’s side forever.”

“You can’t always be by my side. You’re my daughter, after all, not a pet.”

“I'm sure there are things that you'll want to do in the future. Take your time and think about it thoroughly, and then don't forget to let me know if there’s anything I can help you with.”

“Dad, I don’t understand what you're talking about.”

“You'll understand in the future. For now, let’s take a bowl of broth to your mother. Then, we'll continue eating and rest afterward. We still have a journey to continue tomorrow.”

The night was uneventful, and when Li Huowang woke up amidst the swaying, he realized that he had overslept. He pushed Li Sui off of his chest, and then he lifted the carriage curtain to peek outside.

It turned out that they were in the middle of a bustling market.

So we've entered a city. Where are we? Li Huowang pulled out a map and found that they were in a place called Linzhang. It was not as grand as the capital or the You Capital, but it was still rather large. At our current speed, we should reach the capital in ten days.

Li Huowang used his charred finger to draw a faint black line on the map.

“Senior Li, you're awake? You're quite tired, so why don't we rest here for a couple of days?” Bai Lingmiao suggested.

Li Huowang shook his head as he stared into her eyes, which had almost become completely white, “Forget it. We can just rest at Cowheart Village once we've found a new pair of eyes for you. It's better to rush so we don't stumble upon unnecessary trouble,” Li Huowang said.

Li Huowang's words had yet to finish echoing in the air when trouble found him.

The gaze was so blatant that Li Huowang found it hard to ignore, and when he looked up, he saw the plump woman whom he had encountered in the peach forest. She was standing on the third floor of a grand tavern while waving at Li Huowang.

I guess I did not manage to shake her off.

Chapter 481 - Irresistible Offer

Li Huowang stared at the plump woman on the third floor while walking on the busy street. A well-kept waiter ran out of the restaurant and stopped in front of the carriage. The waiter smiled politely, “Dear sir, someone has been expecting you on the third floor. This way, please.”

I will cross that bridge when it comes to it, Li Huowang thought. There was no avoiding it. Since the plump woman was looking for him so blatantly, Li Huowang had no plans of hiding from her as well.

Li Huowang took Li Sui with him to the third floor where the plump woman was already waiting for him with a table full of food. Of course, the third floor had other customers as well.

“Come, let me give you a toast! You're incredible!” the chubby woman exclaimed and downed a cup of wine.

Li Huowang and Li Sui sat on the stool and removed their veil at the same time. Li Huowang's burnt skull and a skinned dog with wriggling tentacles were a shocking sight everywhere, and the other customers definitely thought the same, as they stopped eating upon seeing the two.

After a few moments of silence, they all shrieked in fright and ran away. Soon, the third floor was devoid of people except for Li Huowang and the chubby woman. Li Huowang's actions were a display of his stance. He wanted to let the chubby woman know that he wasn't someone to be trifled with.

The chubby woman sensed Li Huowang's hostility and explained, “Come on, you're such a precious young man. I'm old enough to be your mother, so I would never hurt you. I just want to negotiate.

"I know that you don't trust me, as we had just met in that forest, but I hope that you can relax a bit here. The city guards' office is just across the restaurant. All you need to do is shout, and they'll run over here immediately."

Li Sui picked up a pork trotter, but Li Huowang slapped it away. Then, glared at the chubby woman and muttered, "You want the pure lifespan, right? Didn't I tell you that I have no plans of selling it?"

Despite Li Huowang's words, the chubby woman did not give up.

"I've been living a tough life. I've never had a father, and my mother had a hard life raising me. Still, she raised me without any complaints, and I've finally become independent enough to let her retire in peace, but her lifespan is nearing its end!

"I could still remember how she fed me her own blood just to save me from death during that famine..."

Rather than touched, Li Huowang was annoyed. He wanted to walk away, but he saw that her ten emotions and eight sufferings weren't lying. The chubby woman was actually telling the truth—no, at least her sadness was true.

"I pity your mother, but I'm also going to use the pure lifespan to save someone," Li Huowang said and stood up.

The chubby woman panicked when she saw that Li Huowang was going to leave. "I can exchange something for those pure lifespan! You can just tell me what you need! As long as you can give me the pure lifespan, I'll give you anything that you want!"

"I don't need anything. Sorry, but please do not bother me anymore. Things are going to get ugly for the both of us if you keep on following me!"

Li Huowang turned around and started walking toward the stairs.

"Your wife is a shaman, am I right?" the chubby woman said.

Li Huowang came to halt.

"Those who were forced to become shamans are doomed to live terrible lives. If you give me the five pure lifespan, I can get rid of the Immortal families that are in a contract with her!"

Li Huowang turned around and stared solemnly at the chubby woman. Again, her ten emotions and eight sufferings weren't lying. It seemed that she did have a method to get rid of the Immortal families.

Since Bai Lingmiao was forced to become a shaman during one of their journeys, the Immortal families had always been a threat to them.

Five pure lifespans, or getting rid of the Immortal families. It was a difficult choice.

While Li Huowang was hesitating, the Second Deity suddenly walked up the stairs and approached Li Huowang. Then, she whispered something into Li Huowang's ears.

"What did you say?!" Li Huowang was shocked. "That's important. Why did you only tell me that now?"

Li Huowang then cast his gaze upon the plump woman, and his face was no longer as solemn as earlier. "Fine! Once we get to Shangjing, I will give you the five pure lifespan in exchange for you getting rid of the Immortal families!"

Li Huowang had never thought that they would hide something so important from him, which was the fact that the Immortal families had threatened Bai Lingmiao and forced her to work.

Li Huowang was certain that Bai Lingmiao wouldn't have told him if it hadn't been for the plump woman's proposal.

The plump woman was delighted, and she immediately nodded as if she was afraid that he would back out of the deal. "All right! Let's do it!"

Li Huowang told the chubby woman to go to Shangjing first, but she refused and insisted on following him, saying that she was afraid that Li Huowang might run away.

Li Huowang didn't manage to get even a single good night's sleep on the continuation of their journey. Fortunately, the remainder of the journey remained uneventful, and they arrived safely at Shangjing.

By the time they made it to Shangjing, Li Huowang's wounds had healed to the extent that people could now recognize him.

"I'll bring my carriage to my house first. Wait for me at the gate," Li Huowang said. He learned of the chubby woman's name during their journey to Shangjing, and her name was Lian Zhibei.

"No worries. I'll go there with you. I'm not really familiar with the roads here, so I need you to bring me around, too," Lian Zhibei said. She was still afraid that he'd run away and refused to part from him.

Li Huowang knew that she was lying, but he couldn't care less. He turned around and faced Bai Lingmiao, saying, "You guys should go ahead and head back first. I'll return soon."

And just like that, the team was split into two.

Li Huowang carried the wooden box containing the corpse of the spiritual sin into the halls of the Surveillance Bureau. Nangong saw them walking in together and asked, "Oh, did the both of you take it down together?"

"Nope." Li Huowang handed over the box to Nangong and said, "This is the mission objective. Give me the rewards now."

"Wait," Lian Zhibei said. She took the box away and explained, "The mission was from the palace. We will give it directly to the mission giver."

"It's the same thing. If you give it to me, I will pass it to them. I will then pass the reward to you once they've given the rewards to me. Of course, it's going to take a while."

"Don't even bother explaining yourself," Lian Zhibei exclaimed, "I know that you and eunuchs here are pilfering lifespan pills from us mission takers!"

"You have to listen to me," Lian Zhibei said, turning to Li Huowang, "It's better if you hand this over to the palace yourself. Otherwise, the eunuchs here would take a part of your reward as a service fee. Perhaps you'd get less than five pure lifespan!"

Nangon didn't even attempt to defend himself against the allegations. When Li Huowang saw Nangong's silence, he realized that Lian Zhibei wasn't lying. With that, he took the box back from Lian Zhibei and said, "Fine, let's go to the palace, then."

Five pure lifespan was a small price to pay in exchange for the Immortal families' disappearance.

Chapter 482 - New Emperor

An hour later, Li Huowang finally arrived at the palace. As always, the towering red walls and the guards stationed on them were still exuding an oppressive aura.

Li Huowang hated the place, so he picked up the pace. He just wanted to get his rewards as soon as possible.

A eunuch guided them into the palace. Li Huowang had already come here once, but he still couldn't memorize the winding paths. It was as confusing as a maze, and he took so many turns that he felt dizzy.

This time, Li Huowang didn't see a golden palace. In other words, he was not heading into the middle of the palace but somewhere on its flank. Li Huowang recalled Liu Zongyuan's words. He said that the emperor was dying at the time, so the emperor must be deep in the ground by now.

While Li Huowang was thinking idly, the eunuch stopped in front of an arched gate.

"We're here. The director is here," said the eunuch in a feminine voice.

"The director used to be part of the Surveillance Bureau, so it shouldn't be that difficult to talk to him," Lian Zhibei said. Clearly, she was familiar with the director.

The two walked through the arched gate, and Lian Zhibei took the initiative to show Li Huowang the path. She appeared to be very familiar with the place. Soon, they reached the treasury and found the director of eunuchs.

"Oh, why are you guys so late? Has the Surveillance Bureau actually become this incompetent? It's been three months since the mission was posted. A spiritual sin is the final material that we need, and the Imperial Preceptor has been waiting for it for a while now. He's been urging us to find it every day!"

"Sir Zao, you used to work in the Surveillance Bureau, and I'm sure you know that a spiritual sin isn't that easy to obtain. We had to work very hard just to track it down. Here, look at how fresh it is," Lian Zhibei said. She was a social butterfly, so the eunuch with the surname Zao was soon smiling from ear to ear.

Soon, a piece of paper with a red stamp was handed over to them. Lian Zhibei accepted it with shaking hands.

"You know where to claim the rewards, right? I hope you don't need me to explain it," said the eunuch before ignoring them outright. He wrote something and burned it inside a bronze urn.

The smoke rose and drifted out of the window. Sir Zao's face relaxed greatly afterward. Sir Zao then ordered the rest of the eunuchs to retrieve a jade plate encrusted with agate. Then, he ordered them to place the spiritual sin's carcass on the jade plate.

"We will leave you to your matters now." Lian Zhibei smiled and took away the piece of paper with a red stamp.

"We're not going to retrieve the rewards here?"

"No. We have to go to the vault to exchange for it. Let's go. Did you bring some silver? It's easier to deal with the higher-ups than the little ghosts[1] whose greed is infinite."

"Why is it so tedious to do business here?" Li Huowang asked, frowning.

Lian Zhibei was about to retort when someone abruptly shouted, "The emperor is here~!"

Lian Zhibei's face paled. She ran toward a corner of the wall and knelt with her forehead pressed firmly against the ground.

However, Li Huowang did not bother kneeling for the new emperor. He stood next to Lian Zhibei and sunk his body image into the ground, becoming invisible.

“Long live the emperor~!”

“Long live the emperor~!”

“Long live the emperor~!”

After the three chants, Li Huowang finally saw the emperor. The emperor was wearing black royal robes and a golden crown with veils. Numerous courtesans and eunuchs walked down slowly behind him.

Li Huowang narrowed his eyes and was surprised to see the emperor's face. He had seen the emperor before, and he was none other than the boy who had approached Bai Lingmiao during that festival. As far as Li Huowang could remember, the boy had bought a fake jade cat at the time.

The emperor walked slowly past Li Huowang, allowing the latter to confirm that the boy he had seen at the time was indeed the new emperor.

He's the new emperor?! Li Huowang thought. He truly could have never expected that the new emperor would be that boy who had courted ladies nonstop during that festival. Well, it's normal behavior for a boy, I guess.

Li Huowang was acquainted with the new emperor, but he had no intentions of befriending the latter. The emperor seat of the Liang Kingdom had changed owners three times in just a few months, so Li Huowang was convinced that it was the most dangerous job in the world.

Li Huowang was still invisible as he stared at the procession walking past him. Just as he thought nothing could go wrong, an old man walking beside the emperor suddenly glared in Li Huowang's direction. “Who's there?!”

The emperor was immediately surrounded by the courtesans and eunuchs. Then, several guards appeared out of nowhere and surrounded Li Huowang.

The guards were about to thrust their weapons in Li Huowang's direction when he emerged and raised the Surveillance Bureau's identity plate.

Everyone came to a screeching halt, but a tense atmosphere shrouded them. The guards had no idea what to do, as Li Huowang didn't seem like someone who was trying to assassinate the emperor. If he wanted to assassinate the emperor, why was he invisible and staring at the emperor?

The guards turned to the Imperial Preceptor.

"Who are you? Why are you here?!" the Imperial Preceptor roared. He was strong, so a mere sentence made Li Huowang feel suffocated, and he could hardly move. Li Huowang could swear that he had never felt this way since he became a fake Hong Zhong.

Li Huowang looked up at the old man and recognized him. The old man before him had been fighting alongside the previous emperor with a special sword in hand.

Lian Zhibei finally made a move and showed them the paper in her hand before explaining, "We're here on behalf of the Surveillance Bureau, but we should be executed for scaring the emperor!"

Everyone sighed after learning that it was all a misunderstanding.

The Imperial Preceptor looked at an old eunuch with dissatisfaction. "Is this how you do things? How can the official members of the Surveillance Bureau be allowed to enter the palace —"

"It's you!" someone exclaimed, interrupting the Imperial Preceptor.

The new emperor walked out from the crowd and walked up to Li Huowang, but two old eunuchs stopped him before he could even walk two steps toward Li Huowang.

Even after getting intercepted by the eunuchs, the emperor looked up and waved at Li Huowang. “Were you surprised? You couldn't have known that I was the emperor, could you?”

“I greet the emperor,” Li Huowang said with a bow. He retreated, but the emperor clearly didn't want Li Huowang to leave his side.

“Hey, I really need to thank you. They would have tricked me successfully if it hadn't been for you! Anyway, just let me know what official post you would like to have.”

“Preposterous! This is nonsense!” the Imperial Preceptor scolded.

The emperor grimaced, and he became much more docile. He was the emperor, but it was clear that there were some things that he couldn't influence.

“My lord, do you remember what day it is today?” asked the Imperial Preceptor.

The emperor stood up straight and answered, “The tributes have been prepared, and we are heading to the imperial temple to pray to the previous emperor.”

“Correct.” The Imperial Preceptor closed his heavy eyelids and said nothing else.

The emperor was not someone who'd throw a tantrum after getting scolded by the Imperial Preceptor. Moreover, he was pleased with Li Huowang's appearance. “You can follow me. Let's talk about what I said to you just now once we're done.”

The Imperial Preceptor's lips quivered, but he said nothing. However, he was planning on telling the Empress Dowager about the emperor's bad behavior.

Li Huowang wanted to decline, but the eunuchs had surrounded him. He couldn't leave at all. He glanced at the Imperial Preceptor's back and decided that it was unwise to fight back. He did not expect this to happen, but it wasn't a bad thing to become the emperor's friend. Of course, this wasn't the best time to become one.

Li Huowang followed the procession and walked around the palace.

The emperor turned around from time to time, as he was curious about Li Huowang, especially after the latter's help to the emperor during that festival. However, Li Huowang clearly looked like he couldn't wait to leave the emperor's side.

After all, Bai Lingmiao was still waiting for him outside.

Li Huowang initially thought that they would go straight to the imperial temple, but they headed straight to the treasury instead!

Sir Zao was already waiting with the eunuchs under his care, and they all greeted the emperor upon his arrival at the treasury.

A grand table was before them, and seven jade plates the size of a basin were placed neatly in a row on the table. The plates contained many different items.

There was a translucent jade-like flower bud, a pulsating white chicken egg, and a scepter made out of flesh. The final jade plate was unique, as it was empty, but there were wisps of black smoke would appear on it from time to time.

Li Huowang instantly identified what was on the plate. The final plate contained the carcass of the spiritual sin that he had killed! To think that the evil entity he had worked hard to track and kill would end up being used to pray to a dead emperor!

Li Huowang suddenly felt like his efforts had been in vain. No wonder the emperor arrived the moment he submitted the corpse of the spiritual sin. The emperor had been waiting for it.

"Take everything." A row of eunuchs bent down and took the jade plates. Then, they raised the plates high above their heads and followed the procession toward the imperial temple.

Ten minutes later, Li Huowang caught a whiff of incense sticks. They'd soon arrive at the imperial temple. Aside from the fact that it was more majestic than the ordinary temples outside, the imperial temple didn't really look special.

However, the emperor's expression became solemn when they reached the imperial temple. He bowed ceremoniously toward the temple before walking into it with procession behind him.

The temple was big and had rows of candles inside of it, which made its temperature higher than the outside world. There were a few old eunuchs at the corner of the walls, and they were both blind and deaf. They chanted sutras and were hitting a wooden fish incessantly day and night.

The emperor kneeled on the cushion facing the rows of ancestral tablets housed in the temple, but he was pulled back by one of the older eunuchs.

“Hm? Are we not praying here today?” the emperor asked.

The emperor's reaction made Li Huowang realize that the emperor had no idea what was going on.

The old eunuch whispered something into the emperor's ears, and the emperor stood up unwillingly. Then, he brought the group of people behind him toward the back of the altar.

The yellow drapes behind the altar were pulled open, and a regal door made from black stone with nine massive dragons engraved on it appeared before everyone.

The eunuchs pushed the door open, and a cold sensation ran down everyone's spine.

The courtesans stopped walking, and only the men walked into the door.

Even Lian Zhibei couldn't enter and had to wait outside.

Are we inside the true ancestral hall of the Liang Kingdom's imperial family? Li Huowang finally understood what was happening. However, he still had many burning questions in his mind as he walked into the chamber. The chamber was massive, and the sound of everyone's footsteps echoed loudly inside of it.

The space was shaped like a funnel; the walls were tall, while the floor was narrow.

The treasures of the imperial family were within the chamber, and everything was golden—from the massive coffin at the center of the space to the nine golden dragons at the summit of everything.

A chain was tied to each of the nine golden dragons, and they were suspending a golden coffin in the middle of the chamber.

Li Huowang was speechless.

The nine dragons pulling the coffin?[\[1\]](#) Li Huowang surmised. However, he felt something amiss. Rather than pulling the coffin, it was more like the dragons were trying to pull it apart.

“This is such a massive place,” the emperor said, looking around with wonder. He had just started his sightseeing when an old eunuch guided him on what to do next. He placed the seven plates of tributes on the floor before bowing three times and kneeling nine times toward the coffin.

Li Huowang thought that he had to do the same, but he realized that everyone wasn't moving. Maybe we're not qualified to pray?

“The late emperor is buried here. Why is he not buried in the imperial tomb?” The Sitting Oblivion Dao's illusion was curious as well.

Li Huowang was staring at the luxurious coffin when he noticed something amiss.

While the Liang emperor was praying, the golden coffin started moving, and the coffin lid moved slowly, seemingly opening up!

“Father?” The emperor was shocked. The coffin was lower than the floor, so everyone could see what was inside of it. “Father!”

The emperor ran toward the coffin, but a few old eunuchs stopped him. “What are you guys doing? My father is still alive! Why have you imprisoned him?!”

“My lord, this is the Dragon Vein! It’s the foundation of our kingdom! We must not defile it!”

Li Huowang finally saw it. The previous emperor, who had fought the Sitting Oblivion Dao, was bound by chains engraved with dragons. The previous emperor was wearing royal robes, but the robes couldn't hide his strange appearance.

Li Huowang saw the previous emperor's dark gold scales and dragon whiskers. More importantly, Li Huowang realized that the old emperor was not alone. He was on top of someone else, and the individual behind him was also on top of someone else behind them. Their fleshly bodies had been fused together to create a bizarre human chain. The corpses in the coffin were the corpses of the previous emperors!

The coffin was dark and deep, seemingly unending. The previous emperors were suspended in the empty space by chains. The chain of emperors was in mid-air rather than on the floor.

Just then, Li Huowang noticed that the chain of human corpses was moving. They were struggling and moving as if they wanted to break free from their restraints. They all looked like dragons yearning to escape their bondage.

Chapter 484 - Ji Lin

Li Huowang's hair stood on end, feeling that he had seen something he was not supposed to see.

Will the imperial family kill me to protect this secret? Li Huowang thought about the worst-case scenario. He raised his guard, and the cogs in his mind churned rapidly, thinking of what could happen to him.

Fortunately, Zhuge Yuan spoke just in time, stopping him from doing anything rash by saying, “Junior Li, don’t worry. Everyone knows that the imperial family has a dragon vein, but I didn’t think that the Dragon Vein of the Liang Kingdom would look like this. Maybe this was why the fake Liang Kingdom was capable of destroying the Qi Kingdom.”

In the end, nothing happened to Li Huowang, and he was still in the chamber filled with a golden light.

The only change was the expression of the Emperor of the Liang Kingdom, and he even roared, “Are you all deaf? Save my father! I am the emperor, and you will not defy my orders!”

However, the old eunuchs merely trembled on the ground without heeding his words.

“Cough, cough. Lin’er ...” A voice filled with fatigue and pain made the current emperor stare at the first body of the Dragon Vein. “Lin’er, don’t be too harsh on them. I was the one who told them to do this. Cough cough...”

Li Huowang finally knew the name of the current emperor. Since the imperial family of the Liang Kingdom went by the surname Ji, the current emperor's name had to be Ji Lin.

Li Huowang could still remember the name of the previous emperor, and he had heard it from the individual he had escorted to the execution grounds long ago. The previous emperor's name was Ji Song.

“But, Father, why?! You're still alive!” Ji Lin exclaimed. As the chains sunk deeper into his father's flesh, Ji Lin felt as if he were experiencing the same pain as his father, and tears welled up in his eyes.

Ji Song's voice became weak as if he didn't want the others to listen to him talking, but Li Huowang heard it clearly with his keen ears.

“This is the only way to protect the Liang Kingdom's luck. You'll come to learn about this once you've become as old as me.”

“Father, but ...” Ji Lin was in a daze. He didn't know what to say.

“I died, but the Dragon Qi brought me back to life. It's only when I'm dead that you can ascend to the throne. You should be happy about this.”

Ji Song pulled on one of the chains and moved to the side of the coffin. Then, he extended his hands covered in scales and had claws for nails to pull Ji Lin close to him. Ji Song's voice was stern as he said, “Do you want to know why I handed over the throne to you rather than to the eldest prince?”

“I do not know.” Ji Lin sobbed.

“Because you're ruthless! To win my affection, you were actually ruthless enough to poison your own brother! The other princes can never be as ruthless as you! But you're not ruthless enough... if I were you, I would have used a stronger poison.” Ji Song's voice became cold as he said, “Once you're out of here, you must kill all of your brothers.”

“What?!” Ji Lin's face became pale. If it weren't for his father tugging at his robes, he would have slumped to the ground.

“Of course, you can choose to do nothing, but you should blame yourself when the others start making their moves to acquire the throne. After all, they have many loyal officers by their side.

"You're the emperor, but the official ceremony has yet to be conducted. Everything can still change. Remember—if you want to become the supreme ruler, then you must be ruthless enough to kill even your brothers!"

It sounds like the previous emperor is trying to raise a Gu. Li Huowang frowned. The most ruthless individual would become the next emperor. Would a ruthless emperor truly be able to lead their subjects to prosperity?

"I want you to remember this, Lin'er. The ruler is always alone. If you want to become a ruler, you must not trust anyone else, even your own mother."

Ji Song let go of Ji Lin's robes and sank slowly into the coffin. The golden coffin lid then closed with a deep rumble. The mausoleum became solemn and silent once again. Everyone could hear Ji Lin's rapid breathing amidst the silence.

The chamber was cold, but he was sweating nonstop.

"We welcome the gods! And we shall give space!" one of the old eunuchs shouted, and the rest moved busily. They all faced the coffin being pulled by the nine golden dragons and started performing a complicated ritual.

Li Huowang stood at the side, staring at what was happening.

Soon the ritual was over, and the eunuchs left in a row. They didn't even wait for the emperor to stand up.

Li Huowang watched as Ji Lin slowly stood back up before following the last of the eunuchs out.

He's probably going to make many difficult decisions soon, and he probably won't have the time to bother with me. Once Li Huowang made it back to the warm temple filled with candles, he truly felt like he had just come back from the land of the dead.

Li Huowang was about to regroup with Lian Zhimei when a fierce voice echoed behind him. "Ji Zai!"

Ji Zai? Li Huowang froze and looked at Zhuge Yuan before remembering that "Ji Zai" was the name that Zhuge Yuan had bestowed upon him long ago. Someone's calling me?

"Don't worry, Junior Li. The Imperial Preceptor will never be able to peer over my spell, so there's no way he can peek at your past through divination."

Li Huowang cast a thankful look at Zhuge Yuan before turning around. He walked towards the Imperial Preceptor with confidence.

"Ji Zai greets the Imperial Preceptor!" Li Huowang bowed seriously to the Imperial Preceptor.

"Since you're a Seventh Banner of the Surveillance Bureau, you should know that some things are left unsaid, right?" the Imperial Preceptor asked. Then, he gestured with his fingers, trying to divine Li Huowang's past.

"Yes," Li Huowang replied curtly. He stood ramrod straight, and he wasn't surprised that the Imperial Preceptor was thinking of a way to make him not talk about what he had seen today. Li Huowang would have found it suspicious otherwise.

"Ji Zai, you're from the Ao Jing Sect, so why did you join the Surveillance Bureau? I thought you idiots had isolated yourself from society to pursue your dreams of becoming an Immortal?"

At the question, Li Huowang used the same excuse he had used last time. Of course, Li Huowang had no intentions of lying to the Imperial Preceptor, and he also believed wholeheartedly that his goal was to avenge the elders of the Ao Jing Sect by killing their killers from the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

Chapter 485 - Relic

“Hm ...” The Imperial Preceptor nodded and stroked his white beard at Li Huowang’s response.

Li Huowang wasn't sure whether the Imperial Preceptor believed him or not. All he knew was that he was certain he couldn't run away since the Imperial Preceptor was much stronger than him.

He was thinking of a way to say goodbye, so he could leave as soon as possible, but the Imperial Preceptor said, “The emperor regards you highly, so you should consider yourself lucky. Make sure to seize the chance properly.”

“Yes!” Li Huowang wasn't really sure whether he was lucky or not. He wasn't even sure if Ji Lin could successfully ascend the throne, as the other princes were making a move behind the scenes.

“Go and work diligently. The Liang Kingdom needs people like you.” The Imperial Preceptor patted Li Huowang’s shoulder.

Li Huowang felt something sharp entering his shoulder before rushing to the base of his tongue. He instantly deduced that it was some kind of seal to prevent him from talking about what he had seen today. It seems that the Imperial Preceptor still doesn't trust me despite threatening me.

However, he didn't mind it. He never wanted to talk about it, to begin with. If he were to do so, he'd find himself in a quagmire of endless trouble.

“Yes. I understand. I'm leaving, then.” Li Huowang bowed and exited the imperial temple. It was only when he left the red-colored palace wall with Lian Zhimei and the lifespan pills that he sighed in relief.

He looked back at the oppressive palace and was convinced that he truly hated them—both the palace and the city. It was as if the entire city was eating people constantly behind the scenes.

It took quite a while, but they still managed to obtain what they needed.

Knowing that the princes were going to scheme against each other soon, Li Huowang was certain that Shangjing would become chaotic pretty soon. He decided to finish his tasks and leave Shangjing as soon as possible.

Li Huowang didn't even consider helping Ji Lin to secure the throne. While Ji Lin was kind to him and appeared to be suitable to befriend, there was no way Li Huowang would risk his life for him. They had only met once, and Ji Lin didn't seem like someone suitable to be the emperor.

"Time to honor your words." Li Huowang looked at Lian Zhibei, who was holding the jade plate with excitement.

Pure lifespan couldn't be made into lifespan pills, and someone had to infuse it directly into the recipient. The jade plate was proof that the holder was entitled to pure lifespan.

"Of course! I'll keep my word!" Lian Zhibei exclaimed. Then, she turned around to leave.

"Where are you going?" Li Huowang asked, stopping her.

"Of course, I'm going to bring my mother here so that he'll get her pure lifespan. Wasn't that what we had agreed upon?"

Li Huowang took back the jade plate and explained, "Bring your mother here and find me. Be quick; if you don't come here in a month, I will give the jade plate to my wife."

"No, wait, you still don't trust me even though we are at Shangjing? Do I need to give my identity plate to you as collateral?" Lian Zhibei begged.

But Li Huowang didn't even bother negotiating with her. He shook the jade plate in front of her before walking towards the Surveillance Bureau.

There was no way he was going to fall for that.

Back in the vault, Li Huowang spared no time to talk to the eunuch with coins for eyes. He poured out four hundred lifespan pills without any hesitation and said, “I want you to exchange these for the relic we talked about last time! Be quick!”

The relic was inside a seven-layer pagoda. The eunuch opened the pagodas one by one until they reached the final layer, which contained a glimmering box made from agate. The box was translucent, and Li Huowang immediately saw the relic filled with holy light. It was a small piece of human bone, which glimmered strangely like a gem.

“A relic is a human bone? You need to eat a human bone to get the mind’s eye?” Li Huowang asked, casting a doubtful look at the eunuch. Eating a human bone did not seem like a holy thing to do.

“Please be at ease, esteemed customer. This is the last remaining. The first six have been redeemed by others, and they all said that it was fine. But I need to remind you again that only the kind can use it!”

“Fine, I get it. You didn't have to say that again. You're getting pretty annoying,” Li Huowang said. He was busy thinking about how he could persuade Bai Lingmiao to swallow the bone.

Bai Lingmiao was still traumatized by her experience in the Zephyr Temple, and she refused to eat anything human to the point that she wouldn't even take "normal" pills.

Li Huowang carried with him the box with the relic and two roasted geese before returning home. He was relieved to see that Bai Lingmiao was feeling her way in the darkness. In other words, she had become completely blind and couldn't see that the relic was a human bone.

“Senior Li, you're back?” Bai Lingmiao looked tired as she walked slowly toward Li Huowang.

“How did you know it was me?” Li Huowang asked, placing the roasted geese wrapped in lotus leaves on the table.

"I could hear you, and I recognize your footsteps too. Senior Li, I discovered that my hearing has become so much better when I lost my vision."

Li Huowang approached her and gently guided her to a chair. "Miaomiao, don't worry. I have a way of letting you see again."

Li Huowang took out the agate box as well as a gourd full of water. "Come, open your mouth."

"Senior Li, what kind of miraculous pill are you going to make me eat? To think it can let me see again," Bai Lingmiao said. She was curious and was looking forward to it, so she immediately opened her mouth.

Li Huowang did not answer as he placed the relic on the base of her tongue. "Don't chew. Swallow it whole and take it with rainwater."

Once the rainwater entered Bai Lingmiao's mouth, she coughed out of surprise. Li Huowang patted her back in a hurry. Amidst their panicking, neither of them noticed the golden swastika flashing on Bai Lingmiao's chest.

Eventually, Bai Lingmiao felt better and frowned. "Senior Li, what was—"

Bai Lingmiao stopped mid-sentence as she realized that she could see once again. To be more precise, she couldn't see with her eyes, but she could see everyone's Qi, allowing her to see the outline of the chair, stool, Li Sui, and the outlines of the two short trees in the courtyard.

It was a profound feeling that she couldn't quite describe. She felt like everything within a certain radius had been carved in her heart.

"Senior Li?"

Bai Lingmiao stared at the weird humanoid blob before her, and the humanoid blob was the only different "thing" in her "vision." The humanoid blob flickered in and out of existence and was quivering violently. Moreover, there were afterimages that converged and diverged from time to time around the blob[1].

1. She can see his illusions! 📌

Chapter 486 - Arrival

"Senior Li, is that you?" Bai Lingmiao reached out to touch the blob before her, and the blob coalesced into that familiar face. Bai Lingmiao smiled at the sight. It seemed she still needed to get used to this ability.

"Miaomiao, can you see now? Can you really see me?!" Li Huowang exclaimed, staring into her eyes.

"I don't know if this counts as seeing, but... at least I can do the things that I could do before. At least I'm not a burden anymore," Bai Lingmiao said. She stood up and spun around to savor the miracle.

In addition to seeing the external appearances of everything around her, she could even see inside some of them. Her vision was especially clear whenever she focused on living organisms. For example, she could clearly "see" the bugs and ants on the short trees outside the courtyard.

Bai Lingmiao soon reveled in this new-found feeling. Her "vision" was strange, but it was much better than being blind.

"Senior Li, I can see, I really can see! Thank you so much!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed with a joyful look.

When Li Huowang saw her smile, he felt that all the hardships that he had gone through so far were worth it. Through his efforts, the conditions of the people around him were improving gradually.

"All right, rest," Li Huowang said while staring at Bai Lingmiao, who was still turning around like a white butterfly. "You're going to feel dizzy if you keep spinning."

Li Huowang opened the two roast geese wrapped in lotus leaves on the table. "Come! Let's celebrate your healed eyes with roast goose today! I heard that they roast their geese here with lychee wood; the taste is apparently great, too.

"It's one of the specialty dishes of the capital."

"Dad, I want some, too."

"Sure, go get yourself a bowl and chopsticks."

The family of three ate with relish until they were interrupted by knocking on the door.

"Are you there, Er Jiu? It's me, Lian Zhibei."

Li Huowang frowned upon hearing the familiar voice. Wasn't she supposed to pick up her mother and bring her here? What is she trying to do?

Li Huowang pushed open the door, and the middle-aged plump woman wasted no time, immediately going to the point. "I was actually just hesitant earlier. Actually, it's not necessary for me to bring my mother over here. I can break the connection between your wife and the Immortal families here. Give me that jade plate and consider it done."

Li Huowang was about to say something when he heard footsteps behind him.

"Senior Li, she's actually here? How about inviting her to eat roast goose with us?" Bai Lingmiao said in a good-natured way.

Meanwhile, the Second Deity whispered something into her ears.

"Why do you want me to go in? Isn't she a guest?" asked Bai Lingmiao.

"Miaomiao, you go in first. It's definitely not something bad," Li Huowang said.

Since Li Huowang had said the same thing as the Second Deity, Bai Lingmiao could only nod and turn around to leave.

"You're done talking with them? If so, let's get started!" Lian Zhibei exclaimed. She raised her foot and was about to walk into the house but was stopped by Li Huowang's hand. Li Huowang stared quietly at the Second Deity. After a long time, he asked, "You know what this means to you, right?"

"I know. I'll be able to merge with Miaomiao as soon as the connection between her and the Immortal families is severed." The Second Deity's voice echoed from under the red veil.

The Second Deity was not lying, but Li Huowang's feelings toward the Second Deity were complicated.

Should I treat her as her own individual or as a part of Bai Lingmiao? If I do the former, wouldn't allowing her to merge with Bai Lingmiao be the same as killing her? Li Huowang thought.

Just then, the Second Deity spoke once again. "If her connection with the Immortal families is not severed, wouldn't it be like harboring a danger that might erupt at any moment? Would you want to live like that?

"I'm sure Miaomiao would disagree, but I'll persuade her, so don't worry."

"Come on, let's do it. How do you want it to happen? Hey, respond. You're driving me crazy!" Lian Zhibei chimed in, sounding worried that Li Huowang would change his mind.

"Let's go. This way," the Second Deity said, allowing Lian Zhibei into the house.

"All right. Hey, just wait here. I'll make sure your wife is ready," Lian Zhibei said, following the Second Deity into the house.

The oil lamp in the room was lit, and the light illuminated Bai Lingmiao's nervous face. It was her first time seeing Lian Zhibei, but she still felt uncomfortable being alone with a stranger.

"Miss, what are you standing there for? Hurry up and take off your clothes."

"Ah? I... have to... take my clothes off?" Bai Lingmiao muttered hesitantly. Li Huowang had told her to follow Lian Zhibei's instructions, but she still felt hesitant to show her birthday suit to a stranger.

"Of course, don't be embarrassed. We're all women here. Hurry up.”

“Oh...” Bai Lingmiao muttered. Then, she started unbuttoning her clothes. And that was when Lian Zhibei rushed to her side and leaned closer to her ear, whispering, “The curtain toward the jade peak hides the night snow behind the curtain. The blue water grows the long autumn moss...”

Bai Lingmiao was startled by Lian Zhibei's whisper, and she took several steps backward, muttering, “What... what was that?”

“You don’t know? Really?” Lian Zhibei asked excitedly.

“Know what?” Li Huowang’s voice echoed from behind Lian Zhibei, and the latter's heart trembled upon hearing it. The next moment, she turned around and cast an impatient look at Li Huowang. “Did I not tell you to wait outside? Why did you follow us here? We're still in the middle of preparations.”

“She’s my wife, so is there something wrong with me helping her undress? Why must I avoid her?” LI Huowang retorted.

“She's fine, but I need to undress, too. What, am I your wife?” Lian Zhibei asked, taking off her shirt, which revealed her bulging belly wrapped in yellow inner wear.

Li Huowang stared deeply at Lian Zhibei and enunciated every single word as he said, “You. Better. Not. Cause. Any. Unnecessary. Trouble!”

With that, Li Huowang turned to the shy Bai Lingmiao and said, “I’ll be outside. I can hear everything that happens inside, so just call out my name if there are any issues.”

“Okay..”

Li Huowang opened the door and pulled Li Sui into the room. “Keep an eye on that chubby woman. Bite her if she does anything strange!”

“Yes, Dad.”

Li Huowang finally left the room. Lian Zhibei's ambiguous words just now definitely weren't part of the so-called

"preparations." Judging from her tone and demeanor earlier, those words seemed more like some kind of code.

It seemed that Lian Zhibei had ulterior motives. If it weren't for the fact that she actually had a way to help Bai Lingmiao get rid of the Immortal families, he wouldn't have allowed her to have much contact with Bai Lingmiao.

Li Huowang waited for quite a while before the two finally emerged from the room. Lian Zhibei was carrying a big bundle of something in her arms, and Li Huowang had no idea where she had stashed that earlier.

Of course, Li Huowang couldn't care less, as his full attention was on Bai Lingmiao. Bai Lingmiao was wearing nothing except for a yellow paper inner wear.

Bai Lingmiao's figure was as white as a mutton tallow, and many different crooked and twisted characters were drawn with red cinnabar on her figure. The white and red colors intertwined, creating a bizarre but strangely enchanting image.

Chapter 487 - Change

Li Huowang had seen many things in this crazy world, but Li Huowang had no idea what Lian Zhibei was going to use to sever Bai Lingmiao's connection with the Immortal families.

Bai Lingmiao seemed particularly shy about her attire to the point where her ears even turned red. Her hands covered her front, but they couldn't conceal her back at the same time.

"Miss, why are you shrinking? Stand up straight," Lian Zhibei urged.

Bai Lingmiao stood up straight. Lian Zhibei took out three incense sticks and inserted them into the door frame. She then knelt down on both knees and kowtowed toward the door several times.

Afterward, she lit one of the incense sticks and bowed three times toward the door before raising the smoking incense and thrusting it toward her own cheeks.

An incessant crackling noise echoed as the dark red incense pierced her left cheek and emerged from the right side of her face. Lian Zhibei's voice became coarse as she exclaimed. "Tiger God, arise!"

Lian Zhibei lifted a hook-shaped tool, and it emitted a cold gleam in her hand as she pierced her upper and lower lips. Drops of bright red blood fell and landed on the paper talisman covering her belly.

Li Huowang frowned deeply at the sight. Lian Zhibei's self harm seemed somewhat similar to the practices of the Ao Jing Sect. Could she be a member of one of Ao Jing Sect's branches?

While Li Huowang was deep in thought, Lian Zhibei pulled out a row of large red firecrackers from her large bundle. She lit one of the firecrackers with the incense from her cheekbone, and crackling noises filled the room.

The white smoke from the incense intertwined with the murky smoke from the firecrackers, covering the entire room in a murky mist. Lian Zhibei then grabbed a piece of wood from her bundle and raised it up high into the air before slamming it forcefully on the ground, “The sound of battle resounds through the rivers and seas! The divine light bursts forth, and the Tiger God shall accept this explosion!”

A deep roar akin to a tiger's roar echoed, and the murky mist quickly rolled toward Lian Zhibei's open mouth.

Soon, the firecrackers vanished, and Lian Zhibei's eyes became completely white as she collapsed to the ground. Her plump figure contorted into positions that a normal person couldn't possibly do.

Li Huowang instinctively drew his purple-tassel sword at the sight, and his expression was exceptionally serious. Lian Zhibei had a nonchalant attitude to everything, and she seemed like a greenhorn, but her strength could not be underestimated at all.

After all, she was daring enough to confront such spiritual beings by herself.

Lian Zhibei opened her bleeding mouth, revealing the hook-shaped tool from earlier. The next moment, she emitted a growl, which sounded similar to a tiger's growl.

“Senior Li? Why is there a tiger in our house?” Bai Lingmiao asked, trembling as she watched Lian Zhibei on the ground.

Just then, Lian Zhibei whipped around and stared at the patterns on Bai Lingmiao's figure with her white eyes. Then, she bent her legs and pounced on Bai Lingmiao.

“What?!”

Li Huowang's bronze coin sword and Li Sui's tentacles flew to protect Bai Lingmiao, but they stopped halfway upon seeing that Lian Zhibei had flown over Bai Lingmiao's head rather than on her.

Crack!

Lian Zhibei opened her mouth wide enough that it seemed like it was going to tear apart before gnawing at something on the ground.

Bai Lingmiao grabbed her head in pain, and the cinnabar patterns on her figure trembled violently before shrinking rapidly. Li Huowang's keen hearing then caught distant screams, and he felt relieved at what he was wearing. The screams were coming from the Immortal families!

"Miaomiao, hold on!"

Whoosh!

Lian Zhibei leaped over Bai Lingmiao's head once again, viciously biting at the air. The screams of unknown origin grew louder. As Lian Zhibei passed over Bai Lingmiao's head for the fifth time, the blindfolded Bai Lingmiao sensed something amiss.

Bai Lingmiao's newfound ability had allowed her to notice that the Second Deity, who was standing in the courtyard, was becoming more and more transparent. Her special "eyes" pierced the red veil, and she shuddered at what she saw beyond the red veil.

The beastly features that belonged to the Immortal families had almost been gnawed away into nothingness. As Lian Zhibei bit and chewed, the scales, fur, and feathers vanished rapidly.

The Second Deity's face started quivering amidst everything.

"She wants to remove the Immortal families from my body! But the Second Deity will cease to exist without them!"

"Stop! Senior Li, make her stop! The Second Deity is about to vanish!" Bai Lingmiao shouted as tears streamed down her face.

"Miaomiao, don't worry. Hold on a little longer!"

Li Huowang steeled his heart before turning around and walking into the courtyard. He saw the Second Deity staring silently at a short tree. Li Huowang walked up to the Second Deity and lifted her red veil to see that half of her face was missing.

"You..." Li Huowang glanced at Bai Lingmiao inside the house, and then he turned to the vanishing Second Deity.

Lian Zhibei tugged violently at the Second Deity, which made her stagger. The Second Deity looked at him, and her only eye radiated a strong light of reluctance. "Live well, and do not let her down. Also, stop acting like a weakling in the future."

Something seemed to be vanishing from deep inside the Second Deity, and her aura gradually became similar to Bai Lingmiao's aura.

"Senior Li! She won't be able to come back! Once the Immortal families are gone, the Second Deity will suffer a true death!" Bai Lingmiao exclaimed. Her words had yet to finish echoing in mid-air when the Second Deity fell to the ground.

"Lian Zhibei, wait!" Li Huowang exclaimed, turning to Lian Zhibei. "Something's wrong!"

However, Lian Zhibei seemed to have gone mad and did not respond to him.

When Li Huowang saw Lian Zhibei leaping over Bai Lingmiao's head once again, his expression turned fierce as he dashed toward Lian Zhibei. He kicked Lian Zhibei's waist, sending her crashing onto the wall.

A furious roar resounded, and the white-eyed Lian Zhibei glared at Li Huowang. The oppressive aura that she was radiating made it difficult for Li Huowang to breathe.

"Sorry, there's something wrong! Wake up!" Li Huowang exclaimed to no avail.

Lian Zhibei stomped powerfully before charging at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang inserted his sword into his own mouth and bit down. The next moment, Li Huowang pulled out the sword and swung it toward Lian Zhibei. The sword carried with it Li Huowang's bloody teeth and the teeth flew toward Lian Zhibei's head.

Li Huowang gripped the purple-tassel sword and followed closely behind the teeth.

The room instantly became chaotic, and it became even more chaotic when Li Sui joined the battle. Soon, the battle was uncontrollable, but it was eventually under control as Li Huowang's sword pierced Lian Zhibei's chest, while Lian Zhibei's sharp teeth stripped Li Huowang's arms off of its skin.

The incense stick in Lian Zhibei's cheeks extinguished slowly, allowing Lian Zhibei to recover her sanity.

"What's going on? What's happening?" Lian Zhibei asked. She looked down at the sword sticking out of her chest, and she cast a bewildered look at Li Huowang, especially after sensing the extreme pain radiating from her wound.

Chapter 488 - Past

Li Huowang examined Lian Zhibei's injuries and said, "I'm sorry. I didn't expect it to go wrong. It's my fault. Don't move. I'll treat your injuries for you, and then I'll compensate you with a few lifespan pills."

Li Huowang supported Lian Zhibei and sat her down on a meditation chair. Then, he started preparing the Fiery Scripture.

"No, no, no, I can't withstand that," Lian Zhibei said. She pinched a talisman and used it to hold Li Huowang's sword, which the latter was about to pull out.

"We had an agreement, but you violated it. You should just give me that jade plate, and we'll be even," Lian Zhibei said amidst gritted teeth due to the extreme pain. Despite her plight, she was still more concerned about the pure lifespan rather than herself.

When Li Huowang handed her the jade plate that could be exchanged for pure lifespan, Lian Zhibei smiled despite the pain. She couldn't care less about anything else aside from the jade plate. She glanced at Bai Lingmiao before covering her wound with one hand and stumbling out.

Li Huowang looked up to see someone standing before him. It was Bai Lingmiao, and her expression was filled with sadness and concern as she stared at Li Huowang. She then walked to Li Huowang's side and opened her arms to embrace him gently.

Li Huowang trembled as he looked toward the ground. He saw only a pair of blood-red embroidered shoes and a red veil stained with blood.

"Senior Li, my connection to the Immortal families is gone, but the Second Deity is gone as well. I was too late..," Bai Lingmiao muttered. Then, she sobbed as she hugged Li Huowang.

Late at night, Li Huowang sprawled out in bed, staring wide-eyed at the ceiling. He had achieved his goals. The Immortal families could no longer control Bai Lingmiao, but he felt inexplicably downtrodden despite the great result.

“Senior Li, are you asleep?” Bai Lingmiao’s soft voice echoed.

Li Huowang took a deep breath and sighed.

“Senior Li, I’m missing the Second Deity... no matter what painful things happened in the past, she had always shared some of my burdens. She was like a sister to me...”

Li Huowang couldn’t help but feel doubtful about the decision he had made. Did I do something wrong? But if I hadn’t dealt with the Immortal families, who knows what would have happened to Bai Lingmiao?

If he had known that getting rid of the Immortal families would make the Second Deity disappear, what would he have done?

As dawn approached, Li Huowang realized that there were right and wrong in important matters. For example, the Sitting Oblivion Dao had seized the Sacred Mountain Ghost’s eye and had caused a calamity to the world, which was wrong. It was right for the Surveillance Bureau to dispatch people to eradicate the Sitting Oblivion Dao—it was a “right” endeavor, as they were doing it for the sake of the world.

However, the boundary between right and wrong was ambiguous when it came to personal feelings. There were only appropriate choices rather than absolute “right” and “wrong.”

Soon, the roosters crowed. Li Huowang had stayed up all night, and Bai Lingmiao also did not manage to get any sleep.

He got up from the bed and put on his Daoist robes, and then he started walking toward the main hall. As soon as he stepped out of his room, he saw Li Sui squatting in the center of the hall, staring at the drizzle in the courtyard outside.

“Dad.”

Li Huowang walked up to Li Sui and sat down. He looked down at the bloody wild-looking dog before Li Sui and asked, "What are you doing here?"

"I'm waiting for Second Mom. I caught this last night, and I've already eaten half of it. The other half is hers," Li Sui replied.

Li Huowang's heart felt a pang of sharp pain at Li Sui's words. He reached out and patted Li Sui before muttering, "Stop waiting for her; she's gone and will never come back."

"I know. Mom also said that Second Mom's gone. I'm waiting for her to come back. Second Mom really loves eating this," Li Sui nudged the bloody dog with his nose.

Li Huowang's lips trembled slightly. "Did you not see her disappear? She... she's gone!"

"Yeah, I saw her disappear, but Second Mom has always been like that. She comes and goes as she pleases. Don't worry about it, Dad. she'll be back soon!"

Li Huowang did not reply. He opened his arms and hugged Li Sui tightly for a long time before standing up and heading back indoors.

Steam was rising from Gao Zhijian's shirtless figure as he swung his colossal halberd up and down. His muscles were flushed red, seemingly as tough as iron, and were full of vigor.

Gao Zhijian swung his colossal halberd horizontally, kicking up a gust of wind that blew away the row of villages wielding wooden halberds before him. The villagers squinted and struggled to stand.

The colossal halberd pierced the ground. Gao Zhijian took a moment to catch his breath for a moment before exclaiming, "Practice!"

The dozen or so villagers looked at each other with puzzled looks. A short but stout man turned to the person next to him and asked, "How do we practice? Is what he's doing even humanly possible?”

“Just practice. He's been insisting on it, so just treat it as payment for the noodles that we are going to eat for lunch.”

With that, the villagers waved the wooden halberds in their hands in groups. The halberds were freshly made, and the moisture within the wood made them heavy. They trained until they could no longer lift their halberds.

However, Gao Zhijian didn't care, and his calloused hands would teach those daring enough to be lazy a harsh lesson that they would never forget. The villagers waited painstakingly and worked hard until it was high noon, signaling the end of their training.

Yang Xiaohai's call for lunch sounded like music to their ears. They rushed to the dining hall and directly went for the coveted steamed buns, which they immediately stuffed into their mouths.

They couldn't hold their bowls steadily, but they ate with relish. They grunted nonstop as they ate, so the dining hall seemed like it was full of pigs fighting for food rather than hungry people.

Meanwhile, the disciples were busy discussing the issue of food supply somewhere in the Bai Family Estate.

“Senior Zhao Wu, we need to buy some grain soon. Senior Gao Zhijian said that we need at least a hundred soldiers. However, we're all going to run out of grain to feed them at this rate.”

“I know, but now is not the time to buy grain. The prices are too high due to the Natural Disaster. Let's wait for the autumn harvest; it'll be cheaper by then.”

Yang Xiaohai muttered, “But we'd have to hold out until then...”

“How about we... reduce their numbers? So many of us can use supernatural powers, so who would dare to provoke us?” Puppy suggested.

“No!” Gao Zhijian shook his head vigorously. “Se... Se.. Senior Li said... said... said, want... want—”

“Alright, alright, I give in, don’t finish it. It’ll be dinner by the time you finish your sentence,” Puppy interrupted.

Gao Zhijian frowned and glared at Puppy before lowering his head to eat his meal before him.

“Let’s do that for now and stop quarreling about this issue. Senior Li has also left some gold for us to use. I’ll exchange some of it for silver later,” Chun Xiaoman said. Just like that, everyone ate with relish once more, as the matter was resolved so easily.

However, someone noticed Chun Xiaoman’s annoyed look throughout the meal.

After the meal, Chun Xiaoman decided to go to the shrine, but Gao Zhijian appeared before her and stammered, “I-I-I have money... if... if the... the... the... village... village... village... is short... short... short of money... look... look for... me!”

“You have money? Where did you get it?” Chun Xiaoman asked, looking surprised.

“I-I-I... in the past...”

“You used to be a rich man?” Chun Xiaoman asked.

Gao Zhijian’s face turned red out of embarrassment. He had no idea how to explain it through words, so he squatted and started drawing on the ground.

Chapter 489 - Gao Zhijian'S Background

Gao Zhijian effortlessly parted the compact soil with his iron-like fingers, leaving behind traces as though they were plowed.

“What are you drawing?” Chun Xiaoman frowned at Gao Zhijian squatting on the ground. “Why don’t you write? I’ve been learning some characters in secret.”

Gao Zhijian glanced at her before shaking his head.

“Hey! What do you mean? Are you looking down on me?”

Chun Xiaoman shoved Gao Zhijian.

However, Gao Zhijian merely smiled and shook his head.

“Is this a snake? Did you use to sell snake medicine?”

“Dragon...” Gao Zhijian said in a low voice. As Gao Zhijian's fingers moved, a huge coiled dragon appeared before Chun Xiaoman. Gao Zhijian then drew a person sitting beneath the dragon.

“Emperor!” Gao Zhijian pointed at the person, and then he drew piles of gold ingots next to the so-called emperor. Afterward, he drew a few tiny figures next to the emperor. He drew a figure at the end and patted himself. “Me!”

“You're the emperor's son?!” Chun Xiaoman asked with wide eyes.

Gao Zhijian nodded, and then he shook his head vigorously.

“No... no... I don't... know!”

“How come you don't know? What’s going on here?”

“Maybe... maybe... maybe... it's... it's fake!”

“Are you not drawing your past here? How can your past be fake? Did you tell Senior Li about these? What did he say?”

“No.”

“Why did you not tell him?”

Gao Zhijian hesitated for a moment and glanced at Chun Xiaoman. Then, he drew an adult figure beside the figure that represented himself. The face of the adult was obscured, and three swords were strapped to his back.

Gao Zhijian pricked his finger and smeared blood all over the figure's clothes. Chun Xiaoman instantly understood what he was trying to say.

“This is Senior Li?” Chun Xiaoman recognized Li Huowang, as he was one of the few figures whom Chun Xiaoman knew had a penchant for wearing red robes.

Gao Zhijian nodded vigorously before drawing a large “five” on his own forehead.

“I recognize this character. It’s the simplest character from one to five[1], which means you were five years old that year?”

Gao Zhijian nodded, and then he pointed to the sword on Li Huowang’s back. He drew a line and struck off the figure representing himself.

“Uh... Senior Li killed you? When you were at the age of five?” Chun Xiaoman muttered hesitantly.

“Yeah.” Gao Zhijian nodded.

Chun Xiaoman felt her head spinning. “How come you're still alive, then? And he even killed you when you were still a child?”

“Maybe... maybe... maybe... fake!” Gao Zhijian drew another figure representing himself. This time, he drew an armored figure and a carriage. Afterward, he drew a group of people thrusting spears at him.

“You... died again? Why can’t I understand anymore?”

“Messy...” Gao Zhijian slapped his head hard. “Messy!”

Gao Zhijian’s actions became rougher as he drew several figures of himself dying in a variety of ways. He died by drowning, burning, and even hanging. Eventually, he stopped drawing figures and took out a piece of charcoal to sketch black circles.

Fear appeared in his eyes as he looked at the black circles on the ground, and the fear in his eyes intensified as he drew more and more black circles. In the end, Gao Zhijian's sturdy arm drew a large black circle that enveloped everything, and he seemed to be fearful of what he had drawn. He abruptly stood and took several steps backward.

"Gao Zhijian... are you okay? Do you want me to help you go to the doctor?"

Gao Zhijian wiped away the cold sweat on his forehead, smudging his face. He then shook his head and walked over cautiously. He picked up a clump of soil and hurled it on the black circle before stomping on it, trampling down on the circle.

Then, he drew a figure representing himself on the back of his hand using a chunk of charcoal. Afterward, he dug into the trampled soil with the same hand, pushing aside the black circles to reveal the piles of gold ingots he had drawn earlier. "Money!"

He drew a line from the pile of gold ingots and connected it to Chun Xiaoman's feet.

"Take it!"

"No, no, no, give me a moment here. This isn't just about money. You need to be a bit more detailed with your drawing. I'm so confused..." Chun Xiaoman muttered, feeling her head spinning from Gao Zhijian's drawing.

"The message is unmistakable." A voice echoed from the door. The two turned to see Zhao Wu leaning on a crutch. It seemed that he had seen everything Gao Zhijian had drawn so far.

Zhao Wu walked up to the two and looked at the indescribable drawings. After a moment of thought, he said, "Gao Zhijian must have been a high-ranking official in the past, so his family must have been quite wealthy."

"The deaths he had suffered represent the risks associated with that status. If worse comes to worst, he says he's willing to take the risk and use his past status to find a way out for us."

Zhao Wu turned to look at Gao Zhijian with a serious expression.

"I think that's what you're trying to express, right?" Zhao Wu asked.

Gao Zhijian was stunned, and then he shook his head decisively without even pretending that Zhao Wu was right.

"I... I... I am... the... em... emperor!"

Zhao Wu looked helpless as he muttered, "You're the emperor? Then Senior Li killed the five-year-old you? And then you were reborn before dying again and again until you were finally captured by Dan Yangzi?"

"The Great Liang never had a five-year-old emperor. You should try to come up with a more plausible background. Moreover, you never told Senior Li anything about this in the past. There's also a continuity error; if you were five at the time, then how old was Senior Li back then? He's not much older than you, after all."

Gao Zhijian revealed a pained look at Zhao Wu's words. He pounded his head forcefully, and his hands curled into fists as he clenched them. "Messy.. messy...!"

"Hey, stop that, Gao Zhijian!" Chun Xiaoman grabbed Gao Zhijian and said, "The Lu Family Troupe has many ways to make some money, and they can be done once this disaster is over. You don't need to worry about money!"

Gao Zhijian eventually calmed down. He stared alternately at the two and realized that they did not believe him at all. The next moment, he clenched his fists and walked away.

"What are you going to do about his crazy story? Are you going to tell Senior Li about it?" Zhao Wu asked, leaning on his crutch.

Chun Xiaoman nodded quietly, and her expression was complicated as she stared at Gao Zhijian's departing figure.

“I think it's better to tell him. He's a veteran and has seen more bizarre things than us, so he perhaps he might know something about Gao Zhijian's background.”

Chapter 490 - Cowheart Village

A group of soldiers was in the middle of training on a flat field used for drying rice in Cowheart Village. Gao Zhijian was sitting on a boulder, frowning while staring at the soldiers before him.

His mind was still busy pondering over what had happened not too long ago.

The other disciples... they don't believe me at all. Gao Zhijian thought. Logically, he ought to feel angry, but surprisingly, Gao Zhijian was not angry at all. Even he couldn't believe the chaotic scenes that had been popping up in his head recently. It was highly likely that he was once an emperor. He once lived in a palace and was surrounded by many people who catered to his every whim.

However, his memories of those times were incomplete. There were large gaps filled with many different bizarre deaths and events; he had lived multiple lives with drastically different lifestyles compared to when he was an emperor.

Gao Zhijian felt like his memories weren't his own but were a confused mixture of many people's memories in a variety of sizes. Gao Zhijian became suspicious. Were the chaotic memories fake? What if he had become a lunatic like Senior Li?

Gao Zhijian knew that he had to know his past and find his true self amidst the chaotic memories. However, he did not want to go back unless it was absolutely necessary. He wanted to stay here, as he had decided that things were going well.

He liked Cowheart Village, and he liked the name Gao Zhijian—he was Gao Zhijian.

A hazy figure flashed across his mind, and his lips unconsciously parted to reveal a sincere smile. Living together with everyone was the freest he had ever been; he had lived a life of luxury within a magnificent palace. He ate well, and he had warm clothes to wear, but the air within the palace was cold and uncomfortable.

He disliked living in that palace.

Moreover, was it really necessary for him to know more about his past? Living in the moment was good enough for him. It wasn't like he had someone worth searching for amidst his chaotic memories.

Gao Zhijian thought about many things while sitting on the boulder. When he came back to his senses, he found that the dozen or so soldiers were flailing their wooden halberds in a disorderly manner. This group was taking advantage of his distraction to slack off.

Gao Zhijian picked up a small stick and walked over to them. He struck the soldiers on their backs, correcting their postures. The attack contained just enough strength to hurt but not injure the soldiers. Clearly, Gao Zhijian was an expert at controlling his strength.

The soldiers were too skinny. They needed more muscles to become even stronger for the sake of cultivating martial arts. Gao Zhijian's job was to train troops for Cowheart Village, and it was all according to Senior Li's instructions.

The soldiers sighed and groaned, and time ticked by just like that. The demanding physical training session had increased their appetites, and they wolfed down their food during dinner.

They were enduring such hardship not because they wanted to do so. It was all for the sake of a salary, which was a hundred coins on top of their daily rations.

Today's dinner was soy sauce fried rice. It was salty and oily, thanks to the lard. It was a perfect meal to replenish their lost energy, and the dish itself was rather easy to cook.

Chun Xiaoman wasn't in the crowd, so Gao Zhijian discreetly kept an eye out for her.

After dinner, Gao Zhijian went to the kitchen. He fried two eggs and covered the soy sauce fried rice with them. He then walked out and carried a bowl and chopsticks with him toward the Bai Family's Ancestral Hall.

More specifically, Gao Zhijian made a beeline for the hall just in front of the ancestral hall, where Chun Xiaoman led a group of people to recite the chants of the White Lotus Sect.

"Eat," Gao Zhijian said, placing down a bowl of fried rice before Chun Xiaoman.

"Hey! Big guy, you really are something, huh? Why did you bring food for only one person? We haven't eaten yet, you know?!" Lu Xiucai said, sounding dissatisfied.

Gao Zhijian didn't even bother to look at Lu Xiucai.

Chun Xiaoman's chanting came to a halt. He looked up at the others and said, "Let's stop here for today and have dinner."

The four girls nodded respectfully. Lu Xiucai cast a look of disdain at Gao Zhijian before following the four girls up the stairs.

Chun Xiaoman proceeded to eat the bowl of fried rice. "How are things on your side? Were they also obedient today?"

"Still... still... still... okay!"

"Ah, I'm struggling here. Only a few people have been able to memorize these chants so far, which makes sense because a high level of comprehension is necessary to memorize these chants. Those with low comprehension will have no accomplishments, no matter how many times they recite.

"We're all human beings, so I don't know why there's such a big difference between each of us. I wonder when we'll finally learn everything.

"Oh, I have something to tell you, and you may not believe me, but that bum Lu Xiucan has the highest comprehension level among the people here. You have no idea how smug he was when he learned that.”

Gao Zhijian stood quietly, listening to Chun Xiaoman without saying anything. Once Chun Xiaoman had finished venting her frustrations, the bowl of soy sauce fried rice that Gao Zhijian had prepared for her had also been polished clean.

Gao Zhijian picked up the empty bowl and was going to leave when Chun Xiaoman called out to him. “Zhijian, you no longer have to bring me food. Xiaohai will leave some for me in the kitchen.”

Chun Xiaoman then pursed her lips with a complex expression. “I’ve sworn to never marry, and I have no intention of breaking my oath. Do you understand what I’m trying to say?”

“ Hmm... ”

“Hey, I’m being straightforward here. We’re all brothers and sisters forever, so I’ve got to tell you the truth. I don’t want to lose you as my brother. Of course, I’ll tell Zhao Wu the same thing.”

Gao Zhijian was quiet. He was the only one aware of the pain that pierced his heart the moment he heard Chun Xiaoman’s words. However, he had inadvertently failed to suppress some of his anguish as the empty bowl in his hand fractured with a crack .

Chun Xiaoman walked up to Gao Zhijian and stared intently into the latter’s eyes. “A place to call home is rare for us with disabilities. We must cherish what we have, for many people wish to have what is ours.”

“I’m sure you know, but people like us can only be sold, beaten, and treated like garbage. We’re not even human in their eyes, which is why I want you to focus on what matters, Zhijian. We must also work hard to protect our home.”

“Mhm.” Gao Zhijian nodded and cut a desolate figure as he turned around and walked toward the stairs with the empty bowl in his hand.

Chun Xiaoman felt a little guilty as she stared at his departing figure. However, she was still convinced that he had to make a decision sooner rather than later. With that, she sat back down and picked up the books on the ground before reciting the chants.

These chants weren't comparable to Li Huowang's supernatural powers, but she dared not underestimate them and was ravenous in her studies. Her comprehension wasn't as high as Lu Xiucai's comprehension, but diligence could make up for a lack of talent. If studying for six hours a day wasn't enough, then she'd study for even longer.

Even gold and stones could be split with hard work, and she had a lot of work to do, as she could barely use a few simple divine chants. She'd never want a repeat of her harrowing experience long ago when her own father had sold her away, and she had no choice but to acquiesce.

Before Chun Xiaoman could become engrossed in her studies, rapid footsteps echoed from the staircase. A panicking Lu Xiucai rushed down the stairs and exclaimed, "A group of bandits have entered our village and are killing people on sight! We already have a few casualties!"

Chapter 491 - Dharma Sect

“Hah!” Gao Zhijian exclaimed. He was topless and was having the halberd around at the entrance of the village. He looked like a giant capable of plowing through an entire army.

Red mist shrouded him as veins bulged all over him. A group of people wearing black cloth on their shoulders stood before him, and they looked like normal civilians except they were unusually agitated.

The people fearlessly charged at Gao Zhijian with their farming tools in hand.

“Do not be afraid of him! Chaaarge! We are the people of God Yu'er. Even if we die, we'll only become ghosts of God Yu'er! We'll reincarnate into emperors in our next life!”

A cold glint flashed, and three people standing in front of Gao Zhijian were cleaved in half; their insides splattered on the white wall. However, there were too many enemies, and Gao Zhijian could not handle all of them.

They had attacked in the middle of the night, so Gao Zhijian had no time to wear Peng Longteng's armor before defending the village.

A stone flew across the air and struck Gao Zhijian on the head, injuring him.

“ AAAAAAAH! ” Gao Zhijian bent down, lowering his stance before throwing the halberd in his hands with all his might. The halberd flew toward where the stone had come from. The halberd spun like a boomerang and cleaved through the crowd. A kaleidoscope of blood and entrails exploded in the air like crimson fireworks.

Gao Zhijian followed the trail of blood to reach his halberd. However, the crowd behind him seemed mad. Despite facing Gao Zhijian's killing intent, none of them stepped backward. They charged at Gao Zhijian in a frenzy.

Amidst the chaos, a needle tied to a white thread flew over and struck a man's face. The man's facial features melted as he screamed, but his scream was soon muffled as his mouth fell into his clothes down below. The man had become faceless!

"You can do it, musclehead! We're here to help!" Puppy shouted.

The Dharma Sect turned to look in the direction of Cowheart Village, and they laughed upon seeing a group of disabled people charging at them. Chun Xiaoman was furious upon seeing the corpses on the ground. She took out the bell that Li Huowang had given to her and shook it vigorously.

Then, she stuffed her mouth with dirt before commanding the two Wandering Gods in the air. The Wandering Gods nodded and pounced on the members of the Dharma Sect. Those unlucky enough collapsed to the ground upon getting hit by the Wandering Gods' attacks.

However, it was not enough. Chun Xiaoman placed the bell on her waist before taking off her shirt and revealing her innerwear covered in yellow paper. She took out a serrated short sword and tapped her forehead with it before chanting, "The disciple opens the third eye to stare at the heavens. May the masters' guard look upon us!

"Bestow upon us skin of bronze, bones of steel, and bestow upon us helmets and armor to protect ourselves! We turn the bronze bag thrice, and the steel bag is now thrice as heavy!"

Lu Xiucan and five other people did the same thing behind her. They used a serrated short sword to slice their skin open, allowing their blood to drip down their faces and finally onto the ground.

“Turn swords into feathers, rods into grass, and stones into bubbles! May the masters and the Heavenly Mater help the disciples!”

Chun Xiaoman, Lu Xiucan, and the five others finished their chant. Their eyes were large and unblinking as they charged toward the Dharma Sect members with their serrated short swords in hand.

Clang, clang, clang!

Lu Xiucan and Chun Xiaoman grew confident when they remained unscathed despite suffering a few attacks. The weapons of the enemies bounced off of their skin as if their skin were made of steel.

Chun Xiaoman and the others raised their weapons and fought back fiercely.

They could cut down others, but their enemies could not do the same to them. At this point, they were conducting a slaughter. With their help, the burden on Gao Zhijian dropped drastically. Soon, they turned the tides against such a large group of enemies with just so few of them.

The villagers of Cowheart Village gained courage upon seeing that the enemies were getting pushed back. They took up their farming tools and fought back as well.

Soon, the entrance to the village became incredibly chaotic.

More and more Dharma Sect members perished as time ticked by, and that was when an old dwarf woman wearing a tattered monk's robe appeared from Gao Zhijian's shadow and thrust a dagger made of black jade toward his waist.

Gao Zhijian endured the pain and looked down to see that the old woman's face was covered with a black cloth. A massive word was written on the black cloth, and it said, "Witch."

An eerie aged chuckle came from the other side of the black cloth. “Hehehe~ Fold the paper money, burn the golden papers, pour the ceremonial wine, and burn the incense sticks. The year ends as the spring of the new year beckons at us.”

Puppy was hiding among the crowd, but when he saw Gao Zhijian's plight, he did not hesitate and waved the wish wood at the old woman. However, the old woman was unusually agile. She ran deeper into the chaotic battlefield with her weapon drawn.

“Care... care... careful! There’s...” Gao Zhijian couldn’t even finish his sentence when the old woman emerged from the shadow of a young lady fighting with her enhanced figure. The old woman easily slit the young lady’s throat with her dagger.

The young lady’s neck was easily sliced open, even though her skin was supposed to be immune to swords and daggers. She collapsed to the ground while desperately trying to hold back the blood gushing out of her neck.

“ Hahaha! Praise be to God Yu’er! The golden bricks on the ground lay three feet high, and the tree of money is riddled with jewelry!”

“Nan’er!” Chun Xiaoman roared the young lady’s name out of despair.

Just then, a shiver went down her spine—someone was behind her!

Before the old woman could kill Chun Xiaoman, the Wandering Gods in the air flew down to force the old woman away.

However, the Wandering Gods' attacks had merely forced her back. The old woman's bizarre ability to seemingly change positions instantaneously forced Chun Xiaoman and the others to fight with their backs against each other.

They couldn't allow another sneak attack.

Cowheart Village is done for at this rate! I have to kill her, even if I have to pay a steep price! Chun Xiaoman took out the bell and shook it again. She followed Li Huowang’s instructions and shook her head vigorously to see the Wandering Gods in the air splitting into them.

Chun Xiaoman ordered them to attack the old woman, and they complied. A cold wind infused with yin energy engulfed Cowheart Village as the Wandering Gods flew into the sky and burrowed underground to search for the old woman.

Chun Xiaoman used three years of her lifespan, and her gamble had paid off. Against the encirclement of the Wandering Gods, the old woman was soon forced out of hiding and had no choice but to retreat.

The old woman was about to jump into her shadow once again when Puppy waved the wish wood. This time, the spell hit her; the Strayed One's tongue on the wood moved slightly, confounding the old woman.

Gao Zhijian took advantage of that opportunity, swinging his halberd. The heavy halberd split the old woman into a pile of meat and bones.

Chapter 492 - Fear

The Dharma Sect members came to a screeching halt and awakened from their frenzy. They seemed groggy, as if they had just woken up from a dream. The next moment, they roared in fright and dispersed, running into the dark woods.

The stench of blood and feces filled the air.

Everyone dazedly for a while before realizing that they had emerged victorious, but none of them cheered; the majority of them slumped to the ground. Then, they started panting as the adrenaline wore off before sobbing and vomiting at the gory sight.

Those who had traveled with Li Huowang from Zephyr Temple were fine because they had gotten used to such a sight.

Chun Xiaoman wiped away the blood on her face before slumping to the ground and realizing that she was covered in cold sweat.

“It’s fine. The masters that we’ve invited into our body have simply left; this is the aftereffect of that.”

Yang Xiaohai and Gao Zhijian sighed upon seeing that it wasn’t just Chun Xiaoman.

“Goodness, Xiucai. You really are useless. The treasure that Li Huowang gave me is so much better. Luckily, I don’t have to learn what you guys are trying to learn right now,” Puppy said, revealing the wish wood in his hands.

“Fuck off! That was the easiest divine chant. Do you really think that you can match up with us? Just wait until I learn the second and third divine chants; we’re going to fight and see who is stronger between us!”

“Oh? Look at you. Let’s fight, then! Let’s even bet on it!”

“Puppy, are you done? You really think this is the time to be bickering? Support us back the estate! Can't you see that Gao Zhijian is hurt?"

Those lucky enough to sustain only a few injuries helped those with heavier injuries into the Bai Family Estate. They placed quite a few torches on the wall to prevent any ambushes.

They had won, but Cowheart Village was clouded in sadness. It was all because twelve people had perished tonight, and their bodies were covered in white cloth and were lined up in the hall. The village didn't have many villagers, so the twelve people whom they had lost were both their friends and family members.

Lu Zhuangyuan smoked his pipe with a frown. Out of the twelve who died, two of them were his disciples, and one of them was even the disciple who had the most potential.

What a shame, Lu Zhuangyuan thought.

"Sigh, I thought things were going swimmingly for us, and I thought the Liang Kingdom was a peaceful place, so how come we just got attacked by bandits?"

"They weren't bandits." Chun Xiaoman said. She was in the middle of treating Yang Xiaohai. "They were talking about some God Yu'er or something. They seem to be worshiping some deity."

"I agree. Bandits once came to my village, and they charged into the largest house to rob the food and money in there. They'd never kill mere serfs like us," said one of the militia members.

Lu Zhuangyuan knocked his smoke pipe on the pillar and took out some fresh tobacco from his pouch before asking, "Why are they going around murdering people? Isn't working hard for a peaceful life hard enough?"

"If you want to know why they attacked us, you can just ask them yourself," Puppy said, dragging "something" into the hall.

The others were shocked at the sight. Puppy had just dragged a human being into the hall, but the latter looked barely human; his limbs were twisted, and some of his facial features were missing.

“How’s my divine needles? My needles have paralyzed him. He can’t run away nor die, so it’s nice that we get to interrogate him.”

No one said anything as they looked at the twisted human in front of them.

“How should we interrogate him? Senior Li is the best at doing it, but he’s not here.”

“Let me do it!” Chun Xiaoman exclaimed. She was still furious about Nan’er’s death, so she wasted no time and grabbed a bamboo broom from the corner of the wall before smacking the man’s face with it. She did not stop until the man’s twisted figure was bruised. “Talk! Why did you come here to kill us?”

“Fucking bitch! Kill me if you can! I’m just going to become God Yu’er’s ghost when I die! I will become an emperor in my next life. You fools who do not worship him will reincarnate into pigs and dogs—destined to eat shit all day!” the man’s mouth, which was resting on his elbow, taunted Chun Xiaoman.

“You really think that I wouldn’t dare to kill you?!” Chun Xiaoman took out her sword and placed it on the man’s neck. Chun Xiaoman glared at the man as the latter smiled at her.

“No, this won’t work. My turn.” Puppy walked out of the hall. When he returned, he was wearing a red robe and was carrying a bag full of many different knives.

“Senior Puppy, why are you wearing Senior Li’s clothes? And why did you bring my butchering knives with you?” Yang Xiaohai was curious.

“Stop talking and just look!” Puppy squatted next to the man and coughed. He imitated Li Huowang’s tone of voice as he said, “I know that you are not afraid of death, but how about I make you wish that you were dead?”

With that, he placed the knives and implements neatly on the ground. There were hooks used to hang the pig, a sharp knife used to stab the pig’s heart, a broad cleaver used to cut the bones, and even a small knife used to shave the pig's fur.

The man's eyes twitched at the sight. "You motherfucker! Kill me if you dare!"

"Oh? You have guts. I wonder where I should start?"

Rather than a knife, Puppy picked up an ordinary yet thick hemp rope. " Hehe, you did not expect me to take this, did you? I should use this as an appetizer. I'm sure you know that hemp ropes aren't as smooth as silk, right?

"Look at how rough it is, hehehe..." Puppy rubbed the hemp rope on the man's skin, and the man's skin turned red due to friction. "I'll place this rope between your crotch and rub it back and forth like a saw. It's not a knife, but it's so rough that it would grind your skin and flesh into pulp."

The man's eyes flashed in a fearful light, and he trembled at Puppy's remark.

"Oh, and because I will be rubbing it over your crotch..."

Puppy proceeded to describe in great, graphic detail what was going to happen to the man. The man broke down and cried before Puppy could finish his explanation.

"Stop! Stop! I'll speak! Just kill me afterward!" the man roared, his face covered in snot and tears.

Puppy clapped his hands in excitement and turned around.

"See? Did you see that?"

Rather than worship and praise, everyone stared at him with wary eyes.

"Why are you looking at me like that? I didn't do anything. I was just mimicking Li Huowang..."

Chapter 493 - Night Visit

“Stop boasting and move away.”

Chun Xiaoman used a bamboo pole to shove Puppy away before standing in front of the cowering man. “Why did you come to our village? And why do you want to kill us? How did we offend you?”

The man told her everything, as he was afraid that Puppy would use the hemp rope on him if he didn’t answer fast enough.

“We were chased out by the military, and we ran out of food soon after we were chased away. The witch told us to find a village far away from the city and pillage that village for food. Your village is the farthest from any city.”

“The military?” Chun Xiaoman was confused. Was that really all? “Who are you guys? And why did the military chase you away?”

“We’re members of the Dharma Sect!” the man exclaimed, raising his chin. The words “Dharma Sect” had somehow boosted his confidence as if it was supporting him mentally.

“The kingdom is unfair to us! There are many others worshipping many gods, but they’ve been deliberately targeting only us, who are worshipping God Yu’er! Hmph! The witch who can talk to God Yu’er had told us that the Liang Kingdom was on its last legs and wouldn’t last long, just like the grasshoppers after autumn that will die in just a few days!

“God Yu’er had even shown itself to us a few days ago! The dark skies were the doing of God Yu’er! God Yu’er would soon manifest in the mortal world! By then, the Dharma Sect would be the official religion of the kingdom!

“We will become emperors! We no longer have to give up our food, and we no longer have to work by then while enjoying the taste of meat every day!"

"Is he crazy? He's been spouting nonsense all this while," Puppy asked, sounding confused.

Puppy had no idea what was happening, but Lu Zhuangyuan knew what was going on. His travels had allowed him to learn a ton about the world outside.

"Ah... They're not bandits but rebels! We ran all the way here to avoid the war, but things are going to become chaotic for us again, even though we're just starting to enjoy our peace!"

"Rebel? They're rebels?" Lu Xiucan scoffed, but his smile disappeared when he remembered that strange old lady.

The majority of the people in the hall had no idea what was going on, but they knew the implications of the word "rebel." Rebellions signified death, war, and hunger.

Chun Xiaoman crouched and questioned the man, "Does your Dharma Sect have many members?"

"Of course! We have millions of members! We're all children of God Yu'er... it's just that some of us were enlightened much quicker than others! You guys are the same, too! Hurry up and surrender to God Yu'er!"

The man was clearly spouting nonsense, but everyone in the village was shocked by what they heard from him.

Zhao Wu had a bad feeling about this, and he expressed it, saying, "We killed so many of them. Don't you think they'll come and avenge their members?"

No one knew the answer to that question, but everyone felt as if a boulder had landed on their chests.

"Don't worry. It's been a while since Senior Li and Miaomiao have departed, so they should be coming back soon."

Everyone felt much better at that remark, and it made sense.

Li Huowang was like a god to them, after all.

The Dharma Sect was nothing to Li Huowang.

“Miss Chun, I think we can’t wait for the autumn harvest to stock up on food anymore. Once the kingdom is embroiled in chaos, our stockpile will be our lifeblood,” Lu Zhuangyuan said. His rich experience was exhibiting its usefulness right now.

“Good call. Zhao Wu, pawn the gold and stockpile some food! We’ll discuss the details once Senior Li is back. Zhijian, arrange for some militia to stand guard during the night and make it a shifting schedule, just like what we did during our travels.

“Tell them to bring some dogs during their patrols. Dogs can detect things we can’t.”

Without Li Huowang, Chun Xiaoman assumed the role of a leader. Gao Zhijian would have been better as a leader if it weren’t for his speech impediment.

While Cowheart Village was buzzing with activity, Li Huowang had a visitor in Shangjing. Someone knocked on his door and asked, “Is Sir Er here?”

Li Huowang was jolted out of his nightmare, and he instinctively grabbed his weapon beneath his pillow.

“Is Sir Er here? Please open the door. Our master is waiting for you.”

Li Huowang tried his best to listen to the timekeeper’s voice and realized that it was already the third section of the night. He didn’t really have many acquaintances in Shangjing, so who could be waiting for him?

“Senior Li, there are twelve people outside, and there’s a sedan...” Miaomiao whispered.

“Dress up and prepare the luggage. Wait for me on the second floor. I will kill them if they are enemies, and we’ll run away from Shangjing immediately afterward!” Li Huowang said. He wore his red Daoist robes and placed the purple-tassel sword on his back before walking toward the entrance.

Li Huowang got ready to fight the moment his hands touched the wooden door. And that was when the fake Hong Zhong's illusion appeared next to him. "I checked. A eunuch is looking for you."

Li Huowang's eyes twitched as his hand passed through the illusion to open the door. His sharp sense of smell immediately caught the scent of a fragrance mixed with urine. The fake Hong Zhong's illusion was right. The other party was a eunuch.

Li Huowang's curiosity was piqued upon seeing a familiar jade cat in the eunuch's arms.

"Hehehe~ I greet Sir Er." The old eunuch bowed. "Please enter the sedan. Our master is waiting for you in his residence."

It seems that the emperor has finally remembered me. Li Huowang thought. Then, he entered the sedan that was the size of a small room. Soon, eight strong men carried him toward the palace.

The eight men carried the sedan carefully, making Li Huowang feel as if were sitting in a car. He was inside the highest-grade sedan that the Liang Kingdom had to offer.

The sedan passed through the red palace walls and continued until it arrived at the entrance of the emperor's bed chamber, where they finally allowed Li Huowang to exit the sedan.

The bed chamber had a golden roof and a red door. Moonlight was being reflected off the shiny, silver roof that had several statues of a beast wearing a mask unique to the Liang Kingdom.

Chapter 494 - Leader

Li Huowang was about to keep walking when a large-framed guard towering three meters tall stopped him.

“No weapons!” the large-framed guard exclaimed. He had a huge torso, but his lower half was comically small. The guard’s face was also covered with a rusted bronze mask. Li Huowang couldn’t see through the mask.

The guard took away Li Huowang's purple-tasseled sword and his bronze coin sword before retreating into a corner and standing motionlessly like a statue.

Li Huowang soon saw the bed chamber with numerous red pillars that had engravings of golden dragons.

The place was more like a hall rather than a bed chamber.

Li Huowang barely had time to look around when a surprised voice entered his ears.

“Come here, quick!” It was the young emperor of the Liang Kingdom. He was wearing a red and black robe and was waving at Li Huowang. If it weren't for the eunuch holding him back, he would have run over to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang stopped a few meters away from the young emperor and greeted, “Er Jiu greets the emperor!”

Ji Lin ignored the eunuchs and approached Li Huowang. “Er Jiu, you must help me!”

Li Huowang stood silently. He had no idea what to say, as the request was too sudden.

“My father was right! My brothers are scheming to take the throne!”

Ji Lin’s eyes revealed thick fear. “I didn’t want to become the emperor, and I would’ve been fine with living somewhere else without any pressure. However, they still want to kill me even though I wanted to offer them the throne!”

Of course. Do you really think that they'd let you live even though you're brothers with them? Li Huowang thought. He was not worried at all, as this issue wasn't his problem to handle.

“Your Highness, Er Jiu is a Surveillance Bureau member and cannot take part in the matters of the palace.”

“Liar! Why did my third brother have people from the Surveillance Bureau, then?!” Ji Lin exclaimed. Then, he lowered his voice as he said, “The officials told me that you're strong. You came back with the corpse of a spiritual sin, and you also have a respectable rank in the bureau, right?”

“You know that I can't trust anyone anymore, right? Everyone is scheming for their own profit, and I don't even know who is on whose side!” Ji Lin's voice trembled in fear. You helped me see through that scam during that festival, so I'm sure you're a good man. Please help me! I have no one else to help me!

“Do you know anyone from the Surveillance Bureau? If they can help me, I'll make sure that they become officials!”

Li Huowang frowned. He wasn't well versed in the politics of the palace, but he knew that the current emperor was too useless.

Li Huowang truly did not expect that Ji Lin didn't have a group of loyal officials by his side and had to start looking for external support. It was certain that Ji Lin would most likely die in the midst of this succession war.

“Your Highness, I'm afraid that I might not be able to help you.”

Ji Lin was furious at Li Huowang's rejection. “I am the emperor, so you must listen to me! Otherwise, I will have you executed!”

Li Huowang was enraged. Should I swear allegiance to his brothers and kill him with them?

Just as Li Huowang was entertaining the idea, Ji Lin grabbed Li Huowang's hands and begged in a low voice, "Er Jiu, please help me... I really don't know what to do! I don't want to die!"

In the face of the emperor's begging and crying, Li Huowang had no choice but to give in for now. Li Huowang knew that a succession war was a dangerous event that would kill him if he made the wrong move. More importantly, Li Huowang was using a fake identity, so he'd certainly die if he ended up revealing his true self.

"Your Highness, this is an important matter. Please let me go back and think about it."

Ji Lin sighed in relief upon seeing that Li Huowang did not reject him outright. "Okay! Go back and think about it. I'm not going to rush you. Help me become the emperor, and I will give you as much gold as you want."

Li Huowang walked out from the bed chambers and saw the emperor talking to the old eunuch. The latter nodded and drew a circle on a book. It seems that I'm not the only one on his list of possible supporters. I guess he's very desperate.

Of course, Li Huowang didn't want to participate in the succession war. He had simply compromised to get out of the place. Ji Lin could take revenge on him, but he had to survive the succession war first.

Li Huowang felt that Ji Lin would most likely die and that he'd barely have any supporters.

When Li Huowang found his way to his house, it was already daybreak. He decided to find a beggar on the streets and placed his face on the beggar. He then tossed the beggar into his house to masquerade as himself before leaving Shangjing with Miaomiao.

Li Huowang was still pretty confident in his methods as a Sitting Oblivion Dao member.

As expected, nothing untoward happened as they approached the city gate.

“Sit here, and I will buy breakfast. We will eat along the way,” Li Huowang said, approaching one of the breakfast stalls.

The cook was frying thin strips of dough in oil. The dough expanded and quickly became golden brown. The chubby cook was also making mochi balls. He rolled them in black sesame and coarse sugar, coating them in the mixture.

The crispy fried dough sticks and the sticky sweet mochi gave rise to a pleasant combination—the soft mochi covered the crispy fried dough stick, and the delicious scent of the sesame combined with the salty dough stick to create a flavor bomb.

“Give me six.” Li Huowang threw some coins into the bamboo basket.

The chubby middle-aged man smiled at the sight. The next moment, his eyes abruptly sunk into his face.

“All right~ Six dough sticks with mochi. Here, be careful because It’s hot.”

Li Huowang turned around and walked away. Upon biting a dough stick, Li Huowang came to a halt. Then, he turned around and walked up to the chubby man. He spat the dice in his mouth and stared at the chubby stall owner busy serving customers.

“Is there something to do, leader?” asked Li Huowang.

The chubby man wiped away the sweat on his neck while nodding and talking to the customers.

“I just want you to do me a small favor.”

Chapter 495 - Shai Zi

"I just want you to do me a small favor," the chubby man said.

Li Huowang chuckled. "You think I'm omnipotent? What makes you think I can do something that you couldn't?"

The chubby man ignored Li Huowang as he served the other customers. It was only when the customers were gone that the chubby man took out two stools for him and Li Huowang to sit on.

"Come, sit. Don't stand and talk like that. Only you can do this because the Dragon Vein will detect my presence the moment I get close enough to it."

Li Huowang looked at the man's plump face and scoffed, "We've already angered the Surveillance Bureau. Are you not satisfied yet?"

Even though Li Huowang was putting up a nonchalant face, he was already very aware of what was going on around him.

The man in front of Li Huowang was none other than one of the Sitting Oblivion Dao's leaders, Shai Zi!

Li Huowang couldn't forget how terrifying Shai Zis were.

Shai Zis loved tricking other liars. It could even be said that Shai Zis had tricked the majority of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members into joining them.

"Don't say that. We're not even going after the Surveillance Bureau's treasure. Why would they be angry at us?" Shai Zi took out the two remaining unsold dough sticks and ate them.

"Hong Zhong, the emperor was trying to pull you to his side last night, right? Why are you running away from something so interesting? Just go back and agree to his demands. We will then help find a way to let him succeed to the throne." Shai Zi told Li Huowang what to do.

Li Huowang was not even surprised that the Sitting Oblivion Dao wanted to interfere in the succession war.

But no matter what they wanted, Li Huowang had no intentions of joining them. “Boss, I don’t have time. Find someone else.”

Shai Zi chuckled when he heard Li Huowang's rejection. “No need to do that. You are not a child anymore. Relax, once the emperor succeeds to the throne there would be nothing else for you to do. Hong Zhong, we have very few people in the palace, and most of them perished during that incident. You are the only one who can stay by the emperor’s side, so it has to be you. Don’t forget the favor you owe me.”

Shai Zi patted Li Huowang’s shoulder with his oily hands. “Look, it makes complete sense. Only you can do it.”

Favor? Li Huowang had no recollection of Shai Zi helping him last time.

“I won’t do it. Find someone else,” Li Huowang said, rejecting the offer before standing up to leave. “Many of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members had died during our last battle with the Surveillance Bureau. I think it’s best if you rest and recuperate instead of doing what you're thinking of doing.”

Li Huowang was betting that Shai Zi would not fight him since the Surveillance Bureau was monitoring Shangjing.

Li Huowang had no plans of listening even further, as he knew that the best way to avoid getting deceived was to avoid listening to Sitting Oblivion Dao members in the first place.

Li Huowang had just taken a few steps away when Shai Zi’s voice echoed behind him. “Are you really not doing it? Then don’t blame me for being ruthless.”

Li Huowang turned around and stared calmly at Shai Zi, asking, “Boss Shai Zi, what do you want to do? Do you want to fight me?”

“Look at you talking like that. We're the military. I would never fight our own people,” Shai Zi said in a gentle voice.

Li Huowang merely smiled coldly.

“One month ago, you asked me for a favor to safeguard something. You can decline to work for us this time, but don't blame me if that thing somehow escaped.”

Li Huowang frowned. He was certain that he did not meet any Sitting Oblivion Dao a month ago. Is he tricking me?

“Boss Shai Zi, must you do this? I'm tired from the previous ordeal, and I want to rest in the meantime. Find someone else.” Li Huowang threw the cold food onto the ground before walking to his carriage.

Shai Zi did not chase after Li Huowang and busied himself with the customers.

Li Huowang sat on his carriage and headed to the western city gate when the chubby man turned around and stared at the horse carriage, shouting, “Brat! If you don't cultivate ‘Lies’ when you cultivate ‘Truth,’ you will become a demon!”

They managed to leave Shangjing in peace.

Shai Zi didn't do anything to them, but Li Huowang was not stupid enough to relax.

Once out of Shangjing, Li Huowang traveled non-stop with Li Sui and Bai Lingmiao in the carriage. They did not dare to talk to anyone on their way to avoid getting tricked.

They would hunt and fish whenever they were hungry, just like cavemen.

The fire scorched the skin of a fish that was roughly the size of her arm.

After sprinkling some salt on the fish, Bai Lingmiao carried the fish over to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was looking around warily. “You can eat first. I'm not hungry.”

Bai Lingmiao shoved the fish into Li Huowang's arms before turning around to cook another fish.

"Senior Li, how far are we from Cowheart Village?" Bai Lingmiao asked.

"We're not going back for now. I don't want trouble to follow us back to the village."

"How much longer must we stay outside? Several years?" Bai Lingmiao was worried.

"No. Since the Sitting Oblivion Dao wants to interfere with the succession war, we only need to wait until the new emperor is crowned. By then, they won't trouble me anymore regardless of whether the Sitting Oblivion Dao had succeeded or not."

Li Huowang was more worried that Shai Zi would do something to him from the dark. Shai Zis were incredibly strong, and they were the type of entity to greet their victims only after they had ensnared their victims in their traps.

Li Huowang's clenched fists loosened, and he couldn't help but feel that he was still a bit too weak. There wouldn't have been no need to be so wary if he had just cultivated the "Truth."

Li Huowang wolfed down the fish and rested in the carriage, but he did not fall into a deep sleep. He'd wake up the moment he sensed something.

Late at night, Bai Lingmiao and Li Huowang opened their eyes in unison. "Senior Li, there's something on the eastern side of the forest."

"I heard it, too. Let's go see what it is together. I don't want any of us to get kidnapped."

The three of them carefully approached the location where they heard the noise. Soon, they heard people crying and shouting, along with the shrill clashing of weapons.

Li Huowang peered into a hole amidst the tree branches and saw what was happening.

Chapter 496 - Sword

The sparse forest was filled with a cacophonous din of screams and clashing weapons.

The Dharma Sect with black cloth slung over their shoulders were fighting six Surveillance Bureau members.

Li Huowang took one look and knew that the Surveillance Bureau was trying to get rid of as many members of the Dharma Sect as possible, and they were winning the fight.

The Dharma Sect members were unafraid of death, but the difference in strength was just too huge.

If it hadn't been for Hong Da, Li Huowang wouldn't have known that the six figures in the distance were Surveillance Bureau members.

Li Huowang sighed in relief at the blood flowing like a river on the ground. He was worried that the Sitting Oblivion Dao had chased after them, so it was a good thing that his assumption was wrong.

“Let’s go. The Surveillance Bureau can easily deal with random people; they probably don’t need me to do anything.”

Li Huowang’s attitude toward the Surveillance Bureau had gotten better when he discovered that they had been working hard to stop the Natural Disasters. He was about to walk away when he saw one of the Surveillance Bureau members using an unusual weapon, a brush.

More specifically, it was Zhuge Yuan's brush.

“Senior Zhuge, is that your weapon?” Bai Lingmiao heard Li Huowang talking to himself. “So that really is your weapon. I guess the Surveillance Bureau took your stuff after you died. That said, what is the origin of your brush? Is it really that strong? I should’ve taken it with me instead. It's a shame I didn't think of that at the time."

Even though Bai Lingmiao knew that Li Huowang was talking to his invisible illusions, it was still a bizarre sight to see.

Bai Lingmiao grew curious. She was about to ask what Li Huowang was talking about when she saw him snarling at someone far away.

Bai Lingmiao "looked" in that direction and saw a woman with purple lips holding an unusual sword made out of bone. Bai Lingmiao took a closer look at the weapon and was horrified to see a person's head serving as the sword's pommel. To make matters worse, the sword was made out of a person's spine! The head seemed to have been dehydrated until it shrank to the size of a dried orange; the head's orifices were filled with black mud, and there was a purple talisman on its forehead.

The head had shrunk, contorting the head's features, but Bai Lingmiao still saw that the owner of the head had to have been a handsome man when he was still alive.

Crack, crack, crack.

Bai Lingmiao looked at Li Huowang upon hearing him grinding his teeth.

"They... they refined your body into a weapon?!" Li Huowang's anger couldn't be contained when he realized that his best friend's corpse was desecrated in such a manner.

"You do not have to be angry. That is normal. Even a Strayed One's body part is valuable, so how could the corpse of a Twisted One be any less valuable than a Strayed One's body part? Do you really think that the Surveillance Bureau would just leave that corpse to rot on the ground?" said the fake Hong Zhong. He then chuckled and sat on Peng Longteng's shoulder.

In contrast to Li Huowang's fury, Zhuge Yuan was relaxed. "I do not yearn for material things. My body is just a bag of flesh, and I do not need it. Junior Li, let's go."

"No!" Li Huowang exclaimed. It would have been a different story if Li Howang had remained clueless about what the Surveillance Bureau had done to Zhuge Yuan's corpse.

In addition, Zhuge Yuan had sacrificed himself to save Li Huowang. How could Li Huowang do nothing upon knowing that someone had desecrated his best friend's corpse?

Of course, Li Huowang was still rational enough to stay put for the time being to observe the woman's strength.

Based on how Hong Da was addressing her, it seemed that she was a new Ji Xiang.

However, Li Huowang didn't know which sect she had come from based on her clothes, which was a simple purple dress.

Li Huowang was also worried about the sword made from Zhuge Yuan's spine. A weapon crafted from a Twisted One's body part was by no means weak.

"Senior Zhuge, what do you think that sword can do? It's made from your spine, after all, so perhaps you know anything about it? Is there a way to counter it?" Li Huowang asked.

"Of course, I don't know. I'm a Twisted One and would never go and learn about myself by refining myself. Junior Li, let's just go. No need to cause trouble just because of me."

Even though Zhuge Yuan was telling him to stop, Li Huowang was adamant about getting the sword. He stared carefully at the woman with purple lips.

Just then, the woman raised the sword and waved it at the Dharma Sect members. The waists of the Dharma Sect members vanished; they were cut in half just like that!

Blood stained the ground crimson as the Dharma Sect members collapsed with agonized screams.

"Daoist, I think we should go. You might be too weak to defeat her," the old monk's illusion said, sounding worried.

However, Li Huowang became even more stubborn upon hearing their remarks.

“Junior Li, how strange. A rift opened in the air when she waved that sword, and I saw some fields and mountains beyond that rift.”

“There are fields and mountains beyond a rift in the air?”

“Junior Li, I think I've figured it out. The world beyond that rift must be the Qi Kingdom.”

Li Huowang immediately understood the powers of the sword after hearing Zhuge Yuan's analysis. The woman was using the sword to open up a small rift in space to send things into the Qi Kingdom.

The moment the rift in space closed up, the rift would sever whatever was trapped inside of it.

And that was how the Dharma Sect members were cut in half...

Rather than a sword, the weapon was like a key that allowed anyone to travel to an alternate dimension, the Qi Kingdom.

The Dharma Sect members were slowly getting pushed back. Li Huowang had already learned the power of the sword, so he chose not to wait any longer.

The Dharma Sect members were instrumental in distracting the Surveillance Bureau members. Once they were defeated, Li Huowang would have to face all six Surveillance Bureau members at the same time.

“Both of you, go back and wait for me at the valley where we stayed two days ago,” Li Huowang said to Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui before taking off his red robe and handing it to them.

He then sent his body image into the ground and approached the woman slowly in an invisible state.

Once he was close enough, Li Huowang took off the bronze coin veil, and his face shifted. His face transformed into that of a stranger's face.

He flipped his palm, and a black cloth appeared. He slung it over his shoulder, and his disguise as a Dharma Sect member was complete.

Li Huowang did not make a move right away. The Dharma Sect members were collapsing one by one, but he bid his time, waiting for the golden opportunity to attack.

Just then, a black jade dagger rushed out of the woman's shadow and flew toward her back. At the sight, Li Huowang immediately made his move, pouncing on the woman like a tiger.

Before he could reach her, he saw cold glints flying toward him from every angle. An old robe with quite a few rusted swords and knives was making a beeline for Li Huowang.

Zhuge Yuan's spine sword. RIP brother Zhuge

Chapter 497 - Appearance

Li Huowang felt the sharp knives cutting through the air. He looked up and saw that the robe covered with knives was like a chakram coming down on his head. He immediately cut off two of his fingers and threw them out.

His severed fingers deflected the robe, and Li Huowang took this chance to get close to the woman. Just then, Hong Da's familiar face appeared in front of him as his robe flew back and landed on his dirty body.

Even though Hong Da couldn't see Li Huowang, he somehow managed to sense the latter. "Who's there? Show yourself!"

Li Huowang didn't want to waste time and tore off his own face to slap it onto Hong Da's face.

At the same time, the Daoist in the rear pointed Zhuge Yuan's brush at Li Huowang, and the mask was torn in half. The Daoist then made a seal to reveal Li Huowang.

Li Huowang saw that the woman had already cut the being that rose from her shadow into four parts. The woman was about to swing the spine sword at Li Huowang when the latter sliced open his chest with a dagger and shattered his two lowermost ribs before stabbing it into himself. A wave of pain erupted from Li Huowang. Everyone let out agonized screams along with Li Huowang, and the woman's attack came to an abrupt halt.

Fortunately, Li Huowang had long gotten used to such extreme pain. He recovered quickly and skirted past Hong Da to reach the woman.

Li Huowang didn't want to kill her as she might be instrumental in stopping Natural Disasters. All he wanted was the weapon refined from Zhuge Yuan's corpse. Li Huowang swung his dagger at her slim fingers that were holding the spine sword.

Clang!

Li Huowang was stunned to see his dagger breaking in half.

A small golden Buddha that resembled the woman emerged from her sleeves. The small golden Buddha was roughly the size of only a fingertip, and it cried out at Li Huowang.

It had used its golden skull to break Li Huowang's weapon!

She's a Buddhist?! Li Huowang cursed under his breath and reached for his purple-tasseled sword.

A rusted blade suddenly appeared next to Li Huowang's torso, forcing him to stop. The next moment, his purple-tasseled sword transformed into a black tassel sword with several mahjong tiles hanging from it.

That was close! Hong Da is familiar with my weapon, so he would've discovered my identity if I had taken it out just now!

Li Huowang swiftly skirted around the battlefield to avoid Hong Da's attacks. When he was ready to deal the final blow to obtain the spine sword, he realized that the woman's body was covered in the small golden Buddhas.

The golden Buddhas were either crying or smiling as they wriggled on her face like golden maggots. Somehow, they resembled a man's face.

The woman looked at Li Huowang, and the golden Buddhas shouted, "Amitabha! Place down your sword and be enlightened."

Li Huowang suddenly had the impulse to put down all of his weapons.

He was about to remove both his swords from his back when he stabbed his own arm into his torso to take the two broken ribs before stabbing himself with those ribs once again.

The intense pain cleared his mind, and the situation was reversed.

"AAAAHHH!" Li Huowang stabbed his chest for the third time before running toward the woman who was hugging herself due to the extreme pain.

While running towards her, Li Huowang removed the broken ribs and stabbed himself again and again. Except for Li Huowang, everyone crumpled to the ground from the pain.

Despite the extreme pain, Li Huowang managed to send a kick toward the woman's right hand to knock the spine sword out of her hand.

The golden Buddhas on her hands were about to block his kick when Li Huowang twisted his ribs once again; the Buddhas contorted in pain and messed up the timing.

Li Huowang kicked as hard as he could, and the golden Buddhas sunk into the woman's flesh.

The woman could no longer hold onto the spine sword and was forced to let it go.

Li Huowang immediately grabbed the weapon and felt the warmth on the hilt. He immediately felt better after recovering Zhuge Yuan's corpse.

He got ready to leave once he got what he wanted.

Just then, four triangular flags around the size of a palm flew from the depths of the forest and pinned Li Huowang's shadow to the ground.

Li Huowang felt like his legs were stuck to the ground; he could not move at all. He twisted his head and saw that the Surveillance Bureau members busy killing the Dharma Sect members earlier were coming to assist their fellow members.

The surviving Dharma Sect members had already fled.

What should I do? Li Huowang swept his gaze across everyone's faces. Do I really need to fight for real?

If he used all of his strength, Hong Da would definitely recognize him. If that happened, he would have to kill all of them to protect his identity.

However, the Surveillance Bureau had not done anything wrong, so he didn't want to do that at all. They were just doing their job by killing the evil Dharma Sect members.

Li Huowang wanted to explore his options before resorting to an all-out brawl.

Li Huowang's stomach expanded and contracted rapidly as a deep growling came from his belly.

"Step down before I get angry. I was just messing around with you just now," Li Huowang said.

However, his lie didn't even faze the Surveillance Bureau members. Two of them wearing a monk's robe covered Li Huowang's head with a net soaked in period blood to prevent him from escaping.

The Daoist then raised the brush with both of his hands and mustered all of his strength to point it at Li Huowang's body. The Daoist's hair transformed from black to white.

Li Huowang's color was about to get absorbed into the brush when Li Huowang closed his eyes.

Just then, a massive headless body appeared in front of him. It was none other than Peng Longteng!

"Careful! He has backup!"

The Surveillance Bureau members became wary and gripped their weapons tightly at the appearance of the headless woman.

However, the Daoist holding the brush was even more surprised than anyone. He stared at Peng Longteng in disbelief and exclaimed, "This is impossible! I'm wielding Zhuge Yuan's Kuixing Brush! How come she's still standing?!"

Chapter 498 - Truths And Lies

The remaining four became warier at the Daoist's remark.

Seeing that, Li Huowang suddenly had an idea.

Wait, maybe I don't need to fight them... perhaps I can just scare them away!

Li Huowang took a few deep breaths before thrusting the spine sword into the ground. The next moment, the surroundings shimmered as he muttered, “Hmph! Are you not curious why I'm still alive? Why don't you ask Zhuge Yuan himself? Untraceable silence, hidden in the highest mountains. Living is to avoid being obliterated! Surpass the realms of the Three Worlds! Resurrection!”

The Surveillance Bureau members found their hearts seized by a primal fear when they saw Zhuge Yuan flickering into existence before Li Huowang.

They knew the depths of Zhuge Yuan's strength, and he was definitely much stronger with his own spine sword in hand!

They wasted no time and turned around to run into the depths of the forest.

Moments later, Peng Longteng and Zhuge Yuan's figures disappeared. Li Huowang grabbed his aching head. Transforming two illusions into reality with his current cultivation was way beyond his limits.

This was the best he could do, and fortunately, it had scared them away.

Li Huowang felt like his head was splitting into two, but he endured it and staggered away with the spine sword in hand.

The Surveillance Bureau members had run away, but there was a chance that they'd come back to investigate.

Li Huowang felt his brain swelling to the point that it felt like his skull would explode from the pressure.

“Junior Li, are you alright?” Zhuge Yuan was worried.

“I'm fine. I'm fine.” Li Huowang didn't actually know whether he was fine or not. This was the first time he had used his cultivation to transform illusions into reality. It was not as simple as the apple at the time.

Li Huowang's words had yet to finish echoing in the air when his Dantian trembled, and his surroundings peeled away. “Oh no! My inner sight can no longer contain the primordial breath!”

The moment he blinked, he found himself in the same old hallucination.

However, he was no longer in the ward but was being wheeled around by his mother in a small courtyard boxed in by wire fences.

The people in the prison were relieved to see Li Huowang's atrophied muscles.

Li Huowang recalled what the other side looked like and bit open the restraints on him before dragging his weakened self in a certain direction. He could still remember seeing a small bush in that direction; it was tiny, so it was the perfect place to seek refuge temporarily. He was so weak that even a wild boar could kill him on the other side.

“Son? Son, what are you doing? Get up!” Sun Xiaoqin rushed over to Li Huowang and dusted the dust off of him before attempting to hold him up.

“Mom, trust me! Mom, stop!” Li Huowang exclaimed, stopping her.

Sun Xiaoqin stopped at her son's frantic shouting.

“Mom, I can't get up for now! The Surveillance Bureau is still nearby. Wait, where is my sword?”

Li Huowang looked around and saw a broom near the wall. He took it and hugged it tightly.

He sighed in relief upon seeing the plastic broom handle. Then, he looked up and said weakly, “Mom, I can’t explain this for now, but please calm down. I will become better again soon. Trust me!”

Sun Xiaoqin cried and nodded when she saw Li Huowang holding the broom like a madman while lying on the ground.

Li Huowang also felt sad seeing his mother crying. “Mom, don’t be sad? I can’t come back for now because I’m really busy here. Please endure it. Once things have died down, I can come back again.”

“Mom isn’t sad. Just lie down there, all right? I will go and look for the doctor.”

Seeing his mother leave, Li Huowang cursed himself for making the situation even worse.

However, there was no choice. Of course, he wouldn’t make the same mistake twice. He’d be more careful in the future now that he knew that his primordial breath could become unstable by going overboard.

Li Huowang looked around carefully and sighed in relief upon seeing that no one was approaching him. “Good. At least no one is approaching me. I think I’m safe for now.”

His words had just come out of his mouth when he heard footsteps approaching from behind.

Li Huowang froze as many different thoughts flooded his mind. Then, he stood up shakily and placed the broom on his shoulder before walking out of his imaginary cover with his back facing the footsteps.

He walked forward two steps and pretended that he heard something before scoffing and asking, “What? Why did you guys come back? Do you really think that I’m too kind?”

“Huowang.” A familiar voice echoed.

Li Huowang was stunned by the soft voice, but he turned around almost immediately and saw Yang Na looking at him with teary eyes from the other side of the wire fence.

Yang Na had gotten so thin that Li Huowang could see her bones, and she didn't come here by herself. An old man wearing round glasses was standing behind her.

Li Huowang recognized the old man, as he was Yang Na's father.

He used to get along with her father well, and Yang Na's father always teased Li Huowang whenever he came over to Yang Na's house.

But that was all in the past; he was no longer as kind to Li Huowang as before. In fact, his gaze was filled with contempt as he glared at Li Huowang.

"Do you see that? He's the Li Huowang that you've been thinking about day and night! How much longer are you going to be stuck in your delusions?"

Yang Na bit her lips and cried.

Li Huowang's heart quivered. No, I cannot be distracted here. I'm still in danger on the other side. This is fake! How come Yang Na appeared the moment I found myself stuck in this hallucination? This is fake, and Yang Na is fake! But since there are two of them... Are they Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui?

"Miaomiao? Li Sui? Is that you? Give me a sign if it's you!" Li Huowang shouted at the two behind the wire fence.

Seeing that, Yang Na's father dragged Yang Na away, saying, "Now do you see how hopeless he is? Let's go! Forget about Li Huowang, and don't even think about seeing him again!"

As Li Huowang stared at Yang Na's distant figure, he suddenly thought of something. No! This side must be real, too! I'm going to make it real once I've cultivated the "Truth"! In other words, this Yang Na is real, too! I can't let her go.

Two conflicting thoughts split Li Huowang's mind into two parts. In the end, Li Huowang's face became bitter as he clenched his fist and smacked his head numerous times. “ AAAAAAH! ”

Chapter 499 - Yang Na

“What a crazy bastard!” Yang Na’s father stared at the howling Li Huowang and hated him even more. Her daughter became depressed all because of him.

He then held Yang Na’s skinny wrist and tried pulling her away forcefully.

Li Huowang looked at the two of them getting further and further away. His eyes were bloodshot when he collapsed in front of the wire fence. “They will turn back! Yes, that’s right! They will turn back!”

Li Huowang stared at their back without blinking as he tried to control the primordial breath within his body that he couldn’t detect in this world.

“Come back! Turn around! TURN AROUND!” Li Huowang pressed his face onto the wire fence, causing his face to have a checkered mark.

Yang Na suddenly shook off her father’s hands and ran back to him with tears streaking down her face. Li Huowang smiled, “Hahaha! It worked! I can turn this hallucination into reality!”

Li Huowang could swear that he was the happiest he had ever been in his life when he saw Yang Na crying and running toward him. His cultivation was working!

Li Huowang extended his arms through the wire fence and grabbed Yang Na’s hand; his voice was shaking with excitement as he said, “Yang Na, wait for me! Give me three years—no two! Two more years, and we can return to how we were back in school, just like the old times!”

Yang Na shook her head; her black hair was plastered to her face by her tears. Then, she suddenly felt weightless. Her father carried her and slung her over his shoulder to separate her from Li Huowang.

“How much longer are you going to live in this delusion of yours? Can’t you see that he’s a complete lunatic? You have to forget him to be cured! He is going to destroy your life, so forget about him!”

But no matter how hard he tried to pull her away, the two did not let go of each other.

Yang Na used the last of her energy to shove her face toward the wire fence and planted a heavy kiss on Li Huowang’s cracked lips.

The moment Li Huowang felt her soft lips, he suddenly found himself transported back to the time when he first kissed her on the rooftop during that sunset.

He didn’t want to think of anything else and hoped that time would stay still for now.

Unfortunately, time would never stop ticking. Li Huowang also saw Yang Na’s hands becoming red, as she was getting pulled from two opposite directions, so he decided to let go of her.

“Nana! Go back and rest! Two years! I will come and get you in two years!” Li Huowang shouted with all his strength.

Yang Na cried out and screamed as she was carried away by her father.

Li Huowang stopped shouting only after Yang Na disappeared from his view.

He looked at where they had gone for a very long time before he gripped the wire fence and stood up.

He was about to pick up the broom again when he saw Sun Xiaoqin had brought a doctor and three nurses. They had seen what was happening.

“Five people?!” Li Huowang immediately reacted and took a step back as he held onto the broom. He took his stance and got ready to fight, “Don’t come any closer! I will cut down if any of you take even a single step!”

Sun Xiaoqin was hurt by his words and was about to say something when the young doctor pulled her back. He whispered to her, and all of them retreated before the young doctor talked to Li Huowang.

“Li Huowang. Calm down. We won’t approach you for now. Can you tell me why are you so wary of the five of us? What about the four of us?” The young doctor waved his hands, and the three nurses retreated to the building with Sun Xiaoqin.

“Are you in danger on the other side? Are there five people there trying to hurt you? You are not the only one with the same symptoms.”

Li Huowang held his broom like a sword and glared at the doctor. “I just want peace for now. No one does anything to me. I just need some time alone.”

“Of course. We can do so. See, I’m not doing anything to you. Are you waiting to return back to the other side? It’s fine, as long as you don’t lash out or do anything extreme.”

The doctor removed the white coat as he calmed Li Huowang down. He then removed his wig like a hat, shook it off, and wore it back.

“Li Huowang, since I’ve complied with your request, could you help me then? I don’t want to care about you, but I have no choice since I still need to write the report. Do you think you can answer some of my questions? It’s so stressful trying to write a report about you that my hair is falling off.”

The doctor pushed his glasses when he looked at the silent Li Huowang. “Do you not want to say? If you don’t help me, then I won’t help you. I will go and ask for five people to come and capture you.”

“Wait!” Li Huowang looked at the doctor and tried thinking about what was happening on the other side. What was happening in the other world that would correspond to this situation? Is the doctor one of the Surveillance Bureau? No matter what, I should calm him down first and I would probably be safe once I get back to the other side.

Li Huowang hesitated before asking, "What do you want?"

"Nothing. It's just that I don't know what you are thinking after seeing how attached you were to that girl just now. Do you think this side is real or the other side?"

Li Huowang's eyes were shrouded in confusion. "Fake—no real! This is real!"

The doctor nodded and approached Li Huowang slightly, "We should first put away which side is real. Instead, let's talk about why you think this side is fake."

"No!" Li Huowang shook his head and exclaimed, "This side is real! Everything here is real!"

"I know you want to get better soon, but convincing yourself alone just won't work. Let me think... Is it because there had been too many coincidences? Are you unconvinced because every time you come back here, something unrealistic would happen, such as Yang Na's sudden appearance?"

Li Huowang's mind instantly calmed down the moment he heard that. "Did you read my case report? My past doctors are the only ones who are supposed to know that."

"That's not important. I just want you to know that it's not a coincidence. You've been stuck in your hallucination for a long time now, but it doesn't mean that your mind is empty while you're on the other side."

"What do you mean?" Li Huowang frowned.

The doctor approached Li Huowang slowly as he said, "Your subconscious is still gathering information even though you're stuck in your hallucination. If you learn any information that is important to you, your subconsciousness will call you back here. Do you understand what I mean? In other words, the coincidences that you see when you come back here are not entirely coincidences. Your inner self is craving for those events, and it calls you back here whenever you're anticipating something to happen. I did a small experiment once. I told your girlfriend to call your mother while she was feeding you. During the call, I instructed Yang Na to tell your mother that she will be coming to visit you. I was hoping that your subconsciousness would learn that she was coming. The goal of the experiment was to see if you'd 'awaken' due to your subconsciousness calling you back here.”

Chapter 500 - Sworn

The doctor was pleasantly surprised and thrilled that Li Huowang was listening to him.

“Li Huowang, it was all because your subconsciousness managed to hear it. That’s why it woke you up from your hallucination when Yang Na came here to visit. It was not a coincidence. There aren’t that many coincidences in this world. You don’t wake up to that hallucination when something happens there, but the opposite is true, and the hallucination changes according to what happens here.

“What the fuck are you talking about—” Li Huowang suddenly realized something. “Wait, you are right! That makes sense! So this world is real!”

“Hm?” The doctor scratched his wig in confusion. Even though the patient had accepted his explanation, he felt something amiss.

It’s fine. As long as he accepts it. the doctor thought. He looked at Li Huowang and said, “See, if this world is real, doesn’t it mean that side is fake?”

“No! That side is real too!” Li Huowang said without any hesitation. “My subconsciousness detected that I need to wake up here so that’s why the primordial breath in my body leaked out to make me come back to this world! It’s not a coincidence!”

The doctor was confused after hearing what Li Huowang was talking about. Primordial breath? Did he change the entire script just to fit his narrative?

“No, no, no, Li Huowang, you have to listen to me ...”

“No! Shut up! You listen to me! The primordial breath in my body might not just be part of the Heavenly Dao—it might also be a key to two worlds, just like Zhuge Yuan! That makes sense, as your constitutions are special! Yes, that's right! Maybe when the Heavenly Dao was split apart in that crazy world, it traveled through dimensions and got stuck to my body here. That's why I can travel between worlds. This world is real, and that world is real, too! Both worlds are real!"

The doctor was bewildered by what he was hearing about the so-called "primordial breath" and "Zhuge Yuan."

Li Huowang ran up and hugged the doctor. "Thank you, doctor! Everything makes sense now! Anyway, the surroundings are blurring again, so I will have to go back now. We can talk more next time!"

Li Huowang had just said goodbye when he saw the doctor's face being flayed until there was only a flayed dog standing upright.

The bright surroundings turned dark, and Li Huowang was back in the forest once again.

He tried calming himself down. He wanted to share the exciting news, but Li Sui wouldn't understand him at all.

Calm down. I just need to continue cultivating. The other side will eventually become real. I can't give up now. Zhuge Yuan is waiting for me to save him!

Li Huowang took some deep breaths before looking at the skinned dog in front of him. "Li Sui, why are you here? Didn't I tell you to run with your mother? Where is she?"

"Dad, she's behind you."

Li Huowang turned around and immediately sighed in relief when he saw Bai Lingmiao standing there. He picked up Zhuge Yuan's spine sword and approached her. He sounded disgruntled as he asked, "Why did you come back?"

"Senior Li, you said that the Sitting Oblivion Dao is targeting us. I was afraid that you'd be swapped by them if we got separated for too long, so I came back here with Li Sui."

Li Sui chimed in, "Mother said that we can help you."

Bai Lingmiao lowered her head in regret when Li Huowang sighed and hugged her. Li Huowang stroked her white hair and said, "It's fine. As long as you are safe."

Li Huowang coughed lightly when he saw that Zhuge Yuan and everyone else were staring at him. Then, he decided to bring Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui to the carriage.

The chaotic night ended just like that. It was a dangerous night, but Li Huowang still managed to accomplish what he needed to do, so he was quite satisfied with tonight's events.

The next day at noon, Li Huowang reached a small hill next to a waterfall. He hadn't slept a wink and carried three swords on him at all times.

Li Huowang swept his gaze across the tiny yellow flowers dotting the beautiful landscape and nodded with satisfaction.

"Senior Zhuge, what do you think about this place's Fengshui? Not bad right? Let me bury your corpse here." Li Huowang took out his purple-tasseled sword to dig out a grave.

"Junior Li, no need to be in a rush," Zhuge Yuan said. He stared at his own spine, which had been fashioned into a sword on Li Huowang's back, and added, "Junior Li, since you have it now, you should use it instead of burying it."

"What? How can I do that?!" Li Huowang objected, but Zhuge Yuan stopped him with his fan.

"Junior Li, you've risked your life for me too many times now. I am grateful to you, but I'm really worried about how often you risk your life. If my body can be of help to you, I'm more than happy with you using it to ensure your survival."

Li Huowang looked down at the sword in his hands and stared at the shriveled head of Zhuge Yuan, which had become the sword's pommel. He had to admit that it was indeed a good weapon.

He would take it without hesitation if it wasn't for the fact that it was made from the spine of his good friend.

“Junior Li, if one wants to aim for greatness, one must not be shackled down by the mundane. You are surrounded by exceptionally strong enemies. What if that weapon ends up saving you at a critical juncture? You would die without it, and I would die, too. It doesn't matter even if you bury the sword here, as I will still be here with you instead of resting in peace.”

Li Huowang made up his mind at Zhuge Yuan's remark. He placed the spine sword on his back and ran back into the carriage. Moments later, he brought out two bowls and poured water into them before biting his fingertip and dripping his blood into the bowls. Afterward, he poured one of the bowls of water infused with his blood onto the spine sword. Then, he raised the other bowl into the air toward Zhuge Yuan. “Come! Senior Zhuge, we are now sworn brothers! I, Li Huowang, swear that I will do my best to resurrect Zhuge Yuan!”

Zhugue Yuan stood solemnly and looked at Li Huowang drinking the water in the bowl before he himself made a gesture of drinking from an imaginary bowl.

While Li Huowang and Zhuge Yuan were drinking, the Sitting Oblivion Dao's illusion beside them chimed in sarcastically, “You and I have become brothers. We were not born on the same day, but we seek to die on the same day! Ahahahahah!~ ”

Chapter 501 - New Things

Li Huowang's expression was solemn as he gripped the spine sword in his hand. His gaze was focused on a green snake resting on a green bamboo in the distance.

He grabbed the sword tighter as he focused qi on his dantian. Then, Li Huowang slashed out toward the green bamboo.

An invisible sword qi rushed out of the blade, distorting everything it touched into various shapes and colors.

For example, the green bamboo leaves turned yellow and became riddled with insect holes, while the green snake transformed into a flower snake.

The rustling of bamboo leaves echoed incessantly as bamboo poles fell to the ground. As the sword qi gradually dissipated, the distorted scenes gradually returned to their original state.

Li Huowang began experimenting with his new weapon in the bamboo forest, transforming the entire region into a bizarre, distorted area.

After several days of training, Li Huowang gained significant mastery over the spine sword. He could now use "sword qi" to cut an object into three pieces.

In the face of an overwhelmingly powerful enemy, the "sword qi" could even become a rift in space that would transport them to Great Qi.

In essence, this "sword qi" was another layer of history, and it was not something that ordinary artifacts and supernatural powers could withstand.

Moreover, it was invisible, which made it difficult to evade. Most importantly, it could "penetrate" anything. Even someone standing in front of a barrier would find that barrier useless before it.

An hour later, Li Huowang was breathing in ragged pants, astonished by the spine sword in his hand.

He couldn't help but acknowledge that this artifact forged with a Twisted One's corpse was indeed powerful. It surpassed any other magical artifacts he had ever possessed.

Fortunately, he had engaged in close combat with that woman before. The battle would have been challenging if she had kept her distance and had used this spine sword against him from afar.

With this sword, my strength has increased by at least forty percent. Li Huowang thought as he picked up a piece of white cloth from the ground to wrap around the sword.

"Dad, why are you wrapping it with a cloth?" Li Sui asked curiously. She was squatted nearby and had been staring at Li Huowang from the sidelines.

"I got this thing from the Surveillance Bureau, and it also has a striking appearance that will definitely attract attention. If I don't cover it up. If the Surveillance Bureau finds out that I have this thing on me, there are going to be consequences."

"What consequences?"

"You... sigh... They will hunt us down."

Li Huowang picked up some bamboo fragments from the ground and wrapped them around the sword, making it appear like a bulky and great sword from the outside.

With that, he took out several black talismans and slapped them on the sword. Of course, the talismans were useless and had no powers.

"Dad, what are these talismans for?"

"They're fake talismans I drew to deceive people. I can't even understand what I drew, so others naturally won't understand it either. Most people will keep their distance from things they don't understand."

“So, it’s all about deception?”

With everything prepared, Li Huowang returned the sword to his back and walked toward the carriage with Li Sui.

“Dad, don’t you find it burdensome carrying so many swords? How about I help you carry them?”

Li Huowang threw the Luoism’s bronze coin sword to Li Sui and said, “Help me carry this one, then.”

Li Sui wrapped seven or eight tentacles around it; the tentacles burrowed in and out of the coin holes. Clearly, Li Sui was delighted to have a new weapon. “Thank you, Dad.”

“Why thank me? I didn’t give that to you; I just want you to carry it. Give it back to me when I need it.”

“Oh..”

Li Huowang smiled wryly at Li Sui’s dejected reply. He reached into his hat and patted Li Sui’s skinless forehead.

“It’s okay; you can use it whenever I’m not using it.”

“Yay!” Li Sui exclaimed in delight.

Li Huowang shook his head helplessly in response. Despite her intimidating appearance, Li Sui was still a child. Of course, Li Huowang could be blamed partly for Li Sui’s personality and mannerisms. When Li Sui was still in his belly, he had taught her to appear naive to prevent inviting trouble upon herself. Now, it seemed to be a bad call.

“Stop playing around. Let’s go back.”

Li Huowang led Li Sui back to the carriage. The carriage wheels began to turn again, carrying them out of the forest.

Li Huowang still had no intentions of returning to Cowheart Village. He’d occasionally sneak to the relay station to inquire about the succession war.

Once someone had won, the news would be announced through the relay stations across the country. He planned to return only after everything had settled down.

Unfortunately, the succession war seemed to have come to a screeching halt, which disappointed Li Huowang.

As long as the emperor didn't ascend the throne and those royal family members didn't die cleanly, he would not have a peaceful life.

This situation made Li Huowang a bit annoyed. Under such fearful circumstances, it wasn't easy for him to find somewhere quiet to cultivate.

"Stop pushing the horse. Let it rest. It doesn't matter whether it runs faster or slower." Li Huowang said to Li Sui, who was driving the carriage.

Then, he turned to Bai Lingmiao, who was holding a book, and asked, "Can you still see what's written in the book?"

Although Bai Lingmiao's eyes still looked a bit pinkish, they were mostly white. At first impression, she actually appeared to be blind.

"Senior Li, I can see," Bai Lingmiao said. She stretched her slender fingers to touch the characters on the page. "Although I can't see with my eyes anymore, I can read by feeling the differences in the parts stained by ink."

"What are you reading?" Li Huowang asked again.

"Some spirit possession techniques. I can no longer perform as a Shaman, so I've become useless. I want to learn something to protect myself, as I don't want to be a burden."

"Everything from the White Lotus Sect is no good. Don't worry; everything is under my control. I can protect you."

Strands of white hair swayed gently on Bai Lingmiao's face as she shook her head. "Senior Li, I can't always rely on you. There will definitely be times that you're away. You're right; everything from the White Lotus Sect is bad, but it's better than nothing."

Li Huowang was stunned. Moments later, he realized that Bai Lingmiao's personality had changed slightly, and she seemed to have become more courageous than before.

“Hold on, don't even attempt to learn that. I suddenly remembered that I have something particularly suitable for you,” Li Huowang said, pulling back the curtain and rummaging through Li Sui's abdomen.

Soon, Li Huowang found the book of talismans he had originally given to Li Sui.

“Dad, that's mine,” Li Sui said with a hint of grievance.

“I know it's yours. What's wrong with letting your mother borrow it to learn?”

Li Huowang placed the book in Bai Lingmiao's hands and said, “Take your time learning what's inside of this book. These talismans are useful both in offense and defense. They also can be used for divination.

“Also, you're different from us. You can use these things without any worries. Your eyes are technically blind, so the side-effects of these talismans are ineffective against you.”

Chapter 502 - Vision

“Really? That’s great!”

Bai Lingmiao carefully took it over and curiously touched the ink stains on it with her fingertips.

Just as Li Huowang was about to help her understand some of the difficult parts, Bai Lingmiao’s eyes widened suddenly, and she said, “Senior Li, there are noises coming from the east. It seems like something is approaching.”

Li Huowang glanced at her, and then he pulled back the curtains before walking out.

Li Huowang walked deeper into the forest and soon saw where the noises were coming from; they were from two carriages moving in a hurry.

They seemed to be trying to drive the carriages into the forest to shake off something.

They were obviously overdoing it. Soon, the carriages were forced to stop by the bushes and tree branches.

Their pursuers caught up to them in no time, and they were a group of thin men in ragged clothing.

They were not quite bandits, and Li Huowang thought they looked more like refugees fleeing for their lives. Wait a minute... could these people all be part of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, and they've come here to put on a show for me?

Li Huowang quietly pondered over the question. Even if they weren’t from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, they could be pawns deployed by the Shai Zi. Li Huowang had to be cautious; they were humans, after all.

However, when Li Huowang saw the haggard bandits pulling crying women and even little girls out of the carriages, he finally decided to take action.

But of course, Li Huowang did not want to fall into a trap, so he decided not to make a move personally.

“Li Sui!” Li Huowang exclaimed.

Li Sui was standing nearby. She took off her hat and revealed her skinless dog face. Li Sui then gripped the bronze coin sword with her tentacles and slashed one of her tentacles in one quick move. Then, she used the oozing black slime to draw chaotic strokes on the turmeric paper.

“Profound understanding intermingles; the five energies surge; golden light speeds through and covers the altar; act swiftly according to the command!”

Li Sui raised the bronze coin sword and thrust it toward the drawn talisman. Her tentacled figure then emerged from the oversized raincoat. She resembled a spider with countless legs as she rushed toward the distant people.

Both the bandits and the victims were terrified at Li Sui’s appearance, and they scattered in all directions.

Li Sui chased after them excitedly, as this was her first ever “fight,” while Li Huowang stared quietly from behind. He stared closely at the victims and bandits; he observed the subtle changes in their expressions and soon came to a conclusion.

They shouldn’t be members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. If they were just ordinary mahjong tiles, I would easily detect them.

Li Sui returned half an hour later and said, “Dad, they said they’re not bad people, and they asked me not to kill them.

“Apparently, a so-called ‘Dharma Sect’ had forced them out of their homes, rendering them homeless. They don’t believe in any gods, so they came out to rob money to buy food.”

Li Huowang handed over the raincoat and hat in his hands. Forced by a so-called ‘Dharma Sect’? How come they’re causing such a commotion?

Li Huowang glanced at Li Sui and advised, “You can’t fully believe what they say. Perhaps they were forced into crime, but judging from their actions earlier, they don’t seem to be just after money.”

Li Huowang took this opportunity to explain what human nature was like, so Li Sui wouldn’t be deceived in the future.

Li Huowang and Li Sui returned to the carriage, where they saw Bai Lingmiao sitting quietly with a book in hand.

“Aren’t you going to ask what happened over there?” Li Huowang sat down beside her.

“No need, I heard everything from here,” Bai Lingmiao’s reply made Li Huowang nod in understanding. Her senses had become even keener than his senses, which was something he hadn’t anticipated at all.

“Let’s move on. It was just a small matter, and the Sitting Oblivion Dao wasn’t involved. If Shai Zi was to make a move, it’d be on a greater scale than this.”

The carriage moved forward slowly until night shrouded the world.

They set up a bonfire and ate some soft dry rations. Li Huowang took advantage of this free time to practice cultivation.

By the time he was done, it was almost daybreak.

Li Huowang leaned against Bai Lingmiao’s legs and closed his eyes. He could barely cultivate during the quiet night, and he’d usually rest on the carriage during the day.

It wasn’t that he couldn’t cultivate on the carriage, but his primordial breath might end up distorting the carriage, transforming Li Sui and Miaomiao into something unrecognizable.

As the carriage swayed gently, Li Huowang gradually fell into dreamland.

Dazed, Li Huowang felt like he was back in primary school taking an exam. His mind was completely blank, and he could not remember anything.

“Huowang... Huowang!” Yang Na was beside him and was winking at him. She pushed her completed paper toward him.

Li Huowang cupped his fist and showed his appreciation before getting ready to copy her answers.

As the tip of the pen touched the blank paper, ripples appeared on the paper, and his own reflection appeared in the ripples.

It started as a blurry black-and-white image, and then it gradually became a clear and colored image.

The sound of pouring rain echoed as heavy raindrops struck the reflection, shattering it into pieces.

Li Huowang was completely soaked, and he leaned over the puddle to shield it from the rain.

As the ripples on the water's surface disappeared, Li Huowang looked at his own reflection and smiled with satisfaction.

“Li Huowang.” A voice echoed from the reflection.

Li Huowang nodded and responded, “Yes, I’m here.”

“Li Huowang.”

“Yes, I’m here.”

“Li Huowang.”

“I’m here!”

“Li Huowang.”

“I’m here!!” Li Huowang roared, and the entire world suddenly became restless; anxious shadowy figures rushed toward him.

They moved quickly, but they couldn't quite catch up to him. He seemed to be stuck in this eternal loop of fear and impatience.

“Stop calling out to me! I’m here!” Li Huowang felt like he was going crazy. He clasped his hands together and smashed the reflection.

The sound of breaking glass echoed, and Li Huowang found himself falling endlessly toward somewhere along with the innumerable glass fragments.

The feeling of weightlessness made Li Huowang curl up instinctively like a baby. He waited quietly for the impact.

Just then, a massive hand reached down from above and grabbed Li Huowang.

When Li Huowang opened his eyes, he found himself in an inverted world. He found himself lying on a cliff while holding someone's hand. It was Zhuge Yuan's hand.

"Brother Li! Help me!" Zhuge Yuan roared, seemingly in extreme agony.

"Don't let go! Don't ever let go! I'll pull you up right now!" Li Huowang exclaimed. He held on tightly with both hands and exerted all his strength.

However, he soon despaired as Zhuge Yuan became heavier and heavier.

Finally, Li Huowang could no longer hold on; Zhuge Yuan fell toward the endless abyss down below.

"Brother Li! Help me! I-It's so painful!"

"Ah!" Li Huowang exclaimed and sat right up. Then, he started gasping for air.

After a while, he heard noises outside the carriage. The rain was here.

Chapter 503 - Dream

“Senior Li? Senior Li?”

Bai Lingmiao called out softly. Before her, Li Huowang was absent-mindedly staring at the soup that had cooled for quite a while.

“Senior Li, what’s wrong?” Bai Lingmiao gently touched his hand, which caused Li Huowang to abruptly snap out of his daze.

“Nothing much. I’m just thinking about the dream from yesterday,” Li Huowang handed the bowl and chopsticks over to her.

“That bad dream? It’s okay; my mother said that dreams are inverse of the truth,” Bai Lingmiao took the bowl and chopsticks, then headed towards the riverbank.

Inverse? Li Huowang stared at Zhuge Yuan in the distance silently.

When Bai Lingmiao returned with the cleaned utensils, Li Huowang shook his head, “Forget it; it’s just a dream after all. Maybe it’s just my mind wandering at night.”

Just as he was about to leave, Li Huowang suddenly noticed someone missing, “Miaomiao, where’s Li Sui?”

“She’s playing in the water not too far away.”

Li Huowang shook his head helplessly and remarked, “She really is just like a child.”

Then, he walked toward the river to find Li Sui.

Li Huowang saw Li Sui’s oversized raincoat, but he didn’t see her playing in the water. Instead, Li Sui was sprawled out by the river like a dog, staring at a few wriggling carps before her.

“You’ve captured those fish, so why are you staring at them instead of eating them?” Li Huowang asked.

“I’ve eaten my share. This is Second Mom’s share. I’m waiting for her,” Li Sui said.

Li Sui's words made Li Huowang retract his hand, which was about to pat her head.

Li Huowang looked at Li Sui with a complex expression. Had she yet to realize that the Second Deity was no more?

Just then, there was movement in the bushes to the left, which made Li Sui perk up. A wild gray rabbit dashed out, prompting Li Sui to lower her head dejectedly, resting it on her crossed forelimbs.

“Li Sui, stop waiting for her. Second Mom is gone and won’t come back.”

For the first time ever, Li Sui didn't believe Li Huowang’s words. “Second Mom will definitely come back. She told me that she would come back .”

“Li Sui!”

Li Huowang’s reprimand made Li Sui feel wronged. “Why won’t you let me wait for Second Mom? She clearly said she would come back.”

Li Huowang sighed deeply, and then he reached out to pick her up from the ground. He then proceeded to stroke her wriggling tentacles. “It’s all over, and we need to move on.”

Just as he said that, Li Huowang heard familiar chewing noises behind him.

“Second Mom!” Li Sui broke free from Li Huowang’s embrace and rushed forward in delight. “I knew you would come back!”

When Li Huowang turned around, he was shocked to see the Second Deity with a red veil. She was picking up the wriggling carps and were stuffing them into her red veil.

This... this is impossible! Li Huowang rushed over in disbelief and lifted the Second Deity’s red veil.

“ Ah! ” Li Huowang was shocked by what he saw, and he suddenly found himself sitting and panting in the carriage while covered in a layer of cold sweat.

Bai Lingmiao took out a white handkerchief and gently wiped away the cold sweat from his forehead, "Senior Li, you've been having bad dreams over these past few days."

Li Huowang didn't answer. He cast a strange gaze at her before looking around.

He then decisively pulled out a dagger from his sleeve and stabbed it into his left forearm.

The piercing pain made Li Huowang sigh in relief. That was a dream just now, and it wasn't real.

"Ah! Senior Li, what are you doing!" Bai Lingmiao knelt down before Li Huowang, and she frantically looked for a needle and thread to suture the wound.

"It's nothing, I'm fine. I just need to... sober up!" Li Huowang exclaimed, twisting the hand holding the dagger.

"Senior Li, why don't you stop cultivating in such a ravenous way? There's no rush now anyway."

"No! I only have two years, and I must seize every moment! It has nothing to do with my cultivation! I think there's something wrong with the dream itself!"

Li Huowang's expression turned serious. Could it be Shai Zi? I've been avoiding other people so they can see no gaps in reality. Does that mean they've decided to try and deceive me through my dreams?

It was just speculation, but Li Huowang had to be cautious. Against a Shai Zi, it was never wrong to be vigilant.

"Miaomiao, Li Sui, have you guys had any dreams these days?" Li Huowang asked the two of them.

"Senior Li, I haven't."

"Dad, what's a dream?"

Li Huowang was slightly relieved. At least, he was the only one suffering.

Li Huowang pulled open the curtains. Then, he turned to the misty forest and roared, "Shai Zi! Stop fooling around! I can't help you with this! Go find someone else!"

His voice echoed pervaded the woods. Apart from startling a few birds, there seemed to be no other response. Li Huowang closed the curtains and turned to Bai Lingmiao, who was still suturing his wound and said, "Let's stop traveling and find a place to settle down instead. We'll stay there for a year or so, and then we'll come back. We have to keep taking it slow!"

The carriage no longer wandered aimlessly on the road, as they headed towards the distant mountains.

Upon arriving at the foot of the mountain, Li Huowang looked around for a sturdy rock wall and picked up his spine sword.

Li Huowang slashed out, carving open a cavity in the cliff. The rocks were sent directly to the Great Qi. After a while, a clean and tidy cave appeared before Li Huowang.

With the carriage serving as the cave's door, the cave dimmed and became silent.

A bonfire was soon made, and it cast an orange light on the rock walls, making the cave feel much warmer.

After eating fragrant buns for dinner, it was time for Li Huowang to cultivate again. He wasn't afraid of Shai Zi while he was cultivating. Even he himself dared not approach a Strayed One that was cultivating the "Truth."

Li Huowang stood guard at the entrance of the cave, and he sat down cross-legged with closed eyes. As he took a deep breath, he used the so-called "inner sight" from his eyes to drag the primordial breath in his body toward the second chakra point in his abdomen.

Li Huowang gradually entered a state of forgetfulness. He forgot about the rain, forgot about Shai Zi, and forgot about everything. In his mind, there were only two things: one was the quiet and bound primordial breath, while the other was his empty Sacral Chakra.

Li Huowang cultivated quietly, seemingly unaware of the ticking time. Just then, his primordial breath seemed to have been attracted by something, and it began to move much faster within him.

When his primordial breath collided with the Sacral Chakra, it shrouded it and started orbiting it at a constant rate.

The faint yellow light of the primordial breath gradually seeped into the chakra point, and six lotus petals with the same color appeared intermittently around the Sacral Chakra point.

Chapter 504 - Zhuge

Success!

Li Huowang excitedly opened his eyes. He was suspended in mid-air, and then he suddenly plummeted toward the unrecognizable ground down below.

As the ground drew nearer, Li Huowang closed his eyes abruptly. I'm falling into a body of water. Good thing I know how to swim!

Splash!

Li Huowang crashed into the water, and the impact propelled water into his mouth.

Li Huowang swam amidst the cold water, and when he opened his eyes again, he discovered that he had already returned to the shore. He turned around and looked at the hard rocks behind him, which caused ripples in the water. He couldn't help but clench his fists in excitement. My ability to cultivate the "Truth" is getting stronger. At this rate, the world over there will become—No! That world is real! That world is real! I'm cultivating the 'Truth' now to resurrect Zhuge Yuan!

With that thought in mind, Li Huowang turned toward Zhuge Yuan in the distance and shouted, "Brother Zhuge, come over here!"

When he saw Zhuge Yuan standing before him again, Li Huowang gritted his teeth and reached out a trembling hand to pat his shoulder. Zhugue Yuan is still alive! Everything that happened in Shangjing was fake! It was all an illusion!

This time, Li Huowang didn't pass through him like usual. Instead, he could make contact with Zhuge Yuan.

The touch felt so realistic as well.

However, it only lasted for a few breaths. After a while, Li

Huowang's face distorted in pain, and he had to let go of Zhuge Yuan's shoulder.

"Dan Yangzi could easily become a half-Immortal using the primordial breath in my body. Why is it so troublesome when I'm the one using it?" Li Huowang pinched his temple lightly to assuage the splitting headache.

"Brother Li, that is natural. The primordial breath you've unintentionally borrowed before was like a fire. Anyone can start a fire, but the bigger the fire, the harder it is to control. The fire you have at the moment is tiny, but it is a fire that truly belongs to you. You have complete control over lighting or extinguishing it or using it for various purposes."

Li Huowang felt much calmer. He didn't need to rush, as the primordial breath in his body was still there.

Although Zhuge Yuan's body only lasted a short time, he truly had a physical body. When he completely mastered the power within him, he would be able to resurrect Zhuge Yuan, just like how Dan Yangzi became an immortal back then.

"I... I can't continue. Brother Zhuge, I need to rest for a while, or else this primordial breath might become unstable again," Li Huowang swayed unsteadily towards the cave entrance. He fell asleep without even saying a word to Bai Lingmiao.

When Li Huowang opened his eyes again, there were crisp chirping sounds outside, which suggested that the rain had stopped. The sunlight streaming into the cave through the cracks proved it was good weather.

"Brother Li, you seem to have slept well without any nightmares this time. Is everything okay now?" Bai Lingmiao scooped up half a bowl of porridge with wild vegetables from the iron pot hanging over the campfire. She brought it over with joy on her face.

"It's just one day and doesn't prove anything. Let's see how it goes later,” Li Huowang picked up the porridge and began to eat ravenously, as he was very hungry at the moment.

After finishing a bowl, Bai Lingmiao scooped up more porridge while Li Huowang continued, “Let’s see how it goes later. If Shai Zi has any more tricks, I’ll have to come up with a plan to stay awake completely.”

“Would not sleeping at all be okay?” Bai Lingmiao served another bowl of porridge.

“Hehe. In this crazy world, even the dead can come back to life. What difference does it make if I don’t sleep? Besides, if Shai Zi has any more tricks up his sleeves, I’ll just have to deal with them then.”

“He better not push me too far. If he does, I’ll report him directly to the Surveillance Bureau!”

Li Huowang stared at Bai Lingmiao, where several white hairs were growing on the left side of her delicate face.

Li Huowang’s expression froze, and he immediately stabbed a dagger into his thigh, but there was no pain.

Li Huowang glared coldly at Bai Lingmiao. “Boss Shai Zi, three times is enough. Aren’t you going a bit too far?”

Bai Lingmiao’s face split open from the white hair, revealing a constantly morphing dice head. “Hong Zhong, it’s a troublesome matter. Since we are fellow disciples, I’ll help you out. But don’t forget that you owe me a favor, and you have to repay it.”

“All right...” Li Huowang was filled with despair and desolation as he nodded in agreement. He himself didn’t understand why he felt so hopeless and desperate.

“Why did you ask for my help?”

“Because... you’re Shai Zi... Even if you tell me the truth, I won’t believe it in the future..”

Li Huowang reached out and pressed his handprint on the contract in Shai Zi’s hand. Just then, he recalled something. This had already happened, and some of his memories had been altered!

To make matters worse, Li Huowang's body itself was resisting his efforts to recall those memories!

"No... no... no!! Don't follow Shai Zi's path! He's deceiving me! It's all fake!"

The scenery before Li Huowang peeled away. A thin, bony hand reached out and grabbed Li Huowang. He was desperately trying to pull himself up from the edge of the cliff.

"Brother Li! Help me! Help me undo it! I'm really... about to suffocate!" It was still Zhuge Yuan speaking, with his eyes filled with longing and pleading. "I don't want to disturb you in your dreams, but you're the only one now who can help me! Help me undo it! Undo the seal!"

It's fake! It's all fake!! Li Huowang swung his arms frantically until he finally broke free from Zhuge Yuan's control and fell into the abyss.

Beneath the abyss was a turbulent sea where yin and yang met...

That was where the Doulao—the authority behind truth and falsehood—resided. It looked at Li Huowang with the Sacred Mountain Ghost's Eye that it had seized from the Surveillance Bureau.

"Drink!" Li Huowang sat up abruptly as if he had been doused with cold water. He immediately pulled out his dagger and stabbed it into his left hand again.

The piercing pain made Li Huowang feel a little safer. Only pain could dispel this uncertainty that seemed both real and illusory.

When Li Huowang regained his senses and looked around, he realized he was lying in the cave again, which was in a very messy state. Bai Lingmiao and Li Sui were looking at him in astonishment. The spine sword had been unbound from the cloth wrapping and lay before him.

“Senior Li, is that person trying to manipulate your dreams again? Was it that person controlling your body and doing those strange things?” Bai Lingmiao’s eyes were filled with deep concern.

“Strange things? What strange things? What did I just do?” Li Huowang hurriedly asked.

“Brother Li, you were struggling on the ground just now, and pulled out that bone sword and untied the cloth. It was as if you wanted to remove the purple talisman from the small head,” Zhuge Yuan beside him spoke up.

Li Huowang looked at the spine sword on the ground, then at Zhuge Yuan’s shrunken head on the sword hilt and the purple talisman on his forehead.

Talisman? Zhuge Yuan asked me to remove it just now... the talisman? Li Huowang looked up at Zhuge Yuan beside them, and he felt a chill run down his spine.

Could it be... Li Huowang reached out a trembling hand to remove the talisman, and Zhuge Yuan’s shrunken head swayed and struggled. At the same time, blood, bones, and flesh began to grow rapidly on the spine sword.

The deformed and incomplete organs hung on the spine like fruits, and peach talismans were interspersed among them. “Ah... finally... Brother Li, thank you so much.”

When Li Huowang heard that, Zhuge Yuan's illusion next to him flickered, seemingly on the verge of disappearing.

Chapter 505 - Shai Zi

This... This is impossible!! Li Huowang looked at Zhuge Yuan before him and retreated in utter shock.

The spine sword from before had now completely transformed. Chaotic flesh and deformed organs intertwined from the spine, growing out like plants.

It hadn't fully grown into a person. It had become a hazy amalgamation of flesh and blood with interspersed organs. It had stopped growing and had become something that seemed more like a monster than a human.

Although this appearance was terrifying, Li Huowang was absolutely certain that this thing was alive! Zhuge Yuan was still alive!

"How come you're still alive? You were clearly dead! I strangled you with my own hands! Your soul was already trapped in my illusions!"

The half-formed Zhuge Yuan that had grown from the spine sword decisively dug out his skeleton left hand from the flesh and used his bony fingers to flick the bloody hair sticking to his temple.

"Brother Li, what are you saying? I am a Twisted One. Even if I have died, the three souls, ten emotions, and eight sufferings should belong to my old self. How could you take them away?"

Li Huowang staggered at that remark, and his face turned extremely pale. He found it difficult to stand steadily. "So... so they were nothing at all?"

As these words came out of Li Huowang's mouth, memories of past events began to flash in his mind.

Li Huowang looked through his memories in a daze. When he broke free from the Immortal family, the Second Deity didn't sacrifice himself. Instead, he came up with a compromise to get the best of both worlds.

And that was to kill the Second Deity with his own hands, turning her into his illusion like Zhuge Yuan!

He had decided to turn them into reality once he had reached the pinnacle of cultivation.

The Second Deity had agreed, and she was even smiling in glee as he killed her!

“Boss Shai Zi, I've just realized that my illusions are fake... Truly and completely fake... The Second Deity cannot be alive; she was just a figment of my imagination...” Li Huowang muttered in a daze as he sat behind the messy food bar.

“So why have you come here to ask for my help? Hong Zhong, you've already killed her. I can't do anything. I'm not a deity,” the chubby Shai Zi said helplessly as he fried dough sticks.

“I'm not asking you to resurrect her; I just want you to help hide the memories I've created. Mix truth with lies, which is what you're good at. Please... I really... I really can't face the illusion of the Second Deity, whom I killed with my own hands.”

“She's obviously fake! But how come she's so real? I can't take it... I really can't take it anymore!”

“Ah, okay then. Since we're fellow disciples, I'll help you this time. But you owe me a big favor this time. You must remember to repay it.”

The chubby Shai Zi's words faded away, and Li Huowang snapped back to reality. He clenched his fists, and his expression turned fierce as he roared, “No! This is impossible! It's all fake!”

“Senior Li, what's wrong with you? Pull yourself together,” Bai Lingmiao reached out to support Li Huowang with tears in her eyes.

Li Huowang felt as if he had caught a lifeline when he saw Bai Lingmiao. He grabbed her slender arm and shook it forcefully.

“Miaomiao! You were there, too, right?!” Li Huowang exclaimed, "Tell me! How did the Second Deity leave back then?! Didn't I strangle her?"

"Senior Li, what are you talking about? Didn't the Second Deity disappear with the Immortal family? What's going on?"

Li Huowang smiled at that remark. Yes, it's all fake! Even if there was something strange with his memories, how could there be something strange with Bai Lingmiao's memories, too?

Just then, Bai Lingmiao's figure rapidly became transparent.

Li Huowang was stunned, but he recovered quickly and roared, "Miaomiao!"

Li Huowang tried to embrace her, but she disappeared like an illusion. He went straight through her.

"Senior Li, what's happening to me..." Bai Lingmiao looked down at her transparent body in bewilderment before vanishing completely.

"Miaomiao!"

"Hong Zhong, don't blame me for that. You didn't return the favor, so I can no longer help you," the chubby Shai Zi said, chuckling as he walked over to Li Huowang. He patted Li Huowang's shoulder with his greasy hand and said nothing.

"Where's Miaomiao? Where did you take Bai Lingmiao?!" Li Huowang stared at Shai Zi with bloodshot eyes as if he wanted to devour the latter alive.

"Hey, you didn't return the favor. As for your woman, I don't know how you created a real one from thin air after you lost her," Shai Zi said, waving his hands in dismissal.

"And did you not hear what I said? If you don't cultivate 'Lies' when you cultivate 'Truth,' you will become a demon. Imagine seeing a living person in front of you; how would you deduce whether they're real or fake? Think about it. Of course, it's a small matter to me. Hehehe~ Help me put that little emperor on the throne, and I'll help you find that woman."

“This is all your fault! This is all your fault!” Li Huowang hysterically reached behind his back and viciously slammed the Profound Records wrapped in flesh on the ground.

Then, he grabbed two barbed iron hooks and stabbed his own abdomen! The barbed iron hooks dragged out Li Huowang's intestines, and he thrust them toward the Profound Records on the ground. The next moment, both heaven and earth seemed to undergo earth-shaking changes, as the world itself changed colors. Everyone's five senses converged on Li Huowang's location.

“Oh dear, what are you doing? What are you trying to do? Trying to rebel against your own boss with the Cang-Qiang Ascension?” Shai Zi retreated without any fear.

Li Huowang felt a gaze sharper and clearer than ever before falling upon him, and he came to a gradual halt upon sensing that gaze.

Once the Profound Records on the floor transformed into a piece of human skin, the gaze from Ba-Hui up above vanished as well.

Li Huowang knelt on the ground, gasping for air. The extreme pain throughout gradually dissipated.

The Cang-Qiang Ascension had no effect on the Shai Zi before him, as the Shai Zi's true self wasn't here. The chubby man was just a pawn of that Shai Zi.

Now that Miaomiao was in his hands, he absolutely couldn't act impulsively if he wanted to save her!

The opponent had good cards to play, while he had no cards in hand. Any reckless moves would only worsen the situation, especially when playing against Shai Zi.

Li Huowang gritted his teeth as he endured the pain. He tremblingly pushed the hooked large and small intestines back into his abdomen.

“Shai Zi! Didn't you tell me to return to Shangjing? Fine! I'll assist Ji Lin in ascending the throne! And you shall return Bai Lingmiao to me with not a single hair harmed!”

“Help Ji Lin ascend for me, and then I’ll help you find your white-haired girl. But... Hong Zhong, let me make this clear—I didn’t tie her up. We’re practitioners of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. If we were to do something as foolish as kidnapping, it would bring shame to our ancestors!”

Li Huowang sneered inwardly. He would never believe a Shai Zi’s words. Li Huowang was also convinced that everything had been a part of the Shai Zi’s trap!

Even meeting the Surveillance Bureau member wielding the spine sword had to be a part of the trap as well. It was all to deceive Li Huowang into believing that he owed Shai Zi a favor!

No! Everything could have started way earlier as well! Perhaps Li Huowang was also at fault when he stumbled upon Ji Lin being deceived during the Double Third Festival!

This was a Shai Zi’s methods—the methods of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!

Chapter 506 - Truth Or Lies?

“Come now. Yikes! Be careful. Slowly stuff it back, or your intestines will entwine.” Shai Zi carefully helped Li Huowang up and sat him on the carriage. He then started rummaging around in the carriage. “Hong Zhong, where is the Golden Wound medication? I can’t seem to find it.”

Li Huowang stared at Hong Zhong’s back and was puzzled by what was happening.

“Ah! Found it!” Shai Zi took out a bag of Golden Wound medication and sprinkled some on Li Huowang’s wound. He clapped his hands in satisfaction once he was done treating Li Huowang. “You’re heavily injured. Why don’t you rest? I will go boil some bird nests and make you a serving of donkey hide gelatin congee .”

“Why do I need to help Ji Lin succeed to the throne? Is he a Sitting Oblivion Dao member?” Li Huowang asked, trying to piece together the puzzle pieces to determine Shai Zi’s goal.

“You’re thinking too much. How could the imperial family be part of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? They are the people chosen by the gods themselves. Don’t worry about the ‘why’ first. You just need to help him ascend to the throne, and your job is done. Of course, you can find me if you want in on the next steps as well after that. Don’t worry; there are people helping us in the palace.” Shai Zi chuckled and patted Li Huowang’s shoulder. “Do you not need me to take care of you? Then I will leave first. Once you’ve recovered, you need to make haste and go back to Shangjing. There are many people scrambling to get official positions, and everything is in chaos.”

Shai Zi covered Li Huowang’s body with a thin blanket before leaving.

Li Huowang stared in the direction where Shai Zi had disappeared before smashing the wooden floor of the carriage with his right fist.

Li Huowang understood them the most. He was afraid that even if he helped Ji Lin succeed to the throne, Shai Zi still wouldn’t give Miaomiao back to him. It would be an insult for a trickster to trust someone blindly!

Shai Zi would definitely use Bai Lingmiao as a hostage and squeeze out every single drop of value Li Huowang had to offer!

However, he was already on the web, so he had no choice but to follow the path that Shai Zi had laid out for him. Of course, Li Huowang swore to find a way to break out of Shai Zi’s intricate plan once he learned of the latter’s goal.

He definitely wouldn’t be able to do so alone, so he needed to find a way to recruit someone to help him.

He might be able to find a way through Ji Lin or maybe through the Surveillance Bureau.

It was a faint hope, but he had no choice because the enemy had the upper hand here, and worst, his enemy was Shai Zi!

The pressure on his heart was so huge that he could barely breathe.

But he did not give up. Instead, his hatred fueled his heart. He needed to save Bai Lingmiao!

“Hong Zhong, do you think Shai Zi is telling the truth? You might’ve really owed him a favor last time. Bai Lingmiao really did suddenly disappear, and I don’t think he used the technique of the Sitting Oblivion Dao.”

The fake Hong Zhong illusion suddenly chimed in.

“You are not qualified to trick me with Shai Zi!”

Li Huowang struggled to stand up before he started keeping the stuff within the cave.

“Sure, I might not have the qualifications to trick you, but you’ve seen yourself that the sword was alive and still on the ground. I don’t think it’s possible that you would have two Zhuge Yuans.”

Li Huowang looked at the spine sword covered in flesh on the ground. Zhuge Yuan’s head on the pommel of the sword also looked at Li Huowang at the same time.

“Junior Li, long time no see. Don’t worry, even though my body is destroyed to this point, I can still help you with the trouble with Shai Zi.”

“No, you won’t. You’ve been deceived by Shai Zi, too. You think you are Zhuge Yuan, but you’re not Zhuge Yuan. Zhuge Yuan is right next to me. The Sitting Oblivion Dao can trick themselves into thinking like they’re someone else. I’ve seen enough. I’ve met someone who managed to trick themselves into thinking that they were Li Huowang, but they were not.”

Li Huowang hugged his bloody abdomen before picking up the purple talisman on the ground.

Zhugue Yuan’s face changed when he saw Li Huowang approaching him with the purple talisman.

“Junior Li, what’s wrong with you?! Since when did you have a Zhuge Yuan beside you? That Zhuge Yuan is just an illusion! I’m different from the Sitting Oblivion Dao on Xing Island!”

“Don’t try to trick me like Shai Zi did! The illusions are real because they know things that I don’t know! I’m a Strayed One, so the souls of those I had killed will get attached to me! The Second Deity did not become my illusion, so I didn’t murder her! I also don’t owe Shai Zi any favors. He had kidnapped her! Everything is fake and is part of his trap! More importantly, your behavior is different from the Zhuge Yuan I’m familiar with!” Li Huowang roared, and the illusions flickered.

Zhuge Yuan's eyes widened in shock as Li Huowang placed the purple talisman on his forehead. Zhuge Yuan's head quickly shrank to the size of a fist.

Even though his head had shrunk, the meat and organs on the sword didn't. They hung on the spine sword like grapes.

The fake Hong Zhong illusion wanted to say something but Zhuge Yuan's illusion stopped him. "Don't worry. If the talisman can be placed onto the sword, it can be removed as well. Let me think about something first."

"Hoh. What are you thinking?"

Zhuge Yuan opened his fan. "Let me think whether I'm fake, or the sword is fake, or whether both of us are fake while the real Zhuge Yuan has returned back to the Three Ancient Ones."

Li Huowang sighed when he saw the spine sword not moving anymore. He picked up the cloth on the floor and slowly wrapped the sword.

The cloth was dyed red due to the blood. Since it grew organs and flesh on it, the cloth could not cover the sword completely. There were bones, flesh, and even some hair squeezed out from the gaps of the cloth.

But Li Huowang didn't care. He only needed to cover the sword enough that people wouldn't recognize what it was.

Now that the spine sword had grown into this form, he was certain that even the purple-lipped woman wouldn't be able to recognize it.

"Dad, let me help you." Li Sui walked over and carried the misshapen sword into the carriage before helping the injured Li Huowang into the carriage.

"Dad, where are we going?"

"Shangjing!"

Li Huowang commanded the carriage to move forward. The wheels rolled and they left the ravaged mountain.

They had just left when a massive foot stepped on the marking of the wheels. It was Shai Zi!

“Hehehe~ It’s so fun to trick Strayed Ones.”

Chapter 507 - Journey

“Dense fragrances call upon the universe; send the incense to the Heavenly Gates. Golden crows soar across the clouds, and the jade rabbits glimmer like the kaleidoscope~”

Lu Zhuangyuan was smoking his pipe while standing in the carriage when he heard a familiar chanting. He turned around and saw his youngest son, Lu Xiucan, practicing a technique near the campfire. Lu Xiucan was holding an incense stick with his butt up while chanting toward a drawing.

“ Hmph! If only you were as filial to me as you are with your training,” Lu Zhuangyuan said.

However, Lu Xiucan ignored Lu Zhuangyuan as he continued chanting.

“May the constellations shine and the rainbow clouds gather. The purple palace reveals the sacred castle, and the goddesses invite the immortals. Welcome us after the long journey with flying clouds and horses. Accept our humble greetings~”

Lu Xiucan chanted three times in delight before stabbing the incense sticks into the ground.

He prayed three times to the drawing before putting it away. Puppy had been lying on the ground beside him out of boredom.

“Xiucan, what are you chanting all day? We were woken up by you so early in the morning. I've never seen you chant so much even though you've been cultivating the techniques of the White Lotus Sect.”

Lu Xiucan scoffed at him. “I’ve finished cultivating the First Words. I’m starting on the Second Drawing, so it’s not strange that the requirements are different. Even though you can be proud of the items that your master has given you, that’s all you’d amount to in your life. You cannot improve by relying on external tools. Unlike you, I'm becoming stronger every day, and I will surpass you soon!"

Puppy waved his hands to dismiss Lu Xiucan before heading back to sleep.

“ Yiyi~ Ah~ Ah~ ”

The sound of Lu Zhuangyuan's disciples practicing their vocals first thing in the morning irritated Puppy a lot. He buried his head into the pillow to try and sleep.

However, there was no way he could sleep in such conditions. He stood up in frustration and walked toward the stream to wash up.

The world was slowly warming up, but the water in the stream was still cold, so it felt good to stand in it.

When Puppy went back to the campfire, Luo Juanhua had finished making breakfast. Today's meal was wild vegetable soup with noodles and dried radishes.

Puppy ate the dried radishes and drank the soup before shaking his head. "It's not as good as Xiaohai's meal."

Luo Juanhua was not someone who'd coddle Puppy; she already knew Puppy's position in the village, so she knew that he was not that important.

“ Aiyo, Lord Puppy. This is our Lu Family's food. If you don't like it, you can go back home.”

“Aiyo, do you really think that I want to travel? It's been so long since Senior Li left, and he hasn't come back yet. If it weren't for the fact that the village needed someone to go out and find him, do you really think that I'd come out and travel? There's no meat to eat; how can we have the energy to travel? Wait a minute, I thought you guys were earning a lot of money while performing those pink shows. Why are you not spending money?” Puppy complained while eating.

Lu Zhuangyuan revealed a salted egg out of nowhere, seemingly in a magic trick. He placed the oily yolk into his own three-year-old granddaughter's bowl before placing the egg white into Puppy's bowl.

"Lord Cai, please don't leave. Things are very chaotic right now, and the Lu Family still needs you to guard us along with that dog. We're not daring enough to travel to Shangjing without you."

Lu Xiucan stood up furiously and roared, "Who are you calling a dog!?"

They were about to fight, and Puppy had no choice but to stop them.

Puppy was just trying to have fun. If Gao Zhijian and Xiaoman learned that he had run back home halfway, they'd certainly beat him to death.

Their breakfast was brief and noisy. Soon, the Lu Family's three carriages continued their journey to Shangjing.

"Shangjing, the capital city of the Liang Kingdom. I've heard that it's the largest city in the world. It must be even more prosperous than Yinling City." Luo Juanhua was looking forward to the city because she had only heard of it when she was young. She had been fantasizing about how grand Shangjing had to look even in her younger days.

The entire Lu Family was thrilled as well. They were hyped up by the peddlers' words about Shangjing.

Lu Juren was walking silently as he carried his daughter in his arms when Lu Zhuangyuan approached him.

"Juren, we've earned quite a lot since we came to the Liang Kingdom. Once we reach Shangjing, we can ask them how much a plot of land costs. If it's slightly above our budget, we can always borrow more from the Daoist, and then we can build our own theater in the largest city in the world!" Lu Zhuangyuan said with shining eyes. It was not an exaggeration to say that he had dedicated his whole life to building one.

What had been a dream was now within his reach, and it could come true once he was in the Liang Kingdom.

“Once we have the theater, we can relocate our ancestral graves there, too. Once we do that... Hehehe... it feels so great just thinking about it.”

Lu Zhuangyuan was still stuck in his fantasies when Puppy came over and said, “So that’s why you agreed so readily back to travel to Shangjing. I guess you weren’t trying to look for Senior Li.”

“Of course, we are there to find him. I just think that the young Daoist is so strong to the point where we don’t have to worry about him. I doubt we can do anything to help him if he really encountered a problem.”

Lu Zhuangyuan thought of Li Huowang as an Immortal who could fly to the heavens at any moment.

“Heh. Hard to say. What if his illness relapses while traveling?”

They walked and talked, but their chatters soon stopped. The sun was high in the sky, and everyone felt so hot that they didn’t have the energy to talk anymore.

Fortunately, they found a pond near the entrance of a village. They ran over in excitement to wash their faces and drink some water from the pond.

“Dad, we finally found a village. Why don’t we ask to borrow their kitchen? The sun is too hot for us to start a fire outside.” Luo Juanhua was wiping her daughter’s sweat while complaining to Lu Zhuangyuan.

Lu Zhuangyuan nodded. “Alright, but don’t give them any money first. We should ask if they want us to perform. If they want us to perform, we could earn ourselves some money and maybe a meal.”

Feeling refreshed, they entered the village with their carriages. The village was big, and many people peeked out of their door and pointed at the Lu Family.

Lu Zhuangyuan did not mind them and looked around. He wanted to find the richest person in the village to perform. Regular villagers had no money to hire performers. He looked around the village before he saw something that piqued his interest. One of the houses was drying tobacco leaves in the courtyard.

Lu Zhuangyuan shouted at an old man smoking in the house. “Sir, how much for your tobacco?! I want to buy some because I just finished some of mine—what?! Why is it so expensive? You don't have to cut and dry them for me. I want raw ones.”

Lu Zhuangyuan haggled aggressively before buying a big bundle of raw tobacco leaves with five coins.

“Hehe.” Lu Zhuangyuan put away the tobacco in delight. I just have to add in some chili leaves, and this bundle can last me half a year!

“Father! There are some noises over there. The noises sound like gongs to me!”

Chapter 508 - Daoist

Lu Juren's voice immediately grabbed the attention of Lu Zhuangyuan. "Gongs? Is it a wedding or a funeral? Let's go!"

They were very sensitive to the sound of gongs as performers.

They followed the sound as they walked through the main street of the village.

Lu Zhuangyuan could barely stop himself from grinning when they heard the sound of gongs coming from a massive estate, but his smile vanished when he saw what was happening.

The villagers were standing around a Daoist wearing yellow robes. He was wearing a black Daoist crown and was conducting a ceremony.

The Daoist was playing the gong while circling around a man being tied to a bed.

The man tied to the bed trembled and turned pale upon hearing the gong. It appeared that something was trying to get out of the man.

"Dad, let's go. The Daoist is busy trying to exorcize the man. I think it doesn't concern us," said Lu Juren.

He was about to leave when his father stopped him. "Let's just wait and see. If that man dies, we could perform at his funeral."

Lu Xiucan pushed through the people and saw that the Daoist was equipped with a bronze coin sword at the back, just like Li Huowang.

"What a coincidence. The bronze coin sword looks the same as my master's bronze coin sword..." Lu Xiucan muttered to himself, which caught the attention of Puppy.

"Ha!" The man tied to the bed suddenly sat up straight like a corpse before breaking his restraints and hopping into the air.

The villagers shouted out of fear and ran away.

“You wretched beast! How dare you try to harm the innocents in front of my watch?!”

The Daoist slammed the gong into the man’s abdomen, causing the latter to curl up in pain.

“The ever-changing constellations! Tie up the evil beings and protect our bodies! Clear our minds and calm our hearts! Preserve our spirit and our souls!”

The Daoist grabbed a fistful of rice before waving his closed fist on the candle fire and throwing the rice at the man.

“AAAAAAAAAAH! ” The man screamed as black smoke rose from his body where the rice hit him.

A black smoke flew out of the man’s mouth and disappeared under the sunlight. The man slumped to the ground afterward.

A rich man wearing brocade robes ran over and cried when he found out that the man was still alive after the exorcism. The young man still had the strength to call him father. The rich man immediately kneeled and thanked the Daoist.

“What a legend. He’s a real immortal! He saved that man.”

“Thank the heavens. If it wasn’t because of the Daoist, the Zhang’s family only son would’ve died.”

Lu Xiucan scoffed when he heard the people talking around him. “This is nothing. If my master were here...”

However, everyone ignored Lu Xiucan. They were all attracted to the feast that the Zhang family patriarch had just announced.

“Everyone! We have dinner tonight! Also, we get to perform, too!” Lu Zhuangyuan immediately approached the patriarch.

After talking for a bit, he managed to convince the patriarch to hire him to perform tonight.

The Lu family immediately started their work by setting up the stage and doing their makeup. Time was of the essence.

On that same night, Lu Zhuangyuan performed vigorously with his son and disciples. The Zhang family patriarch and all of the guests were very pleased with their performance.

The feast lasted late till the night, and the guests eventually left.

Lu Xiucan looked at the Daoist at the main table with hesitation.

“Look properly. Does the sword on his back belong to Senior Li?”

“It’s too far away for me to see. I need to hold it in my hands to confirm it.”

Puppy rolled his eyes. “Can you be more reliable?”

“Should I ask him instead? If Master’s sword is in his hands, he might know where he is right now.”

“That’s stupid. What if he stole it from Senior Li? What if he has a grudge with Senior Li?”

While the two of them were arguing, they suddenly saw the Daoist whispering something to the patriarch. The patriarch followed the Daoist with a serious look on his face.

“They’re leaving! Quick, follow him!” Lu Xiucan slowly tailed after them without hesitation.

They left the outer courtyard and entered the inner courtyard. The place was quiet, so Lu Xiucan overheard their conversation.

“Heavenly Master, the evil spirit is still not defeated?”

“Yes, that’s right. Your son’s possession and the evil spirit are connected. The evil spirit has to be destroyed, or your house will never know peace.”

“What should we do?”

“Don’t worry, I am here. The evil spirit might have possessed an object. We need to find it first.”

The Daoist waved, and an old bronze compass appeared in his hand. He made a seal with his other hand while staring at the compass.

Lu Xiucan was hiding behind a fake boulder in the courtyard when a hand patted his shoulder. He was so startled that he almost exclaimed.

He turned around and saw it was Puppy. He glared at Puppy in anger.

However, Puppy ignored him and pointed at the Daoist. "Zhang Yuanwai, be careful! The evil being is possessing that object!"

"Heavenly Master, how can it be? That's the treasure of our Zhang family!"

The so-called treasure was a clay Bodhisattva that was sitting upside down. The Bodhisattva's face had melted off.

"Be careful!" A dark smoke fell from the ceiling and covered the patriarch.

The patriarch fell to the ground and was rendered unconscious.

Puppy and Lu Xiucan saw the black smoke entering a massive black robe that was hanging in a room.

After a while, the black robe stood up despite having no hands and feet. It walked out of the room and approached the Daoist.

The Daoist waved his arms, and the clay Bodhisattva flew into his robes. Then, he started scolding the black robe.

"The Daoist is rearing the evil spirit!" Lu Xiucan whispered furiously to Puppy.

Puppy pointed with his mouth toward where they came from, and they slowly left the courtyard.

"What did you say?! There are people in the courtyard?! How come you only told me that now?" the Daoist roared.

Lu Xiucan and Puppy heard the Daoist's roars. They barely managed to take two steps forward before the black robe stood before them.

Puppy took out his scepter and waved it at the black robe. The black robe crumpled to the ground, and then they started running away.

“Hahaha! To think it's the tongue of a Strayed One! This is a joyous day for me!”

Translator's Thoughts

There will be a minor correction here. Instead of wishwood, what Puppy holds should be a scepter like this one:

So the Strayed One's tongue scepter is quite literally the tongue nailed onto a wood, making it look like a scepter... Something like this

Chapter 509 - Impossible

Puppy was so shocked that his soul almost flew out when the Daoist chased after them.

He had never thought the treasure Li Huowang gifted him would elicit such a reaction.

The Daoist was holding the bronze coin sword as he chased after them. He was about to block off their escape when Puppy waved the scepter furiously.

However, the Daoist was already prepared against the attack.

A small paper doll made out of talisman papers flew out of the Daoist sleeves and took the brunt of the attack.

When Puppy waved the scepter, the paper doll fell to the ground.

The Daoist only needed that small window of opportunity to attack. Before Puppy could wave it for the second time, the Daoist whipped his bronze coin sword toward them.

“Ju Lun Tuo Dian Ti Wu She!” the Daoist chanted, and the red threads of the bronze coin sword extended, transforming the sword into a whip that slammed into Puppy’s hand.

The Daoist pulled the whip back, and Puppy’s hands were torn open. One of Puppy’s fingers and the scepter flew into the air.

“AAAAAAAH!” Puppy clutched his hand, which was almost severed from his wrist. His mind went blank; he had no idea what to do now.

“Hmph! So it’s only two little whelps.” The Daoist smiled evilly and squinted. He shook his wrist, and the whip flew toward Puppy’s head!

I dead! Puppy thought as he stared at the bronze coin whip moving toward him.

At the critical juncture, a hand appeared out of nowhere and grabbed the bronze coin whip.

The sharp coins cut into the hand, but it only tore open the skin.

“Oh?” The Daoist was surprised and looked at the youth holding onto his whip.

The bronze coin sword was capable of cutting down evil beings. He was wary of the person who managed to stop his bronze coin sword with a bare hand.

With a whoosh, the bronze coins in Lu Xiucan's hands were pulled back. The Daoist changed the whip back into a sword. “Brat, which sect do you come from?”

It was better to make sure of the enemy's background before acting. He was afraid that he would anger an extremely strong sect if he ended up beating up the two youths in front of him. The Strayed One's tongue wouldn't be worth it then.

“My Master is Li Huowang! You are dead if you touch us!” Lu Xiucan shouted, acting tough.

He thought he was invincible to bladed objects after he had learned of the White Lotus Sect's technique, but to think that attack managed to slice open his hand. In the end, Lu Xiucan had no choice but to hope that he could scare the Daoist away using his Master's name.

Li Huowang? Never heard of him. Also, he never announced which sect he is from. I guess he and his Master are some random cultivators. the Daoist thought.

Puppy was certain that the Daoist was not afraid of Li Huowang, as the latter had yet to run away.

Puppy panted and held his bloody hand before taking a few steps forward. He threatened the Daoist, “We are from the White Lotus Sect! Don't you dare touch us! We have a lot of people at the White Lotus Sect!”

The Daoist revealed a wry smile. “Oh~ You are from the White Lotus Sect. This makes it easier.”

The Daoist then whipped the bronze coin sword toward Puppy and Lu Xiucan.

Everyone in this world knew that the White Lotus Sect no longer had any patrons and were a bunch of weaklings. They could only run around and hide like mice. They couldn't do anything grand as well or the Surveillance Bureau would find them.

Lu Xiucan grabbed the whip with both hands and shouted at Puppy, “Can you stop talking?!”

Puppy turned around and ran away without even looking back.

“You motherfucker! Puppy, you coward with no balls!” Xiucan howled in anger as Puppy disappeared into the darkness.

“Hahaha! I thought the White Lotus Sect preaches camaraderie. I thought all of you were sworn brothers upon entering the sect. Was that really your sworn brother?” the Daoist taunted and continued his assault.

Even though Lu Xiucan learned a good technique, all it did was just increase the thickness of his skin. He could only suffer a one-sided beating against the Daoist. Soon, he was covered in cut wounds and was forced to curl up on the ground.

The Daoist smiled when he saw the youth on the ground. Then, he waved his hand, and an inkwell appeared.

“It’s time to end this.” He dipped his fingers into the inkwell and covered the bronze coin sword in the ink. The black ink seeped down the sword like tar.

Lu Xiucan was afraid and knew there was no hope of escaping. He cried and begged for mercy.

When the Daoist was ready to cut down Lu Xiucan, something flashed in the darkness. A small needle wrapped in white thread flew toward the Daoist’s face.

The needle almost hit the Daoist’s face when something burst out from his neck. A Nascent Soul with a beard appeared and bit the needles with its rotten teeth.

“Hm?! You dare try to attack me from the dark?” the Daoist roared, furious. He was visibly upset with Puppy’s attack.

The Daoist pointed at where the needle was shot out from and the black robe flew upward. It streaked through the air, chasing after Puppy.

The Daoist then glared at the trembling Lu Xiucan. He raised the bronze coin sword, which was drenched in black ink, and brought it down toward Lu Xiucan’s neck. He decided to kill one before chasing the second.

“AAAAAAAH! The mud comes from chaos, and everything bursts into existence with the growth of the white lotus! Heavenly Mater, help me!!!” Lu Xiucan shouted and begged for protection with a sense of humility that he never had before toward the Heavenly Mater.

Just as the bronze coin sword tore through Lu Xiucan’s clothes, a brilliant white light burst out. The bronze coin sword’s red thread was torn apart, and the sword exploded. The inked bronze coins flew everywhere.

The Daoist was shocked, and he took a few steps backward. “Impossible! The Heavenly Mater is supposed to be dead!”

Lu Xiucan realized that he was still alive. His clothes were in tatters. When he stood up, a piece of cloth fell out from inside his clothes.

The cloth spread open on the ground, and the cloth depicted a simple white lotus. The Daoist retreated upon seeing the lotus.

“No! This can’t be! The Heavenly Mater should be dead! The White Lotus Sect are just a bunch of abandoned ragtags!”

No matter how he tried to convince himself, however, he was retreating instinctively. By the time he was done shouting, his back was already pressed against the wall.

Chapter 510 - Alive

The Daoist in yellow robes looked at Lu Xiucan kneeling on the ground and hesitated. Is he tricking me?

In the end, he dared not risk his own life. He made a seal with his hands and phased through the walls of the courtyard.

The black robe flew into the air to follow its master.

Puppy realized that they had narrowly escaped death from the Daoist's hands.

He gripped his bleeding hand and approached the stunned Lu Xiucan.

"Hey, what did you do just now?" Puppy said, giving Lu Xiucan one kick to the knee. "How did you scare him away?"

Lu Xiucan wasn't sure either. He looked at the piece of cloth depicting a white lotus on the ground. "I ... I don't know."

"How could you not know? You must've done something that made his sword explode."

"Sword?" Lu Xiucan snapped out of it and immediately picked up the scattered bronze coins on the ground.

"You better get out of here! These are all mine! How dare you run away just now?! Ptoeeey!"

"Are you blind? Didn't you see me reposition myself so that I can strike him?" Puppy picked up the scepter and gave it a quick scrub before putting it away in his clothes.

"Bullshit! Since when were you that smart? You're just a coward with no balls!"

"Coward? So what if I'm a coward? I cannot let my daughter live without a father! Ouch~ My hand hurts."

The two bickered while Lu Xiucan was picking up the coins on the ground. They were almost done with it when they heard footsteps coming from the outer courtyard.

“Quick! We need to hide now, or they’ll think that we are responsible for this mess!” Both of them immediately hid behind the fake mountain.

“Dad! Dad, what’s wrong?!”

They heard noises inside; both Lu Xiucan and Puppy took advantage of that opportunity to quietly go back to where they came from.

They were nervous, but thankfully, no one saw them because it was too late into the night. Soon, they returned to where the Lu family was staying.

The Lu family was so tired after the performance that they didn’t even bother removing their makeup as they ate at their table.

They were all confused upon seeing Puppy and Lu Xiucan’s disheveled appearances.

“Did you guys fight a bear in the forest or something?” Luo Juanhua’s mouth was filled with food as she spoke.

Without even waiting for Lu Xiucan and Puppy to explain, a commotion erupted from the Zhang’s family inner courtyard.

Lu Zhuangyuan’s ears perked up to listen to what was happening. Moments later, he smiled upon realizing what was going on. He sucked his greasy fingers and pulled his pants up. “Hehe, what a joyous day! We’ve got work to do again!”

Shangjing was so prosperous that there was a massive line outside the city gates. Naturally, everyone was waiting in line to enter the city.

Li Huowang sat on the carriage and looked at the oppressive gate. He thought he would never return to Shangjing, but he was here again.

“Where is your letter of recommendation? Why have you come to Shangjing? Come down so we can inspect your carriage!” the city guards shouted and questioned Li Huowang.

However, they immediately shrunk back in fear when they saw Li Huowang's Surveillance Bureau identity plate. They stood still and greeted him politely. "We greet the esteemed Lord!"

Li Huowang ignored them and guided his horse carriage towards the imperial palace.

"Dad, where is First Mother? Did she really get kidnapped? But he was so kind, and he even treated your wounds."

"Li Sui, you have to remember what I'm about to say: no matter what others say, you must believe me. If someone is fighting me, you need to remember that I'll never lie to you. Do you understand?"

"I understand. Dad, I will kill the bad guys and rescue First Mother."

"Yes. You must listen to me, and we will bring back your first mother."

"And Second Mother, too."

"..."

The carriage traveled slowly on the wide streets. Soon, they reached the palace's door.

Li Huowang coughed and wasn't sure what to say to the guards when the heavy doors parted open slowly.

Li Huowang instantly felt numerous gazes land on his back.

I haven't even entered the palace, but everyone has already branded me Ji Lin's follower.

Li Huowang held onto the reins and lowly entered the palace.

His plain horse carriage was ignored by the consorts and officials.

When the horse carriage reached the white jade stairs, Li Huowang finally disembarked. He climbed up the stairs and walked toward the palace.

All of a sudden, he frowned. He touched his abdomen and found out that he had a painful scar.

His recovery ability had strengthened to the point where his injuries would heal even if his abdomen was torn open.

However, something had changed. His wound had healed as usual, but it left a scar. This was a first for Li Huowang. This was a wound from when he failed to defeat Shai Zi using the Cang-Qiang Ascension.

It's probably related to Ba-Hui, but I should focus on this matter for now.

He was more than happy to have countless scars as long as he killed Shai Zi and retrieved Miaomiao.

“Surveillance Bureau, Seventh Banner, Er Jiu~”

“Surveillance Bureau, Seventh Banner, Er Jiu~!”

“Surveillance Bureau, Seventh Banner, Er Jiu~!!”

Li Huowang removed his hands from his abdomen at the eunuchs' call. Then, he walked into the palace without hesitation.

The palace was massive. It appeared to be the place where the emperor would call for a morning meeting every day, but it was surprisingly dark.

A golden throne was floating in the darkness, and Li Huowang could only see the legs of the emperor even with his keen eyes.

“Er Jiu, have you decided to join me? Good, good! Hahaha! You did great coming to aid me when I need it rather when I'm already safe. I shall remember your courage for helping me during my time of need!”

Li Huowang frowned. It was Ji Lin's voice, but the tone of voice and the speech pattern had changed.

Li Huowang stepped forward, and that was when the shrill voice of a eunuch pierced the darkness. “Impudent! How dare you not kneel in front of our Lord?!”

“Ah! No need for such formalities! From now on, Er Jiu does not need to kneel to me.”

With that, Li Huowang slowly approached Ji Lin.

Once he was close enough, Li Huowang finally managed to catch a glimpse of Ji Lin's face behind the beaded veil, and he was surprised to see the changes in Ji Lin's face.

Chapter 511 - Ji Lin

The hall was dim, but Li Huowang's keen eyes allowed him to see the changes in Ji Lin's face and demeanor.

Li Huowang could swear that he had seen a bold, confident, and pure Ji Lin during the Double Third Festival. At the time, Ji Lin was the epitome of an energetic child.

However, Ji Lin had changed completely. He was hunched over like a snake lurking in the darkness. His gaze was gloomy, and his eyes radiated a sinister light. He was also exuding an extreme air of malice.

Li Huowang couldn't even imagine what had happened to Ji Lin before his return to Shangjing.

The left side of Ji Lin's face was drooping, but Ji Lin pushed them back up by him.

The sight allowed Li Huowang to deduce a few things. After pondering for a moment, Li Huowang bowed to the Great Liang emperor sitting on the throne and asked, "Your Majesty, have you consumed a spiritual sin?"

Li Huowang had captured the spiritual sin used to pay respects to the late emperor, so he naturally understood the effects of its pure malice on a mortal body.

The effects were especially obvious on Ji Lin's face. Ji Lin's face was drooping, looking like a viscous liquid. It was the hallmark of anything possessed by a spiritual sin.

Ji Lin neither confirmed nor denied Li Huowang's words. Instead, he gestured toward the throne behind him and asked, "What? Must I inform Er Jiu of everything I do?"

Li Huowang immediately dismissed his previous speculation.

The radical change was definitely not just because of a malicious spiritual sin. Perhaps the aura of a military family or something else was at play here.

Under the influence of such things, Ji Lin had become what he was right now.

“Your Majesty, the spiritual sin is ominous. Stay in contact with it for too long, and you'll breed evil thoughts constantly.”

Since Li Huowang was going to be working under Ji Lin in the future, he found it necessary to give the latter a reminder.

“Evil? Who defines evil? What is evil? What is good?”

Ji Lin suddenly stood up from the throne. He then raised his right hand and waved his sleeve vigorously.

“I am the emperor. I never have to abide by any rules. I am the one who sets the rules! What I say is evil, is evil! What I say is good, is good!”

Li Huowang looked at the Great Liang emperor in front of him. According to his memories, Ji Lin's personality had changed completely. He was just like the old Bai Lingmiao and Second Deity.

The current Ji Lin looked more like an emperor than before, even if he seemed like a complete tyrant.

Ji Lin sat back down, his voice tinged with exhaustion as he asked, “You think I've changed, right? I never wanted to change, but I had no choice! If I were still the Ji Lin from when you first met me, I would have died a long time ago.”

Li Huowang couldn't help but feel sorry for him. Ji Lin was still too young, and if he were living in Li Huowang's modern world, the former would still be a middle school student.

Of course, Li Huowang's pity quickly disappeared. He didn't feel qualified to sympathize with Ji Lin, and he decided that he ought to take care of himself first.

“Your Majesty, I'm not good at anything else. You can find me in the future for any matters about killing people. Er Jiu is willing to clear all obstacles for Your Majesty's ascension to the throne.”

Ji Lin immediately clapped his hands in joy. "Great! Hahaha! Er Jiu is so straightforward! Much better than those who beat around the bush! Come, confer him a title!"

A eunuch with a wrinkled face walked out from the darkness, carrying a golden whisk^[1]. He sang in a sharp voice, "By the decree of His Majesty~ Er Jiu shall be conferred~ Left and Right Jinwu Guards~ Cavalry Commander."

"Thank you, Your Majesty." Li Huowang bowed to Ji Lin.

Ji Lin said with a meaningful tone, "Er Jiu, I am very pleased that you have come. Rest assured, I still have that fake jade cat. Everything in the palace is genuine, so fake things have become more precious, don't you think?"

Li Huowang gently nodded. "Indeed."

Since the official matter was over, it was time for Li Huowang to leave the palace.

As he took a few steps down the white marble steps, someone shouted from behind, "Commander Er, please wait!"

Li Huowang turned and saw a middle-aged man with a black beard running toward him. From the military cap on the middle-aged man's head, Li Huowang deduced him to be a Middle-rank official.

"Congratulations, Commander Er! Although the title of Cavalry Commander is only eighth rank, the Left and Right Jinwu Guards are one of the twelve forbidden military guards."

"I have never seen His Majesty give an outsider so much importance. Commander Er, you will soar to the skies soon."

Li Huowang listened quietly to the middle-aged man, who was a bit shorter than Li Huowang, blabbering on for a while. When the middle-aged man finally paused to catch his breath, Li Huowang asked in confusion, "Who are you?"

"My name is Dong Zhongshou. Hehehe, my rank is insignificant before Commander Er, so I'll be less conspicuous. I'm from Zhong Heng.”

“Zong Heng Jia?” Li Huowang subconsciously looked at the half-bodied Jin Shanzhao next to him. Jin Shanzhao was the first Zong Heng Jia he had encountered in this world, and he didn’t expect to encounter a second one.

“Ah, we can’t talk about it; I’ve talked a lot. I’m just someone who spends some time by His Majesty’s side. When His Majesty needs enlightenment, I can offer some advice.”

Dong Zhongshou finally revealed his goal for approaching Li Huowang.

“Commander Er, in the future, both you and I will be planning things around His Majesty. There are some things I think you should know about. How about we talk in the mansion tomorrow night?”

Li Huowang looked at the sky to the left, and then he said to Dong Zhongshou, “It seems that His Majesty has unknowingly attracted many talents.”

Dong Zhongshou chuckled. “Mastery of both civil and martial arts is to better serve the imperial family. Commander Er, I want to talk to you about that. I am also sure that you’re unfamiliar with the majority of our people, so I’ll introduce them to you tomorrow.”

“All right, I’ll see you by then.”

Upon Dong Zhongshou’s departure, the quiet Zhuge Yuan said, “Brother Li, don’t get swayed by hearsay at this critical juncture. People from the Great Liang emperor’s side will definitely be biased toward the emperor. I suggest you find out for yourself how many forces are involved in this succession war. Find out who is strong and who is weak. Don’t be blinded by the opinions of a mob.”

“Yes, I know. I’ll investigate things through the Surveillance Bureau. Besides, I also want to find out how many cards Shai Zi still has left under the encirclement of the Surveillance Bureau.”

Li Huowang headed toward the carriage down below.

The Surveillance Bureau wasn't far from the palace. After just one hour, Li Huowang found himself in the grand hall with the screens.

“Why are there so few people? Has something happened?” Li Huowang asked Nangong while staring at the desired hall.

Chapter 512 - Shangjing

"Oh, it's another rebellion by the Dharma Sect and the encirclement of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. The people are all dispersed for their duties."

Nangong seemed a bit annoyed about the ongoing situation.

Li Huowang felt his heart tighten. "How is the encirclement of the Sitting Oblivion Dao going?"

"Go and see for yourself; I'm too busy right now."

Li Huowang opened the thick book and looked at the wanted posters depicting the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. There were phrases written in large blocks, and the phrases were all demanding for their execution.

Li Huowang was relieved. The Surveillance Bureau was doing a really good job in dealing with the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

With the records in this booklet combined with the previous battle in the capital, Li Huowang estimated that the pawns[1] had been mostly eradicated.

Even without the Three Officials and Four Joys, the Surveillance Bureau had still profited a ton. All four Bei Fengs, three Dong Fengs, two Hong Zhongs, one Bai Ban, and one Fa Cai had perished.

Moreover, one of the Shai Zis had died as well. The remaining Shai Zi would have to lead the Sitting Oblivion Dao by themselves.

"Our Surveillance Bureau has truly put in a lot of effort to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao," Li Huowang said to Nangong behind the wooden cabinet while flipping through the pages.

"It's not just that. I heard that we also enlisted the help of some orthodox sects in addition to creating contracts with the Surveillance Bureaus of other countries. We spent a ton of money to persuade them to help us."

"Orthodox sects?" Li Huowang asked, and he frowned upon recalling some unpleasant memories.

"Yeah, but it's hard to find members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao right now. They've gone into complete hiding, and we haven't caught anyone in the past month."

Li Huowang nodded silently. Shai Zi had threatened him, and he was in a bad spot himself.

However, Shai Zi was in a spot, too.

It seemed that his chance of winning wasn't too bad.

The most difficult part here was the fact that Bai Lingmiao was in his hands. Winning was pointless if Bai Lingmiao ended up dying.

Li Huowang closed the booklet in his hand and looked at Nangong again, "Why haven't I seen any wanted notices for the Sitting Oblivion Dao's Shai Zi?"

"Oh? You know quite a bit. You even know about Shai Zis. Anyway, handling them is the responsibility of the Surveillance Bureaus' Chief. A Shai Zi is the head of the Sitting Oblivion Dao, after all. Ordinary people won't cut it."

Chief... Li Huowang remembered the three pairs of hands with strangely long nails beneath the cloak.

It wasn't surprising that the Chief could handle a Shai Zi. However, even he himself, a Hong Zhong from the Sitting Oblivion Dao, had no idea where Shai Zi's true body was at the moment. Could they really find Shai Zi?

Hang on, what if the Sitting Oblivion Dao members of the Great Qi are still here? Had they conspired to ambush the Chief? The thought alone sent a chill down Li Huowang's spine.

"Brother Li, rest assured, they are not Twisted Ones. After all, they are people of Great Qi. They can't stay in Great Liang for too long," Zhuge Yuan replied.

Li Huowang breathed a sigh of relief.

Moreover, the Chief of the Surveillance Bureau knew that the Sitting Oblivion Dao of the Great Qi was coming, so he had to have prepared countermeasures.

“By the way, Brother Nangong, there’s been a lot of commotion in the capital recently. Do you have any inside information from the Surveillance Bureau?”

The indifferent-looking Nangong suddenly looked solemn, and his voice sounded distant for some reason as he said, “Er Jiu, you know the rules of the Surveillance Bureau. We never participate in the struggle for power in the imperial family. If you want to find inside information, don’t come to the Surveillance Bureau. You won’t be able to find anything at all. There’s none even in the Four Repositories. Since we’re acquainted, though, I’ll give you my two cents. You’re the Seventh Banner, but you have no official position. In the Bureau, your status isn’t really that high. In other words, the Bureau won’t intervene. If you insist on getting involved.

“However, if something untoward was to happen to you, the Bureau wouldn’t come and collect your corpse. The Bureau wouldn’t assist you, too, if you somehow got abducted and are being tortured. In other words, I want you to think properly about it.

“The coronation of the new emperor is a major event. Does the Bureau really not care about it?”

“Why would the Bureau care about it? The Surveillance Bureau does have some matters to discuss with the emperor, but the emperor’s position isn’t stable yet. Let them fight it out. The winner will become emperor. This kind of sight is common throughout history, and the Bureau has long gotten accustomed to them. Also, you don’t have to worry; the civil and military officials aren’t blind. A few people will die at most; the foundation of the country will not be shaken, and someone will step in if something actually goes wrong.”

The Surveillance Bureau was even more indifferent to the succession war than Li Huowang had imagined. They only cared about when the most devious and strongest king would appear and how many Gus would die during the breeding process. They didn't even want to take a look at what was going on.

“Thank you for the advice, Brother Nangong,” Li Huowang said. Since he couldn't gather relevant information here, he didn't linger and made his way back to his house.

Li Huowang sat on a stool beneath the short tree in the courtyard of the house that Ji Xiang had given to him. He silently pondered over the information he had gathered in the capital so far.

Li Huowang reaffirmed his objectives. His goal was to rescue Bai Lingmiao and assist the Surveillance Bureau in eliminating Shai Zi if possible.

After the first time, there would definitely be a second time. A problem had to be destroyed at its roots for it to be eradicated; only the dead posed no threat to himself.

However, achieving these two goals was extremely difficult.

He didn't know where Shai Zi's true body was located, and he also had no idea where Bai Lingmiao was being held captive. In fact, he didn't even know how to start looking for her.

Li Huowang's gaze grew more resolute as he thought about it. He clenched his fists and thought, I'm still too weak. I can't afford to stop cultivating!

This isn't just about Zhuge Yuan's revival. This also concerns my beloved ones in this chaotic world. I don't even know if there are still any spies from the Sitting Oblivion Dao here in the capital or if they have been eradicated. I'll stick to Shai Zi's plan for now and accumulate resources while waiting for an opportunity to strike. There are definitely people here who are nursing a grudge against Shai Zi. Both the imperial family of Great Liang and the Surveillance Bureau harbor deep hatred toward him.

But how can I sow discord among them to achieve my goals?

“Boss Hong Zhong, you need to be careful. Boss Shai Zi knows your identity. Push him into a corner, and he might reveal your Strayed One status and your affiliation with the Sitting Oblivion Dao to the world. Things will become interesting by then.”

“I’m not from the Sitting Oblivion Dao!” Li Huowang roared.

“Hahaha! Surely, you jest, Boss Hong Zhong.”

Li Huowang stood up abruptly and glared at the Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion. The next moment, he clenched his fist and struck the illusion’s face.

The illusion of the Sitting Oblivion Dao sat on the ground in a daze. After a while, he realized what had just happened and exclaimed, “ Hahaha! I’m alive! I’m alive!”

Li Sui’s tentacles reached over and wrapped around him, but they passed through his figure.

“ Hahaha! You’re dead again! The Daoist has bamboozled you!” the monk exclaimed and laughed heartily at the Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion's dismay.

Chapter 513 - Indoor

The illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member's face flashed with a hint of annoyance at the monk's ridicule. He got up slowly and pretended to brush away the dust on himself before rubbing his left cheek.

"Boss Hong Zhong, you're capable now. If you want to beat me up, then make me real. I'm already dead, so what can I do if you want to bully me? Can you kill me twice? Believe it or not, I was genuinely concerned about you just now. After all, we're in the same boat. If you die, we're all done for," the illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member said, walking up to Li Huowang. He stared quietly at Li Huowang with the two holes in his face.

"Maybe we shouldn't worry about Shai Zi for now. Let's deal with the immediate trouble first, such as your problem of cultivating the 'Truth but not 'Lies.'"

"You have to address that issue sooner rather than later, or you'll go mad before you can even deal with Boss Shai Zi."

Li Huowang was quiet.

The illusion added, "I don't think it's difficult. Boss Hong Zhong, our Sitting Oblivion Dao's cultivation method of 'Lies' is clearly in your mind. Why do you insist on not cultivating it?"

Bang !

Li Huowang's fist struck the illusion's face. His head jerked violently to the side as blood burst out of his nose and splattered into the air.

Then, Li Huowang kicked him in the stomach, sending him flying away.

"Li Huowang, are you crazy? I was serious!"

The clinking of metal against metal echoed as Li Huowang opened his bag of torture tools. The instruments gleamed with a crimson cold light as Li Huowang held the illusion by the head.

Finally, the illusion stopped talking. He looked reluctant expression, but he ran away from Li Huowang.

“Brother Li, what he said does make sense. Why not listen to him?” Zhuge Yuan asked.

“Brother Zhuge, have you already forgotten about who told us that we should cultivate ‘Lies’ when cultivating ‘Truth?’”

“Shai Zi.”

“Yes, exactly! It’s a Shai Zi! I’m a Strayed One. Why do you think he told me that?”

“When I obtained this Hong Zhong’s past, the thoughts of the Sitting Oblivion Dao members had become clearer to me more than ever! We must always be wary of their influence on us when dealing with them. Thus, I believe he was lying. it is enough to cultivate the ‘Truth.’ There is no need to cultivate ‘Lies!’” Li Huowang exclaimed, and his voice sounded unusually firm.

“What if—”

“No! There are no what-ifs! I am convinced that I’m right! For the sake of cultivating ‘Lies,’ the members of the Sitting Oblivion Dao committed countless heinous crimes! Wouldn’t I become like them if I were to cultivate ‘Lies’? Shai Zi is trying to deceive me, and I absolutely will not fall for it!”

Li Huowang stared at Zhuge Yuan with a determined expression. “If I were to cultivate ‘Lies,’ I wouldn’t be Li Huowang anymore. I would become a Hong Zhong of the Sitting Oblivion Dao! And when I say he’s lying, he’s definitely lying!”

“Oh~” Zhuge Yuan nodded; he seemed to have understood what Li Huowang was trying to say.

Li Huowang’s words just now were his response to Shai Zi’s suggestion to cultivate the “Truth” along with “Lies.”

And his response was unmistakable...

“Are you suspecting that Shai Zi is using your Strayed One ability to make you go mad by making you cultivate 'Lies' along with 'Truth'? Since you believe that's the case, you've decided to tackle the root of the issue?”

Li Huowang shook his head forcefully and explained, “No. Whether the Sitting Oblivion Dao cultivates ‘Lies’ but not ‘Truth’ doesn’t really matter. The point is... why would I have issues cultivating just the ‘Truth’? He's definitely lying; we need not dwell on this matter any further. He has lied to us!”

“Brother Li, I understand. I have to say that this Strayed One method of yours might actually work.” Zhuge Yuan nodded and stepped back to join the other illusions.

The Sitting Oblivion Dao member leaned in and whispered to Zhuge Yuan.

Zhuge Yuan waved his fan and smiled before shaking his head.

Li Huowang watched them from a distance. He felt somewhat weary, so he headed toward the bedroom on the second floor.

The burdens on Li Huowang's shoulders had gotten a bit heavy and were taking a toll on him both physically and mentally. Moreover, he had just transformed an illusion into reality twice in quick succession, so it wasn't strange that he was tired. Tonight, Li Huowang needed a good night's sleep.

Li Sui silently followed Li Huowang as he walked past her.

When Li Huowang closed his eyes and lay on the bed, Li Sui followed suit and snuggled close to him. Li Sui could hear the familiar sound of Li Huowang's heartbeat. Li Sui always liked sleeping close to her father, as it made her feel like she was back inside him once again.

Li Sui recalled something just then and nudged Li Huowang with her head. “Dad, can I help you? I really want to help you.”

Li Sui's concern brought a rare sense of warmth to Li Huowang's heart. He patted her head gently without opening his eyes.

"I understand, but you can't help with what's to come. Just stay put and don't get into trouble. That's good enough for me."

Li Sui felt a sense of frustration for the first time. She knew she was strong, as even Second Mom had praised her. How come Dad is convinced that I can't do anything?

Li Huowang slept soundly that night, perhaps due to the accumulated fatigue throughout the journey.

He woke up on the afternoon of the next day.

How long was I asleep for? Thirteen hours? Fourteen hours? No, this world only has twenty-two hours in a day. I shouldn't have slept for so long.

Li Huowang was about to get up when Li Sui rushed toward him and said excitedly, "Dad, I did many things last night! I cleaned the floor! I cleaned the entire house! I even filled the water jar!"

"Good job, well done," Li Huowang said, sitting up on the bed. He grabbed his Daoist robes and bronze coin veil from the stool.

After putting them on, he still felt like something was missing. His bag of torture tools was missing.

"Did you take it with you?" Li Huowang asked, staring at Li Sui. There was no way a thief would steal those bloody tools.

"Yes, I washed off the blood on the tools, and I also noticed that some of them had dulled, so I sharpened them with a whetstone."

Li Sui then took out many different torture tools from inside of her. The tools seemed to shine brightly as if they were brand new. Li Sui presented them like treasures before Li Huowang.

Li Huowang nodded. He took the bag and hung it back on his belt. Then, he patted Li Sui as if rewarding her.

"Dad, did I do well?"

"Yes."

"Really well, you're so damned filial," Li Huowang responded and glared fiercely at the Sitting Oblivion Dao illusion that had spoken in his stead.

The illusion shrank back and darted out of the room.

Chapter 514 - Own People

In light of last night's incident, there were some changes in the relationship between Li Huowang and the illusions.

In the past, nothing could threaten them except for Li Huowang's suicide. However, things had changed drastically. Li Huowang could now give them fleshly bodies temporarily, and it was all thanks to his cultivation of the "Truth."

Li Huowang could beat them up and inflict excruciating pain on them. Li Huowang stared deeply at the illusion of a Sitting Oblivion Dao member before turning to Li Sui. He then reached out and tore a piece of dead skin from his scabbed wound and threw it out the window.

Li Sui barked and jumped out of the window to chase after the dead skin. When she returned to the house with the dead skin in her mouth, she found that Li Huowang was missing. She also found a note left on the table.

*Protect our home. It's dangerous outside, so don't wander around.
I'll bring you something delicious upon my return.*

Li Huowang had gone to a secluded place outside the city to cultivate "Truth." He had seen and experienced many things so far, so he knew just how powerful the cultivation method that only Strayed Ones could cultivate.

The ability to make use of the Heavenly Dao's strength was extraordinary and could be compared to the Siming's existence itself.

Li Huowang had to master this ability as soon as possible so he could resurrect Zhuge Yuan and protect himself.

Li Huowang didn't stay outside the city for long. He returned as soon as it got dark. He had an appointment today with a strategist named Dong Zhongshou from Zhong Heng Jia.

Li Huowang was sitting in a purple sedan chair in Shangjing. He had a frown as he looked outside through the ajar window.

The capital had a curfew, but there were still many other sedan chairs on the deserted streets.

The patrolling guards seemed oblivious as they marched neatly past the sedan chairs.

These sedan chairs seemed to be like wooden boats that drifted with the current in darkness. They appeared to have an unspoken agreement, as they kept a considerable distance from each other. From afar, only a white or red lantern bobbed in the darkness, which made the streets appear a bit eerie.

Dong Zhongshou had invited him, but who had invited these people?

At first, Li Huowang thought that he would soon arrive at Zhong Heng Jia's mansion. When his sedan chair passed a tall stone arch bridge, he saw a sedan chair floating on the pitch-black river. Red threads were squirming from the sedan chair.

What does this mean? Did someone die? Who killed them?

The next moment, he found the answer to his question.

Swoosh!

Three straight scimitars pierced the flimsy sedan wall as well as Li Huowang.

Half an hour later, a damaged sedan chair slowly came to a halt at a certain mansion. There were stone lions on both sides of the mansion's gate. A servant holding a lantern bowed respectfully and said, "My lord, please alight."

A foot emerged from the sedan chair and pressed down on the ground, leaving behind a crimson footprint. The other foot followed, and it carried with it a tremendous power that shattered the ground.

A cold light then flashed, and a stone lion next to the gate was split into two along with a huge chunk of the wall.

The wall collapsed, kicking up a cloud of dust.

Dong Zhongshou was enjoying the moon with his wife and concubines when he noticed the commotion and saw Er Jiu through the smoke.

“Commander Er, come here! We've been waiting for you.”

There were several other people seated before their own short table. It seemed that they were Dong Zhongshou's aforementioned people.

“What's the meaning of this?!” Li Huowang roared. He charged at Dong Zhongshou with a sword in hand, but a thin monk and a chubby monk stood in his way.

“Hehehe, Commander Er, calm down. You boasted about being in charge of the dirty work before His Majesty, so don't you think it's necessary for me to test your skills?”

“Besides, those people weren't sent by us. They were dispatched by the other well-informed princes.”

Dong Zhongshou chuckled and pointed at the last remaining short table.

“Come, Commander Er, your seat is over there. Go to your seat, and I will introduce you to the other comrades.”

“He's the son of the current prime minister! Situ Bowen is the most favored son of the prime minister. He's already helping with official affairs. He has yet to enter the court as an official, but he already has many connections in the court.”

Situ Bowen was a short and chubby man; his chest was exposed, and a flower was tucked behind his ear. He didn't even lift his head as he sipped on the wine from his leather cup.

“This is the calligraphy master, Gong Sunyan. He has a myriad of students throughout the world! His unique style is unparalleled, and everyone respects him.”

Gong Sunyan was an old man with a white beard. His wine cup was trembling as he took a sip of his wine before casting a look of dissatisfaction at Li Huowang.

“And this is my junior, who is also from Zong Heng. Not long ago, the two of us cooperated to foil the conspiracy of the third prince and the princess.”

The beardless middle-aged man immediately clasped his hands toward Dong Zhongshou, but he didn't even glance at Li Huowang.

Li Huowang took a mental note of the people who were rude to him even as he listened to Dong Zhongshou's introductions.

Once the introductions were over, Dong Zhongshou coughed lightly and spat to his left. A beautiful girl, who had been kneeling on the side for quite a while now, immediately opened her mouth to catch Dong Zhongshou's spit.

Li Huowang quietly went to his seat and didn't pay attention to whatever Dong Zhongshou was saying. He couldn't figure out how Ji Lin had been able to stay in his position, even though he had a bunch of ragtags as supporters.

“You're one of us from now on, so don't be angry, okay? Anyway, let me offer you a toast!”

Everyone present saw Li Huowang sitting like a statue with no intention of lifting his wine cup.

“I just want to ask: where are the workers and the killers?” Li Huowang asked, and his remark elicited laughter among the crowd.

Dong Zhongshou smiled and asked, “Commander Er, the workers naturally have their own place to go. How can they stay with those whose jobs are to plan and strategize? Of course, I'm not saying that you're one of them. His majesty favors you deeply, and you have a limitless future ahead of you.”

This is too bad. Looks like Ji Lin has yet to understand his current situation. He has devoured a spiritual sin, so how come he's still so dense? He's not going to become the King of Gus at this rate...

“ Hmm? What's wrong, Commander Er? Are you still unhappy about what happened to you on your way here? Hehehe, you're being a bit petty as a man. Haven't I already apologized?"

"All right! Since we're all under His Majesty, I'll apologize again to Commander Er today," Dong Zhongshou said. He raised his glass and emptied it, and then he showed the empty bottom to Li Huowang, "How's that?"

"I don't think any of you have understood the current situation." Li Huowang smiled like a lunatic and pinched his temples with his hand. Then, he tapped the table heavily with his other index finger.

Peng Longteng's towering and armored figure suddenly appeared next to Dong Zhongshou. Her armored hands plunged into Dong Zhongshou's mouth before anyone could react. Then, Peng Longteng forced open Dong Zhongshou's jaw with her left and right hand before tearing him apart into two as if he were a thin piece of paper.

Chapter 515 - Task

Dong Zhongshou's crimson blood and organs flew into the air. However, his heart was still beating as if Dong Zhongshou was still alive despite being torn into two halves.

The headless Peng Longteng leaned back and used her heavy armor to catch what was falling from the sky. Then, she clenched Dong Zhongshou's lower jaw until it was reduced to powder.

Peng Longteng trembled uncontrollably. She craved slaughter, and she yearned to kill one living person after another.

It had been a while since she wanted to kill, and she finally got to kill today.

Bang!

A spiked meteor hammer slammed heavily against Peng Longteng's heavy armor, eliciting a dull thump. Peng Longteng was thrilled, and she wasted no time, rushing toward those trying to kill her.

They seemed to be the servants of the Dong family, but to Peng Longteng, they were just food to satisfy her craving for slaughter.

The outcome seemed predetermined. A warrior with no fatal weaknesses was impossible to defeat.

Initially, it seemed that the others wanted to send their own vassals to help. However, all fell silent when Li Huowang joined the fray, and they got to witness his strength.

After some time, the bustling courtyard was silent.

Li Huowang walked up to Peng Longteng's towering figure. He looked down at the people below, who were supposed to be related to Ji Lin.

They were all huddled behind their guards, and they were staring at the red-robed Daoist with fear and confusion in their eyes.

Some had chosen to stay, while some quietly slipped away.

“Someone tried to kill me on my way here, and I managed to pry open some information through their mouths using some of my ‘tools.’” Li Huowang said, patting his bag of torture tools. “Guess what I discovered? Those who had perished all this while were nothing but pawns. None of the nine vying for the throne had perished, and I realized that you guys and them have gotten it wrong—very wrong! The changes this time aren't just political changes. Set aside the methods that you know are working, as vested interests and political exchanges are unnecessary here! There's also no need for schemes!

“What's needed is killing! We need to raise Gus! Except for the one on the throne, everyone must die! They must be annihilated !”

There was one more thing Li Huowang didn't say aloud, which was the late emperor's iron-clad law in the imperial temple. it was a law that could not be modified.

“When someone threatens His Majesty's life, what do you think His Majesty wants us to do? It's not to think about who his allies are or whether they have any connections. Our goal is to kill them all!”

Li Huowang lifted one foot and stomped on a corpse's head on the ground.

After a brief moment of silence, the beardless person from Zong Heng Jia stood up with a pale face. He pointed a trembling finger at Li Huowang and roared, “My senior has made great contributions to His Majesty! He was an indispensable subject to His Majesty. How dare you kill him! His Majesty won't let you off!”

“No, His Majesty won't bother me with such a small matter. What His Majesty wants is someone who can eliminate the obstacles to his ascension. Since your senior couldn't even deal with one opponent, he is of no value to His Majesty.”

Just then, Peng Longteng vanished behind Li Huowang.

Li Huowang walked forward and grabbed a roasted goose from the table. Then, he muttered, "Your Majesty, at this rate, you would waste that spiritual sin. You can't keep on hesitating. It's time to make a move.

"I am your sword—a very sharp sword. Don't let your sword go to waste."

Li Huowang left the mansion under everyone's gaze. Li Huowang didn't know whether there were spies in the courtyard, but he was sure that his words would reach Ji Lin's ears.

Sure enough, the next morning, Li Huowang received an imperial edict brought by an old eunuch.

The Empress Dowager was about to leave the city to worship the Bodhisattva at the Putan Temple, and Princess Chang Ning was going to accompany her.

"His Majesty wants me to kill Princess Chang Ning under the gaze of the Empress Dowager. Is that it?" Li Huowang asked the old eunuch.

The old eunuch shook his head indifferently. Then, he began to tell a short story. "Even children born in an ordinary family aren't equal to each other, much less children in the imperial family. The Empress Dowager gave birth to three sons and a daughter, but she favored the fourth prince. She has always been much less affectionate toward His Majesty since His Majesty was young. Before the late emperor ascended the throne, His Majesty was still young and was still living in Prince Heng's mansion. Every winter, he'd receive less money for charcoal than the other children, and His Majesty grew to hate winter thanks to that."

Li Huowang nodded. He immediately understood what the other party was trying to say. It seemed that Ji Lin hadn't eaten the spiritual sin in vain, and he wanted Li Huowang to "handle" his elder sister and mother.

The Empress Dowager couldn't vie for the throne. She believed her son, Ji Lin, had no chance to become emperor, so she pinned her hopes on another son.

The old eunuch smiled meaningfully at Li Huowang. Then, he tapped Li Huowang with the golden whisk in his hand.

"Princess Chang has excellent bodyguards. You've declared that you're a sharp sword, but I want to know whether you're fast as well."

"Sir, a sharp sword is naturally fast. I don't like fame nor fortune, as it invites many troubles. I only hope that my friends who owe me favors will help me when I encounter trouble in the future."

"Ah, you're already talking about conditions when the deed has yet to be carried out? Finish this first, and then we can talk."

Li Huowang stared at the old eunuch as the latter walked out of the courtyard before vanishing into thin air.

Looks like Ji Lin's side isn't filled with just a ragtag bunch of garbage.

There a few powerful eunuchs in the palace. Li Huowang couldn't help but wonder about how he could make use of them against Shai Zi.

"Dad, why can't I understand what you're saying?" Li Sui asked while gnawing on a roasted goose.

"You don't need to understand. Anyway, how is the food? Does it taste good?"

"Yes."

"That's good. Once you're done eating, pour out the water in the jar, fill it with soil, and move it to the bedroom for me."

Li Huowang rummaged through the carriage for a while before taking out an iron box. The box was sealed tightly, and even the tiny gaps were sealed with wax as if the one who had sealed the box was afraid that what was inside the box might escape to the outside world.

Chapter 516 - Increase

Li Sui carried in the water jar filled with dirt. Li Huowang used a knife to open the wax seal before prying the box open.

A small drop of mercury dripped out and landed on his red robes before dripping onto the ground, creating numerous tiny puddles of mercury.

“I never thought the lessons I learned from my science teacher would be so useful now. Mercury can evaporate at room temperature. If I hadn’t sealed it in the box with wax, I would’ve needed to source more just to skin myself.”

Li Huowang took off his clothes and carried the box filled with mercury toward the big jar full of soil.

Both the Empress Dowager and the princess stood at the top of the kingdom. The Surveillance Bureau was banned from working with them, but they were bound to have powerful bodyguards.

He had to be meticulous in his approach if he wanted to kill them and leave with his life. An artifact made from the skin of a Strayed One would be his insurance.

Li Huowang handed the iron box to Li Sui before burying himself in the jar of dirt. “Li Sui, you already know what to do, right?”

“Yes, I know, I know!” Li Sui exclaimed excitedly. Then, she used her sharp claw to open up Li Huowang’s skin starting from the crown of his head. “Dad, am I really being helpful to you right now?”

Li Huowang nodded amidst the pain and said, “Yes, really helpful.”

Li Sui was so ecstatic, and her tentacles wriggled in mid-air. Li Huowang rarely complimented her, so it wasn't strange that she was so happy.

Just then, Li Sui pried Li Huowang's skin open and was about to pour in the mercury when Li Huowang called out, "Wait."

He took a moment to calm himself down before speaking softly toward the empty air. "Mom, are you there? I might make some noises in a few but don't worry about it. I'm just bungee jumping. Yes, I'll be bungee jumping for a very long time, but please don't be worried."

After calming his mother down, Li Huowang turned around and nodded at Li Sui. "Do it."

He had done this so many times before, but he still couldn't get used to the extreme pain. He tried to be silent, but he still ended up screaming from the pain.

He was panting by the end of it as he sprawled out on the bed. He could see the illusions whispering to each other and were clearly talking about him.

Li Huowang had used the Fiery Scripture to heal his wounds, but the extreme pain was still tormenting him.

This is too much. I really need to find a way to skin myself with as little pain as possible. Otherwise, my mind will eventually crumble at this rate.

"Dad, are you okay? How can I help you?" Li Sui's tentacles touched the scabs on Li Huowang. "Since it hurts so much, how about you don't do it again."

"Hehe. It's painful, but it must be done. Just massage me, and it should help with the pain."

Li Sui wrapped her sticky tentacles around Li Huowang and moved around. Eventually, Li Sui found herself clinging to Li Huowang as if she were a robe. "Dad, does it hurt if I do this? Did I manage to stop the pain?"

"No, it doesn't hurt anymore," Li Huowang whispered and suddenly felt exhausted. He tore off a piece of red cloth from his robes and covered his own eyes. His eyelids had been torn off as well, so he needed a blindfold.

He slept soundly that night. When he woke up the next day, he found out that Li Sui was controlling his body to carry the heavy jar downstairs. “Li Sui?”

“Dad, did I wake you up? I want to put the jar back since we're no longer using it .”

“No, you didn't wake me up. I also need to wake up early today, so the timing is perfect.”

Li Huowang and Li Sui then carried the water jar back to its original place before heading to the well in the courtyard to wash up.

When Li Huowang saw his own reflection in the well, he realized that he didn't have to wash his face.

Li Huowang looked at his own reflection and stared at the tentacles moving in and out of his body before coming up with an idea.

“Li Sui, can you enter my body?”

“Dad, didn't you say that I might end up eating you up if I enter your body?”

“No, you're not going to stay inside permanently. It's temporary. I just realized that since the Luo Sect can use the Nascent Soul to speed up their cultivation, I should be able to do the same thing.”

There was no harm in having another hidden card against hidden enemies. He also had a ton of experience working with Li Sui.

“Oh. Let me try.”

Li Huowang opened his mouth, and Li Sui's tentacles poured into his throat. Bun's skinny limbs also stuffed themselves down Li Huowang's throat. Li Huowang felt like he was being stretched out from the inside, and it was a bizarre feeling overall.

The pain was bearable, but it was all because he was already in extreme pain. At this point, he couldn't even tell whether the pain was coming from the outside or from inside of him.

Once Li Sui was done, Li Huowang looked down at his reflection once more.

His skinless look was terrifying, but his deformed appearance right now looked downright monstrous. He appeared to be bloated, like someone who had forced themselves to wear a tight shirt. The only difference was that his body was the shirt, while Li Sui was that someone. Li Huowang's bulging blood vessels had been pervaded by Li Sui's black tentacles, and Li Huowang's flesh was shrouded by a black net of veins and tentacles. Li Huowang knew that he was staring at his own body, but he still couldn't help but feel repulsed by the sight.

Li Huowang tried to take a few steps and said, "No need to stuff all of your tentacles inside. You can extend some of the useless ones outside."

Some black tentacles burst out of Li Huowang like bamboo shoots after spring; the tentacles wriggled in mid-air. Li Huowang still appeared bloated, but at the very least, he was no longer that bloated. He no longer felt encumbered as well.

Li Huowang swung his purple-tasseled sword while Li Sui's tentacles wielded the bronze coin sword and some talismans.

Their teamwork was great, as the two of them were once one. As time ticked by, Li Huowang realized that his plan was feasible.

In addition to Li Sui's help, he'd be able to conceal his identity as well. Even Li Huowang could no longer recognize himself, so how could others recognize him?

"Dad, you can no longer wear your red robe..."

"We don't have to wear it. No need to wear such flashy clothes when we're going on an assassination. The last thing we want is getting recognized."

Li Huowang took a simple gray blanket and cut some holes in it to transform it into a large robe that concealed his bloated figure.

Chapter 517 - Bodhisattva

Li Huowang was invisible as he stood at the top of the tree and observed the endless procession.

Thousands of eunuchs, consorts, and guards formed a long line. He didn't even know where the line started and ended.

According to the information provided by Ji Lin, his target was the Empress Dowager, and the princess would be in the middle of the procession.

But Li Huowang knew now was not the right time to act, especially when he didn't know which carriage they were on.

It would be bad if he startled them, and they ended up secluding themselves in the palace. It would be hard for him to kill them by them.

Li Huowang deduced that he'd have the highest chance of success by assassinating the Empress Dowager and the princess rather than attempting to kill them in the open.

Of course, he could always find them head-on later.

"Suisui, let's go," Li Huowang said. The two of them were invisible when Li Sui's tentacles slithered out of Li Huowang and wrapped around the nearby branches.

Li Sui exerted force, and Li Huowang's figure shot toward the tree top.

Li Huowang followed the procession from afar.

Shangjing was in chaos right now, so the Empress Dowager and the princess would never travel far away from Shangjing to pray to the Bodhisattva. Li Huowang soon saw a massive statue of the Bodhisattva holding a jade vase carved into the mountain walls. It was a grand sight amidst the cloud-covered mountain peaks.

Li Huowang didn't recognize what Bodhisattva was because it was different from the one he knew. The Bodhisattva of the Liang Kingdom was a male instead.

The male Bodhisattva statue was holding a jade vase in one hand while the other hand made a seal. The statue's eyes were staring at the mortals with pity and mercy.

"Let's go to the temple!" Li Huowang quickened his pace and reached the grand temple at the base of the Bodhisattva statue.

The temple was not a simple one, as it had such a massive Bodhisattva statue. The temple was so large that it had tens of mu of land. [1]

The temple was filled with greenery, and its yellow walls, grayish green roofs, thick scent of incense, and the grand bell toiling in the distance told everyone of its grandness.

Devotees were swarming the temple place, and the incense sticks in their hands smothered the temple with a thick and unique scent. They held their palms together and raised them above their chest and head before kneeling on the ground to pray. The stone floor had many holes from the countless devotees praying through the ages.

Clearly, the temple was an important place in the people's hearts.

"Let's go!" Li Huowang was still invisible as he leaped from rooftop to rooftop to find a place to hide.

Li Huowang wasn't afraid of the temple monks hunting him down. According to Ji Lin, the monks of the temple were just ordinary people.

Even if the temple held secrets, they would never dare to involve themselves in the chaotic succession war of Shangjing.

The monks were no fools either to be able to establish their temple so close to Shangjing. They knew not to interfere in the succession war, or they'd end up getting destroyed.

Li Huowang finally found a suitable hiding place. Just then, the first batch of people in the procession finally reached the entrance of the temple.

Rows of monks wearing yellow robes followed several abbots to welcome their royal guests at the entrance of the temple.

Li Huowang held his breath and carefully observed what was happening.

He finally managed to catch a glimpse of the Empress Dowager and the eldest princess for the very first time after the attractive consorts parted away like colorful fans.

Pretty and attractive. That was Li Huowang's first thought when he saw them.

As Ji Lin's elder sister, the eldest princess was extremely gorgeous, and her mother, the Empress Dowager, was even more gorgeous than her.

The Empress Dowager had pale skin that revealed the slightest blush and thin lips that parted like rose petals. Age did not leave a single mark on her face.

If it wasn't because of the difference in their attire, Li Huowang would've never been able to distinguish who was the Empress Dowager and who was the eldest princess.

Under Li Huowang's gaze, the eldest princess whispered to the abbot. The guards behind her moved forward and chased away the other devotees before surrounding the entire temple. The place was now completely impenetrable.

The Empress Dowager and the eldest princess entered the temple with the consorts surrounding them.

They never stopped as they walked through the temple's ground. They climbed up the stone stairs and reached the tallest pagoda before kneeling on the cushions and praying to the large Bodhisattva statue carved from the mountain wall.

The Bodhisattva statue looked at them without any emotions.

"Dad, what are they doing?" Li Sui had never seen people praying before and didn't understand what was happening.

"They are praying to the Bodhisattva. They are probably asking for forgiveness. I guess it's natural since they are asking one of their sons to kill the others. I doubt anyone would feel at peace for ordering that," Li Huowang explained to Li Sui.

Li Huowang was patient, and he stood still like a statue for a long time.

He knew that the Empress Dowager and the eldest princess would not return immediately after traveling so far away. They must be staying here tonight.

Ding! Dong! The bell tolled, and the monks sitting in a circle around the tallest pagoda started chanting their mantras.

The grand scene unfolded as the sun sailed past Bodhisattva's head and sank behind it.

At nightfall, Li Huowang finally felt that he had a chance to succeed. He used Li Sui's tentacles to scamper up the roof and make his way to the quarters of the Empress Dowager and the eldest princess.

He moved extremely slowly, as he knew that the two would have quite a few bodyguards protecting them around the clock.

Li Huowang managed to avoid the hidden bodyguards and reached the quarters in two hours.

It was already late at night, but the quarters were still surrounded by numerous eunuchs and consorts.

"Li Sui, we need to head left before going right past this point. We have to run away after killing them. Do not engage in battle unless necessary."

Li Huowang raised his right arm and gripped his sword. He was about to move when the door on the left abruptly. Several muscular consorts were carrying a young monk wrapped in a blanket, and they were heading to the room on the right.

"Stop! What are you doing? It's already so late." An old eunuch with his face painted white stopped the consorts.

“The eldest princess saw how tired the Empress Dowager was during the prayers earlier in the day, so she wanted to express her filial piety toward the Empress Dowager.”

1. 1 mu = 667 square meters.

Chapter 518 - Kill

The old eunuch heard their answers and nodded. "Is that so? Wait here. I will report to the Empress Dowager first."

With that, he opened the door slightly and entered the room.

After some time, he brought out two handsome monks from inside the room. "Carry him in. The Empress Dowager is waiting."

"Dad, what are they doing?"

Li Sui's question stumped Li Huowang. How shameless are they to do something so devious beneath the gaze of the Bodhisattva? Do they not hold any respect toward it in their hearts?

Li Huowang didn't respond to Li Sui's question and slowly made his way into the room. He crawled through the rafters, and his eyes twitched when he saw the "fiery" scene in the room. It was even more "intense" than what he saw in the Righteous Monastery.

Li Huowang thought that the Empress Dowager and the eldest princess were feeling guilty for their actions that had spurred the princes into killing each other, but it seemed that he was mistaken.

He took one look around the room and decided it was time to act. He jumped from the roof towards the large bed in the center of the room.

To prevent the empress dowager, who was buried under a group of people, from escaping, Li Huowang crushed his left eyeball without hesitation.

A strange light covered the bed, and everyone on it suddenly found themselves unable to move.

Li Huowang swung the spine sword downward. The spacetime rift leading to the Qi Kingdom was about to tear the Empress Dowager in half when the entire bed suddenly moved left, avoiding the attack.

Realizing that his chances of success were becoming increasingly thin, Li Huowang attacked relentlessly. He opened his mouth and spat his molars toward the Empress Dowager.

A humanoid shadow appeared to block the attack. She used a white ribbon to block the molars but failed to notice that Li Huowang had sent another attack behind the molars. Li Huowang's severed arm pierced the bodyguard's abdomen and plunged into the Empress Dowager's chest.

Seeing that the Empress Dowager's eyes were becoming dull, Li Huowang immediately ran toward the exit. "We have to go and kill the eldest princess!"

Li Sui's tentacles burst forth from Li Huowang's stump and grabbed the severed arm before connecting the two once again. "Dad, you almost forgot your arm."

Li Huowang reached the exit and saw that the eldest princess's door was already open; there was a horde of guards standing by to stop him. The guards, eunuchs, and consorts surrounded the eldest princess as she made a break for it.

Li Huowang never thought that they would choose to run immediately rather than confront him head-on.

"Scram!" Li Huowang swung his spine sword toward the guards. Li Sui mimicked his movement using the bronze coin sword.

To protect the eldest princess, the guards and the eunuchs ran fearlessly toward Li Huowang, but they were immediately cut in half.

Li Huowang was getting closer to the eldest princess when the clear toiling of bells echoed in the air. A petite escort wearing a transparent veil was dancing as she made her way toward Li Huowang.

The bells on her arms and feet emitted a hypnotic tune; strands of gold burst out of her hair and wriggled in mid-air.

Li Huowang fell into a daze. When he looked at the escort again, a strange surge of emotions came from the bottom of his heart. All of his love for Bai Lingmiao and Yang Na was suddenly concentrated on the escort.

The escort approached Li Huowang and danced as the golden strands from her hair thrust into Li Huowang.

Li Huowang was being penetrated, but he felt no pain. Instead, he was ecstatic. He felt like the golden strands were Bai Lingmiao and Yang Na's hands, and he felt like they were caressing him.

The escort pried open her veil and pursed her lips to kiss him. The golden strands dug even deeper into Li Huowang as the escort's lips approached him. Li Huowang didn't notice the pill at the base of the escort's tongue.

Just then, several tentacles with hooks burst out of Li Huowang's mouth and tore off the escort's face in a single brutal swing.

The escort cried out in pain as the tentacles dragged her face into Li Huowang's throat. Li Huowang woke up from his stupor and stabbed his legs to wake up.

The intense pain cleared his mind, and he cut down the escort before chasing the eldest princess.

I've never seen that technique before! That was dangerous! Li Huowang raised his guard up and prepared himself for unexpected attacks.

If it hadn't been for Li Sui, the eldest princess would have escaped successfully under the lead of her powerful bodyguards.

He saw two old eunuchs holding flying guillotines standing in his way. Li Huowang knew that he couldn't afford to waste his time dealing with these obstacles.

"Li Sui, ribs!" Li Huowang exclaimed after having made up his mind. Li Sui immediately broke Li Huowang's lowermost ribs and handed them to him through his belly button.

Li Huowang stabbed his ribs into his abdomen, and the eunuchs cried out in pain before collapsing to the ground.

Four black tentacles burst out of Li Huowang and sent him forward. Li Huowang then ran on the rooftops, chasing after the escaping eldest princess.

More and more guards collapsed to the ground from the extreme pain as Li Huowang stabbed himself using his ribs. Meanwhile, he was getting closer and closer to the princess.

Upon seeing that he was close enough, he pulled out the blunted ribs from his abdomen and exclaimed, "This isn't enough pain! Li Sui! Skin!"

Li Sui's exposed tentacles stuck themselves to Li Huowang. Then, the hooks on the tentacles latched onto his scars and scabs.

When Li Huowang stabbed himself with his ribs once again, Li Sui instantly skinned Li Huowang.

"AAAAAAAH!" The terrible pain almost made Li Huowang collapse, but it was worth it. Everyone, including the eldest princess, fell to the ground and cried out in extreme agony. They had been incapacitated.

Li Huowang let go of his ribs and wielded his spine sword to deliver the killing blow. Before he could do so, however, someone wearing a black veil stood before him.

The black veil revealed nothing but a single outstretched arm. Li Huowang's heart sank when he saw the layers of scars on the arm as well as the blood seeping out from beneath the veil.

He's must be from the Ao Jing Sect! Ordinary people can't possibly stand up after being subjected to such intense pain!

Chapter 519 - Eldest Princess

Clang, clang, clang!

Li Huowang swung his spine sword to deflect the three fingernails flying toward him.

That attack confirmed his suspicions. The figure before him was from the Ao Jing Sect.

“I thought you guys never meddled with society and single-mindedly chased after the most exquisite pain? Why are you meddling here?” Li Huowang asked.

The black-veiled figure chuckled. Then, he knelt on the ground and took out a clay statue of the Ao Jing Sect’s deity before placing it close to his chest.

“You took the words out of my mouth. Why are you even here? As for myself, I’m just here to return a favor.”

Boom!

An intense heat wave burst out of the black-veiled figure, and it made Li Huowang’s veil flutter. Moments later, a burning man was standing before Li Huowang.

Li Huowang frowned. His opponent was indeed from the Ao Jing Sect, and he was quite strong, too.

Even though the Ao Jing Sect’s techniques came with extreme downsides, they granted the users immense power. The techniques of the Ao Jing Sect were so powerful that it propelled them into becoming one of the strongest sects in the world.

“Scram!” Li Huowang roared, swinging the spine sword and sending out a rift in spacetime toward the burning man.

The man knew that he had to avoid that attack. He propelled himself into the air using his flames. Then, he opened his mouth and breathed fire toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang cut the flames apart using the spine sword and sent them to the Qi Kingdom. Moments later, Li Huowang finally caught a glimpse of his opponent.

The person on fire was humanoid, but Li Huowang was certain that a normal person didn't have two heads. It wasn't a Nascent Soul of the Luo Sect; they were just normal heads. The flames had scorched the two heads, but Li Huowang could still make out how the dents in the heads. The heads looked like winter melons that had been stomped on.

Li Huowang's opponent even had four arms and three legs. The humanoid figure before him seemed like he was made out of multiple people that had been sewn together!

I can't waste my time with this bastard! I can kill him, but I'll fail in my mission if the eldest princess manages to survive! Li Huowang stared at the eldest princess being carried away by an old eunuch.

Several ideas popped up in Li Huowang's mind as he looked around the burning temple. Eventually, he settled on one idea.

Li Huowang turned left and ran inside one of the burning buildings. The burning man from the Ao Jing Sect chased after him.

"Black smoke covers the skies! Hang low upon the heavens! Gang Bo Ba Nie Li! Gu Da Lu Ying Hua! Mi Duo Luo Tian Cheng!"

The clay statue in the burning man's hands had become red from the high temperatures, but he didn't hesitate to shove it inside of him through his navel.

In an instant, one of the golden Buddha statues melted. The gold plating melted and became like a tidal wave that swept across the burning building to block Li Huowang's escape route.

Everything burned brightly, and even the air itself took on an orange hue from the extreme temperatures. Li Huowang's veil was reduced to ashes as well.

The burning wave of gold was about to seal Li Huowang by covering him in gold when something unexpected happened.

There was no one beneath the veil. Instead of a person, a skinned dog covered in black tentacles was there.

“Shit!” Zu Yi^[1], the Ao Jing Sect member who had been trying to stop Li Huowang, realized that he had been tricked. He ran out of the building along with the blazing molten gold.

The fire followed Zu Yi, and the building stopped burning. Li Sui was left all alone in the middle of the charred building.

“Strange. Why is it not happening as Dad had told me?”

Li Sui took out the human-skin doll from its belly to examine it before stuffing it back. He then ran like a bloodhound to chase after Zu Yi and Li Huowang.

Li Huowang chased after the eldest princess by jumping from roof to roof while in his invisible state. He was fast approaching her.

Faster! I need to be faster! Li Huowang’s killing intent grew deeper. Just as he felt a wave of heat flying toward him, he swung his sword at the eldest princess.

Li Huowang saw the spacetime rift leading to the Qi Kingdom getting closer and closer to the eldest princess when the latter abruptly twisted herself in a bizarre way. She kicked herself off the old eunuch’s shoulder and dodged Li Huowang’s attack.

A long ribbon flowed out from her sleeves, and she hovered in mid-air.

Li Huowang suddenly felt like he was staring at a gorgeous goddess that had descended on the mortal world.

Li Huowang was unfamiliar with that technique, but he knew that the eldest princess still had more cards up her sleeves.

Clearly, she had been hiding her cards by acting like she was weak. It turned out that she was more than capable of fending off an assassin!

Swoosh!

A wave of flames seared off the scabs on Li Huowang's back.

The eldest princess and Zu Yi flanked Li Huowang. The next moment, numerous bodyguards appeared and surrounded Li Huowang. The hunter was now the hunted.

"Who sent you here?"

The eldest princess stood at the top of a gazebo and looked down at him with pride. Her translucent ribbons floated around her like snakes.

Li Huowang said nothing. He steeled himself for a bloody fight. He knew something like this would happen, as those involved in the succession war were all experts who had numerous cards up their sleeves.

"I will not punish you even though you've killed my mother. I will double your reward as long as you work for me."

The eldest princess's voice was cold, much to the irritation of Li Huowang.

"No need. I am poor, but I am loyal! I will never betray my Lord!"

Li Huowang immediately charged in the direction with the least amount of people.

"Zu Yi, don't destroy his soul. I want to know his master's identity."

"Understood." Zu Yi was still shrouded in fire when he chased after Li Huowang.

Li Huowang reached one of the buildings when a shadow appeared and pounced on him.

"Dad, I didn't use the doll!" Li Sui's tentacles sprouted out from his body again.

"Great! I can use it now!"

When the guards shrouded in killing intent surrounded him again with their weapons in hand, Li Huowang thrust his fingers into his own chest and tore it open, exposing his organs.

Chapter 520 - Ao Jing Sect

“Metal lungs!”

Li Huowang snarled and tore off his own lungs before slapping them onto the Profound Records on the ground.

As he howled in pain, the crescent moon in the skies became shrouded by dark clouds. The shadow of the clouds produced an illusion on the Bodhisattva statue, making it seem like it was closing its eyes.

“Wood liver!”

The guards that surrounded Li Huowang all dropped to the ground as their bodies wriggled in pain. Their agonized screams sent shivers down everyone’s spines.

Zu Yi saw what Li Huowang was doing and exclaimed, “That’s... that’s the Five Elements Intercalation!”

The doll made from a Strayed One’s skin could extend one’s life, but in Li Huowang’s hands, it could be used to perform that powerful technique without dying.

The blood-red bamboo slips transformed into wiggling maggots that burrowed into Li Huowang; some of them even crawled on Li Sui’s tentacles.

Li Huowang sighed. The pain disappeared as his body became hollow. He stood up slowly and glared at the burning Zu Yi. “Come.”

The tables had turned...

When Li Huowang took a step forward, the burning Zu Yi took a step back.

Soon, their steps became a slow jog. Soon, the two of them were running at full speed. Zu Yi was frantically running away from Li Huowang while the latter chased after him.

Zu Yi saw the princess standing still, so he shouted, "Be careful! He's using the secret technique of the Ao Jing Sect! He cannot be killed in a short period of time! He's covered in maggots, so don't get close to him until he's exhausted!"

"Hmph!" the princess scoffed and raised her chin. Several shadows flew past her and ran toward Li Huowang.

Li Huowang didn't even blink when the dark shadows made holes in him, as the holes were pervaded by maggots.

"Li Sui! Come!"

Li Huowang gnashed his teeth and ran toward the princess while Li Sui drew two talismans and slapped them onto the two largest tentacles.

The tentacles expanded and slammed the ground, propelling Li Huowang like an arrow toward the princess standing on a rooftop.

The princess waved her sleeves, and the ribbons around her flew into the air, forming an intricate formation.

Li Huowang didn't even bother to dodge. He slashed at the ribbons with the spine sword, and Li Sui threw the maggots at the princess with her tentacles.

The princess finally grew serious when she saw the sword slicing her ribbons so easily while the maggots flew past the gaps in her formation. How did he get so strong?

She wrapped a ribbon on the seven-layered furnace behind her and pulled herself away.

Li Huowang's maggots chased after her but were blocked by a wave of burning molten gold.

"Princess! We need to buy time! He will die once the Five Elements Intercalations ends!" Zu Yi explained.

"How annoying! In that case, block him for me while I go back to the palace!"

The princess was about to run away when Li Huowang blocked her. “Leave? I’ve paid a huge price, and you actually want to leave just like that?”

Li Huowang clenched his teeth and tore his torso apart before running at the princess. His torso was like a gaping maw, while his ribs were the teeth.

Boom!

All of a sudden, his white ribs exploded into a cluster of maggots that rained down on the princess.

Sensing danger, the princess’s perfume pouch suddenly opened, and a multicolored cloud shot out to block the maggots.

The bodyguards of the Empress Dowager also ran over and surrounded Li Huowang along with the princess’s bodyguards.

However, they weren’t Li Huowang’s match, as he was still in the middle of the Five Elements Intercalation. All of them died one by one, and soon Li Huowang had the upper hand; even the princess was wounded.

They fought with their lives on the line.

“Imperial Preceptor!” someone roared, forcing everyone to come to a halt and look in the same direction.

An old man reclining on a black ox slowly entered the fray. He was wearing a simple bamboo hat with a fishing rod in hand.

Li Huowang looked at the old man without letting his guard down. He was the same old man he had met in the palace not too long ago.

“Imperial Preceptor, save me!” the princess cried out. She appeared very pitiful with her tattered clothes.

The Imperial Preceptor’s expression became sullen as he swept his gaze across the battlefield. He glanced alternately between the severely injured Li Huowang and the pitiful-looking princess before figuring out what was happening.

He patted the black ox lightly, and the ox ran away from the battlefield.

“Imperial Preceptor! You once carried me in your arms when I was young!”

Li Huowang stared at the Imperial Preceptor leaving the battlefield and heard the latter's aged and exhausted voice.

“ Sigh. All things change. It's better to make it quick. Just let it go.”

The black ox disappeared in the night. Li Huowang was about to continue his assault when he saw a glob of molten gold landing on the princess's face. “ AAAAAAAAAAAAAA! ”

Li Huowang was confused by Zu Yi's betrayal, but he said nothing as he slashed at the princess.

Zu Yi's betrayal was the nail in the coffin. Under their combined assault, the injured princess eventually lost.

The princess's clear irises reflected Li Huowang's silhouette as the latter walked up to her decapitated head and picked it up from the ground.

It was only when the maggots had devoured her brain did Li Huowang throw the head away. Then, he looked at Zu Yi, who was no longer burning.

“Zu Yi greets the elder.” Zu Yi bowed to Li Huowang.

“Why are you calling me an elder right now and not earlier?” Li Huowang asked the charred Zu Yi.

Zu Yi said nothing and retreated.

Li Huowang did not chase after Zu Yi as he could feel extreme pain encroaching upon him. The Five Elements Intercalation would soon be over.

“Li Sui, let's go.” Li Huowang walked in the opposite direction.

Fifteen minutes later, a hollowed-out Li Huowang sat underneath a large tree. He was dead.

Moments later, a doll made out of human skin crawled out of his abdomen and expanded.

Chapter 521 - Zu Yi

“Go and investigate this thoroughly! That criminal and their family must be executed! And they must suffer a slow death!” Ji Lin roared so loud that his voice echoed throughout the palace.

None of the civil and military officials below uttered a word. They stood silently in a row as they held crescent-shaped boards and stared at the spotless ground.

“Are you deaf? Huh?! My mother! And my sister!! That criminal has ignored their noble statuses and killed them like they're game!”

“Hahaha! Am I in the kingdom of our Ji family or not?! Am I in the territory of the Great Liang?!” Ji Lin yelled, tossing the thick memorials away.

The memorials landed on the heads of the officials.

Finally, a chubby military officer stepped forward and said, “Your Majesty, witness accounts state that murder was an evil cultivator!”

“I don’t care what kind of cultivator he is! I only want his head! I need to see his head within three days!”

The morning court ended amidst the oppressive atmosphere. Ji Lin walked through the palace toward his chambers with a furious look. All the eunuchs and palace maids were silent, afraid of incurring his wrath.

When Ji Lin reached his chambers, the anger on his face disappeared instantly and was replaced by a bloodthirsty joy.

“Er Jiu, you did great! Your sword is indeed fast and sharp! Your sword is much better than those that are all bark and no bite! Tell me, what reward do you want?”

Li Huowang emerged from the giant golden sandalwood on the left and said, “Your Majesty, I don’t want titles or money. I just feel that Your Majesty is the destined ruler.”

Dressed in imperial robes, Ji Lin pushed his sagging left cheek with his hand. He circled around Li Huowang with his hands behind his back, “Hehehe, you don’t want titles or money? So, does that mean you want me to owe you a favor?”

Li Huowang did not reply.

Since he had already demonstrated his value, the next step was to figure out how to use Ji Lin to deal with Shai Zi.

Ji Lin patted Li Huowang’s left shoulder. Then, he waved to the old eunuch holding a tray in the corner.

Ji Lin picked up a golden token engraved with a dragon pattern from the tray and handed it to Li Huowang. “This is a death pardon token. You can use this to atone for any heinous crimes you commit in the future.”

Li Huowang immediately discerned the implied meaning behind Ji Lin’s words, and he felt like the weight of the golden token in his hands had increased significantly. The death pardon token was only going to be effective during the ruling of the same emperor who had handed it to the receiver. Otherwise, the death token would become like jewelry—only good for pawnshops.

“Thank you, Your Majesty.”

Ji Lin took a step forward and looked closely into Li Huowang’s eyes. “I know that this cannot compensate for your contributions. Rest assured, you will become my most distinguished aide once I’ve ascended the throne.”

“Your Majesty, do you hate the Sitting Oblivion Dao?”

Ji Lin was taken aback by Li Huowang’s sudden question about the Sitting Oblivion Dao.

“Your Majesty, do you hate the Sitting Oblivion Dao?” Li Huowang asked once again.

“Of course! My father died because of the Sitting Oblivion Dao!

They murdered him!” Ji Lin spoke through gritted teeth.

Li Huowang nodded, feeling reassured. He raised both hands and bowed to Ji Lin, “Your Majesty, I understand. Who should I kill next?”

It was enough to start off like that. Those two heads probably weren’t enough to ask for Ji Lin’s help.

“There’s no hurry. I need to see everyone’s reaction first. This is a tricky matter as well. You’re good at killing people, but you can’t help me get more supporters. Anyway, you’re free to go and rest. I’ll inform you again when it’s time to act.”

Soon, Li Huowang found himself outside the red walls of the palace under the lead of a group of imperial guards.

On his way back, Li Huowang solemnly pondered over Ji Lin’s reaction. He was considering the implications behind every minute change in his expression.

In the past, Ji Lin was straightforward and had always said whatever came to his mind. Now, Li Huowang wasn’t so sure whether he was still the same Ji Lin during that festival or not.

The Emperor of Great Liang himself was at odds with the Sitting Oblivion Dao. Li Huowang was once convinced that the emperor wouldn’t refuse to help him against Shai Zi. After all, that decision made the most sense—both logically and emotionally.

But now, Li Huowang doubted it. Why did Shai Zi specifically want Ji Lin to ascend the throne? What profit would he reap?

Even if Ji Lin was willing to use the power of the Great Liang to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao, Li Huowang dared not reveal everything to him until he was sure of everything.

Could Ji Lin be a pawn of the Sitting Oblivion Dao? Alarm bells rang in Li Huowang’s mind.

“Brother Li, rest assured. Ji Lin is not a pawn of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. The Surveillance Bureau is incompetent, but they’re not incompetent enough for the Sitting Oblivion Dao to replace such an important figure with their own under the Surveillance Bureau's gaze." Zhuge Yuan said, his words dispelled Li Huowang's worries.

Li Huowang nodded thoughtfully and pondered over his next move. This was a difficult endeavor. For every possibility considered, he had to backtrack to think whether Shai Zi had already anticipated it or not.

"Dad, you're back? I made some steamed buns for you!"

Li Huowang had just entered the house when he was intercepted by Li Sui, who proudly displayed the results of her cooking. Li Huowang turned and saw lumps of dough in the pot. A few buns had been scorched black, and some hadn't risen at all. Li Huowang smiled wryly at the sight, but he still reached out and bit into one of the buns.

Li Huowang knew that dealing with a powerful enemy like Shai Zi couldn't be rushed at all. However, how could he not feel anxious when Miaomiao was in Shai Zi's hands?

Li Huowang patted Li Sui's white skull and felt a bit relieved.

"Dad, are they delicious?"

"No. Don't make them next time."

"Why not? I think the steamed buns I made are delicious."

Just then, there was knocking on the door.

"Zu Yi greets Grand Elder."

Li Huowang immediately stopped chewing. He and Li Sui looked at the door together.

"The door's not locked; come in," Li Huowang said indifferently, as though he wasn't surprised that the other party had followed him here.

When Li Huowang saw Zu Yi betraying the princess, he knew that he'd meet Zu Yi again.

The wooden courtyard door was pushed open by a man wearing a black veil and a wide coat. The man was covered thoroughly, and the only information Li Huowang could gather from the man was the pungent smell of charcoal emanating from him. Li Sui's keen nose also allowed her to reach the conclusion that the man before them was the same burning man from that battle not too long ago.

Chapter 522 - Ascension

Li Sui crouched, and her tentacles writhed as she growled at the newcomer.

"He's a guest," Li Huowang said to Li Sui before turning to look at the visitor. "Please be seated."

Li Huowang then pulled a long bench from the side of the table and dragged it toward the visitor.

"I dare not. Before the Grand Elder, there is no place for Zu Yi," Zu Yi said. He extended his charred hands and moved the bench aside.

"Since you know that I'm the Grand Elder, why did you oppose me?" Li Huowang asked.

"I owed the princess a favor long ago, so even though I knew the Grand Elder's identity, I still had to protect her, as I couldn't go back on my word."

"Oh? Then why did you end up betraying her?"

"I've repaid the favor by going all out to stop you, so my duty was considered fulfilled by then," Zu Yi said in a matter-of-factly way.

"I'm a disciple of Ao Jing, so I can't stand idly by upon seeing you facing difficulties, which was why I helped you deal with the princess."

"You're a really straightforward person. One thing leads to another, right?" Li Huowang covered Li Sui's mouth, as she was still growling.

"Some say it's better to live life in ignorance, but I think it's better to be on top of things."

"How did you recognize me as the Grand Elder? What if I'm not from the Ao Jing Sect?"

“The fact that you managed to use the Five Elements Intercalation and survive afterward means that you're undoubtedly the Grand Elder!” Zu Yi replied immediately before kowtowing to Li Huowang.

Li Huowang smiled and observed Zu Yi for a moment before asking, “Do you want to continue chatting? I can chat with you all night.”

“Why do you say that, Grand Elder?”

“Why did you come here then if not for that?” Li Huowang asked, raising his voice slightly.

Zu Yi pondered for a moment, and then he knelt before Li Huowang. “Zu Yi is willing to give everything in exchange for the Grand Elder’s method of ascension!”

Li Huowang finally understood why Zu Yi had decided to stick close to him. Li Huowang didn’t immediately reject Zu Yi’s request, as he considered whether Zu Yi could be useful against the Shai Zi or not.

“Do you know about the Shai Zis of the Sitting Oblivion Dao?”

Although confused by the sudden change in the topic, Zu Yi immediately answered, “Of course. The Shai Zis has caused a commotion in the capital not too long ago.”

“Then, among the figures of the Ao Jing Sect, who do you think is strong enough to deal with a Shai Zi?” Li Huowang asked, leaning forward slightly.

Zu Yi thought for a moment and replied, “In terms of individual strength, the three Five-Calamity Grand Elders should be able to handle a Shai Zi.”

“Five-Calamity Grand Elders?”

“Each time a member of the Ao Jing Sect ascends, they obtain a calamity. After ascending three times, they’ll earn the title of Grand Elder. A Five-Calamity Grand Elder is someone who has ascended five times.”

Zu Yi looked up at Li Huowang and was a little puzzled.
“Grand Elder, don’t you know that already?”

Li Huowang didn’t answer, as he was still stunned by the shocking revelation. “The Cang-Qiang Ascension actually has such an effect? The more you ascend, the stronger you become? Ascending five times means becoming even more powerful than a Shai Zi?!”

“It’s not just the Cang-Qiang Ascension. Other methods of ascension have that effect as well. We get closer to Ba-Hui with each ascension, and we can better use its power for ourselves,” Zu Yi remarked.

“How about the person with the most ascensions in the Ao Jing Sect? How many calamities do they have?”

“Legend has it that they have ten calamities.”

“Ten calamities? What’s their name?”

“The Sacrificial God.”

“The Sacrificial God is eternal. The Mother of all Beings, the Gateway of Creation, is the basis of the Heavens and the Earth! From nothing to something, birthing the Heavens and the Earth.”

His words instantly brought Li Huowang back to a few years ago—to the statue sitting on the cross.

According to his previous observations in the Cross Temple, the Sacrificial God was the only mortal who had achieved sanctification of the flesh and had forcibly seized a portion of the Heavenly Dao from Ba-Hui.

Achieving sanctification of the flesh after ten calamities? Li Huowang’s heart suddenly raced.

The Cang-Qiang Ascension really lived up to its name. Through ascending step by step, one could eventually become a god! This was brand-new information to Li Huowang.

What am I waiting for then? I just have to perform the Cang-Qiang Ascension a few more times, and I’d be able to make quick work of Shai Zi! By then, my issue will be easily resolved!

However, Li Huowang was suddenly reminded of the hardship he had to go through during his previous Cang-Qiang Ascensions.

“Mom! I can’t tell! I really can’t tell!”

“Im.. impossible! I didn’t kill them! I didn’t destroy that village!”

“Huowang... why...?”

It was Yang Na last time, so who will it be next? My own mother? What cruel thing do I have to do to Sun Xiaoqin to attain the utmost physical and mental agony? No! No way! I won’t do it! She’s not fake! She’s my mom!

Zu Yi noticed that the air around Li Huowang had distorted slightly, and he retreated into the courtyard in surprise.

“I’m fine! I’m fine...” Li Huowang muttered as he grabbed his head.

“Brother Li, there must be another way. The Cang-Qiang Ascension requires killing your close family and doing all sorts of despicable deeds. Ascending also gets harder the more you do it. If you keep doing it, what would be the difference between you and the evil Shai Zi?!”

Li Huowang gradually calmed down under Zhuge Yuan’s persuasion. “Don’t worry, I’m not going to do it again. I’ll definitely find another way!”

Li Huowang looked up at Zu Yi in the courtyard and calmly said, “It’s okay, come in. Let’s keep chatting.”

What bizarre technique is the Grand Elder practicing? What were those bizarre changes? Zu Yi pondered in confusion as he walked into the house.

“You’ve never seen a Shai Zi, so how can you say that a Five-Calamity Elder can defeat a Shai Zi? I’ve also tried the Cang-Qiang Ascension. There haven’t been many other changes aside from being more sensitive to pain and one’s regenerative ability becoming even stronger.”

Li Huowang had calmed down, and he started doubting Zu Yi's words. After all, talk was cheap, and no one could verify the authenticity of his words.

“Grand Elder, there's no need to be doubtful of me. Obtaining Five Calamities means you're no longer an ordinary person. Moreover, the Sitting Oblivion Dao is not good at direct confrontation, so a Five-Calamity Elder is strong enough against their Shai Zi.”

“But Shai Zis are extremely adept at deception, which makes sense, as they are leaders of the Sitting Oblivion Dao. It's extremely difficult to find a Shai Zi if they want to remain hidden. That's why the sect has never really found a Shai Zi after all these years.”

“The sect is also looking for a Shai Zi? Why?” Li Huowang asked, but he immediately figured out the answer himself. “Right, the Ao Jing Sect is considered a famous orthodox sect, so the Surveillance Bureau must have approached the sect.”

Chapter 523 - Letter

When Li Huowang learned from Zu Yi that the Surveillance Bureau had invited the Ao Jing Sect to deal with the Sitting Oblivion Dao together, he realized that he might be looking in the wrong place for a solution.

If the Ao Jing Sect truly had a way to deal with a Shai Zi, that Shai Zi wouldn't have threatened him.

Li Huowang sighed lightly while sitting on the bench. He then turned to Zu Yi and said, "Alright, you can go. We've settled our unfinished business at the time. From now on, we'll go our separate ways."

Zu Yi was momentarily stunned, and then he sounded nervous as he said, "Grand Elder, what about the secrets to Ascension..."

"There are no secrets!" Li Huowang exclaimed, sounding irritated upon recalling something. "Do you know how excruciating and desolate it is to reach extreme physical and mental agony? Yet, you masochists are actually chasing after it desperately!"

Li Huowang's outburst made Zu Yi retreat slowly into the courtyard. He glanced at Li Huowang sitting on the bench inside the house. After a moment of contemplation, he said, "Grand Elder, did you encounter any issues today?"

"As the esteemed Grand Elder of the Ao Jing Sect, please do not hesitate to give me any instructions if there's anything that I can help you with."

Li Huowang shook his head and waved his hand impatiently. "You can't help. If you could, I would have already employed you."

Zu Yi said no more and turned around to leave the courtyard. As he gripped the wooden door latch, a voice echoed from within his broad cloak. "Elder, forgive me for being presumptuous. All worldly troubles are meaningless before the pain of Ascension. And as disciples of the Ao Jing Sect... I believe we should focus only on the right path.”

Li Huowang couldn't be bothered to argue with the masochistic lunatic. He turned around and ignored Zu Yi.

“Grand Elder.”

“Are you not done yet?!” Li Huowang exclaimed, turning around with his sword in hand. To his surprise, he saw Zu Yi bend down to pick up a folded beige envelope from the ground.

“Grand Elder, this seems to be a letter for you.”

“A letter?” Li Huowang walked over with his suspicions, and reached out to retrieve it and examine the contents.

“I'll take my leave since you have your personal matters. I'll send someone to report to you if there's anything important from the temple. After all, you are the esteemed Grand Elder of the Ao Jing Sect.”

Li Huowang paid no attention to Zu Yi's words as his eyes were fixed on the letter.

Bai Lingmiao? How did she manage to write a letter to me after being kidnapped by that Shai Zi?

Li Huowang's fingers trembled slightly as he opened the envelope and pulled out the letter.

Senior Li, are you okay? I'm really sorry for the fact that I haven't made any contact with you for so long.

I wanted to contact you a long time ago, but they wouldn't allow me until now. I can't write who they are, as they might change it. They've been good to me, and they haven't been mistreating me at all.

You must be searching all over for me, but don't worry, Senior Li. I'll be back soon. It's not going to take two years like you said. By the way, the persimmon cakes here are really sweet; I'll send you some of them.

From your wife, Bai Lingmiao.

Two years? Two years? How did Bai Lingmiao know about that promise? Li Huowang's pupils constricted as he recalled Yang Na standing before him behind a wire iron fence.

"Yang Na, wait! Give me three years! No! Two years! Just give me two more years!"

That's right! Bai Lingmiao left me back then, so the Yang Na at the time must've been the reflection of Bai Lingmiao from this world when she was taken away!

Li Huowang paced around the room; his emotions were tumultuous as he gripped the letter. This letter was of great significance!

Perhaps, this means that Shai Zi hadn't kidnapped Bai Lingmiao! He must've been lying to me all this while!

It was an uplifting conjecture. Just as Li Huowang's imagination was about to go wild, a beggar stuck his head into the courtyard through the doorway.

"Boss Hong Zhong! Ah, I'm really sorry," said the beggar with an apologetic look. "I almost forgot about the persimmon cakes while delivering the letter."

The beggar carried the bamboo basket inside with his dirty hands, and he was panting as he walked into the courtyard.

After putting down the basket, he walked toward Li Sui and said, "Ah, it's a pleasure to meet you! You must be Boss Hong Zhong's dog, right? I've long heard of you."

Li Huowang looked at the envelope in his hand and then at the beggar chatting away with Li Sui. His heart quickly cooled down.

What's going on? Does Shai Zi think I've been making too many moves lately, so he's decided to send a letter to warn me?

Maybe Shai Zi has deceived me! Maybe Bai Lingmiao isn't by his side!

Thump!

Li Huowang reached and pressed the beggar's neck against the wall.

He didn't ask for the man's name; he took out a dagger to lift the man's face.

After flipping through a few faces, Li Huowang finally saw Jiu Wan[1] squinting at him.

"What are you doing here?!" Li Huowang gritted his teeth.

"Ah, what else can I do? I'm just here to deliver a letter. I didn't steal any of the persimmon cakes; they only sent these few pieces..."

"Don't worry, it's okay if you don't tell the truth. I'll make you tell the truth! I'm skilled in both Ao Jing and Sitting Oblivion Dao! You choose!" Li Huowang said as he opened his bag of torture tools.

Amidst the clattering of metal, Li Huowang suddenly noticed that the man's mocking smile seemed a bit off.

He released the man's throat, and he collapsed to the ground. The Jiu Wan before Li Huowang was dead.

"Officers, we're just a theater troupe; there's nothing to investigate here. See, these are costumes. Hehehe, " Lu Zhuangyuan said to the city guards.

However, the guards only glanced at him once. They tossed the travel pass at Lu Zhuangyuan's face before rummaging through the carriage.

Lu Zhuangyuan quickly caught the travel pass with both hands. The travel pass had to stay safe. Without it, it would be difficult to navigate through Great Liang.

More importantly, it was a gift from the young Daoist. It was going to be problematic if he ended up losing it.

He tucked the travel pass back into his pocket before leading the others through the thick city gates.

The unfolding scene was overwhelming to all of them. They had finally arrived at Shangjing—the largest city in the world.

They marveled at the towering wooden buildings that lined the streets, and the distinct architectural styles of the buildings here were especially shocking to them.

Chapter 524 - Shangjing

Everyone was dazzled. Rare items that were seldom seen in bustling markets were commonplace here.

Puppy bought a well-crafted red rattle drum from a stall. He burst into laughter after swinging it around a few times.

“You’re already so old, but you’re still having fun playing with a toy? How embarrassing,” Lu Xiucan said with his arms crossed in contempt.

“Why do you even care? At least, I’m better off than you. Those women in those brothels had almost sucked your soul away. You drool all over the place, probably thinking of them,” Puppy retorted as he tucked the drum into his arms.

Lu Xiucan wanted to retort, but Lu Zhuangyuan said, “We’ve already arrived, so let’s go and find a place to stay before anything else.”

Lu Zhuangyuan felt like he hadn’t done much except look around, yet found that two hours had already passed.

He saw that Puppy didn’t respond, so he led the group to find an inn. After a while of searching around, they entered the smallest inn they could find.

Although it was an extremely small inn, Lu Zhuangyuan’s eyes widened in surprise when he inquired about the prices. It was too expensive.

“Sixteen bowls of plain noodles~”

After the waiter left with a disdainful look, Lu Zhuangyuan cleared his throat and said, “Actually, noodles aren’t bad. It’s been a while since we’ve had noodles, so let’s have something different.”

Lu Xiucan wasn’t paying any attention to the noodles. His brows furrowed, and he approached Puppy, “What now? We’ve arrived in the Shangjing capital, but it's so huge. How do we find Master and Mistress?"

Puppy picked up two chopsticks from the bamboo tube and put them in his mouth, "Why the hurry? Impatience won't get you anywhere. Do you understand? Let's finish the noodles first. I, Cao Cao, am so smart. Can't I think of a solution?"

"Hmph, you're smart. If you were smart, there wouldn't be any fools in the world." Lu Xiucan didn't ask any further questions. He reached into his pocket and took out a bronze coin sword's broken hilt tied with hemp rope. Then, he filled them in patiently one by one.

The plain noodles soon arrived. They were the cheapest meal, but they were still a delicacy for these weary travelers.

While the entire Lu Family Troupe slurped down their noodles, several people dressed in silk and satin walked into the inn.

They stopped to chat with a middle-aged man from the inn.
